A comedian on the Johnny Carson show the other night, commenting on the terrible deluge of rain that California has been suffering under, said that maybe God didn't intend for people to live in California. The Californians have really suffered because of the tremendous amounts of rain, but maybe that's God's way of bringing them to reality, because normally the climate in California is so beautiful that the residents live in a virtual paradise.

I lived in Salinas, California for one year when I was five years old and for a child coming from Oklahoma, California was a wonderland. In the morning, fog (not smog!) covered the landscape and the temperature hovered around 70 degrees. By afternoon, the day would warm to about 85 degrees, and then about 4 p.m. the fog would come back and the temperature would drop to about 70 again.

In the valley where we lived the moisture was so good that everything stayed green the year around. We lived in a location where we could go to the mountains or to the beach by just driving about an hour from our home.

The beauty and mildness of California's climate is what has drawn so many people to the state over the years, but I'm sure the Chambers of Commerce in California will not be bragging about the recent spell.

The McLean Chamber of Commerce is in the process of having a brochure about the city of McLean published. This brochure will be used to give to people interested in our town. It will also be sent to businesses which may wish to locate in McLean.

For several years I helped with various organizations who sponsored the Miss McLean pageant, so I know from first-hand what a tremendous job it is and how nerve-racking the whole process can become.

I think Mrs. Virginia Holwick and her annual staff deserve a tremendous amount of credit for the fine job they did in staging this year's contest.

Some people object to beauty contests, but I still think that they have some redeeming factors. It is the best way I know for a girl to learn poise and confidence, whether she wins or loses, because it is absolutely terrifying to walk across that stage in front of a large crowd of your friends and school-mates.

When I was in high school at Weatherford, all the girls were pressured into being in the beauty contest which was sponsored at that time by the band. We were told that it was a matter of school spirit to appear, so although I was a very shy (that's really true, whether you believe it or not!) 14-

FFA And 4-H Will Show Stock Saturday

Youngsters from the McLean 4-H and the McLean High School Future Farmers of America will show their livestock Saturday at the annual McLean Stock show in the FFA show area, south of the city.

FFA sponsor Jarrell Russell said that the students will be showing 30 hogs and ten steers in the show. Judging will begin at 2 p.m.

Livestock will be judged in the following categories: light weight swine, medium weight swine, heavy weight swine, light weight steers, and heavy weight steers.

The public is invited to the show.

4-H sponsors will have a concession stand at the stock show with sandwiches, cookies, brownies, and soft drinks for sale.

Friday night before the stock show, the McLean Livestock Boosters are hosting a Mexican Pot Luck Supper for all interested persons at the Church of Christ annex, beginning at 7 p.m. The supper is for all supporters of the stock show, and all those who wish to buy or donate to a fund to buy the local youngsters stock.

School Opens House Set

The McLean Schools will host an open house at the school buildings Mar. 4 with classrooms open from 7 p.m. until 7:45 p.m. for visitation. At 8 p.m. in the High School auditorium, the elementary music department and the high school band will present a program.

The open house is part of an observance of Public Schools Week in Texas, Mar. 3-7. The week celebrates 126 years of public schools in Texas.

All parents and individuals interested in the schools are invited to attend the open house.

Bandsmen To Travel To UIL Contest

Members of the McLean Tiger band will travel to Canyon Saturday for the University Interscholastic League Ensemble with Joy Rhine, Randy Suggs, Kaven Hook, Tim Smith, Davey Smith, Revina Herridon, and Brenda Wilson; a brass quartet with Sally Haynes, Cory Gardner, Brad Melton, and Trudy Stewart; a saxophone quartet with Jamie Glass, Teresa Woods, Rhonda Woods, and Eddy Brooks; a flute trio with Cindy Glass, Missy Billingsley, and Susie Billingsley; and a clarinet trio of Terry Glass, Teresa Herridon, and Brett Simmons.

Participating as soloists are Brad Melton on trombone, Trudy Stewart on trombone (both playing Class 1 solos), Jamie Glass on saxophone, Terry Glass on clarinet, Brett Simmons on clarinet, and Theron Stubbs on tuba.

Accompanist for the group will be Mrs. Bonnie Fabian. The band students are under the direction of Mrs. Bonnie Brass.

Athletes Begin Spring Sports

Even though football and basketball seasons are over at McLean Schools, athletes are busier than ever participating in off-season training, track, tennis and golf.

The off-season programs for both boys and girls in junior high and high school consist of a series of exercises to increase muscle tone, coordination, and over-all strength. The youngsters are taking advantage of a variety of equipment including weights, neck machines, and a new "jumper" to increase jumping ability.

The track programs at both the junior high and high school have more athletes than usual participating. Coach Jack Dorsett who is in charge of the high school boys track program said that he expects to take at least eight boys out of the 18 who are participating to the regional track meet.

Regional qualifiers from last year who are participating this year are Tim Killham who qualified in the pole vault and Randy Suggs who went in the high jump. Dorsett said that Killham should go to regional in at least two events and that Suggs should qualify in at least two events. He also said that he hopes to take the mile relay to regional. Boys district track meet will be April 15.

Coach Joe Riley has 30 boys out for junior high track, with several track meets on schedule for the youngsters.

In girls track, Dorsett has 17 girls out for junior high track and expects to do well in several events at district.

