

Cleared for take-off?

by Bill Peacock

When two businesses involved in an argument both use the "free market" to make their case, consumers should prepare for turbulence—particularly when the subject involves government regulations limiting competition.

All consumers benefit from market competition through the lower prices and improved quality it brings; while there are winners and losers on the business end—the efficient win customer loyalty, the inefficient are left in the dust. Competition is simply not as kind to individual businesses as it is always to consumers.

Such is the case in air travel, which was deregulated by the federal government in 1978.

For consumers, the results of air competition have been stunning; prices are lower enabling more people to fly more often to more places. And air travel is far safer, with the number of accidents dropping significantly in the years following deregulation.

Of course, after too many years of growing fat with heavy regulatory protection of ticket prices and routes, many airlines in the late '70s were unprepared to compete in deregulated markets. Some of them simply didn't survive; remember invincible stalwarts like Eastern Airlines, Braniff and Pan American World Airways?

Airlines weren't the only businesses affected by deregulation—even airports were suddenly facing market pressure to compete for passengers and airlines alike.

By the late 1970s the relatively new Dallas-Fort Worth International Airport was well on its way to becoming the third busiest terminal in the world. Despite this early success, its managers and backers were not eager to face off in a deregulated market against Love Field and their nimble tenant, Southwest Airlines.

Then-U.S. House Majority Leader Jim Wright (D-Fort Worth) took up the cause and attached an amendment to a bill in 1979 which limited the service of any airline offering flights out of Love Field to cities in Texas, New Mexico, Oklahoma, Kansas, Louisiana and Arkansas. Later changes to the amendment added Mississippi and Alabama.

Today there is a scuffle in Congress over the future of the Wright Amendment. Predictably, the battle lines are drawn based on the economic interests of those involved.

Southwest, joined by supporters like the city of Dallas and the Los Angeles County Economic Development Corporation, argues everyone would benefit by repealing the Wright Amendment—the airline could fly more places at lower costs for travelers. "Wright is Wrong" is one slogan Southwest has adopted to get its message across, while "Set Love Free," has become part of most every flight attendant's message when flying out of Love Field.

American Airlines, DFW Airport and the cities of Fort Worth and Arlington are fighting back. They have rebuked the spunky Southwest Airlines by challenging them in the free market game. Their campaign website calls on Southwest to simply move operations and compete at D/FW.

But is that truly free-market competition? The Wright Amendment artificially raises the prices at D/FW by eliminating competition with Love Field, while not being as convenient for many travelers.

From air travel to trucking to telecommunications, deregulation has always proven to be the friend of consumers. The case of the Wright Amendment is no different. The benefits this relic of the regulated past bequeaths on a few are far outweighed by its costs to consumers and the economic progress of the state and nation. Texans, and all Americans, would benefit greatly from its long-overdue repeal.

Regency Suspension Bridge, a visible reminder of days gone by I've heard about and read about the suspension bridge across the Colorado River at Regency many times and I've always wanted to visit it. Last weekend I finally got the opportunity.

Kathy and I went to Waco on Saturday for the Area Marching Band Contest. Actually, Kathy attended the contest and took pictures for the paper. I went with my son J.L. and one of his friends to the Texas Tech/Baylor game.

Nevertheless, on the way back home we turned off the main road just outside of San Saba and drove 17 miles north and west on a Farm-to-Market road. There, near the now abandoned town site of Regency, we turned off on a county road that took us down to the river and the Regency Suspension Bridge.

The bridge is beautiful. Tall towers support cables that curve gracefully across the river as they support the bridge's wooden deck. You have to understand that Kathy is a recovering bridge-phobic. She has never cared for bridges, especially ones with support structures that extend above bridge.

The first bridge at Regency was built in 1901. It collapsed in 1924, killing a 9-year-old boy, his horse and several head of cattle. A replacement bridge was washed away by in the 1936 flood. The current Regency Suspension Bridge was completed in 1939, and according to a historical marker nearby, it was built 90 percent by hand.

