SPECIAL NOTICE.

This is to notify my friends and patients and the public generally, of Ozona and Crockett county, that I am leaving to take a special course of study in Harvard University, and that during my absence my practice will be in the hands of Dr. Herbert Hinde. I can recommend Dr. Hinde as a physician and gentleman. I expect to return about Sept. 1st.

Forethought.

While we are learning that a little forethought often saves them a big expense. Here is an instance: E. W. Archer, Caldwell, O., writes: "I do not believe that our family has been without Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy since we commenced keeping house years ago. When we go on an extended visit we take it with us." For sale by Smith Drug Co., Ozona.

Will Parker and Wife Murdered

Will Parker and his young wife were murdered by Mexicans at their ranch home near Hachita, New Mexico, Monday night, the 26th inst.

This information was conveyed in a telegram to P. H. (Kern) Coates at Big Lake Tuesday.

No particulars were given. Will Parker was a son of W. D. Parker, formerly sheriff of Crockett county, and a nephew of W. F. Coates of Ozona.

He was born and raised in Crockett county, and was married only a few months ago. The telegram to Mr. Coates was from his daughter, and also stated that, in the same raid, the Mexicans carried away captive ten other Americans.

Good morning. Have you time to read The Stockman now? If not, please take time. Then send us $2 for a whole year's subscription. It's cheap at half the price. Our experience with these West Texas people is that they'd rather pay $2 for a good article than $1 for a poor one, and we don't want The Stockman to be seen in company with a tightwad, anyhow. Dos Pesos, please.

WARNING TO TRESPASSERS.

All parties are hereby warned against trespassing on the Ozona school grounds, during summer vacation, under penalty of prosecution to the full extent of the law.

Boys especially take notice that roller skating, bicycling and other forms of nuisance on the grounds will not be tolerated.

War with Mexico is Now Certain

It is unquestionable that war with Mexico will be declared by the United States within the next few days—probably within the next few hours.

The conditions on the border have become intolerable.

It is evident that the Washington authorities are now only sparing for time. But by Saturday night there should be at least fifty thousand more men of the National Guard on the border and can be no further delay.

The miserable, cowardly policy of the administration is directly responsible to this border, to the people of the United States and to humanity, for the murder of hundreds of American men, women and children during a state of anarchy that has existed for nearly four years.

The one hundred and twenty thousand men of the National Guard could have been sent here a year ago; but now that the critical moment has arrived, we must sneak around like yellow hounds while the butchery of our people continues daily.

A number of our good friends are paying their subscription to The Stockman every time they think of it. You see, they don't need the money, and we do.

Linen Shower for Bride.

Frank Holmsley home, the Misses Holmsley, assisted by Mesdames Frank Holmsley and W. E. West, entertained the newly married Mrs. John Meinecke with a linen shower.

Every girl was first requested to write a recipe for the bride, and when they were finished, Mrs. Meinecke read some very amusing, as well as, useful hints on cooking.

Then linen napkins were given the girls and each was asked to embroider an "M" on hers.

Next, Mrs. West gave the bride a card, on which was a sentence puzzle. The sentence, worked out, told where a gift from one of the girls could be found. Each gift contained a card telling the way to another hidden present.

Refreshments, consisting of delicious lemon ice and cake, were served. M. B.

Boys a Business at Christoval.

Mexican Shot to Death in Ozona

Last Friday morning about 8 o'clock Ceelio Ramirez, a local Mexican, was found lying dead in the road just east of the culvert in the eastern edge of Ozona on the Sonora road.

An examination of the body showed that Ramirez had been shot in the body in front, then had fallen on his face and had been shot again in the back, the last bullet passing through the heart. Altho it did not appear that the first shot had passed through the body, and that not more than two shots had been fired, two forty-five-calibre bullets were found on the ground underneath the body.

The shooting occurred between the hours of seven and eight o'clock, as the body was not there at seven and was there at eight.

At an earlier hour in the morning Tom Cooper, night watchman in Ozona and deputy sheriff, had arrested Ramirez in the Mexican section of Ozona and started toward jail with him.

That was the last seen of Ramirez alive.

Sheriff Moore, having learned these and other facts bearing on the tragedy, met Cooper a short time afterwards as the latter started across the town park, took his gun away from him and put him in jail.

Cooper had an examining trial and the coroner put the killing on the coroner's record.

The killing caused considerable feeling in Ozona, not only among the Mexican citizens, but among the Americans also, who deplored the occurrence as especially unfortunate just at this time. For this reason, and for the purpose of removing as far as possible all cause of local irritation, it was thought best to remove the prisoner to San Angelo, which was accordingly done, Sheriff Allen of Tom Green county taking him in charge.

Cooper furnished bond Saturday for his appearance before the next Crockett county grand jury, and was released.

If Meinecke hasn't got it to sell he can get it for you mighty quick and just as cheap as you can get it for yourself. Please remember that.

Meet me at Bill Johnigan's.

Mexican Alleged Murderer Caught.

Rangers Barler, Dunn and Jim Wallen captured a Mexican near Comstock Saturday wanted for the murder of another Mexican in Sutton county a short time ago. The Mexican admits the killing, so we learn, but pleads that the act was committed while intoxicated. He had also made threats against the life of the sheriff of Sutton county for the latter's activity in trying to locate the murderers of Jarvis Harp some time ago. The Mexican was turned over to the sheriff of Sutton county by the rangers.—West Texas News.

GOOD JOKES

WHAT HAPPENED TO HIM.

"Ever been arrested for speeding?"
 "No."
 "Ever tried to climb a telegraph pole with your car?"
 "No."
 "Ever have it turn turtle on you?"
 "No."
 "Ever have to fix a tire all by yourself?"
 "No, can't say that I have."
 "Great Scott, man! Hasn't anything happened to you that happens to all other motorists?"
 "Oh yes. I've had a robe and three lamps stolen."

Boss Prevaricators.

"There goes a man who boasts that he has never bought a gold brick."
 "Reminds me of the fellow who says he has never told a lie."
 "Yes. He reminds me of the chap who says the upkeep of his automobile is next to nothing."
 "And he's in the same category with the man who says he never was sick a day in his life."

Complete Failure.

"I read a joke the other day about a man getting the last word with his wife by bawling 'The soap suds tube as he...' at the front door of the house."
 "Tried it, eh? How did it work?"
 "Didn't work. My wife must have read the same joke. She let a kettle of soap suds come down the tube just as I started to whistle up."

HOPELESS.

"Would you love me if I was poor, Evangelho?"
 "Oh, yes."
 "Den I'll break it gently to you. I've lost me nickel down a sewer!"

A Tribute to Her Skill.

A maid who has a winning way is Aracelia Ridge;
 'Tis chiefly shown, her friends all say, when she is playing bridge.

His Finish.

Harker—Old Gotrox has made an assignment for the benefit of his creditors.
 Parker—You don't say! What caused his financial embarrassment?
 Harker—Overwork.
 Parker—Why, how could that be?
 Harker—His two sons and a son-in-law worked him for all he was worth.

Knowledge Easy to Acquire.

"Nowadays it is not uncommon to meet people who are familiar with the most out-of-the-way places in the world."
 "Quite true. And unless you listen to their conversation closely you can't tell whether they have really been there or get their information from moving pictures."

Same Old Thing.

"Pop?"
 "Well, Ernst?"
 "What is meant by the expression, 'The course of true love never runs smooth'?"
 "That, my boy, is the same as 'The Rocky Road to Dublin.'"

An Embarrassment.

"Are you complaining about the price of gasoline?"
 "I should say I am," replied Farmer Cornstossel. "These city folk that come ridin' around here haven't money enough to pay their lines when they get arrested."

Their Effect.

"Miss Mayme can shoot such glances at one under those long eyelashes."
 "Be careful; her shooting glances have a killing effect."

Heredity.

Mother—Geraldine's teacher says she is on the merit roll again.
 Grandmother—She's her father's girl, bless her! Hiram always did the most meretricious work!—Judge.

Warming Up.

"I noticed you applauded nearly every point the speaker made."
 "Yes, I did."
 "You must have been greatly impressed by his speech."
 "Not at all. My hands were cold."

Hope Revived.

"Got some data now to go on," declared Diogenes, speaking of his search for an honest man.
 "What's that?"
 "The income tax statements sent to."—Louisville Courier-Journal.