In high school girls track, coach Vester Joiner has 15 girls participating with last year's regional qualifiers Joy Rhine (hurdles) and Leslie Skipper (high jump) good prospects for a return to the regional meet. Although it is early in the season, Joiner said that he expects to take Rhonda Herridon to regional in the 880, Leslie Skipper and Sally Haynes in the 100 yard dash, and Joy Rhine in the hurdles. He also said the prospects for a district-winning 440-relay team look good.

Girls district track meet is April 10.

Joiner said that several of the girls look like potential district winners at this time.

In tennis, Coach Jerry Cook has 22 high school boys and girls participating and 10 junior high boys and girls out. He said that the high school participants will be narrowed to two teams.

The group has scheduled several tennis matches in the next month, but the district tennis meet has not been set yet.

In golf, Coach Joe Riley has 7 girls and 11 boys participating, including regional qualifiers Sally Haynes and Missy Billingsley for the girls, and Spooky Smith, Tim Killham, and Billy Frank Hambright for the boys.

Riley said that the prospects look good for the golf teams. He said that all the golfers had taken advantage of the good weather for some early practice. District meet for the golf teams has not been set.

Riders Win Second, Dogs Take Third In Tournament

The McLean volleyball teams played in the Shamrock Jaycee Tournament last weekend with the men's Ghost Riders winning second and the Salty Dogs winning third. The women's teams, the Decades, won consolation by beating the Red Rivers. The Sweet 80's missed their final game because of a confusion in scheduling.

Two other teams from McLean, the Bumblebees and the Wheels, lost in the early round of the tournament.

Boyd Thompson Named Scout Master

McLean's scouting program has gained momentum with the acquiring of a new Scout Master for Boy Scouts, and three new Den Leaders for Cub Scouts.

Leading Boy Scout troop 425 will be Boyd Lee Thompson, who volunteered his services last month at the annual scout enrollment meeting.

Boy Scouts for this year are John Bentley, Timothy Hembree, Allen Patman, Bob Patman, Mitch Reynolds, Steven McAnear, Chet Bohlar, Greg Hilburn, and Donnie Smith. Boy Scout meetings are each Tuesday evening at 6:30.

PUBLIC SCHOOL OPEN HOUSE
TUESDAY MARCH 4 7 p.m.

Filing Date For Elections Is March 5

No new candidates have filed this week in the city and school elections scheduled for April 5. The filing deadline for both elections is March 5.

Three spaces are open on the city council and three are open on the McLean school board.

Candidates who have filed in the city race are incumbents Boyd Meador, George Terry, and Miro Pakan. Candidates who have filed for three three-year terms on the school board are Coy Smith, and incumbents Jim Allison and Darryl Herridon.

Wrecks Cause Damage

Two wrecks in recent weeks in McLean damaged vehicles but caused no injuries.

On Feb. 8, Tommy M. Graham of Albuquerque, N.M., driving a 1979 Ford truck semi-trailer trailer, jack-knifed the vehicle on icy roads on Interstate 40 near McLean. The cab of the truck was heavily damaged, and the vehicle blocked the road for several hours.

Graham was ticketed for unsafe speed, according to investigating trooper John Holland.

On Feb. 16, Timothy Lee Killham of McLean, driving a 1969 Dodge car, rear-ended a 1978 tan Ford pickup driven by William Ira Moore of McLean. The two vehicles were traveling west on Interstate 40 in McLean near the Clarendon Street intersection when Moore turned into a private drive. Moore was cited for failure to change his address on his driver's license, and Killham was cited for having an expired inspection sticker and failure to control speed.

Lodge To Have Open Meeting

The McLean Masonic Lodge will have an open meeting Monday night at the Lodge Hall at 7:30 p.m. in observance of Public Schools Week.

Worshipful Master Bill Beck said that anyone interested in the public schools was invited to attend. Superintendent Carl Dwyer will address the Masons concerning problems in the local schools.

OPINIONS

VIEWS ARE WRITTEN BY LINDA HAYNES, UNLESS OTHERWISE NOTED - IF YOU HAVE AN OPINION ON ANY CURRENT SUBJECT WE WELCOME YOUR SIGNED LETTERS.

MUSEUM NEEDS YOUR HELP

The Alanreed-McLean Museum needs your continued support to stay in existence! The museum is a vital part of the culture in our town, providing a glimpse of the past for both the townspeople and tourists alike.

McLean has probably gotten as much favorable publicity because of the museum as of any institution in the town.

But to stay open, the museum needs your donations, your visits, and your good will.

Stop by soon for a visit...tell the workers how much you appreciate their efforts in preserving our town's history...and leave them a check!

VISIT SCHOOL MARCH 4

Whether you have children in school or not, I hope you will take advantage of the school's open house Tuesday night to visit the McLean schools. The children and the teachers have worked hard to show you some of the progress that they have made in education during the current school year, and it will mean a great deal, especially to the little students, to see their parents, relatives, and friends at the open house.

If it has been awhile since you have visited our local schools, I think you will be impressed with some of the physical improvements to the buildings, and also with the quality teaching that is going on in our schools.

The elementary and high school youngsters have planned a special program for 8 p.m.

that evening in the auditorium to show some more of their skills.

Adults sometimes forget in this turbulent world of ours how important education is...for all of us. It is in the public schools that our young people will learn the skills that will make them successful adults, and it is the responsibility of the adults in the community to see to it that our young people have the best opportunities available for education.

