McLean's Junior High Cubs Open Season Tonight Against Phillips

THE 1983 McLEAN JUNIOR HIGH CUBS

The McLean Cubs will open their season Thursday night (tonight) with a home game against the Phillips Blackhawks. The game begins at 6:30 p.m. The game will be the only non-district tilt for the junior high group.

McLean's junior high team will be in the same district with Lefors, Claude, and Groom. The teams in the district will play each other twice.

The Cubs play at Lefors Sept. 22; at Claude Sept. 29; against Groom in McLean, Oct. 6; against Lefors at McLean Oct. 13; against Claude at McLean, Oct. 20; and at Groom, Oct. 27.

bright, Ronnie Tidwell, Robert Tidwell, Lloyd Morris, Floyd Morris, Sid Brass, Kyle Woods, Shawn Craig, Austin Walker, Robert Sanderson, Jimmie Fleming, Dale Barker, Conrad Shackelford, Donald Harris, Shane Coleman, Tres Hess, Grant Mann, John Mann, and Cain Hauck.

The manager is Clarence Walker. Coaches are Joe Riley and Jack Brewster.

McLean Firemen Battle Numerous Grassfires

Dense growth of grass and underbrush, extremely dry conditions, and lightning combined this week to keep the McLean Fire Department busy. Fire Chief Jim McDonald said that his volunteer department fought about 10 grass fires on Tuesday alone.

"Several fires were north of town on the Pampa-Alanreed highway," he said. He said that the biggest blaze burned off about a section and a half. "One fire was on the Billy Davis place, and one was on Les Darsey," he said.

on the Brass ranch which was caused by the Tuesday lightning. According to reports, the lightning hit a tree and ranch workers doused the blaze several times, but Thursday the fire ignited again and started the grass fire.

Firemen fought that blaze for about five hours.

Early Sunday morning, a grass fire was reported on the county line road on the old Bidwell place. McDonald said that blaze destroyed about 200 to 300 acres. The firemen went out about 1 a.m. and returned about 3 a.m.

Sunday afternoon, a fire was reported on the Dick Everett place nine miles north and three miles east of McLean. Apparently lightning had struck a utility pole during the storm Saturday night, and when the pole burned down to grass level, the pasture was set on fire.

Firemen also fought a grass fire at the Alanreed School Friday which was started by burning trash.

Gray County Commissioners Meet Today

The Gray County Commissioners will meet Thursday (today) at 9:30

Wynn Named For Honor

Senior Randall Wynn was notified recently that he has been chosen for inclusion in "Who's Who Among American High School Students, 1982-83."

According to the organization, only five percent of all upperclassmen from the nation's 22,000 high schools are featured in the annual publication.

Wynn will also be eligible to compete in the Educational Communications Scholarship Foundation's annual program which will distribute over $50,000 in awards.

a.m. for their regular meeting.

The McLean Hospital question is not included on the agenda. According to County Judge Carl Kennedy, the county attorney, Robert McPherson, will not report on the legality of transferring the McLean Hospital deed until the end of September.

At the commissioners' meeting early in September, the commissioners agreed to lease or deed the hospital to the City of McLean. Commissioners are waiting to determine the legality of deeding the facility before the transaction is finalized.

"We wanted the McLean City officials to proceed with their plans for the hospital, and we wanted to assure them that we will either lease or deed the hospital," Kennedy said. "We simply think they would prefer to have the facility deeded, and that's what we want to do, if it is legal for the county to do so," he said.

The proposal would deed the hospital to the City with a lien attached which would give Gray County the first $200,000 if the facility was ever sold.

"Items included on the commissioners' agenda for today are the following: pay salaries, consider time deposits, consider treasurer's report, tour McClellan Creek Watershed sites, consider budget for 1984, discuss a donation from Gray County for window covering for Family Service Center, continue discussion of plans for municipal golf course, discuss changes in the law concerning bingo license and games, and consider request from Salvation Army for additional financial assistance.

Kennedy said that he hoped the matter of the McLean Hospital could be finalized at the commissioners' Oct. meeting.

Lions Set Tournament For Final Play Of Season

The final day for challenge matches in the McLean Lions Ladder Tournament will be Saturday, Sept. 24.

On Sunday Sept. 25, a tournament is planned for closing competition in the two-month ladder tournament. Top positions on the ladder will be awarded prizes. Competition will be held for all ladder players, as well as those who have not participated in the ladder competition.