ONE OR THE OTHER.

First Office Boy—I hear you've quit your job.
 Second Office Boy—Ya-es; you see, I couldn't get along with the boss, an' he wouldn't resign, so I did!

The Prudent Brigand.

A brigand is a boastful bluff.
 Of bold, bad men he seems the worst
 Until you start to treat him rough
 And then he hikes for safety first.

Optimistic and Proper.

"So it was once your ambition to have a business of your own?"
 "Yes."
 "But your ship didn't come in, eh? That's too bad!"
 "Oh, I don't know. I found that there was plenty of stevedore work to be done unloading other people's ships, so I got along pretty well."

Strict Utilitarian.

Assistant—This cut is entirely spoiled.
 The Foreman—What is wrong with it?
 "It is so botched up that I can't make head or tail out of it."
 "Well, scratch it up a little more and we'll print it as the picture of a burning Zeppelin."—Youngstown Telegram.

Parental Conscience.

"My boy Josh has got me kind of worried," said Farmer Cornstossel.
 "Ain't he behavein'?" asked the neighbor.
 "I won't, though I'm afraid you an' be the kind of a father he thinks he's entitled to."

Got Both Jobs.

Head of Business—What position do you desire in our establishment, sir?
 College Graduate—Oh, something like confidential adviser or general manager.
 Head of Business—Good! You may have both jobs. I will make you an office boy.—Dallas News.

A Great Loss.

"So your car was stolen?"
 "Yes."
 "I would worry; perhaps it will be recovered."
 "I'm not worrying about the car; that was insured. But I had six gallons of gasoline in the tank and I can't afford to stand that loss."

The Silver Lining.

The Tender-Hearted Cook—"No bad news, I 'ope, ma'am?"
 The Mistress—"The master's been wounded."
 The Cook—"There now, ma'am; don't let that worry you. They tells me they can patch 'em up so's they're better than before."—London Sketch.

THE REASON.

"Isn't it strange that Tightwad should donate that large sum toward the purchase of a bell for the new church?"
 "No, that's natural. He always likes to put his money where he can hear it ring."

It Isn't There.

"Do you believe that music has a refining influence?"
 "Oh, yes," replied the man of esoteric tastes, "but I fail to see what uplift it has when a vaudeville performer plays a piano with his foot."

Poor Dubwaite.

"Why the pained expression?"
 "Dubwaite has been trying to tell me a funny story."
 "Had you heard it before?"
 "I don't know. He forgot how it ended."

Common American Birds

Interesting information about them supplied by the Bureau of Biological Survey of the United States Department of Agriculture

Sparrow Hawk

(Falco sparverius)
 Length, about ten inches. This is one of the best known and handsomest, as well as the smallest, of North American hawks.
 Range: Breeds throughout the United States, Canada, and northern Mexico; winters in the United States and south to Guatemala.
 Habits and economic status: The sparrow hawk, which is a true falcon, lives in the more open country and builds its nest in hollow trees. It is abundant in many parts of the West, where telegraph poles afford it convenient perching and feeding places. Its food consists of insects, small mammals, birds, spiders, and reptiles. Grasshoppers, crickets, and terrestrial beetles and caterpillars make up considerably more than half its subsistence, while field mice, house mice, and shrews cover fully 35 per cent of its annual supply. The balance of the food includes birds, reptiles, and spiders. Contrary to the usual habits of the species, some individuals during the breeding season capture, nestling birds for food for their young and create considerable havoc among the songsters of the neighborhood.

In agriculture, the sparrow hawk becomes very tame, even landing in an instant under the hood of their endeavor to seize a wormy insect. Out of 410 stomachs examined, 314 were found to contain insects; 129, small mammals; and 70, small birds. This little falcon renders good service in destroying noxious insects and rodents and should be encouraged and protected.

Black Tern

(Hydrochelidon nigra surinamensis)
 Length, ten inches. In autumn occurs as a migrant on the east coast of the United States, and then is in white and gray plumage. During the breeding season it is confined to the interior, is chiefly black, and is the only dark tern occurring inland.
 Range: Breeds from California, Colorado, Missouri, and Ohio, north to central Canada; winters from Mexico to South America; migrant in the eastern United States.
 Habits and economic status: This tern, unlike most of its relatives, passes much of its life on fresh water lakes and marshes of the interior. Its nests are placed among the reeds and weeds, on floating vegetation, or on muskrat houses. It lays from two to four eggs. Its food is more varied than that of any other tern. So far as known it preys upon no food fishes, but feeds extensively upon such enemies of fish as dragonfly nymphs, fish-eating beetles, and crabs. Unlike most of its family, it devours a great variety of insects, many of which it catches as it flies. Dragonflies, May flies, grasshoppers, predaceous diving beetles, scarabaeid beetles, leaf beetles, gnats, and other flies are the principal kinds preyed upon. Fishes of little economic value, chiefly minnows and mummichogs, were found to compose only a little more than 19 per cent of the contents of 145 stomachs. The great consumption of insects by the black tern places it among the beneficial species worthy of protection.

Mourning Dove

(Zenaidura macroura)
 Length, twelve inches. The dark spot on the side of the neck distinguishes this bird from all other native doves and pigeons except the white-winged dove. The latter has the upper third of wing white.
 Range: Breeds throughout the United States and in Mexico, Guatemala, and southern Canada; winters from the central United States to Panama.

Habits and economic status: The food of the mourning dove is practically all vegetable matter (over 99 per cent), principally seeds of plants, including grain. Wheat, oats, rye, corn, barley, and buckwheat were found in 150 out of 237 stomachs, and constituted 32 per cent of the food. Three-fourths of this was waste grain picked up after harvest. The principal and almost constant diet is weed seeds, which are eaten throughout the year and constitute 64 per cent of the entire food. In one stomach were found 7,500 seeds of yellow wood sorrel, in another 6,400 seeds of barn grass or foxtail, and in a third 2,600 seeds of slender paspalum, 4,820 of orange hawk-weed, 950 of hoary vervain, 120 of Carolina cranesbill, 50 of yellow wood sorrel, 620 of panic grass, and 40 of various other weeds. None of these is useful, and most of them are troublesome weeds. The dove does not eat insects or other animal food. It should be protected in every possible way.

Horned Lark

(Otocoris alpestris)
 Length, about seven and three-fourths inches. The black mark across the breast and the small, pointed tufts of dark feathers above and behind the eyes distinguish the bird.

Range: Breeds throughout the United States (except the South Atlantic and Gulf states) and Canada; winters in all the United States except Florida.

Habits and economic status: Horned larks frequent the open country, especially in large, open, grassy areas, apparently delighting in exposed situations in winter, and often nest before snow disappears. The flight is irregular and hesitating, but in the breeding season the male ascends high in air, singing as they go and pitch to the ground in one thrilling dive. The preference of horned larks is for vegetable food, and about one-sixth of this is grain, chiefly waste

Some sprouting grain is pulled, but drilled grain is safe from injury. California horned larks take much more grain than the eastern birds, specializing on oats, but this is accounted for by the fact that oats grow wild over much of the state. Weed seeds are the largest single element of food. The insect food, about 20 per cent of the whole, includes such pests as May beetles and their larvae (white grubs), leaf beetles, clover-leaf and clover-root weevils, the potato-stalk borer, nut weevils, billbugs, and the chinch bug. Grasshoppers are a favorite food, and cutworms are freely eaten. The horned larks, on the whole, may be considered useful birds.

Steam and the Home.

Steam shelled industry out of the home as one shells peas; put it in the factory; the family, father, mother and the children tagged after, and home survived merely as a place to eat and sleep. Applied to transportation, though, steam did even more. It dissolved the population which had caked and clogged in one parish for a thousand years, and made it fluid to run uphill about the earth, uphill from low income to a higher. Nobody lives now where he was born if he can get away. We're here only till something better somewhere else turns up. The attic under the ancestral shingles, full of horsehide trunks that hold the broad-cast satins in which our great-great-grandmothers danced with Lafayette—you just read about them in the story books; they don't exist.—Eugene Wood, in Century.

Wield Pen and Sword.