As taxpayers, you are aware that a large portion of your tax dollar goes to finance public schools, and you should be interested to see how that money is spent.

Mark your calendar and BE THERE! March 4 at 7 p.m.

INFLATION'S BAD GUYS

Inflation is still the number one topic on everyone's mind, with a recent news analyst saying that prices have risen by 18 percent in the last three months. Some experts predict that President Carter will seek to institute wage and price controls sometime this year in an effort to hold down the rate of inflation.

So far, the government's actions to stop inflation remind me of someone trying to extinguish a house fire by burning down his neighbor's house and refusing to call the fire department.

The government and the American public refuse to admit that the cause of inflation is not the gouging of the American public by the oil companies, or the unscrupulous behavior of American businessmen. It is the tremendous overspending of the federal government which is causing the fire.

Inflation will not be solved until the American public demands that the government balance the budget and quit promising "pie in the sky" to every group who wants money.

If we all ran our household and business finances the way the government runs its business, then we would be broke...and should be. Can you imagine an American business paying $9.78 for a 35 cent bolt? Can you imagine a private citizen paying his neighbor twenty percent of his salary for the neighbor not working? Well, the government does it...and then can't understand why the taxpayers are close to revolt.

We must take an interest in the elections coming up this fall. We must demand fiscal responsibility from all levels of government, and we must play watch dog on those finances to see that our public servants actually serve the public and not their own special interests.

If you are truly upset about rising prices and inflation which will eventually ruin us all, write your congressman and let your views be known. Make it clear to our elected officials that they must either shape up or we will ship them out!

DISADVANTAGES OF A NEWSMAN

Virgil E. Moore in the Breckenridge American

The worst thing about publishing a small town newspaper is that you know all the bad news first, or if not first, too soon. Of course, using that same reasoning, one of the best things is that you find out about the good things fast. Unfortunately it seems that the bad things search the publisher out and often times the good things do not.

Our front page today seems to have more bad news than it does good news. Bad news tends to mean bad days in our business.

When you are the publisher of a newspaper in a town the size of Breckenridge, the fire siren can mean that a friend's home is on fire. An ambulance siren can mean that someone close to you is injured.

A young newsman feels excitement when he hears a siren wail. An older reporter gets a burning sensation in his stomach.

A young editorial writer feels a sense of power when he writes an editorial critical of the action of a public official. A veteran feels regret that his words will hurt a friend.

One cannot shun the bad news and write only the good. A newspaper's goal is to inform, not to paint an unreal picture.

Our job is to tell you who died, who was injured in an accident, when a factory closes, when tornadoes rip destructive paths and when a crime is committed.

Fortunately, it is also our job to tell you when a child is born, when a brave act saves a life, when a new business opens, when good rainfall falls, and when money is contributed for a worthy cause.

In our town, we are lucky. The good most often outweighs the bad.

Ancient grain could decrease modern food shortages

COLLEGE STATION — A 2,000 year-old staple of the Inca empire described by Texas A&M University scientists as an "almost ideal food protein" could provide an ancient answer to modern food shortages.

The grain, quinoa (key-no-ah), is a cereal with a protein rating of about 16 percent, compared to a skimpy 6 percent in most American wheat products. This makes quinoa far superior to most cereal grains.

Quinoa is only under experimental testing in the United States at Texas A&M test plots, but researchers agree quinoa could be adapted to American high technology agricultural production methods, particularly in the dry Texas High Plains.

year-old junior, I consented to be in the pageant.

This particular pageant was staged with a platform in the center of the stage, and the girls were required to enter from the center curtains, walk across the platform, step down, and walk off the stage.

Since I was two years younger than the rest of the girls in my class, I was sort of an oddball anyway, and I had never worn high heels. If you'll remember back to the late Fifties, all the girls wore spike high heels, and of course I had to follow the fashion.

My parents were very kind, and hid their snickers when I tottered through the house practicing on those stilts, but being so young, I didn't realize what stage fright would do to my knees, and when I walked out on that platform in those four-inch heels, I realized immediately that I was in trouble.

My legs began going in strange directions which had nothing to do with the direction I was supposed to walk, but real disaster struck when I tried to step down off the platform.

My trembling legs refused to work, and I stumbled and FELL!

Now I have always been a realist, and I was even then, and I had not entertained any hopes of winning the contest, or of making the top ten, but when I sprawled across that stage in my formal, and fell flat on my face, I could have curled up and died, but instead the humor of the whole situation struck me.

There I was...a somewhat plump 14-year-old who still slept with a stuffed animal and chewed bubblegum...there I was in a fancy dress with high, HIGH heels, masquerading as a grown-up woman.

At any rate, my sense of humor saved me, and I crawled to my knees, tangled in fourteen crinolene petticoats, got up and laughed!

If you are interested in being a census taker in McLean at pretty good wages, go to the McLean City Hall Friday morning at 9 a.m. A government official will be there to take your application. We received a notice from the census bureau about the application drive, and were told that we should run an ad FREE of charge.

We are always happy to donate to worthy causes in the way of free ads when it is a community service, but somehow the idea of the federal government requesting (almost demanding!) a free ad really rankles me. I don't realize what stage fright would do to my knees, and when I walked out on that platform in those four-inch heels, I realized immediately that I was in trouble.

My legs began going in strange directions which had nothing to do with the direction I was supposed to walk, but real disaster struck when I tried to step down off the platform.