An entry fee of $5 will be charged and players will be flighted or hand-cupped. Details of the tournament will be worked out by the tournament committee.

Prizes will be awarded in all categories.

Rankings on the ladder at presstime were as follows: John M. Haynes,

Local Golfers Win Honors

Several McLean golfers were among the winners in the Eighth Annual Labor Day Partnership Golf Tourney at Shamrock recently.

Casper Smith and Buck Lee posted a 142 to win the second flight. Marty McClintock and Mickey McClintock won the fourth flight with a score of 150. Alvin Danner and Junior Windom scored 137 to take second place in the first flight. Doyal Billingsley and Mike Johnson posted a 151 to take second place in the fourth flight.

Counselor To Present Results To Parents

McLean's counselor Kari Reiter will meet with the high school classes Thursday, Sept. 22 to discuss TABS (Texas Assessment of Basic Skills) and achievement test scores from last year's tests. She will meet with the parents of high school students at 7 p.m. in the McLean High School auditorium the same day.

Classes will meet on the following schedule: seniors, 12:45 p.m.; juniors, 1:15; sophomores, 1:50 p.m.; freshmen will meet at a later date.

Gray County MADD Chapter Sets Meeting

The Gray county chapter of MADD (Mothers Against Drunk Drivers) will meet Sept. 19 at 7:30 p.m. in the National Guard Armory in Pampa for an organizational meeting, according to Sharon Potter of Pampa. The group will view the film "Epidemic", courtesy of the Texas Department of Public Safety.

Heard last week that there was a road sign near Brownfield with the following: "If you are a Christian, pray for rain... If you are an atheist, go wash your car."

Apparently both groups got busy last week, because we finally had some blessed moisture. A light shower Tuesday was followed by a good rain early Sunday morning, and the prospects for more this week.

People kept telling me in August that it would rain again, but I had almost begun to doubt that.

Our junior high social studies teacher, Carl Robertson, has put his young students on a project that seems to be creating a lot of interest. The seventh and eighth graders are busy researching their family histories and the history of McLean.

I'm sure the project will help the youngsters realize what an interesting place we live in, and what a rich history we have in this area.

The search for family history may get several members of the family interested in tracing their "roots". It can be an endless task, this searching for family history, but it can also be an enlightening one.

I remember my mother laughing about family genealogy when I was a child. She said that one of her friends researched her family tree until she "found someone hanging from it!" Of course, that is always one of the hazards to looking at the past.

As I was helping Dollie look up some information, I realized that my great-grandfather (on my father's side) had fought for the Union, but his brother had fought for the Confederacy. That is a situation that must have occurred hundreds of times to families during that great Civil War, but somehow the fact about my own family brought the conflict closer to home.

Every family has interesting facts buried in their past, and perhaps these youngsters will inspire us all to do a little research and learn more about our ancestors.

Senator Bill Sarpalius Reports

Juvenile Probation

AUSTIN — There are many Texas youngsters who have contributed to the overcrowding of our prisons simply because there was no one to pay attention to them when they first broke the law as juveniles.

Although juvenile probation departments have been around Texas since 1917, most Texas counties did not have the authority for juvenile probation boards to operate. The result is that many youngsters who might have been worked with in their own communities wound up in a state correctional institution or in prison.

On September 1, the ten counties of the 31st Senatorial District without juvenile probation boards were authorized for boards through legislation I sponsored in the just completed legislative session. Now all counties in Texas have boards authorized.

The boards in most cases consist of the county, district and juvenile judges. In some counties citizens are authorized membership on the board. Our counties now authorized for boards are Sherman, Hartley, Lamb, Bailey, Parmer, Castro, Swisher, Hale, Dallam and Hansford. Other counties in the districts previously were authorized boards.

These counties will receive state grants, the amount of which is based primarily on population of the county. The amounts range from $5,100 in Sherman County to a high of $48,604 in Hale County.

The Legislature recognized that a problem with authorization of juvenile boards existed when it created the Texas Juvenile Probation Commission in 1981 to work with juvenile boards to establish a uniform and comprehensive juvenile probation services program in every Texas county. Legislation was necessary for the commission to have a board with which to work. The commission's basic idea is to provide local control over probation services using state standards as a guide. By providing funds for assistance to the boards it insures that state standards can be met.