The report of the Authors' club of London gives some eloquent figures. Out of 644 members resident in Great Britain, many of whom are far past military age, no less than 171 are in active service in connection with the war. Six have died in action or of wounds and 13 votes of sympathy with members in the death of sons or brothers upon the field of heroism have been adopted. The same hand, it is clear, may wield both pen and sword.

WONDERFUL HOW RESINOL STOPS SKIN TORMENTS

The soothing, healing medication in resinol ointment and resinol soap soothes and cools the irritated skin, and usually stops itching at once. The resinol treatment speedily heals eczema, ringworm, and similar eruptions, and clears away disgusting pimples even when other treatments have been almost useless.

Resinol is not an experiment. It is a doctor's prescription which proved so wonderfully successful for skin troubles that it has been used by other doctors all over the country for twenty years. Every druggist sells resinol ointment and resinol soap.—Adv.

NOTE TO CARRANZA IS A SHARP ONE

FIRST CHIEF IS ACCUSED OF FAILURE TO SUPPRESS LAWLESSNESS.

WAR IS THOUGHT IMMINENT

Army Officials Refrain From Any Comment Likely to Inflame Minds of Mexican People.

Washington.—The issue of war or peace with Mexico hangs in the balance, awaiting General Carranza's decision as to the course he will pursue. Officials here believed Tuesday night that 48 hours might bring a clear understanding of what the immediate future has in store.

A note signed by Secretary Lansing, conveying President Wilson's rejection of the demand for withdrawal of American soldiers from Mexico, accompanied by a specific warning that an attack on the troops "will lead to the gravest consequences," was telegraphed to Mexico City by Eliseo Arredondo, Mexican ambassador designate, in plain terms it accuses General Carranza of having brought matters to the verge of war by open hostility toward the United States and failure to safeguard even the lives of Americans in Mexico or on the border from the lawless elements among his countrymen.

In sternest terms the note repudiates and resents imputations of bad faith and ulterior motives brought against the Washington government in the Mexican communication, to which it is a reply. Carranza is informed in so many words that protection of its own borders is the only object sought by the United States and told that object will be pursued whatever the consequences may be.

While the United States awaits Carranza's next move, steps to make the border secure against whatever may come were going straight ahead. Mobilization of the national guardmen is proceeding expeditiously in all states and plans for sending some of them southward in response to a request from General Funston are under way.

Recruiting Offices Crowded. War department officials have been highly gratified at reports of crowded recruiting offices in several states. They also are pleased that the governors of virtually all states having important national guard units which were not summoned have sought permission to forward their entire contingent.

The Final Word.

The note is viewed here as President Wilson's final word to Carranza. It makes no overtures for further discussion and leaves virtually no question to be settled except one—whether the de facto government will suppress outlawry against Americans. It arraigns General Carranza by name for having permitted bandits "to roam at will through territory contiguous to the United States" while he has seen fit to recite "groundless sentiments of hostility toward the expedition sent after Villa and to impute to this government ulterior motives for the continued presence of American troops on Mexican soil."

Secretary Lansing points out in the note many evidences of Carranza's hostile attitude contained in official reports and asserts that the steps toward clearing up the situation in northern Mexico promised by General Obregon at his conference with General Scott actually have constituted a display of military force directed at the American expedition and designed to impede its operations.

War Thought Imminent.

Army officials and high officials would not discuss the suggestions of possible war. They admitted privately their belief that war was imminent, since Carranza had given every indication of a determination to force an issue at any cost, but were disposed to refrain from making any arguments that might serve to further inflame the minds of the Mexican people.

Pershing Men Near Clash With Mex.

Columbus, N. M.—Carranza troops and soldiers of General Pershing's expeditionary command south of Namiquipa are on the verge of hostilities, according to reports from the field. A dispatch said the attitude of the Mexicans was such that American motor truck supply trains are in danger of being fired upon. The Mexicans are said to have mounted artillery in positions menacing the Americans and dispatches indicated that with the two commands in close proximity the danger of a clash is increased.

Americans Imprisoned in Mexico.

Guaymas.—According to reports, Mexican authorities have ordered all able-bodied Americans taken prisoners and intend to disarm all foreigners in the Yaqui valley. Many Americans employed on the railroads in this vicinity are taking asylum aboard the United States cruiser Cleveland and the supply ship Glacier, which are anchored in Guaymas harbor. Posters calling all Mexicans to arms were displayed throughout the city and, it was reported, in the interior.

BIG GUN-COTTON FACTORY

Work Under Way on $250,000 Plant at Hone, South of Dallas.

Dallas, Texas.—For the purpose of manufacturing gun cotton, absorbent cotton and surgical bandages a $250,000 factory is being built at Hone, six miles south of Dallas, by M. H. C. H. and F. D. Thomas of this city. They have purchased 190 acres of land near that place as a site for the plant for a consideration of about $50,000.

The factory is being constructed to fill a large contract with a government closed last January. Construction work on the plant has been in progress for 30 days, most of the machinery is already in Dallas, and all work is being rushed in order to have the factory in operation by August.

The plant will manufacture 30,000 pounds of finished gun cotton a day. This is a highly explosive compound prepared by the action of nitric and sulphuric acids upon cotton linters. It is used principally in military and naval mines and torpedoes. Its explosive power is said to be more than 50 times as great as that of a quantity of gun powder of equal weight.

PERSHING DISREGARDS THREAT.

Detachments Are Working East and West of Main Force Unmolested.

Field Headquarters of General Pershing.—The detachments of our cavalry, which were working east and west of General Pershing's main communications in defiance of the Carranza order not to advance or deploy, met no opposition. Supplies continue to reach Colonia Dublan by rail uninterrupted either by natives or the de facto troops.

The situation hereabouts remains at a half-trigger stage, but the fact that Carranza has made no move to enforce his demand that our troops move north, if at all, caused the belief in some quarters that he is merely bluffing.

General Pershing's emphatic retort to General Trevino, "I take orders only from my government; please make that plain to General Carranza," elicited no reply.

Recall American Consuls in Mexico.

San Antonio, Texas.—The arrival at Laredo of Philip Hanna, consul general at Monterey, developed the fact that the state department ordered both him and J. R. Silliman, consul at Saltillo, to the American side of the river. The withdrawal of these consular officers will leave the American government with no consular representatives at interior points in Mexico except an agent at Mexico City.

Notified of Plan to Attack Del Rio.

San Antonio, Texas.—A force of about 1,500 Mexicans and Yaqui Indians had reached a point 40 miles south of Del Rio en route to attack that border town, according to a report brought in by Mexicans across the river transmitted to Major General Funston by Colonel Sibley, commanding at Del Rio. Immediately upon receipt of the information Brigadier General Greene, commanding the Eagle pass patrol district, sent a battalion of the Third Infantry by motor trucks to reinforce Colonel Sibley's command.

Death to Those Who Arm Against U. S.

Laredo, Texas.—All persons found on the Mexican side with arms who attempt to enter the United States will be immediately executed without documentary proof. Gen. Reynaldo de la Garza, de facto commander at Nuevo Laredo, stated. He will issue a proclamation to this effect at once, he said, in the name of the de facto government. Officers will be warned in the proclamation, Garza said, that failure to execute such armed persons will result in the execution of responsible officers.

Slay Mexican for Attack on Woman.

Brownwood, Texas.—Following a murderous attack made on Mrs. W. Q. Kuykendall at her home here a 16-year-old Mexican, who had been employed as a servant in the family was captured and killed by a posse about ten miles from here a few hours later. Mrs. Kuykendall was on a sleeping porch with her two children, one 6 years old and the other a baby. Her wounds include one eye almost put out, both cheeks cut open, throat badly cut and both hands slashed.

Bank to Move Gold From Border.

Washington.—Comptroller Williams announced that he had authorized one of the largest national banks on the Mexican border to remove its gold reserves to an inland city for fear of a Mexican attack. He declined to tell where the bank was located, but said that it was not in El Paso.

Business Men Offer Aid.

Dallas, Texas.—The returns from the vast industrial inventory now being made in every nook and corner of the United States by the committee on industrial preparedness of the United States naval consulting board mark a new and vital relation between the business men of America and the federal government. In the opinion of Fred A. Jones of Dallas, one of the five men who supervised a survey of the industries of Texas

Flag for Old Vincennes.

The city council of Vincennes, Ind., is considering the adoption of a flag for Vincennes to be used as the city's official emblem during the coming Indiana Centennial celebration, says the Indianapolis News.