ERNEST D. JORDAN

Jordan died Sunday.

Jordan was a former resident of McLean.

Lefors Cub Scouts Have Banquet

The annual blue and gold banquet for the Lefors Cub Scouts was Feb. 21 in the Lefors Community Civic Center. Present at the banquet in addition to the cub scouts were parents, invited guests, and guest speaker Walter E. Elliot of Lefors.

Tables were decorated with blue and gold crepe paper. Decorative center pieces made by Scout leaders adorned the tables. A pot luck dinner was served to approximately 35 people.

George Parr, cub master, opened the meeting. Guest speaker Walter Elliot, scout master for 35 years, was introduced.

Elliot gave an informative talk pertaining to scouting and his experiences as cub master for scouts covering an era of 35 years. He stressed that scouting is a family organization. Highlights of his talk were his experiences at several National Jamborees. He explained the Scout Badge and what it stands for. The three points represent God, self, and country. He had an exhibit Ditty Bag and contents: New Testament, Boy Scout Handbook, sewing kit, hand-carved slides, and various other interesting objects. He also displayed a jacket, covered with assorted scout patches, and a letter with the official souvenir cover, mailed at Baden-Powell House, London, from a former Boy Scout of Lefors, Bill Beck.

A candlelight ceremony was presented honoring scouts who had earned badges. Bobcat badges were presented to Mike Hall, Duke Flores and Aaron Cates. Bear Badges were presented to Billy McBe, Colby Parr, Jimmy Hannon, Tommy Gee, and Jamie Finney. Denner of the month was awarded to Jimmy Hannon. The closing ceremony was a candlelight service.

Loose Marbles
 by Lisa Patman

Success is a funny thing. As teenagers we are sure we are going to set the world on fire. As adults we find ourselves simply trying to keep warm. Most of us, when our ship came in, were at the wrong dock.

Take the busy mother who has plans of doing something wonderful, career-wise, when she gets the children in school. Maybe she is taking a few college classes at night, whenever Dad can make it home in time to take care of the kids. Just about the time she gets ready to take the big step, when she gets that last toddler off to kindergarten, one of two things happens--1) She will get pregnant again, or 2) there will be an outbreak of the mumps, measles, chicken pox, pink eye, and flu. Not only will each of her children come down with each disease, but each will get them at separate times, thereby tying Mom down for 33 years with sick children. She will miss her climb up the ladder of success, unless she happened to want to be a nurse, in which case she will have lots of practical experience.

If Dad tries to save a little money to invest in order to become the rich and powerful business person that he so desperately wants to be, several things are bound to happen at the same time his savings reach their goal--1) the upstairs toilet will back up, overflow, and do terrible things to the entire house, 2) the twins will need braces, 3) the family dog, the only one who really has stuck by Dad through thick and thin, will develop a rare skin disease which will require months of treatment and mountains of expensive ointment, and 4) the rabbit will die.

I guess the point is that when opportunity knocks most of us are in the back doing the laundry or unstopping the sink, and we never hear the call. But I imagine it's just as well that we don't. The last time I saw the ladder of success I walked under it, stepped up on the bottom rung, and broke it. I guess the strain was too much.

Tech at Lubbock. Leonard's hobby is typing; his favorite sport is basketball; his favorite movie actress is Deanna Durbin, and his best liked movie is "Arkansas Traveler".

The above will comprise the Grand Jury unless excused by the court. Five men were excused or not present when the last term convened. C.M. Carpenter, C.P. Buckler, L.D. Gill and Walter Jones were the jury commissioners appointed at the last term of court.

Private Lee R. Jenkins, son of Mrs. Dora Lee Jenkins, McLean, Texas, was among those who were graduated from the Motor Mechanics Course of the Field Artillery School, U.S. Army, here this week. Jenkins, who is serving as an enlisted member of the Field Artillery School Detachment and regularly stationed at Fort Sill, Okla., completed the four and a half months course on the theory and application of modern motor principles. This week McLean became a division point for the local freight trains on the Rock Island. One crew operates a train three times a week between McLean and Sayre, and another crew has the run from Amarillo. Plans have been under consideration for several months, and were only this week put into effect. Ben Moore is conductor on the Sayre end of the line, and we understand, intends to move his family to McLean. The local agent, D.A. Davis, says there is some possibility of the men from both crews locating here.

Gracey News... We all agree with Mr. Ray about the roads. When a man starts to town he should tell wife and children "good bye", for there is no telling when he will return. Mr. Editor, what we want and need is a good road all the way from your office to Northfork.

 W.H. Bates informed a News reporter Saturday that he has ordered 10,000 black locust trees, which he will set out on his home place this spring. The gentleman believes that the matter of cheap posts for home consumption is thus easily settled and within the next six years he will have thousands of posts that are second only to bois' arc for service.

A social event rather out of the ordinary and yet both unique and enjoyable occurred Saturday evening when Master Geo. Edward Woodward entertained a party of grown-ups in commemoration of his third birthday anniversary, at the pretty Woodward home in west McLean. The guests were Mr. and Mrs. R.H. Collier, Mr. and Mrs. S.O. Cook, and Mr. and Mrs. A.G. Richardson. At 7:30 a delightful buffet luncheon was served after which the remainder of the evening was spent in games and other amusements. The young host was the recipient of a pretty signet ring together with the best wishes of the guests for many returns of this important event.