These funds can be used for a variety of services, ranging from salaries for probation officers to training and travel expenses. Also included can be services for juveniles, ranging from medical and psychological to school supplies and clothing. Even placement of children in homes, such as Boys Ranch in lieu of a correctional institution is allowable.

Last year 72,000 Texas youngsters from age 10-17 were referred to the courts. Because juvenile services have been so highly fragmented in the past, there is a good chance that some kids - especially in rural areas - did not have that opportunity of having someone keeping a close watch to see if they could be helped to a better life.

If you have any questions or comments about juvenile probation services in your county please let us know by writing Senator Bill Sarpalius, P.O. Box 12068, Austin, Texas 78711.

The Scientists Tell Me...

By Robert L. Haney
TAES Science Writer

If you want beef that is extra tasty, chances are best when you buy beef in the better USDA grades, according to meat scientists at Texas A&M University.

It wasn't always that way but has apparently evolved over time. If USDA quality grades were intended originally to predict the palatability of cooked beef, it is interesting that the first official grade standards in 1926 do not say that, no mention is made in those standards of "expected palatability," according to Dr. Gary Smith, Head of Animal Science Department at Texas A&M University.

In fact, Smith says, the words "palatability," "juiciness," "tenderness" do not appear in the original information on grades. The expressed intent of grading at that time was "to have comparability between the (whole-sale meat market news service) reports issued from different markets."

Gradually, over the years, the definition of official grade standards has changed to identify differences in characteristics associated with eating quality. By 1975, the official grade standards defined "quality grade" (not just "quality") as the "palatability-indicating characteristics of the lean."

A team of meat scientists, including Smith, involved in meats research for the Texas Agricultural Experiment Station, (TAES) sought answers to two beef-grade-related questions: 1) Are USDA quality grades related to beef flavor, and, if so, how strong is the relationship? and 2) By what mechanism or through what means—physical and/or chemical—do the grades of individual components of the grade relate to differences in beef flavor?

Besides Smith, the research team included Dr. Z.L. Carpenter, formerly head of animal science and presently director of the Texas Agricultural Extension Service; Dr. J.W. Savell, Texas Agricultural Experiment Station Meat and Muscle Biologist; and Dr. H.R. Cross, Professor in Meat Science, at Texas A&M.

Earlier research in the 1970's by Smith, Carpenter and others had concluded that USDA quality grade, USDA marbling score, and intramuscular fat content had "low to moderate" relationships to sensory panel ratings for flavor. However, the most recent research of Smith and his group has clarified the relationship of USDA's quality grades and palatability of cooked beef.

In quality grade, the average flavor desirability ratings for loin and top round steaks from carcasses of each USDA quality grade showed that loin steaks and top round steaks from carcasses of higher USDA quality grade were significantly more desirable in flavor in 87.5% of comparisons with steaks from carcasses of lower USDA quality grade.

There were significant differences in flavor desirability of loin steaks between Prime and Choice, Choice and Good, and Good and Standard. These are the four USDA quality grades for which youthful carcasses, (those of A and B maturity), most often quality, and as grade decreased, flavor desirability of loin steaks decreased significantly.

For top round steaks from carcasses of A and B maturity Prime had significantly higher flavor desirability ratings than did Choice, but there was no difference in flavor desirability among round steaks from Choice, Good and Standard.

There are four additional USDA quality grades—Commercial, Utility, Cutter, and Canner—that are usually assigned to mature (C, D and E maturity) carcasses. There were significant differences in flavor desirability of loin steaks between Commercial and Utility and between Utility and Canner, but not between Cutter and Canner.

For top round steaks, flavor desirability differed significantly between Commercial plus Utility vs. Cutter plus Canner, but not between Commercial and Utility or between Cutter and Canner.

In general, as grade increased flavor desirability increased, with intergrade and adjacent-grade differentials more consistent for loin steaks than for top round steaks.

Maturity was also found to affect quality. Assignment of a specific USDA quality grade to a beef carcass is made on the basis of the physiological age of the animal at the time of slaughter (which relates to USDA overall maturity group) and on the basis of intramuscular fatness of the animal (which relates to USDA marbling score).

If USDA quality grade is related—and it appears that it is—to flavor desirability of loin steaks and top round steaks, then it follows that either or both maturity and marbling would be related to desirability of flavor in cooked beef.