The suggested design is intended to set forth the British rule of Vincennes by an old English red "V" in the blue center and the French control by a white fleur-de-lis, which was the national emblem of France during the time this territory was under the French government.

Radating from the center there are 18 white stripes, indicating that Indiana was the 18th state admitted to the Union. There also are 48 small white stripes, indicating the number of states now in the Union.

Hippopotami Can Run.

That is why they are given the name of river-horse. The hippo's feet are kept apart by the skin body and make paths with a ridge down the middle, so as to be recognizable at once. They can stay under water a long time, and when they come to the surface they send little jets of spray from their nostrils. The cow is devoted to the calf. GOLD IN EASTERN STATES

With Silver and Other Metals Year's Production is Around $30,000,000.

Not all of the gold of this country comes from Alaska and the Rocky Mountain states. A good-sized lump of it, more than 10,000 ounces, worth $224,250, is dug out of the mountains here in the East, remarks the New York Sun.

Gold hunters dreamed for years of hidden wealth of yellow metal in the southern part of the Appalachian range. Some of them stopped dreaming and went to work, missing an Eldorado but gaining enough profit to pay well for their daily labor. As a result 59 gold and placer mines and 24 deep gold mines have been developed.

The most productive of these are in North Carolina, Georgia and Alabama. The last-named state has not done so well as in some previous years, but both the others have exceeded the production of 1914. The largest placer mine is in Rutherford county, North Carolina, and the most productive deep mine in Montgomery county, in the same state.

But the whole story of metal mining in the East is not told in the quest for gold. Besides this precious mineral, silver, copper, lead and zinc have been produced in quantities sufficient to make a total last year of almost thirty million dollars. This is nearly three times the value of the preceding year's production, the increase in gold alone being more than fifty thousand dollars.

Not Harmonizing.

HAD TO TAKE SELF TO JAIL

Constable Wanted too Whitewash Fence, So Prisoner Locks Himself Up.

After John Davis had been discharged by his employer he met Constable O'Rourke on the street and surrendered, saying he demanded to be arrested on a charge of intoxication. The constable took him before Judge Castine, where Davis made out a complaint accusing himself of intoxication. He then testified against himself and Judge Castine said the evidence was conclusive, and sentenced him to jail for ten days.

"I ain't got time to take him to jail," said the constable; "I got to whitewash a fence."

"Give me the keys and I'll take myself to jail," said Davis.

The constable did so, and Davis went to the village lock-up, let himself in, locked the door and tossed the keys out through the bars of a window.

Economy.

"You spend entirely too much money on dress," said the man of the house. "That simple little frock Mrs. Smythe wore last night looked a great deal better than that elaborate gown of yours."

"Of course it did, my dear," replied his wife sweetly. "That simple little frock, as you call it, cost three hundred dollars, while mine cost only a hundred and fifty."

"Well, for the love of Mike, go out and buy one about twice as elaborate as the one you're got. Maybe you can get it for nothing."

The Growing Tendency of the Age—

A noted English scientist asserts the tendency is toward "neurasthenia, 'nerves,' etc." A remarkable statement!

No less remarkable is the cause which, he adds, "is not unlikely due to removing from our diet those elements of cereal food which Nature has hid in the husk of the grain, and which man in his ignorance discards."

The elements to which he refers are the well-known mineral salts of phosphorus, lime, iron, etc., removed in milling flour to make it white, but which physicians know are indispensable to normal, well-balanced nerves, bodies and brains.

RUSSIAN CENTER IS HALTED BY TEUTONS

GENERAL LETCHITZKY'S FORCES ADVANCE SOUTHWARD IN PURSUIT OF AUSTRILIANS.

GERMAN TROOPS ARRIVE

Reinforcements Are Rushed From French Front In Effort to Drive Back Advancing Russians.

Petrograd.—No essential change has been made in the position of General Brussiloff's front. Crossing the river Sereth in Bukowina, General Letchitzky's forces have progressed slightly further south in pursuit of the Austrian General Pfanzer's army, but in the center and along the northern flank, the Russian drive has been halted by the fierce counter offensive of the Teutonic armies.

The defense of the Kovel-Lutsck region has been taken over entirely by German reinforcements newly arrived from the French front, which are making a determined attempt to regain the ground lost during the first ten days of the Russian advance. One group of German forces is concentrated at Kovel, where it attempted to advance toward Kolki, but after a sharp conflict in the neighborhood of the Stokhod river was forced to retire by the Russians.

The second group of German forces defended Vladimir-Volynski, which had advanced along the main road leading from Vladimir-Volynski to Lutsck, while a third group with headquarters at Sokal is likewise joining in the movement to press back the extended northern flank of General Brussiloff's army.

On the other points of the front, further Russian operations are being delayed by the necessity for consolidating positions already won.

The war office announced the capture of the town of Radautz, in Bukowina, 30 miles south of Czernowitz.

GERMANS CAPTURE FRENCH TRENCHES.

Paris.—After violent attacks lasting all night the Germans captured front line trenches between Pumin wood and Chenois in the Verdun sector, according to an official statement.

The Germans attacked in force on both banks of the Meuse after the usual heavy bombardment. An attack on the south slope of Dead Man hill was checked by grenade detachments.

On the right bank there were violent engagements west and south of Fort Vaux, during which the German forces were repulsed and immediately expelled.

SWISS CONSIDERS GERMAN DEMANDS.

Berne, Switzerland.—Federal Councilor Schultze announced in parliament that Germany had made a demand that the Swiss government permit the exportation of cotton and foodstuffs collected in this country by German agents. If the demand is not complied with, Germany will prohibit the exportation to Switzerland of coal, iron and other materials, which would mean that Swiss industries would be brought to a standstill.

The Swiss federal authorities have asked for time to reply and are sending a delegation to Paris to confer with representatives of the entente allies in regard to the situation.

GERMANS CLAIM RUSS DRIVEN BACK.

Berlin.—The repulse of heavy attacks by the Russians against General Count von Rothmer's forces north of Prowolka was announced.

FAMOUS GERMAN AVIATOR KILLED.

Berlin.—Lieut. Immelman, whose daring exploits as an aviator have made his name known throughout the world, is reported to have been killed in a fall with an aeroplane. The lieutenant's name was first reported from the German war office on Oct. 2, 1915, when he shot down his fourth aeroplane. The last mention of his name was on May 17, when he shot down his 150th aeroplane.

CARRANZAS SEIZE AMERICAN STOCK.

Washington.—The seizure of a large number of live stock, the property of J. M. Dobie and other citizens of Texas, by the Carranza government in Northern Chihuahua, near the international boundary, was brought to the attention of the war department by Senator Sheppard, with request that troops be dispatched from Eagle Pass. The Texans were feeding 40,000 cattle, 70,000 sheep and 4,500 horses, all of which the de facto government gave notice of confiscating.

GREGORY SLATED FOR SUPREME COURT.

Washington.—Atty. Gen. Thomas Watts Gregory, whose home is at Austin, Texas, according to well-authenticated reports in administrative circles, is the man President Wilson has uppermost in his mind for the appointment as associate justice of the supreme court of the United States to succeed Charles E. Hughes, who resigned to become the Republican candidate for the presidency. In some quarters Mr. Gregory's appointment seems certain.

RUSSIANS CAPTURE 1,800 MORE IN GALICIA

NUMEROUS OTHER ADDITIONAL PRISONERS TAKEN IN DRIVE AGAINST AUSTRILIANS.

MANY AIR BATTLES FOUGHT

Six German Machines, Including Two Fokkers, Reported Brought Down by British.

London.—Having captured Czernowitz, capital of Bukowina, the Russians are well on their way from that city and from various points along the river Pruth driving the Austrians before them toward the Sereth river and the Carpathian mountain passes. Numerous additional prisoners have been captured by the Russians in their drive and more guns, machine guns, ammunition and foodstuffs have fallen into their hands.

Heavy fighting is still in progress to the north in Galicia and Volhynia with the Russians generally on the offensive, but with the Austro-Hungarians and the Germans tenaciously battling against their further advance. In the region south of the Pripiet marshes, to the west of Kolki and along the Stokhod river, where the Rovel-Kovno railway crosses the stream, the Russian attacks have been partly repulsed by the German General von Linsingen's forces, according to Berlin, while northwest of Lutsck the battle is going in favor of the Germans.