Slavonia Sayings: Paul Marisia and Ola Bada are still on the sick list... We failed to note last week that on Tuesday Feb. 22, Mr. Smock took his mother to McLean where she took the train for her home in Chicago. Mr. and Mrs. Samuel Mertel spent Sunday with their daughter, Mrs. Anna Arc.

A deal was consummated the latter part of last week whereby Scott Johnson will own the place of J.E. Mitchell southeast of the city.

City Marshal Paschall, in his drag net for bums the first of the week, caught a likely looking specimen of this breed and carried before Mayor Rice for chastisement. Before the wheels of justice were put in motion, however, the gentlemen found that the bum was suffering from a severe mashed thumb and instead of proceeding with the trial, a physician was called to dress the injured member, after which the bum was fed and given money to proceed on his weary way. All of which goes to show that justice is not always heartless and that generous charity is not restricted by the cold letter of the law.

The number of sales rose nearly 11 percent from second quarter sales, despite the tight money situation.

Grant And Winn To Perform At Shamrock Concert

The young, American-born and trained duo — pianists Grant and Winn — Grant and Winn will perform in Shamrock Mar. 3 for the final concert of the season for the Shamrock

Community Concert Association.

Though only in their mid-twenties, Grant and Winn of Denver, Colo. have been playing together for over a dozen years. It is this fact that earned them high praise from major newspapers such as the Boston Globe for their "unanimity of purpose, of concept and of musical ideal" that will be displayed when the team appears at the Shamrock High School Auditorium at 8 p.m.

Sensational reviews and ecstatic audiences have marked the performances of this superb duo. The vitality and artistry of two soloists characterize Cameron Grant and James Winn.

Both artists are natives of Denver where they began performing together at age eight. At the remarkable young age of fourteen they performed with the Denver Symphony and launched a career as one of the country's most exciting new duo-piano teams. They perform all of the major two piano literature and also collaborate on one piano, four-hand repertoire. Their programs range from Messiaen and McKinley to Bach, Brahms and Busoni. Both artists are graduates of the New England Conservatory and are thoroughly immersed in the performing arts.

PIANISTS CAMERON GRANT and James Winn will appear at the final Community Concert in Shamrock in March.

Physical education classes adjust to today's students

COLLEGE STATION - The old-fashioned gym class led by a whistle-blowing, military style PE teacher is disappearing from the schoolyards and gyms.

Physical education classes now are being designed for individual activities and structured to help youngsters learn lifelong skills, say physical education experts at Texas A&M University.

With the rising incidence of heart disease and other ailments, schools are realizing they have a responsibility to help children maintain healthy bodies through adulthood by teaching a variety of physical skills, notes Dr. Charles Shea.

On the elementary level, there is less emphasis on competition, he adds. Instead teachers work on motor skills, encouraging children to learn the best way to do a movement or a series of movements. In high school students are being taught things relevant to their world now and later in life, including outdoor recreation activities, ballet, tennis and equestrian skills.

TREE CHARACTERISTICS IMPORTANT TO SELECTION

When selecting trees for the home landscape this spring, a whole host of characteristics must be considered.

Among tree characteristics that affect their desirability are these:
•Longevity: Long-lived trees are much more desirable than short-lived ones. Among long-lived trees are honeylocust, pecan, oaks and cedar elm.
•Resistance to breakage: Trees with strong wood that are most resistant to breakage include crabapple, pecan, oaks, honeylocust.
•Freedom from insect and disease problems: Trees with little disease or insect problems in-perment Station Entomologist, surveyed lady beetle and greenbug populations on irrigated wheat from 1953 to 1973. His study included Deaf Smith, Castro and Swisher counties of the Texas Panhandle. In 1961, 1967, 1969, and 1970, greenbug infestation was highest and averaged 2,304 per foot of row of wheat in March. The twenty year average population for March was 637 per foot of row. The lowest average population, 33 per foot of row, occurred in 1958, 1960, 1963, and 1972. On years when greenbug populations were low, there were a lot of lady beetles.

Daniels also kept temperature records and found the number of greenbugs to be lowest when temperatures were lowest from January to March. During some of these years, lady beetle populations were higher than usual. Surprisingly, Daniels found that lady beetles feed on greenbugs at temperatures lower than previously believed. Other researchers speculated that lady beetles did not eat when temperatures dropped below 65 degrees.

Louis Chedester, another Texas Agricultural Experiment Station researcher who worked with Daniels, studied the development of the lady beetle in the laboratory and a sorghum field. At 68 degrees in the laboratory, lady beetles developed from egg to adult in 33 days. According to the researcher, lady beetle eggs took four days to hatch. After hatching, larvae went through four developmental stages or instars in the next 26 days. The first three stages took from three to five days and the fourth took eleven days. The pupa or resting stage took seven days. Adult lady beetles emerging from the pupal stage mate immediately and lay eggs about 10 days later.

In the field where temperature varied from 68 to 95 degrees, lady beetles took 28 days to develop from egg to adult.

In another laboratory study at 68 degrees, Chedester determined how many greenbugs it takes to feed a lady beetle. First instar larvae ate 16 greenbugs per day and consumed 80 in five days. In the second and third larval instars, appetites of lady beetle larvae increased to 31 and 38 per day. In the fourth instar, lady beetle larvae ate up to 41 greenbugs per day. During the four instars a well fed lady beetle larvae will eat up to 490 greenbugs. They do not eat anything in the pupal stage. Adults will eat about 50 greenbugs per day.