The bridge spans the Colorado River north of Richland Springs and south of Brownwood. It stands as a tribute to a distinct era of Texas history...a time when civilization was still inching its way westward from Central Texas and the Hill Country.

It was a time when the need for water required that communities cling to the banks of rivers like the Colorado, rivers whose floodwaters from time to time threatened the very existence of those communities.

I don't know how much longer the bridge will remain. It's a great piece of Texas history and well worth the visit if you get the chance.

Winning with Ben Stein's wit and wisdom

When I think of eloquent speakers I think of Churchill and Roosevelt, John Kennedy and Ronald Reagan. My favorite speaker today is Tony Blair, the British Prime Minister. His speech after 9-11-01 is a pattern for all speakers to follow. The other day he gave a speech that resulted in a twenty minute standing ovation. He could hardly leave the room because everybody wanted to shake his hand.

Recently I had the opportunity to hear Ben Stein, a truly outstanding speaker. He spoke at Midland College as part of a distinguished lecture series. When he walked onto the stage, the audience applauded and laughed. Everyone could see he was dressed in a suit and wearing tennis shoes. That set the stage for an enjoyable evening.

Ben Stein was valedictorian of his Yale Law School class of 1970. He is an economist, actor, journalist and teacher. His TV quiz show, Win Ben Stein's Money, has won six Emmys. His appearance in the movie, Ferris Bueller's Day Off elevated him to near-cult status. His columns have appeared in the Wall Street Journal and he occasionally is a commentator on the CBS Sunday Morning program. He appears in TV commercials.

The title of his speech was "Free at Last. What's Right With America."

Ben knew his audience. He made everyone in the audience feel special. He told us how smart we were to be living in West Texas. He talked about small town conveniences and friendliness. He told us about his houses in Los Angeles, New York and Washington and how the people in those big cities were just crazy. He told us he was glad to be out here with some real people who were not crazy. He saw peace of mind on our faces.

Ben mentioned the fact that our area has few trees. But then he said, "Out here, the people are trees. They give shade and comfort."

Ben had a script and followed it. He read most of his speech but we didn't really notice it because he was familiar enough with the material that he maintained good eye contact. Occasionally he would leave his prepared remarks to tell a story. He told us about the division of political parties, that he had never seen so much polarization. He mentioned the hate that he hears from party loyalists. He spoke of heroes and mentioned the names of some people in the news who are not heroes but seem to get plenty of exposure on TV. He told us movie stars who criticize our country and its leaders are not heroes. Heroes are fighting men and women who are in Iraq and Afghanistan. He reinforced our feelings about American values.

He spoke for fifty minutes and was interrupted by applause a dozen times. He lived up to his reputation of being a humorous economist and law professor, something that can be said of very few people.

Former comptroller heads governor's school finance, tax panel

by Ed Sterling

AUSTIN—Former state Comptroller John Sharp, newly appointed chair of the governor's panel on property tax and school finance reform, spoke to the Texas Association of Business in Austin Oct. 28.

Sharp, also a former member of the Texas House and Texas Railroad Commission, said the panel will work closely with every member of the Texas Legislature.

Although members of the panel Sharp is chairing have yet to be named, Sharp said that when their work is finished, "I will tell who was naughty and nice."

Regardless of differences that have stood in the way of a bipartisan solution to school finance and tax reform for the last two regular and three special legislative sessions, Sharp, a Democrat, expressed confidence that the panel's efforts will be successful.

Lawmakers and panelists will find reasonable ways to relieve the property tax burden and adequately fund education, but a personal income tax will not be considered, he said.

One thing for sure, he said, is "We're not going to get more revenue from the present system (of taxation)" because so many Texans already pay the maximum property tax.

Sharp predicted that when the Texas Supreme Court rules on the pending case over the constitutionality of the school finance and property tax laws, those laws will be found unconstitutional.