Petrograd admits the penetration of the Russian lines by the Austrians west of Lutsck, but says that the Russians retrieved this setback. The announcement of fighting in this region would indicate that the drive in Volhynia has brought the Russians to within 20 miles of Vladimir-Volynsk, the head of the railway running north through Kovel.

Russians Capture 1,800 Prisoners. Along the Galician border, near Radziloff the Russians announce the capture of 1,800 prisoners.

On the front in France only one infantry action took place Monday. This was between the Avre and the Oise, where the Germans attempted to approach the French lines, but were repulsed with hand grenades.

Numerous battles in the air, in which six German machines, among them two Fokkers, were driven down by the British, are recorded in the British official communication. The British themselves lost two aircraft.

A severe battle between the Austrians and Italians is in progress on the Setti communal plateau to the west of Asiago. On the various other fronts southeast of Trent numerous Austrian attacks have been repulsed. The Italians report some progress northeast of Asiago and the capture of 100 Austrians and two machine guns.

Three Italian steamers and five Italian sailing ships have been sunk. At least one of the vessels, the steamer Leprovitita, is reported to have been sent to the bottom by Austrian submarines.

ARABIA IN REVOLT AGAINST TURK RULE.

London.—Reports have been received here that a serious uprising against the Turks is in progress in Arabia and that the rebels have captured the Holy City of Mecca. The London newspapers declare that the rebellion is certain to have an important bearing on the war, especially as regards the participation of Turkey.

FUNSTON SAYS PARKER OBEYED ORDERS.

San Antonio, Texas.—Concerning the withdrawal of the troops that crossed into Mexico in pursuit of bandits Major General Funston gave out the following statement: "I understand there is a tendency to criticize General Parker for withdrawing Anderson's squadron from Mexico. I take full responsibility for that action. I had instructed Parker that when he had accomplished the purpose of the invasion, which was to capture or disperse the bandits, or when he found that object impossible of accomplishment, to order the squadron back. Parker did that very carefully and well. We did not go over to exasperate the Mexicans or provoke them into a fight. We must be right in this situation all the way through. We must keep in mind the verdict of the future. Parker did not retreat, he withdrew, and his decision was right."

DEMOCRATS TO RAISE $1,700,000.

Chicago.—A campaign fund of $1,700,000 will be raised by the Democratic party by popular subscription. W. W. March of Iowa, treasurer of the national committee, said here, while en route to Washington for a conference with the president.

WIDOW OF COL. ASTOR WEDS W. C. DICK.

Bar Harbor, Maine.—Mrs. Madeline Force Astor completed her sacrifice of money for love at the altar. Dressed in a simple blue serge traveling suit, with a straw hat to match, the widow of Colonel John Jacob Astor married William Carl Dick, a newspaper man of New York. In doing so she automatically forfeited an income from the $5,000,000 principal left her by the Titanic's wealthiest victim. The couple will spend their honeymoon at Santa Barbara.

AWARDED ONE-CENT DAMAGES.

Chicago.—The American Medical association was found guilty of libeling the Chattanooga Medicine company, manufacturers of Wine of Cardui, by a jury here. Damages were fixed at 1c. The jury had been out six days.

EIGHT CAPITAL SHIPS PROPOSED FOR 1916.

Washington.—A proposal for four battle cruisers and four dreadnoughts in this year's naval construction program was discussed by the senate subcommittee before which the naval bill is pending. While no decision was reached, Chairman Tillman predicted that the eight capital ship plan would be approved and Senators Swanson and Lodge, the other two members, said a substantial increase was certain over the house program of five cruisers and no dreadnoughts.

GEN. FRED FUNSTON

In charge of United States forces that are expected any day to begin march on Mexican capital.

WAR PREPARATIONS OF U. S.

Rapid Strides Made By This Country in Anticipation of Trouble Across Border.

San Antonio, Texas.—The United States is far better prepared for war now than it was when President Wilson ordered the first expedition into Mexico, according to army officers here. Within the last three months they pointed out the United States has made more rapid strides in the direction of preparedness than ever before in the country's history. Following are some of the most important steps by the federal and military authorities in anticipation of trouble with Mexico:

Large preliminary purchases of supplies for the armies have been made; the output of the government arsenals has been increased; vast quantities of munitions have been stored at points in Mexico and along the American side of the Rio Grande. Transportation facilities have been greatly improved; about 500 gigantic motor trucks of one and one-half to three tons capacity have been purchased and placed in service; motorcycles equipped with machine guns have been placed in service.

Two armored motor cars, each surmounted by three turrets with a machine gun in each turret have been secured and additional cars of this type ordered.

High-powered military aeroplanes of the smaller machines that were smashed during the first stage of the Pershing expedition.

Powerful searchlights have been provided as a means of locating the enemy at night.

As a result of the preparedness movement in general and the steps toward industrial mobilization in particular, the factories that make munitions and military equipment have increased their capacity to such an extent that military authorities anticipate no difficulty in keeping the troops well supplied in event of war.

NOGALES CITIZENS WANT MORE TROOPS.

Nogales, Ariz.—Alarmed by persistent reports of large bodies of Mexican troops near here and other large bodies mobilizing at Magdalena, the mayor and the Nogales board of trade sent telegrams to General Funston and Secretary of State Lansing and, finally, to President Wilson demanding the immediate dispatch of more troops to this vicinity. One battalion of the Arizona national guard and a battalion of the fourteenth infantry were sent in response to the appeal.

WARSHIPS LEAVE FOR COAST OF MEXICO.

San Diego, Cal.—With the departure from this port of a squadron of armored cruisers and a flotilla of torpedo boat destroyers the greatest naval demonstration in the history of the Pacific fleet with the west coast of Mexico as its objective will be recorded. Not since the inception of the Mexican troubles has there been such a powerful fleet sent to the western Mexican littoral for patrol purposes nor has an American admiral ever taken the precaution to place his fighting ships so that within a few moments after an outbreak of hostilities he could effectually blockade every coast Mexican port from Guaymas to Salina Cruz.

AWARDED TO STOP FOOD TO MEXICO.

Laredo, Texas.—Unequivocal and emphatic orders were received from Washington by government officials to close the international and railroad bridges to the transportation of foodstuffs in quantities to the Mexican side. By this order the United States places an embargo on foodstuffs destined to the Mexican government and especially the Carranza army, which has heretofore been passing through Laredo in carloads, as well as being carted across.

GRECE ACCEDS TO ENTENTE DEMANDS.

Athens.—Under heavy pressure from the entente powers, Greece has accepted without reserve the demands presented in a joint note by Great Britain, France and Russia. At the most critical moment Greece was without a government. Premier Salonoudis announced to the chamber of deputies the resignation of himself and the cabinet and the necessity for the present to obtain success for the present to obtain success.

WILSON DRAFTS STERN REPLY TO CARRANZA

UPON RECEPTION OF NOTE IN CITY OF MEXICO HINGES ISSUE OF MEXICAN WAR.

CHARGE U. S. WITH BAD FAITH

Carranza Asserts First Expedition Not Attempt to Catch Bandits. Not Seeking Conflict.

Washington.—Upon Carranza's reception of a stern refusal to heed his demand for recall of American troops from Mexico hinges the question of a Mexican war, in the opinion of President Wilson's close advisers. They are prepared for the possibility of open hostility after the note, which has been sent, has reached Carranza's hands.

No indication has come that the first chief's attitude of implacable hostility would be shaken by the reiterated declaration of the latest communication that the United States has no aggressive or warlike purpose toward Mexico, but is firmly resolved to protect her borders and end brigandage in the border states.

National Guard Mobilizing. While the diplomatic steps were in progress the nation was stirring throughout its width and breadth with the movement of national guards mobilizing to guard the border. At least 100,000, and possibly a larger number, were preparing for active service under President Wilson's call. For the present their mission will be purely one of defense, but should war come they will be ready also for that.

CARRANZA GIVES STATEMENT.

Mexico City.—First Chief Carranza in an interview said: "I have ordered the military leaders near the border not to permit the further passing of any American forces into Mexican territory. If they attempt to pass they will be attacked by the constitutional forces. The instructions given by General Trevino to General Pershing not to advance further were issued by me."