Because of lady beetles' hearty appetites for greenbugs, a few beetles per foot of row in wheat or per plant in a sorghum field, will keep greenbugs under control.

However, Daniels warns against buying lady beetles to control greenbugs in wheat and sorghum fields. If weather conditions are wrong, lady beetles will die or migrate to fence rows for protection. "If conditions are right, nature will supply lady beetles to control greenbugs," Daniel says.

Tarleton offers fun courses for the non-music major

STEPHENVILLE - By signing up for certain courses, Tarleton State University students may be fulfilling a lifelong dream of learning a musical instrument or improving their vocal ability.

Three classes, piano, guitar and voice, are offered to students this spring, regardless of their major.

The piano major is offered for students with little or no musical background. "By mastering a few chords," says music professor Gregory Pike, "virtually every pop tune becomes accessible to the beginning piano student."

The same philosophy underlies the course design in guitar and voice. All three courses are taught for the students' enjoyment and relaxation.

Are you dressing for success or failure? Some experts claim that women dress for failure. True or not, women have played a subordinate role to men in the business world, and they have not been "educated" to dress for success. While much research studies how clothing communicates, little research focuses on career apparel for women.

One thing is certain: our clothing does communicate to those around us. We can remember that fact, and we can further benefit from years of other research that focused on clothing as an expression of self. Put it all together, and we become our own "image makers."

Clothing is a language that projects our talents, our needs, our personality, our dispositions and our destinations. It reveals how we feel and how we think we look. Clothing is the greatest single influence on the impressions we create - and we never have a second chance to make a first impression. Some businesses feel clothing is so important in creating a favorable image they have strict dress codes - because reaction to appearance is automatic and involuntary.

We cannot dress neutrally. Whatever we wear makes a statement - not necessarily positive or negative, but something about us. Our clothing may say, "I feel good about myself. I am confident I can handle this job." Or, it may say, "I am not prepared to handle this job. I am unsure of myself."

When used correctly, clothing can improve our appearance and advance us professionally. If a job involves working with clientele, the dress should "set the stage; not restrict effective work with others. When possible, research clientele to understand their clothing expectations. Dress professionally, but try not to dress far above or below them.

begin to vary color, lines and fabrics in your wardrobe. Lack of variety gets boring - to you and those around you. And society expects women not to look the same every day. Variety adds interest and underscores effectiveness in the career wardrobe.

Clothing is a powerful communicator, but it can't assure job success or make the wearer something she's not, of course. Job performance determines success or failure. Clothing simply "accentuates" the positive or negative. Clothing can pave the road - or put stumbling blocks in your path - to success. Notice what others around you at work are wearing. To get ahead, pattern your dress after the most successful.

Dress for the job you want, not for the job you have (unless, of course, the two are the same). If your wardrobe seems inadequate for the job you want, gradually add to what you have, especially if on a limited budget. Carefully select the items which project the image you want.

The "message" you convey to others should be business-like but also one you're comfortable with. If you're pleased with yourself and your career image, you're more likely to please others.

Be aware of fashion, but "go" conservative on the job. Save extreme looks for evening or weekends.

When authority is important for your job, establish your credentials first with conservative, authoritative dress. Then

Mark Twain said "Work consists of whatever a body is obliged to do...play consists of whatever a body is not obliged to do."

John Cecil Haynes of McLean, now a good-humored 77 years old, has combined hard work and a spirit of play in steady dedication for 71 years in McLean.

The Haynes family traveled from Missouri to McLean, Texas by passenger train in March, 1909. Haynes recalls the trip took two days.

In a layover at the depot in Kansas City, 6-year-old Haynes got his first glimpse of "real Indians."

"Dad could talk to Indians," relates Haynes, "but all I could think about was my sisters' gold watch. I was afraid one of the Indians would want that watch. I never did go to sleep—I just stayed there all the time and watched her."

Uncle John Haynes, John Cecil's namesake, met the family at the train depot in a wagon and young John recalls his sense of appreciation for his Uncle's attire.

"He had on a pair of checkered britches—I thought he was rich. I vowed as soon as I could get enough money, that I would get me a pair of checkered britches just like Uncle John's."

Haynes was McLean's first shoeshine boy during World War I.

"There weren't any blacks in McLean at that time...the shoeshine boy was a white boy and it happened to be me for four or five years," said Haynes.

"I had quite a bit of fun shining shoes," recalls Haynes, "and made a little money too."

He was able to save $50 a month shining shoes, which he invested into Liberty bonds for $37.50 a piece. In 1924 he bought a "brand new, black, Chevrolet" with his savings.

Haynes recalls his shoe shining days with a twinkle of delight in his eyes.

"The men in the barber shop always teased me," relates Haynes, "one time they caught me and hung me by my overall straps, face forward on a telephone hook. Just left me hanging there—I couldn't do anything."

One well-meaning citizen decided it was dangerous and according to Haynes, "he was really interested in getting me down. He thought I might fall...but I didn't weigh much, you see, so I wasn't very straining" on the overall straps.

"He got a little bit mad, you might say," explains Haynes, "so they just took him to the windmill water-well, right in the middle of main street, and pumped water all over him."

"But, at that time you couldn't get mad in this town about any prank they were playing on you."