The ruling will trigger a special session and lawmakers will huddle up to work on both problems. The state's high court heard oral arguments on the subject July 6, and the case has been pending since then.

Enrollment below expectations

Texas public and private colleges and universities recorded lower than expected enrollment this fall, according to a report released Oct. 27 by the Texas Higher Education Coordinating Board.

This year's total enrollment of 1,192,243 is only a 19,134-student increase over the fall semester 2004. This causes concern, because enrollment growth is not trending in tandem with the state's population, which is growing more rapidly than anticipated.

State demographer Steve Murdock of the University of Texas at San Antonio said Texas is now 35th in the nation in the percentage of people with college degrees. In 1990, Texas ranked 23rd.

Money back, comptroller says

Texas Comptroller Carole Keeton Strayhorn urged Gov. Rick Perry to call a three-day special session of the Legislature so lawmakers could vote to give every homeowner in the state a check for $260.

When Strayhorn closed the books on the biennium that ended Aug. 31, she found enough unanticipated surplus tax revenue to give taxpayers the rebate. But the governor's office dismissed the idea.

Miers withdraws as nominee

Under pressure from her own political party, Harriet Miers withdrew as President George W. Bush's nominee to replace retiring associate justice Sandra Day O'Connor on the U.S. Supreme Court.

Judge upholds smoking ban

U.S. District Judge Sam Sparks upheld a smoking ban passed by Austin voters last year.

No smoking is allowed in public buildings, including restaurants and all but a few bars.

The lawsuit that prompted Sparks' ruling was brought by businesses that questioned the constitutionality of the ban. Only about a dozen bars in Austin can legally allow smoking.

Judge to eye venue motion

U.S. Rep. Tom DeLay and his lawyers filed papers alleging potential bias on the part of state District Judge Bob Perkins, who is slated to preside over the Sugar Land Republican's trial on charges of money-laundering and conspiracy to violate Texas election laws.

On Nov. 1, retired judge C.W. "Bud" Duncan of Killeen, a Republican, is to review the motion to move the trial away from Austin to what the former U.S. House majority leader believes will be a fairer court. One of DeLay's objections to Perkins is the judge's membership in MoveOn.org, a grassroots political organization.

Eagles fall to Punchers 54-7

The Warbirds fell to 1-5 in district play this past Friday with a loss to the Mason Punchers 7-54.

On the first play of the game Eldorado's quarterback David Hernandez fumbled. The ball took a Warbirds bounce and landed in the arms of Russel Cathey. He would go untouched for 85 yards and score the only points for Eldorado on the night.

Cathey was the Eagles leading rusher with 169 yards on 20 carries and one touchdown. Eldorado ended the night with 269 yards total on the ground.

David Hernandez lead the team in passing with 32 pass yards, but threw 4 interceptions on the night.

Eldorado in fact put more yards up than did the Mason Punch-

Eagles defender Diego Barrera held on to drag down this Mason Puncher runner last Friday as the Eldorado Eagles hosted Mason in a District 2-2A match. The Punchers won the game 54-7.

The Warbirds managed 15 first downs in the contest, but a fumble and interceptions kept them out of the game.

"We didn't punt the entire first half," said Head Coach Johnny Burleson. "We shot ourselves in the foot with the turnovers. We as a team need to get that taken care of before next week. Wall doesn't need any help."

The Eagles will be facing the district champions this Friday when they travel to Wall. The Hawks sealed their right to the throne when they beat the Reagan County Owls 44-14.

"We need our best game this week," Burleson said. "We need to play to win. This game is winnable, every game is. We just need to show up and not lay down."

Wall is sitting at sixth in the state and boasts an undefeated record. "They are good, there is no question," Burleson said. "They are big, fast and have depth. That makes for a winning team."