The first chief was emphatic in his statement that the first American expedition was not an attempt to catch bandits.

"In spite of friendly words," said the general, "there has been no real co-operation on the part of the Americans. They took their heavy cannons and all their impedimenta for a campaign into Mexico. It was not done for bandits. The Mexican people, who have waited patiently for three months, believe that these words were not sincere and are becoming indignant."

General Carranza repeated again that Mexico does not want war, and that no attempt has or will be made by Mexico to cross into the United States, but he stated the sovereignty of Mexico must be respected.

MARINES AND MEXICANS CLASH.

Washington.—Admiral Winslow at San Diego, reporting on the clash between American seaman and Carranza soldiers at Mazatlan, said Boat-swain's Mate I. M. Laughton was gravely wounded and Ensign O. O. Kessing and Assistant Paymaster Andrew Howat were taken prisoner by the Mexicans. The admiral made no mention of the subsequent release of the officers, as announced by the Mexican embassy, but it is presumed this occurred after the report.

750 MEXICAN TROOPS IN NUEVO LAREDO.

Laredo, Texas.—Five hundred infantrymen and 250 artillerymen of the Mexican army arrived in Nuevo Laredo, opposite here, Sunday and paraded through the streets of that town. The parade of the troops was witnessed by a large, but orderly crowd.

Hunting Trouble.

When a man just naturally wants trouble it is mighty easy to find an excuse for making it. According to Mike Hogan, Casey and O'Brien were having an argument of their own at Breckinridge street and Barrett avenue. It had progressed to the extent that each had forgotten what it was about originally and they were wholly oblivious of the rathering crowd until an urbane and genteel person in a frock coat put in.

"Come, come, my man," he said, gently plucking Casey by the sleeve. "You don't want to fight; I can tell it by your looks. Your face is too benign."

"Two be nine! Two be nine, is it, ye scut?" bellowed Casey. "Me face is two be nine, is it?"

And there was where the real trouble began.—Louisville Times.

He spent in aeronautics alone over $50,000 a year in Paris in 1901 he won a prize of 250,000 francs. SYNOPSIS.

Professor Stilliter, psychologist, and Gordon Barclay, millionaire, plan to preach to the world the gospel of efficiency through a young and beautiful woman who shall believe that she is a heaven-sent messenger. They kidnap the orphaned little Amesbury girl, playmate of Tommy Steele, and conceal her in a cavern, in care of a woman, to be modelled to their plan as she grows up. Fifteen years elapse. Tommy is adopted by Barclay, but loses his heirship and on a hunting trip discovers Celestia. Stilliter takes Celestia to New York. Tommy follows, she gets away from both of them, and her real work begins. At Barclay's invitation she meets the business barons who are converted to her new gospel. She makes an impression on the society world. Tommy joins the labor ranks. Tommy plays Joseph to the wife of a modern Potiphar and is rescued from a lynching party by Celestia. She prevents a massacre of strikers, and settles the strike. Mrs. Gundorf and Mary Blackstone conspire. Stilliter, jealous, begins to use his hypnotic power treacherously. Barclay begins a campaign for the presidential nomination and Celestia spreads her propaganda of efficiency as Barclay's platform. Tommy opposes her and Mary Blackstone plots Celestia's death. The plot fails, and Mrs. Gundorf dies. Stilliter hypnotizes Celestia to join him, prepares for their marriage, and wires Barclay she has gone back to heaven. Tommy and Freddy the Ferret rescue her and take her, still under Stilliter's unholy spell, to the cave she knew as heaven. Stilliter attempts to murder Tommy and again flees with Celestia. Barclay abandons and lust of power and desires real greatness. Freddy rescues Celestia from Stilliter, who starts a forest fire and is drowned while trying to escape from it. Tommy finds the Ferret and Celestia and in the cave tells her her story. Back in New York she publicly accuses the triumvirate.

FIFTEENTH INSTALLMENT

Gordon Barclay's servants had orders to admit no one without orders. The city was in a turmoil. With each fresh edition of the newspapers the situation of the conspirators became more serious. In the public parks effigies of them were hanged or burned. It became necessary to keep a cordon of police about Barclay's house. In Semmes' house and Sturtevant's no window remained whole. For twenty hours these two men had been Barclay's guests.

Gunsdorf's great hour had come—that hour for which he had plotted all his life, and lied for and schemed for. He had been the leading figure in the mob that had tried to lynch the triumvirate in the first burst of rage. And he found himself suddenly at the head of all the lawless elements in the city. He was drunk with power and sense of his own importance. But openly he spoke of his love for mankind.

Through a man friendly to him and deep in Gunsdorf's councils, Tommy learned that the life of the man who had adopted him and been good to him was in danger. His house was to be stormed over the heads of the police, and himself hanged or torn to pieces, as might happen.

All their differences fled from Tommy's mind, and he remembered only their mutual affection; so he hurried to the old familiar house and was presently admitted.

"It's just to say a few words," said Tommy, and he told Barclay what Gunsdorf was planning for that very day.

"We'll go to Gull Island," Barclay said simply, "till this thing has blown over. I suppose you are not unhappy about what has happened. It's a pity she came back. . . . Tommy, when we quarrelled I was ambitious for power only. Later I began to think that Celestia was a real panacea for a sick world. So that if I had been destined to rule, I would have ruled for the good of the people. I want you to know that what began in cynicism ended in faith and honesty. I have put you back in my will for practically everything I possess. Carlton Fitch has turned knave. Mary, if she marries him, will be worthy of him."

"You'll need somebody to keep house for you at Gull Island," said Tommy. He was too moved to refer to what he had just learned. "I'll get Celestia there as quickly as I can."

"Have you married her?" Tommy looked very manly when he said that he had. And Barclay smiled one of his old-time dazzling smiles.

"And I think," he said finally, "that you had better get out of this house as quickly as you can. I'm going, too. I can't afford to be a hero."

They shook hands and parted, never to meet in this life again.

Late that night Tommy and Celestia and Freddy the Ferret, whom Tommy was trying to train to be his valet, caught the last boat for Bartell's, on Bartell's Island, from which Gull's Island may be reached in an hour in a fast launch. They had had no word of what had happened in New York.

Tommy, without arousing suspicion, could not find out if Barclay, Semmes and Sturtevant had gone on ahead, or were following.

"If they are behind us," he said to Celestia, "they'll have to charter something. Perhaps father will come all the way by boat—that would be best. His own yacht would be spotted. But he'll work something."

Gull Island resembles a loaf of bread that has risen too much. A rounded, billowing top is set upon high, almost perpendicular sides. In this island retreat, open and ready for the master the year round, the triumvirate, if only they could reach it, would be as safe from mob violence as on a ship at sea.

A steep climb, a wild expanse of starily moor, little ancient trees growing very close together, a strong perfume of bayberry bushes, of sweet fern and roses, and then the low-ceilinged, softly lighted hall, with many menservants, a cool, delightful night, soundly slept—these were Celestia's first impression of Gull Island.

In the morning she went with her husband to the eastern cliffs, and she had her first look at the ocean—sullenly tumbling, white-maned—under a gray and sullen sky.

Soon after Tommy's departure, and before the triumvirate could complete their arrangements for the retreat to Gull's Island, the streets contiguous to Gordon Barclay's house and the streets in the neighborhood began to fill with men and women who looked like the dregs of the city.

But it was immediately in front of the house that the crowd was thickest and most menacing.

There was no actual violence until Gunsdorf arrived. He, high above the crowd on an improvised rostrum, roared for blood and vengeance.

Weapons began to flash. Then the police tried to disperse the mob, and, after hard fighting and the breaking of many heads, were overpowered, passed over and swept aside. Then the crowd began to swarm over the tall iron gates and the spiked iron fence.

There was a fountain—a bronze youth, arms akimbo, who with puffed cheeks blew a fine spray of water. Him certain stray violent men pried from his base, and used, swinging him by the feet and arms, to batter down the solid, heavy front door of the house.