Beef carcasses of A maturity produced loin steaks that were significantly more desirable in flavor than those from carcasses of B, C, or E maturity and flavor quality declined as maturity increased.

Beef carcasses of A maturity produced top round steaks that were significantly more desirable in flavor than those from carcasses of C or E, but not B, maturity. Top round steaks from carcasses of E maturity were significantly less desirable in flavor than were those from carcasses of A, B, or C maturity.

Research showed that more youthful (A or B maturity) beef is more desirable in flavor than mature (C or E maturity) beef and that, generally, as maturity increases, flavor desirability decreases.

Marbling, a measure of fat content between lean fibers, was more significant in loin steaks than in round. For loin steaks, both maturity and marbling were related to differences in flavor desirability. For top round steaks, differences in flavor desirability were more closely related to differences in carcass maturity than they were to differences among carcasses in marbling score.

Intramuscular fat (marbling) is within the muscle and determined by chemical fat content assay. It was found that in general, loin steaks—but not top round steaks—can be stratified into meaningful flavor desirability groupings by use of intramuscular fat percentage levels.

Subcutaneous fat is found between the muscle and the skin and has been thought by many to have no effect on palatability of meat. However, research shows that for loin steaks, those with fat thicknesses of 0.30 inches or more produced steaks with significantly higher flavor desirability ratings than those with fat thicknesses of 0.24 inches or less.

Diet also affects flavor. It was found that any period of grain feeding (30 days or more) significantly improves flavor desirability of loin steaks and that optimal flavor desirability appears to be coincident with about 100 to 130 days of grain feeding.

In summary, Smith says that it now seems quite likely that present USDA quality grade is related to flavor of beef because grade indirectly assesses the extent to which flavor and/or aroma compounds are likely to be present in high vs. low concentrations in the meat.

Carcasses from older animals, leaner animals, and animals not fed large amounts of grain—animals for which there is high likelihood that they would produce meat that is less desirable in flavor—are assigned low USDA quality grades, while carcasses from young animals, fatter animals, and animals fed large quantities of grain—animals for which there is a likelihood that they would produce meat that is "beefy" and more desirable in flavor—are assigned high USDA quality grades.

USDA Quality Grades Can Predict Beef Flavor

Senator Lloyd Bentsen Watching Washington

It took an Act of Congress to force the Department of Agriculture to give Texas cotton farmers a fair shake under the Payment-in-Kind, or PIK, program.

PIK was conceived by the department last year as a way to ensure stable farm prices, by reducing both production and commodity surpluses, and as a way to provide income to hard-pressed farmers.

Under the program, farmers are paid for holding acreage out of production. Unlike previous farm programs, though, the farmers are not paid in cash but in crops held by the government.

PIK has been well-received by our nation's farmers, much better than the department anticipated—possibly because it failed to fully appreciate the seriousness of the financial crisis confronting farmers.

Farmers have signed up for PIK in such record numbers that the department, in fact, has run out of surplus crops to distribute. USDA now estimates, for example, that it will fall 500,000 to a million cotton bales short of the amount it needs to meet demands generated by PIK.

The department has proposed to overcome this shortage by, in effect, buying cotton from farmers, then giving that cotton back to the farmers to sell again on the open market.

Needless to say, this is an awkward way of doing business. But that isn't the heart of the problem confronting cotton farmer participants in PIK.

The problem is that, earlier in the year, USDA had to do the same thing for wheat and grain farmers and it wound up paying those farmers more than it wanted to. So when the time came to deal with cotton farmers, USDA put a lid on the amount it would pay.

The department, in other words, changed the rules in the middle of the game. With the lid, farmers could expect USDA to pay them 59 cents a pound—at most—for their cotton. If the rules were the same for them as they had been earlier for wheat and grain farmers, they could expect a maximum of 69 cents a pound.

No matter how you look at it, that's not a fair shake for cotton farmers and I repeatedly urged Secretary of Agriculture John Block to give cotton farmers—and all other farmers, for that matter—the same treatment.

The Secretary turned a deaf ear to my plea and to the pleas of other concerned Members of Congress, so we proposed legislation that would require USDA to pay cotton farmers on the same basis that it pays other farmers.

That proposal was approved by Congress and has been signed into law by the President as part of a larger piece of legislation. The issue here is fair and equal treatment. I'm pleased that we got it. But, I regret that it took an Act of Congress to get it.