The game is slated to begin at 7:30 p.m. at Hawks Stadium

JV upends Mason in Puncherdome

The Eagles JV squad found all the points it needed in the fourth quarter to bring home a victory from the Puncherdome in Mason. The Eagles won the game 14-7.

Eldorado's defense kept the team in the game, and gave the offense its much needed momentum in the fourth quarter.

Pedro Garcia intercepted a pass in the third quarter. The third period also saw the Punchers only score.

Eldorado found themselves on the scoreboard in the fourth quarter when Manny Gonzalez ran 35 yards on a quarterback keeper. The two point conversion failed.

The Eagles clenched the win with a 35 yard catch and run by Dustin Gauna. Sammy Estrada converted the two points to seal off the Eagles 7 point victory.

You can catch the Eagles JV as they take on the Wall Hawks tonight at Eagle Stadium. The game is slated to begin at 6:30 p.m.

EHS senior Lauren Brown was named the 2005 EHS Football Sweetheart last Friday at the high school pep rally. Here, Lauren is presented with a bouquet of flowers by Michael Ballew and Frank Edmiston.

Eagles 8th grade squad corrals Punchers 28-12

The Eagles 8th grade team rolled past Mason this past Thursday night winning the contest 28-12.

The Eagles improved their record to 6-1 on the season and their district record to 5-1.

Eldorado found their scoring might through Wes Brown and David Tirado. Brown compiled two rushing touchdowns, and Tirado had a kickoff return and a rushing touchdown.

Tirado and Ivany Sanchez both converted two points.

Defensively the Eagles had quite a few standouts. Wes Brown ended the night with 4 tackles and one sack. David Tirado had 2 blocked punts.

Francisco Trujillio stopped 6 plays. Abel Fuentes had 3 tackles. Juan Medrano finished with 5.

Hugo Rios had 2 tackles, and Shane Young had one sack and a solo tackle.

You can catch the Eagles 8th grade as they take on the Wall Hawks in Wall. The game will begin promptly after the 7th grade game which is slated to begin at 5 p.m.

Early Voting totals up, 16 percent turnout predicted

AUSTIN, TX -- Texas Secretary of State Roger Williams announced Tuesday that early voting turnout for the November 8 constitutional amendment election is outpacing the 2003 constitutional amendment election levels. Secretary of State Williams projects an overall turnout of 16 percent of registered Texas voters.

"I am very encouraged by the sound, positive movement of early voting by Texans," Williams said. "The early indicators reflect that we will likely exceed the 12.2 percent turnout that was achieved in the 2003 constitutional amendment election." While encouraged by the numbers thus far, projected turnout is still low as a percentage of registered voters, and Secretary Williams encourages every Texan to vote.

"I am pleased that early voting turnout has improved over 2003 levels, however, the levels are still too low," Williams said. "Constitutional amendment elections are a vital part of our democracy and play an important role in shaping our state's future. My office is working diligently with local officials to promote a turnout in this election that is higher than the 16 percent prediction."

Secretary of State Williams examined a variety of factors when projecting this year's turnout, including prior levels of voter turnout, voter registration numbers and early voting trends to date. Throughout early voting, the Secretary of State's office tracks turnout from the state's 15 most populous counties. These 15 counties account for approximately 60 percent of all registered voters in Texas and, therefore, can serve as an indicator of overall turnout patterns across the state.

Early voting will conclude on November 4 and Election Day is November 8.

State adopts transportation plan

AUSTIN -- The Texas Transportation Commission approved today the 2006 Statewide Mobility Program, a major aspect of TxDOT's blueprint for statewide transportation projects.

The commission adopted the plan at its monthly meeting, held this month in Corpus Christi.

The plan allocates nearly $12.4 billion for mobility improvements (highway, rail, public transportation and aviation) across Texas during the next four years (2006-2009). The vast majority of projects in the program were selected at the local level, either directly by local officials or local officials working with TxDOT district offices.