This done, the leaders rushed in, and for a moment were halted by the uncompromising dignity and grandeur of the hall. Facing them was a flight of marble steps. At the top of these stood Gordon Barclay. When the crowd recognized him they yelled like a pack of wolves. The corners of his mouth twitched with a kind of glassy contempt. He turned slowly and passed through a doorway that was just behind him, slammed the door shut and locked it. Not till then did he show a sign of fear or haste. Now, however, he ran swiftly through the library, out at the other end, and down a back stair to the service courtyard. Here, headed for tall wooden gates in a tall brick wall over which wisteria was festooned, stood a powerful limousine car. The engine was purring. On the box sat two brave and handsome young men of the Barclay livery. In the body of the car sat Semmes and Sturtevant. Sturtevant looked furiously angry. Semmes looked seasick.

At the gates stood two footmen ready to fling them open. Most of the crowd was at the front of the house. Meanwhile the bronze boy of the fountain came up the front stair, battered head first, and was used to ram down the door behind which Barclay had been seen to disappear.

The first man to enter the long, rich library was Gunsdorf. He gave only a glance at the open panel which disclosed the inviting interior of a safe, or at the greenbacks and yellowbacks of all denominations which the wily financier had scattered about the room, on tables, on chairs, on the floor—such things were for children. Raging for his comrades to follow him, Gunsdorf rushed the length of the room, found the back stair down which Barclay had retreated, and came in less time than it takes to tell it to the service court at the back of the house.

But nobody followed Gunsdorf. The open safe, the scattered bills, stopped men as a solid cliff might have done. Vengeance was forgotten, and the crowd began to loot.

When Gunsdorf reached the courtyard the gates were half open. On strong steel brackets fixed to the back of the car were two spare rims, with inflated tires. These formed a resting place for Gunsdorf's feet and a grip for his hands. But the first forward leap of the car, followed by a hair-raising swerve to the left, almost threw him off.

Shots were fired. The car went over something soft that screamed, and that remained in the street after the car had passed and thwacked like a newly landed fish.

Gunsdorf stood upon the spare tires and clung to them and the lights of New York whirled by.

The scene of the riot was far behind. Up Fifth avenue the car raced. It was that hour before dark when the summer traffic was light, and the face of the great Gordon Barclay at the window of the car was enough to make even the boldest traffic cop think twice.

Through Central park, out Seventh avenue, across McComb's dam bridge, up Jerome avenue, through Fordham to the Pelham parkway, into New Rochelle and out, through Mamaroneck,

Rye, Portchester, the car flew. And like grim death, his purpose never swerving, Gunsdorf clung to the spare tires. His feat was worthy of a better. Vengeance is no man's. "Vengeance is mine, saith the Lord."

The old fishing town of Giddings was dark as sin. The financiers, conferring, had determined to make this, rather than Missaquid, their point of departure. They would be late to catch the last boat for Bartell's. Giddings, with Missaquid, formed the base of a triangle, of which Gull Island was the apex. Therefore, if they could here charter some craft to convey them to the island, there would be a great saving of time.

The car ran half way through the little town, turned a right angle and descended to the wharves, and here, in the darkness, stopped. Gunsdorf was the first to alight. He slipped into the shelter of a shed that smelled of fish and flung himself to the ground.

Why didn't he shoot down the financiers as they alighted from the car? His hands were so cramped from gripping the tires he could not have held or pointed a gun; they were shaking like leaves of poplar trees in a wind. He was in acute physical pain.

But, lying on the ground, writhing with exhaustion, he began to recover little by little from the ordeal through which he had passed, and he was able to keep an eye on the car and on the shadowy men whom he hated, and to listen to what they had to say to each other and to the fisherman who they routed from his berth, and who finally, for a prodigious sum of money, consented to venture out in the creaky storm that was brewing and carry them and their luggage to Gull Island.

The name of his little schooner was the Mary Nye. She was at the end of the long wharf, half unloaded. No, he had given up fishing. There was more money in coasting. They could start at once; he would have to get his crew together—two men and a boy. Had they really come all the way from New York? They must be hard set. Better come to the house. He'd rot the misses out of bed, and she'd give them coffee.

Barclay gave some orders to his driver, and much money; also he gave much money to the other man on the box, and he shook hands with them both and thanked them for their devotion to them, and told them that their future would be his care.

Then the car went one way, and the financiers and the fishermen went another, and presently Gunsdorf doubled half over, like a man crippled with rheumatism, rose from his hiding place, and hobbled off in a third. The Mary Nye lay in the lee of the long wharf near the end. She was a dirty little ship. Amidship was a hold, formerly used as a container for codfish; it still smelled of them. The hatchway giving access to this hold was open, and into it Gunsdorf descended. It seemed to him, after exploring the schooner from stern to stem, to offer the best means of concealment. The little cabin aft was cleaner. It would be the choice of the triumvirate for their own quarters.

Gunsdorf was half crazy with fatigue. In a far corner of the hold he found a pile of sacking and flung himself down on them. But there was something hard among them that hurt him. He groped for this, and found that it was a powerful two-handed sugar, fixed with an inch and a half bit.

He pushed it to one side and in a moment was sound asleep.

Barclay was restless; the cabin was stuffy and verminous; he preferred the deck and the open air. So it happened that in passing the main hatch, in a hull of the wind, he heard a sound of a man snoring. He had left Semmes and Sturtevant complaining of the discomforts of the cabin. Captain Nye was at the wheel, the two men and the boy forward.

"Here," thought Barclay, "we've got a stowaway aboard. Some poor son-of-a-gun of a wharf rat, I suppose."

He stroked aft. "There's someone asleep in the main hold," he said.

"The hell there is!"

"You can hear him snoring if you listen in the hatchway."

"Well, let him snore." Gradually it dawned upon Barclay that the presence on the schooner of a man unknown and unvouched for was not pleasant. So he descended into the hold, struck a match, and had a look at the sleeper's face.

Then very softly he returned to the deck, half closed the hatch, and, thrusting his head through the opening that remained, he called loudly: "Wake up, there!"

The snores ceased and were followed by a kind of sleepy groaning. "Gunsdorf," called Barclay in a sharp, incisive voice, "can you hear me?"

"I hear you."

"What are you doing on this boat?"

No answer.

"Well, you'll not be able to do any mischief. You seem to like it down there. I am going to close this hatch so that you can't open it. You will not get out until the boat is back of her starting point. The captain is a safe man. You will not find out from him where I have been set ashore. So good-night to you."

Gunsdorf's answer was to fire two wild shots from his automatic. Barclay slammed the hatch to and succeeded in fastening it so that it could not be opened from below.

Then he went once more to the captain and talked to him for some time in an undertone. After that he waked Sturtevant and Semmes to tell them what had happened.

"He's been insane for some time," said Sturtevant. "He wouldn't stop at anything. I hope to God he hasn't got a stick of dynamite with him. He'd think nothing of blowing himself to pieces if we went, too."

Gunsdorf had no stick of dynamite. He had only an automatic with a few cartridges in the magazine, and an insane, murderous rage and hatred in his breast.

So they'd land somewhere, would they? He'd be carried back to the starting point, would he? Not if he knew it. His ride on the back of the automobile was all in vain, was it? He'd show 'em—damn 'em!

And his hands, their strength refreshed by hatred, insanity and suicidal daring, sought and found the big auger and began to bore a hole through the bottom of the schooner. He would drown, but so would they!

After a time the edge of the hole he was boring became damp, water began to trickle from the bit, then to spit and hiss, then the bit went clear through, and when he had withdrawn it water spouted upward as from a garden hose.

Gunsdorf laughed aloud, and at once began to bore a second hole. When he had nearly finished a third the bit broke short off, and Gunsdorf cursed. But the Mary Nye was taking in a good deal of water, and the fall of water seemed to have postponed the time when the sea should close over her.

But in the book of fate the Mary Nye was not destined to perish by water alone. Among her heterogeneous cargo which had not been unloaded, from the small hold back of the main hold, were two sacks of unslaked lime. After a time a trickle of water found its way to these, and they began to smoke.

The first person to be aware of the smoke was Gunsdorf. It filtered into the main hold before it found its way to the deck. Gunsdorf, at the moment, with a kind of diabolical eagerness, was trying to calculate the rapidity with which the water was rising. This was a difficult matter, owing to the motion of the vessel.