When the American National Bank was built in 1911, Haynes "flunked" for the bricklayer. Going wages were 20 cents an hour, 10 hours a day, according to Haynes.

"The bricklayer made 50 cents an hour," recalls Haynes, "the people in town thought he was just makin' too much money."

"He paid me a nickel an hour to keep the mortar rounded up and his bricks right where he wanted them," said Haynes.

"I flunked at the depot when I was 12 years old. McLean had four passenger trains at the time, and lots of freights.

"I guess I was the biggest flunky there ever was," grins Haynes.

"I ran a go-devil (a wind row plow used to cultivate feed crops) for my cousin for eight days. He gave me 20 cents. That would have been six and a quarter cents a day," said Haynes.

Haynes also worked for the Gulf Wholesale Agency in 1918, "delivering fuel and oil in a Model-T Ford truck."

After an interval of four years between grade school and high school education, Haynes returned to McLean High School and graduated in 1923.

Prior to studies and graduation, the adventuresome 15-year-old was doing what a lot of adventuresome 15-year-olds did at the time—hobo trips.

"There weren't many automobiles then," said Haynes. "We used to go on hobo trips. You could just catch a freight train and go where you wanted to go. Or where you thought you wanted to go," he adds.

"Two other fellows (Cotton Sullivan and Ray Bird) and myself left in February one time in the ice compartment of a refrigerator car," said Haynes.

Their misadventure took them to Lubbock by way of Sweetwater and Slaton. In Lubbock the boys got on the wrong train to Amarillo and headed to Clovis, N.M.

"It was below freezing in this cattle car, so we built a small fire with some wood strips, in the sand of the car."

"The brakes" saw the smoke and put us off. Left us standing in the pasture. We were out in no-man's land it seemed to me," said Haynes.

After walking two or three miles, they found a road and "bummed" a ride back to Lubbock. Haynes pawned his new overcoat and they bought tickets for the passenger train and rode home "in style."

Many things have changed since the '20s. Football is no exception. Haynes played quarterback for the black and gold and recalls, "I'd give anything in the world if I had that first football suit I showed the kids."

At the time it was legal to have an "on-side punt," according to Haynes. The team was playing an old rival, the Clarendon Broncos.

"Incidentally," relates Haynes, "the Clarendon football field is exactly where it was 60 years ago—the side of a rocky hill."

"At that time the goal posts were on the goal line—there weren't any end zones. There was a big fence behind the goal on the east end.

"We were on the 40 yard line

THE OLDEST, BUT one of the most active members of the Walk, Trot and Run Club. Haynes averages walking about four miles a day. (Photo by Linda Haynes) and I called a punt. Lee Wilson caught the ball plum over the fence."

"The Clarendon boys just stood there, as the ball had clearly gone over the fence and they didn't realize that my half-backs were 'on side.'"

"Jack Back jumped over the fence, got the ball, and brought it back for a touchdown."

This odd sequence of events brought the Tigers a win over their opponent.

"We beat 'em six to zero," laughs Haynes.

After graduation Haynes went to work for the American National Bank as a stenographer for the Cashier.

He married Minnie Morse, September 13, 1927.

Haynes moved across the street to the Citizens Bank as a Cashier but "the depression got so bad it closed in 1931."

Haynes was mayor of McLean for six years.

How do you feel about public office? "I have felt the same all my life—that somebody has to fill the offices, and everybody should do something for their town and community."

Haynes' pride in his community has long been apparent and he is a still-active member of the Lion's Club and the Masonic Lodge.

He managed the J.S. Morse Ranch for 15 years and helped establish McLean's first cattle feed-lot operation in 1963.

He remembers "when this country was young," and McLean was the second largest watermelon capital of the U.S.

Haynes is a vivid historian and remembers with clarity Haley's Comet in 1910, ("may get to see it again, you know") the great depression, bath-tub gin, the great snow of 1911, and the "black duster" of 1935 during the history-making dust bowl days.

He is a faithful member of the Methodist Church and proudly states that he will have been a member for 69 years in July, 1980.

"I've not always been the best member—I've waxed cold and hot through the years," said Haynes.

After a thoughtful smile he adds, "but I hope I've never been luke-warm."

Haynes has two children, Sammy and Johnny of McLean, 14 grandchildren and four great-grandchildren.

Work and play for John Haynes has been accomplished with a spirit of fun for life.

He is in the process of completing 25 hand-carved canes from every "different kind of wood on the ranch." And complimented his friends and family with home-made wild grape jam and plum jelly for Christmas.

He is the oldest member of the Walk-Trot-And-Run Club of McLean and his physical stamina would astonish most—he has clocked 814 miles of walking exercise in 30 weeks.

When asked if he would give advice for posterity sake, Haynes hesitates briefly and decides, "Awww—advise is something that I haven't given much of—only in a kidding way. Just Trust in the Lord and keep your powder dry."

Various preparations from the leaves and roots of the deadly European nightshade weed known as belladonna are used to counteract pain, spasm and opium poisoning.

Gone Fishin'

by Jeanette Fish

"The Guilty Dog Always Barks!" Maybe, but in our society he would have to bite your leg off, to be noticed by those of us who spend our lives FEELING guilty. You could be 9 years old or 90 and if someone said—"ALRIGHT! WHO DID IT?"—there is a person inside you straining to yell—"I DID! I KILLED THE MAN! I TOOK THE MONEY!"