In other action, the commission approved the Texas Rail System Plan, TxDOT's first ever statewide rail plan. The plan is the result of legislation broadening the department's rail responsibilities. It highlights the importance of rail in reducing highway traffic congestion and in attracting new businesses to the state. The document identifies current and proposed rail projects, determines infrastructure and capacity needs, and the processes to address those needs.

"This is a new opportunity for TxDOT," said Mike Behrens, TxDOT executive director. "But it's another milestone in our efforts to reduce congestion, improve safety and air quality, encourage economic development, and increase the value of the state's transportation system."

Among several agenda items concerning the Alamo Regional Mobility Authority, the commission authorized TxDOT to negotiate an agreement with the RMA authorizing them to develop three potential toll projects in San Antonio. These projects include expansion or new construction of I-35 from the Bexar/Guadalupe County line to I-37, SH 16 from I-410 to Loop 1604 and the U.S. 281/Wurzbach Parkway interchange. In related commission action, preliminary approval also was granted for a $7.5 million loan to the RMA to develop its starter toll system.

TxDOT also was authorized by the commission to execute a pass-through finance agreement with Williamson County for improvements to various highway projects in the county. This is the fourth pass-through toll agreement approved by the commission.

Motorists will see more truck lane restrictions with the commission's approval of restricted lanes on I-20 in Dallas County, I-30 in Tarrant County, and I-10 and U.S. 290 in Harris County. Crashes were reduced by nearly two-thirds after trucks were restricted to certain lanes on an 8-mile stretch of I-10 in Houston in 2000. With this action, approximately 197 miles of truck lane restrictions have been approved in Texas.

THC assumes oversight of the Pacific War Museum

FREDERICKSBURG, Texas — The transfer of the National Museum of the Pacific War as a division of the Texas Parks and Wildlife Department (TPWD) to a public/private partnership with the Texas Historical Commission (THC) takes place on Tuesday, Nov. 1 at 11:30 a.m. at the National Museum of the Pacific War in Fredericksburg. An official memorandum of understanding will be signed between THC officials and the Admiral Nimitz Foundation and the Nimitz' five-star flag will change hands from TPWD to the THC in a ceremony on the front steps of the museum. The historic event is free and open to the public.

Recent legislation signed by Gov. Rick Perry authorizes the THC to contract with the Admiral Nimitz Foundation for the administration and operation of the museum, including its expansion, renovation and other improvements. Also approved was an appropriation for the necessary funds to service a $9 million bond issue authorized for sale in 2006 for the completion of the National Museum of the Pacific War.

"Managing historical resources in a public/private partnership opens new avenues for successful preservation and economic development," said THC Executive Director Larry Oaks. "We are pleased to play a role in the preservation of these important artifacts which help to tell the story of Texas' and the nation's role in the Pacific Theater during World War II."

The National Museum of the Pacific War is the only institution in the continental United States dedicated exclusively to telling the story of the Pacific Theater battles of World War II. Originally called the Admiral Nimitz Museum and housed solely in the historic Nimitz Hotel, the museum has grown into a dynamic, first-class experience enjoyed by people of all ages and backgrounds, attracting more than 75,000 visitors annually.

The museum, which houses an impressive display of Allied and Japanese aircraft, tanks, guns and other large artifacts, is poised to embark on the final phase of a 40,000 square-foot expansion.

"The Admiral Nimitz Foundation has enjoyed a positive and productive relationship with Texas Parks and Wildlife for more than 25 years," said Admiral Charles Grojean, executive director of the Admiral Nimitz Foundation. "We are looking forward to working with the Texas Historical Commission. This relationship will be a stellar example of cooperation between government and private agencies."

The transfer of supervision ensures conservation and recreation remain the principal goals of TPWD, while preservation of Texas' historic and prehistoric resources is the THC's primary mission.

For more information about the National Museum of the Pacific War, visit www.nimitz-museum.com. For additional information regarding the THC and its many programs, visit www.thc.state.tx.us or call 512/463-6100.