Stacie Smith, Randy Mac Stewart Exchange Wedding Vows In Garden Ceremony

MR. AND MRS. RANDY MAC STEWART

Stacie Renee Smith and Randy Mac Stewart exchanged wedding vows Sept. 3 at 8 p.m. in a garden setting. The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Carey Don Smith of McLean. The groom is the son of Colene Stewart of McLean and E. M. Stewart of McLean.

The wedding was set in the garden of the bride's grandparents, Mr. and Mrs. Wallace Grimsley at 411 N. Grove in McLean.

Allen Green, minister of the McLean Church of Christ, officiated at the ceremony.

The bride and her father walked to the altar down a winding sidewalk which was flanked by crystal lanterns and marked by white satin ribbons.

The couple were married in front of a flowered archway. The altar area was decorated with yellow daisies and masses of greenery.

Joyce Haynes, aunt of the bride, played the traditional nuptial music. Ida Hess of McLean sang "Truly", and Karen Wilson of Alanreed and Gregg Mann of McLean sang "Just You and I."

The bride wore her mother's wedding gown of white peau d'oe. The gown featured a scalloped neckline, edged with crochet satin ribbon and seed pearls, long tapered sleeves which ended in petal points over the hands, and a bouffant skirt with a deep hemline tuck, which swept into a chapel train.

Her hat, fashioned by Nancy Thompson of McLean, held a double layer of French illusion net, sweeping down the

Baptist Sunday Class Holds Monthly Social

The Fidelas Sunday School class of First Baptist Church met Sept. 5 in the church for their monthly social. Thelma Stevens and Opal Hugg were hostesses. Safronia Pettit brought the opening prayer, and Edna Taylor brought the devotional. Officers were length of the chapel train of the dress. She carried the Bible which her mother used at her wedding. The Bible was covered by white satin and held yellow roses and three small orchids on top. The orchids were lifted and worn as a corsage by the bride for her honeymoon. Maid of honor was Karen Wilson. She wore a peach-colored floor length dress which featured four tiers of white ruffles. Her garden hat had peach flowers on the brim. She carried a lantern surrounded by roses, roses.

The mother of the bride wore a light purple dress featuring a lace neckline edged with small pleats. The mother of the groom wore a lilac floor-length dress which featured a ruffled neckline.

Best man was Joe Mercer of McLean.

Ushers were Donnie Smith, brother of the bride, and Charles Stewart, brother of the groom.

Guests were registered by Nancy Thompson of McLean.

The bride's parents hosted a reception in the garden following the ceremony. The serving table, set against a bank of greenery, was covered with white linen. The three-tiered cake had fresh flowers topping each tier. Peach-colored punch was served from a crystal punch bowl. A five-branch candelabra and the bride's bouquet completed the table adornments.

Servers were Stefanie Houdyshell, Robbin Skinner, Chandra and Becky Crockett, cousins of the groom.

Out-of-town guests were George and Karen Brownlee, Mr. and Mrs. David Newton and Nicole, Mr. and Mrs. Kenny Lanham and Boots, all of Dumas; Todd Allison and LaEuna Caldwell, both of Amarillo; Mike Haynes and Mrs. Halcyon Rigdon, both of Lubbock; Morse Haynes, Todd Davis and Sherry Conklin, all of Pampa; Sam D. Haynes of Childress; Tony and Danny Riddle, Dale Glenn Gipson, all of Borger; Charles, Lou, and Becky Crockett of Wheeler; Chandra Crockett of Clarendon; Melinda Finn of Dallas; Brenda Wilson and Jamie Glass, both of Canyon; Mr. and Mrs. Bob Barron and Mr. and Mrs. Mark Barron, all of Austin.

Windy Valley Reunion will be Sunday Oct. 9 for all residents and former residents of Windy Valley. The meeting will be at Donley County Community Center, one block north of Chamberlain Motor Company from 9:30 a.m. to 5 p.m.

Lunch will be served at the center at 1 p.m. Tye Thompson's art work will be on display in the Pioneer Room of Lovett Memorial Library for the next few days.

J. Boyd and Frankie Smith and Mrs. Carl Phillips attended funeral services in Decatur Monday for an aunt of Mr. Phillips.