When he smelled the smoke his heart almost stopped beating, he was frightened. Water and dynamite had no terror for him, but death by fire had always been his nightmare. He was like a man waking after a great drunkenness, during which, let us say, he has committed some crime which his frenzied brain at the time of its commission had seemed a reasonable and even a meritorious thing to do, but the memory of which makes the most awful terror and short, the man had recovered his murderous and suicidal madness. He was sane—a rational creature, who realized what he had done, and that the deed was in vain, and that he alone would be destroyed by it.

What madness to suppose that such a man as Barclay would stay by the Mary Nye till she went down? She carried a boat for just such an emergency. But he, Gunsdorf, while the others rowed merrily off, would be left in the dark.

In the first moment of reasoning it did not occur to him that the ship was on fire. Rather he thought that the smoke was some devilish device of the triumvirate to asphyxiate him.

From the eastern cliffs, which received the onslaught of the open sea, Tommy and Celestia walked to those lower western cliffs whose feet are washed by the less strenuous waters which flow between Gull Island and the mainland, and here, sheltered from the wind, they seated themselves, ostensibly to admire the view, but really to admire each other.

The view consisted of gray water, a vast expanse of it, in commotion, and of a vast expanse of small gray sky; and, many miles distant, a small schooner beating slowly up to the island.

"They must be cooking a bonny breakfast," said Tommy, "judging from the smoke."

"Judging by the smoke," said Celestia, "they've got more than one stove."

"By George you are right!" said Tommy. Then, a moment later, with excitement: "She's on fire. That's why the davits are swung outboard. They are waiting till the last moment to lower a boat. Thank the Lord they've got one! I suppose they want to get into the lee of the island. It must be pretty rough out there for a skiff. They're not making much headway, though. She looks very low in the water. Probably leaks like a sieve, and the fire keeps them from getting to the pumps."

"Can't we do anything to help?"

"Not unless the launch has come back from Bartell's. She went over early for newspapers and supplies. Let's go see."

So they raced off to the landing. The launch had not yet returned, and there was neither sight nor sound of her. A catboat without even a mast was drawn up on ways, and the only other craft at the landing was a flat-bottomed skiff, so low in the water that she could not have lived in the rough water outside of the harbor.

"We can't do any good," said Tommy with a great deal of regret in his voice. "Let's hurry back and see the end of it."

They stopped at the house for field glasses, of which there were several pairs in a drawer of the hall table, and hurried back to the western cliffs.

In his explorations of the night before Gunsdorf had noted the sacks of lime raised from the floor of the hold to keep them from any chance water. And it dawned upon him if it was his own fault that they had got wet, and generated enough heat to set the ship on fire.

Captain Nye had kept his courage up, and held grimly to the task of trying to make head against the fire and against the water rising in the hold.

Through what remained of the night, and through all the long, anxious morning, he and his two men, aided by Barclay, Semmes and Sturtevant, had fought like heroes against the fire and water.

It was discouraging to have to cart into the burning after-hold so much of the water that they blistered their hands pumping it out of it. At one time it looked as if they were going to get the fire under control. In that event they could have kept the vessel afloat indefinitely.

Captain Nye had suggested bringing Gunsdorf on deck and putting him to work, and the effort had been made. The man was disarmed as he came up, wet to the knees and choking with smoke. But at the sight of Barclay all his hate returned. He would not work; they couldn't make him.

"Why the hell should I," said he, "when I took the trouble to bore the holes that are sinking her and to start the fire that's burning her?"

All regarded the man with a horror that was akin to awe. Anger succeeded this.

"Is that the truth?" asked Captain Nye.

"Yes."

Captain Nye motioned to his two men. They seized Gunsdorf, and after a short struggle cast him back into his prison and battened down the hatch.

"There's no room for him in the small boat," said Captain Nye; "and there's no more mischief he can do down below."

It was only the fatigue of those who were trying to save her that eventually settled the fate of the Mary Nye. Her captain called the party together. "Thanks, all hands," he said. "You've done all men could do. We'll need what strength we've got left to get us ashore. So let her burn."

The boy, who had been at the wheel ever since the discovery of the fire, was relieved by Captain Nye. The boy promptly lay down on the deck, and the others followed suit, resting themselves against the time of embarking in the small boat.

At last the moment came when Captain Nye thought best to abandon his ship. His eyes filled with tears.

rolled precariously when she had drifted out of the lee of the doomed schooner, and when she hit the rough water she rolled quietly over and floated bottom up.

The shock of the cold water revived Gunsdorf so that he did not at once drown. He succeeded in getting hold of the boat and keeping his head out of water.

Over the inverted bows Barclay crawled out of the water and lay sprawling on the arched, slippery bottom of the boat. From this advantageous position he looked about eagerly to see whom he could help. Of that whole party only Barclay and the boy could swim. Sturtevant and Semmes, if they ever came to the surface, were never seen again by mortal eyes. The boy swam to the boat and climbed up on it, with Barclay's help.

Then for the first time Barclay saw the agonized face of Gunsdorf. The man's grip was failing, and he knew it. At a little distance Captain Nye floated face down. His two men came to the surface, came together, clinched and died, each trying to use the other as a ladder by which to climb out of the water.

Barclay looked for a while coldly into Gunsdorf's face, and then turned away.

"For God's sake help me!" Barclay's expression did not change. He did not look at Gunsdorf.

"For Christ's sake!"

Then the little boy, his teeth chattering, said: "Tain't pretty to see men drown," and began to blubber.

With an oath Barclay reached for Gunsdorf and tried to draw him out of the water. It was a difficult and precarious operation.

"Steady! Don't get rattled!" said Barclay. "You, boy, steady her as much as you can."

And Barclay worked with all his strength to save the wretched man's life.

There was a strange look in Gunsdorf's face. It was no longer hatred. There was hope in it; but, more than that, there was something that was akin to love. A miracle had been wrought in the evil man's heart.

Barclay trying to save him!

"You're a good man," he said. "I thought you were the devil."

"My man," said Barclay, "I can't get you up here. I'm sorry. My strength is petered out. If it's any comfort to you, I forgive you for what you have done. I've done plenty of evil, too. I guess we both thought we were trying to do good. We looked at life from different angles. You didn't believe that men like me were human beings; I had the same feeling about men like you. I guess that's mostly what's the matter with this world, anyway."

Holding tightly to Gunsdorf's hand, he still managed to keep the anarchist's head out of water.

All this Tommy and Celestia saw from the top of the cliffs. They had recognized the two chief actors in the drama, and Tommy's suspense over the fate of the man who had been good to him was awful to see. It was that white, quiet suspense that transcends all outcry and lamentation.

"Gunsdorf," said Barclay. "I'm slipping; I can't hold you any longer. I'm sorry."

"All right," said Gunsdorf. And he let go of Barclay's hand and sank like a stone.

"My God!" exclaimed Barclay. "What sand!"

The moment Gunsdorf's head reappeared Barclay slipped quietly into the water and tried to save him. But Gunsdorf had gone down open-mouth. He was too confused to understand the calm, steady command of Barclay—to keep his head—to keep still.

He tried to climb upon his would-be savior, and they went down together. Then Barclay's presence of mind left him, and he, too, grappled. And so they died—in each other's arms.

The little boy, his teeth chattering, pushed on the inverted boat, blubbering bitterly.

On the cliff of Gull Island the girl from heaven was trying to console one of the richest men in the world. (THE END.)

"Beyond the Frontier"
 A red-blooded, stirring romance of the days when the French voyageurs were hacking paths thru the forests of the Illinois country to Fort St. Louis at Starved Rock on the Illinois River and beyond. Such is the character of the powerful new story of thrilling adventure, love and romance that The Stockman has arranged to give its readers.
 Randall Parrish is the author, and, in many respects, "Beyond the Frontier" surpasses in thrilling adventure any story this gifted writer has ever told.
 There weren't any tango parties, nor much joy-riding, nor so many flaccid youths and over-manicured maidens in America in those days, but there was a world of romance and of love, and there was a vigorous flavor to adventure.
 By all means be sure that you get the opening chapters of this great story which begins in the next issue of The Stockman.

Bowel Complaints in India.
 In a lecture at one of the Des Moines, Ia., churches a missionary from India told of going into the interior of India, where he was taken sick, that he had a bottle of Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy with him and believed that it saved his life. This remedy is used successfully in India, both as a preventive and cure for cholera. You may know from this that it can be depended upon for the milder forms of bowel complaint that occur in this country. For sale by Smith Drug Co., Ozona.