The Texas Historical Commission is the state agency for historic preservation. The agency administers a variety of programs to preserve the archeological, historical and cultural resources of Texas.

Conditions bode well for deer hunting success across Texas

AUSTIN, Texas — Dry range conditions across much of Texas heading into the general deer season should bode well for hunters looking to fill their tags, according to Texas Parks and Wildlife Department biologists.

The general deer season opens Nov. 5 statewide, except for a few counties in the Panhandle. The North Zone closes Jan. 1, while the South Zone continues for two additional weeks, ending Jan. 15. Special Youth-Only seasons are set for Oct. 29-30 and Jan. 21-22 statewide.

For the last couple of years, many of Texas' 500,000 or so deer hunters had a tough time observing deer, which kept a low profile because lush range conditions provided ample cover and abundant browse. Hunters likely won't face that problem this fall, according to TPWD white-tailed deer program leader Mitch Lockwood. "We're dried up real bad. This will be the first year in the last four that I'm not telling hunters to get away from the corn feeders to find deer. I think people will have some success hunting over feeders."

TPWD is encouraging hunters to take more does this fall in areas with deer, overpopulation issues. "Take an extra doe - where regulations allow for such," stressed. "It's true every year but especially this year that deer will have a harder time making it through the winter. It used to just be in the Hill Country, but now we're dealing with population issues across much of the state. When a hunter only takes one deer, you're probably not going to meet management goals."

Hunters also need to be aware of several key changes to deer hunting regulations this year as state wildlife biologists work to simplify and restructure regulations. In particular, a number of counties saw changes in harvest restrictions and season dates this fall. Following is an overview of those changes. For additional information, hunters are urged to review regulations in TPWD's Outdoor Annual available wherever licenses are sold.

Elimination of Aggregate Bag Limits — The department in 1989 implemented what is popularly referred to as the 'aggregate bag limit' rule, which designated a number of one-buck counties, primarily in the eastern third of the state, from which, in the aggregate a hunter could take no more than one buck. For example, if a hunter took a buck in Nacogdoches County (one-buck bag limit), that hunter could not take another buck in any other county affected by the aggregate bag limit rule.

The department has eliminated the aggregate bag limit, meaning that a hunter could take the statewide personal bag limit of three bucks by taking one buck in each of three one-buck counties. A similar provision applies to counties with a two-buck bag limit. In other words, a hunter can now take two bucks in a two-buck county, and a third buck in a different two-buck county.

Alteration of Doe Days — Biologists are encouraging hunters to take does this fall due to population concerns in some areas and poor habitat conditions in others. Numerous counties saw shifts in the numbers of doe days offered this year and hunters are urged to check the Outdoor Annual.

Buck Harvest Restrictions — The new regulations create special buck deer harvest guidelines in Austin, Bastrop, Brazoria, Caldwell, Colorado, De Witt, Fayette, Fort Bend, Goliad, Gonzales, Guadalupe, Jackson, Karnes, Lavaca, Lee, Matagorda, Victoria, Waller, Washington, Wilson, and Wharton counties. The new regulation implements a two-buck bag limit, one of which must have at least one unbranched antler, and redefines a legal buck as a buck having an inside spread of 13 inches or greater or at least one unbranched antler. The six-points-or-better criterion in effect prior to this rulemaking is eliminated, as department data clearly indicate that the 13-inch-or-better standard is sufficient by itself to protect younger bucks.

While hunting prospects can vary from property to property, here's a brief overview of what to expect this season across the state:

Panhandle: "I think Panhandle hunters can anticipate a good to excellent season for both white-tails and mule deer," according to TPWD biologist Danny Sweptson. "Even though we had some dry months during the middle of the summer the early spring rains got the animals off to a good start. Antler quality should be good and the majority of deer we have seen during surveys are in excellent body shape."