The Pioneer Study Club met in the home of Ruth Magee recently for the annual breakfast. Plans for this year's programs were discussed. Theme for the 1983-84 year is "We've Come A Long Way". Members present were Fayette Belle Barton, Nancy Billingsley, Margaret Coleman, Mary Dwyer, Mary Lou Glass, Katy Graham, Clara Hupp, Velma Kinard, Ruth Magee, Janet McCracken, Judy Orrick, Irene Pakan, Martha Parker, Jacque Riley, Mary Emma Woods and Ann Green. Next meeting will be Sept. 22 at the library.

Pat Bailey is back at work after a week of vacation. David Day, Johnny Day and Scott Stubbs attended the WTSU/ACU game Saturday in Canyon. Fourteen people from the First Baptist Church attended an associational meeting in Shamrock last Thursday evening.

Bob Berg has been called by the First Baptist Church to be the music director. He will also be working with the youth. He and his family will be moving here within a few days.

The Baptist Women are meeting this week each day in observance of a Week of Prayer for State Missions.

Member of the graduating class of 1978 met recently for a five-year reunion. Those attending include Glen and Jeree (Boyd) Oldham, Kevin and Melinda (Hunt) Finn, Foyd and Teresa (Bybee) Latchin, Butch and Robbie (Turpen) Cline and many others. The group met in the home of Scott and Evelyn Raines of McLean.

Hydrogen fuel search takes another step forward at Texas A&M

COLLEGE STATION—The search for technology to make hydrogen fuel commercially competitive with other fuels has taken another step forward at Texas A&M University with the awarding of a $150,000 grant from the National Science Foundation.

The support will allow continuation of hydrogen fuel studies being conducted by researchers working under internationally acclaimed electrochemist Dr. John Bockris.

Under Bockris' leadership, the researchers are investigating a method to efficiently obtain hydrogen from ordinary water using solar power and a centuries-old technique called electrolysis to split water molecules.

In The Kitchen

by Linda Haynes

Dieters quickly learn the value of chicken. Not only is it low in calories, when prepared properly, it is also very satisfying. I tried a low-calorie version of Chicken Kiev last week, and discovered that it was almost identical to my regular recipe. If you have never tried this delicacy, I think you will be surprised at the ease of preparation, and the delicious taste.

Chicken Kiev
On boned, skinned chicken breast per serving 1 tablespoon of butter per serving (you may use regular margarine, or diet margarine. I can't tell any difference in the taste.)

dried chives
bread crumbs
milk (either homogenized or skim)
For each serving of chicken, take one tablespoon of margarine, and mix with about a teaspoon of dried chives. Shape into a finger-sized piece. Place in freezer about thirty minutes. Meanwhile, place each chicken breast between waxed paper. Pound with edge of plate until breast is thin.

Place frozen margarine on breast, and roll up, jelly-roll fashion. Secure with toothpick. Dip breast in milk, then bread crumbs. Repeat.

Place breast in pan which has been sprayed with Pam. Place in oven for 40 minutes at 350 degrees. (Or microwave on high for about 15 to 20 minutes.)

Joy Rhine, Gary Cogburn Wedding Vows Solemnized In First Baptist Church

MRS. GARY COGBURN

Joy Elaine Rhine and Gary Young Cogburn were united in marriage July 16 at the First Baptist Church in McLean. The Rev. Randy Land officiated at the double-ring ceremony.

The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. J. Boyd Smith of McLean and the groom is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Loyd H. Cogburn of Shamrock.

The bride, given in marriage by her father with the "her mother and I" avowal, wore a formal wedding gown of white, pearl-strewn chantilly lace and organza. The gown featured fingertip lace sleeves and a high neckline. The A-line skirt was adorned with ruffled organza, and caught up in a multi-tiered chapel-length train.

The bride carried a cascade-style bouquet of white roses and stephanotis, accented with baby's breath, lace and silk ribbons. Her hair was swept off her face and held in a loose bun by the fingertip veil, trimmed in silk white roses and pearls.

The mothers of the bride and groom wore formal-length dresses. They wore corsages of pink roses, alstromeria and baby's breath.

The bridesmaids wore pink crepe-back satin dresses, accentuated with lace and tucks. They carried bouquets of pink alstromerias, carnations and baby's breath. They also wore sprigs of baby's breath in their hair.

Mrs. Claudia Marion of Wheeler, sister of the bride, was matron of honor. Bridesmaids were Sally Haynes of Lubbock and Julie Cogburn of Shamrock, sister of the groom.