Guilt, our constant companion, doesn't hit you between the eyes like the grocery bill. It is the ingrown toenail of life. Mothers are good at passing it from generation to generation. I have done my share of it for 27 years (Write soon, longing to hear from you, Love Mom). Anyone who, through the use of mental telepathy, can contact you in the middle of a college exam—BE SURE TO WEAR CLEAN UNDERWEAR, YOU NEVER KNOW WHEN YOU WILL BE IN A CAR WRECK—has got a pretty good way of making you feel uneasy when you are having a little fun.

For ye have the poor always with you—I sure do. Lord, every time I eat a bit of food and replay mother's "someone is starving and you won't eat your carrots", speech. It is true. I eat too much and someone is starving.

Someone should donate a plot of land (maybe 1000 acres) where we could all meet yearly, have a ceremony and bury our guilt until the next meeting. Divide it into 3 parcels:

1. The Mother/Child: I will probably grow up in prison and its your fault.
2. Husband/Wife: After all I have done for you and now its come to this.
3. Friend/Friend: You can't or you won't come to my Tupperware party?

I wanted to go to school to become a nurse—a three-year slice out of your life. Guilt held me back nicely for 15 years. Too hard on the family. Meals slapped together in a hurry. Unfolded laundry. Somehow I got a selfish spurt, plunged in and went to school. The family backed me. They hadn't put the guilt on me in the first place. I was hiding behind it all the time. It feels real good to do one hard thing for no other reason than—I want to! Makes you feel good about yourself and them because you got rid of some hidden resentment that you didn't even know about. It turned out to be a benefit to all of us when I needed to work.

I like to read but for years was saddled with a vague uneasiness everytime I was in a book store or library, thinking about all the books I should be reading to improve my mind. This led to some long hours with The Brothers Karamazov and a summer lost with Paradise Lost. One day, standing in front of a book shelf with one hand on Shakespeare for First Graders, the other on a book about how Henry the VIII had Anne Boleyn's head cut off, (with pictures in color), I made a decision—AS LONG AS I LIVE I WILL NOT READ ANOTHER BOOK JUST BECAUSE I SHOULD. Whatever I read will be because I want to, that day (no more than 20 main characters at 10-word sentences.)

After that, I was able to let the kids walk home from school one day IN THE RAIN, a distance of one block. Progress.

Their sore throats lasted a week. The guilt lasted for four. A set back but I kept trying.

MORAL: The next time your four-year-old falls down and says "Look what you made me do!"—Stand up and holler—"DO IT AGAIN HON, I DIDN'T GET TO SEE IT GOOD THE FIRST TIME!"

In The Kitchen

by Linda Haynes

As a youngster, I hated all vegetables except corn and green beans. As I have gotten older, however, vegetables have become my favorite foods. Not only are they delicious and filling, they are very low in calories, which is a help to perennial weight watchers.

Vegetables can become boring, though, unless you find new ways of fixing them. You might try these recipes:

- CAULIFLOWER AND ASPARAGUS SUPREME:
1 10 oz. pkg. frozen cut asparagus
1 10 oz. pkg. frozen cauliflower
1 10 1/4 oz. can cream of celery soup, undiluted
1/2 c. milk
1 cup shredded process American cheese
1 tsp. prepared mustard
1 tsp. Worcestershire sauce
1/2 c. wheat germ
2 T. melted butter or margarine
Prepare vegetables according to package directions; drain.

Combine soup, milk, cheese, mustard, and Worcestershire sauce in saucepan; cook over medium heat, stirring frequently until cheese is melted.

Remove from heat; stir in vegetables.

Place mixture in a lightly greased shallow casserole. Combine wheat germ and butter; sprinkle over casserole. Bake at 375 degrees for 20 to 25 minutes.

- SHAWN'S FAVORITE BEANS:
2 cans French cut green beans
1 can water chestnuts
1 can onion rings
1 can cream of mushroom soup
1 c. sharp cheddar cheese, grated

Pour cans of drained green beans into 1 1/2 qt. casserole. Add undiluted soup, water chestnuts (cut in chunks). Mix well. On top sprinkle cheese and add crumbled onion rings last. Bake at 350 degrees just until bubbly (about 15 minutes).

BASEBALL-WHEN THE GRASS WAS REAL
By Donald Honig

As the "hot stove" league is in full swing, and regular baseball season for 1980 just around the corner, this excellent baseball book by Donald Honig should be of great interest to all baseball fans.

Included in this interesting volume are stories of great players from the 20's to the 40's as told by the players themselves.

Many of the greatest names in baseball history, some of whom are already in the Hall of Fame, played during this period, and will be easily recognized as Superstars of the game.

Anecdotes and stories told by one great player about another are vivid in their realism and probably not known by the general public until publication of this book. Stories such as when Ernest Hemingway wanted to kill Brooklyn's ace relief pitcher; a starting pitcher too drunk to shake hands before a world series game; Bob Feller telling what it was like to America's most famous seventeen year old; and many others, contribute to make this book a classic.

Followers of greats such as Ted Williams, Stan Musial, Babe Ruth, Dizzy Dean, Lefty Grove, Jackie Robinson and Lou Gehrig, will find things of interest about these greats in this volume, and can certainly be regarded as prime reading for any baseball fan.

"Baseball, When the Grass Was Real" is now available at Lovett Memorial Library.