North Texas: "Overall range conditions are good but an unusually hot and dry September may help bring deer to feeders more consistently this fall," said Kevin Mote, TPWD biologist for the Possum Kingdom district. He went on to report that while most areas of the district are reporting average to above average body weights and antler development, below average summer rain should be a signal for managers to take a few more mouths (deer and/or livestock) off early. Expectations remain high for a banner year due to good carry-over of older age class bucks from the last two seasons. Much of the district observed a light to moderate acorn crop, most of which has already hit the ground.

East Texas: In the aftermath of Hurricane Rita, several counties in the Pineywoods saw extensive tree damage, particularly mast-producing hardwoods. Although deer have been enjoying easy and early access to acorns, the impacts to available food sources in the future could be costly, according to reports from TPWD field biologist Bobby Eichler. "The range is in moderate condition after a drought for much of the year," he noted. "The southern end of the Pineywoods was hit hard and we lost a lot of oaks, which could pose a problem next year. It should be a pretty good hunting season because deer will come to feeders; antler quality should be good because prior to the drought deer had good food early on in the year."

Landowners with LAMPS antlerless deer permits are asked to be patient as the office that coordinates this program was shut down due to the storm and relocated to the Old Sabine Bottom WMA near Tyler. They are currently working about two weeks behind schedule in preparing permits and cannot guarantee permits in time for hunting season for new applicants.

South Texas: Much of the southern portion of the state has suffered through an extended dry period, although recent rainfall may provide some relief going into the season. Jimmy Rutledge, TPWD biologist out of Carrizo Springs states South Texas has been blessed for the last 3 years of having abundant, timely rains and abnormally mild temperatures during this period; however South Texas was due for some below average rainfall and hot temperatures that characterize the region.

TPWD biologist Ty Bartoske-witz of Jim Hogg County states most deer hunters this fall should find average numbers of mature deer, although overall production this year was down. Antler development has been average with some exceptional animals being seen on most managed ranches, but biologists are not anticipating the numbers of Boone & Crockett record book qualifying deer they've seen in recent years. Body condition on most deer looks to be good to excellent.

Hill Country: The central and eastern areas of the Hill Country saw extremely hot and dry conditions interspersed with short periods of good rainfall this past summer. Except for the western edge of the Hill Country, where rainfall has been more consistent and range conditions are noticeably better than average going into the fall, deer should be readily available during the upcoming hunting season, according to Max Traweek, TPWD biologist in Kerrville. "The very spotty, below average acorn crop that most areas are experiencing should also translate to good deer movement and availability this year," he notes. "Body condition will most likely be no better than average, again except for the far western sections that have remained green most of the summer. Since most of the Hill Country had good range conditions this past late winter and early spring, I would anticipate that antler quality will be at least average and maybe better than average on those ranges not obviously overpopulated with deer and other browsers. As is the case every year, we highly recommend that landowners and hunters harvest an adequate number of both bucks and does and not wait too late in the season to work seriously on population control."

Coastal Prairies: Hunters may be somewhat disappointed with this year's hunting season due to the poor range conditions necessary for good antler production, according to TPWD biologist David Forrester. "Hunters should take this opportunity to improve the genetics of the herd through selective harvest," he urged. "Antlerless harvest will be very important this year for several reasons including improving the buck per doe ratio and keeping the deer population within the carrying capacity of the habitat. Because there were fewer bucks harvested last year, that should bode well for increased opportunity this year, as well as increased quality."

Trans Pecos: TPWD biologist Tim Bone reports Far West Texas is in good shape. "We've had above average rains over most of the district this year," he stated. "I am expecting an above average antler development year for both white-tailed deer and mule deer. Deer numbers should be up from last year in most areas. We had a good fawn crop last year, and I expect another good one this year."

"I didn't have to know how to drive a truck. Schneider provided the training. In two weeks, I was out on the road, earning excellent pay and benefits. It's a great feeling."