Flower girl was Kristina Carter of McLean, wearing a dress of pink cotton with a white eyelet pinafore, trimmed in pink ribbon. She carried a small basket of rose petals. She also wore sprigs of baby's breath in her hair. The ring bearer, Matt Rhine, nephew of the bride, wore a light gray tuxedo and carried a white satin and lace pillow.

The groom was dressed in a white formal tuxedo with tails. The groom's attendants wore formal tuxedos in light gray.

The best man was Ray Cogburn of Shamrock, brother of the groom. Groomsman were Mike Louis of Canyon and Troy Cranford of Amarillo. Guests were ushered by Art Rhine, brother of the bride, and Mickey Mitchell of Shamrock.

Guests were greeted by Mrs. Jackie Cogburn of Shamrock at the register's table of white lace overlaying a pink tablecloth. Mrs. Candy Land presented a prelude of nuptial music as guests arrived. The church was decorated with fifty long, pink candles, a large arched candelabra with spiral candelabras on each side, aisle standards, a kneeling bench, and the traditional unity candle, all trimmed in greenery. Miss Connie Robertson accompanied Miss Shevon Carlton of Amarillo as she sang three songs: "With You I'm Born Again", "Wedding Song", and "The Lord's Prayer".

The bride's parents hosted a reception following the ceremony in the Fellowship Hall of the church. The bride's table was lain with white lace over a pink cloth, gathered by flowers and ribbons. The three-tiered white wedding cake was decorated with two spirals of silk roses ascending on each side of the cake, white satin bells on top of the cake, and a pink lighted fountain under the bottom tier. A large crystal punch bowl completed the table. The cake and punch were served by Mrs. Nan

Counting Our Blessings

Next time you enjoy a cold drink in a foam cup at your favorite fast food restaurant, take a moment out to think about this:

That foam cup is helping conserve a very precious natural resource—energy. The growing number of fast food spots using foam for cups and other containers is evidence of a growing concern for improving our energy situation. The fact is, producing these items from polystyrene is far more economical and energy-wise than making them from paper, according to the Society of the Plastics Industry.

Rhine of Pampa, Mrs. Elaine Pierce of McLean, Robin Smith of Canyon, and Mrs. Melonie Server of LaMesa.

Following a honeymoon trip to Carlsbad, the couple is at home in Amarillo. The bride is currently attending WTSU majoring in Business Administration. The groom received an Associate degree in Commercial Electronics from Amarillo College in 1983.

Engineer E. W. Baker of Oklahoma City came in Monday for the last day of the open season on prairie chickens. Mr. Baker got the bag limit of five birds with an expenditure of about $35. This expense included to a non-resident hunting license and some other expenses incident to the hunt. $7.00 apiece for the prairie chickens seems rather high, but Mr. Baker said they were worth it.

Last Saturday at some time after midnight several boys who were waiting to take the early morning train, went down to the light and power plant, and one of them, before the engineer in charge could stop him, raised the weight on the machine that automatically controls the street lighting system, burning out all lights and sockets on the whole system, as well as endangering his life. Supt. Bogan worked all next day putting in temporary lights in the white way poles, but the other lights will have to wait until a shipment can be made from the factory.

Supervisors urged to think twice when giving raises

COLLEGE STATION—Many supervisors ought to think twice before giving higher salaries to prize employees who threaten to quit their jobs for another offer.

"Employers will sometimes do anything to keep high performers, but there's a limit to what's fair," said Dr. Michael Abelson, a Texas A&M University management professor.

"If you give an employee a 25 percent raise to compete with an offer from another employer, chances are other employees who perform as well but don't have similar offers will resent the action. They might ask for raises themselves, or start looking for other jobs."

DRIVE SAFELY-SCHOOLS OPEN!

Now that schools everywhere are opening their doors to our children to teach them what they will need to know to carry them into adulthood, please, drive carefully and watch out for our children — they may not be watching out for you. Children don't always obey traffic rules, but please see that you do — especially in and around school zones. Give our kids the opportunity to grow and learn proper safety. Give our kids a brake — the future depends on it!

Marbles Reveals The Real Story About The Chocolate Covered Newlywed

It has been my fate in the last few years to travel a bit more than usual. And ordinarily the travel necessitates the need for overnight accommodations, which turn up in the form of an ever-increasing variety of hotels and motels. I have frequented many, from the ones where the clientele was so shady that the Gideon Bibles were chained to the wall, to those in which I slept suspended from the ceiling fixture in order to avoid meaningful conversations with resident roaches.

But there have been times when I have been lucky enough to put up at a hotel where my chenille bathrobe was snickered at by the maid. It was in just such an establishment that I happened to have the room adjoining my friend Woopsie and her husband Hank.

This particular hotel featured beautifully decorated rooms, elegant cuisine (which I later found out meant good eats), and the delightful custom of sending around sweet little ladies who turned down the bed covers for you. In addition to turning down the covers, the ladies left a single red rosebud and a foil-wrapped chocolate atop a neatly fluffed pillow. We're talking class here, folks.

Now I can smell chocolate the day before it's determined to do something about it. So, with her best schoolgirl penmanship she wrote a biting letter to the maid. "Someone," Woopsie wrote "is not doing her job. Obviously the previous tenant of my room was a chocolate freak who ate in bed and fell asleep before consuming the whole box of chocolates. And while I can understand this, I cannot overlook the fact that you failed to change the sheets, thereby making me the innocent victim of your slovenliness, and in general a chocolate mess. Imagine my shock at being covered with chocolate, especially in front of my new husband, who is still laughing at this very minute. It's a good thing that somebody left a tiny bar of soap in the shower, or you people would be facing a lawsuit in the very near future. See that you remedy this situation immediately."

I don't know how the staff reacted to Woopsie's note of outrage, but for the rest of her stay there were no chocolates left on her pillow, so she felt justified in holding her ground.

And I don't know a good way to tell Whoopsie why she really got candy-coated, so I think I'll leave that job to Hank...should he ever stop laughing long enough to be able to talk.

made, so I found, and ate, my little goody right away. But poor Woopsie, a romantic newlywed, spied the rose and overlooked the chocolate, an event which led to disastrous results.

Two McLean Women Start New Business

Two McLean women have taken a love for crafts, and an eye for design, and turned them into what could be a profitable business. Emma Jean Tate and Mary Ann Rice recently opened their business, called "The Grape Hut." The pair operate out of a workshop in the Tate garage designing wreaths and baskets from grape vines, and arrangements on grapevine roots.

The unique decorations feature mostly natural materials, with a little ribbon and a few crocheted pieces added.

Mrs. Rice and Mrs. Tate have been gathering the natural materials from pastures around McLean for the last several weeks. They are selling the decorative items for their workshop which is located two miles south of McLean on farm road 3143, and 1/4 mile east. Mrs. Tate said that customers might call 779-2793 before coming out to make sure someone was home.

The pair is travelling to arts and crafts fairs around the area to sell their merchandise. They attended the Antique Coin and Gun Show in Guyton last weekend, and sold many arrangements. They also sold their wares at a flea market in Pampa over the Labor Day holidays. They have been invited to the Forgan, Okla. Arts Festival Sept. 24 and 25.

Mrs. Tate said that the wreaths, which range in price from $12.50 to $18, with some as high as $35, are trimmed to decorate for almost any season or holiday.

"I'm working now on constructing a Christmas tree out of grapevine," she said. "I'm not sure it's going to work, but I'm going to try it."

Mrs. Tate said that the pair can also custom decorate a wreath for any color scheme.

Armadillo in the Grass by Shelby Hearon
Shelby Hearon has literally burst on the American literary scene and has established herself very quickly as one of the most promising young writers of the present era. She is married to a philosopher, and is the mother of a daughter and a son. She now resides near Austin, Texas, and is awaiting the publication of her ninth novel "Afternoon of a Faun."

"Armadillo in the Grass" is a very interesting and well-written novel revolving around Clara Blue, a young wife and mother who "finds herself" in her art, and finally learns to commu-icate with her more cerebral husband after learning to express her feelings in sculpture.

As Clara and her husband strive to get along, although involved in vastly different areas of interest, she throws herself into her work, sometimes inspired and sometimes disturbed by the abrasive young sculptor who is her teacher, and you as the reader find yourself more and more involved in and moved by her story.

With warmth and grace, Shelby Hearon's novel brings to life a woman in the very act of making her life complete. "Armadillo in the Grass" is now available at Lovett Memorial Library.

"He who does not know the force of words cannot know man." Confucius
