VALISE SIZE ALLIGATOR AT BARGAIN PRICE

Not a man to hold up a deal because of a slight difference between the asked and selling price, Preston (Peg) Spray, is prepared to sell an 8-year-old alligator at a bargain price. "I think he ought to be worth $6" Spray said yesterday, "but I will take 25e. One reason I am offering this alligator at a drough price is that my investment is small. Two weeks ago Jiggs Green drove up to my place and dumped the reptile, telling me as he drove away that I had just entered the alligator business. To date the alligator has not eaten a bite of food altho I have offered everything from a blue plate dinner to one of my neighbor's chickens. Green, who is an authority on alligators, says they eat only once a year (or during one month) and that three pounds of hamburger will satisfy the appetite for another 12 months. I will show this alligator by appointment only."

IN APPRECIATION

It's useless in our words and ability to make all realize and feel — who had any part whatsoever in aiding in Jewell's comfort and our welfare — just how much we really appreciate their help and remembrances. Jewell's illness was not short and it surely was a true test of loyal friends and relatives, and many went the extra mile, which she, or we did not expect, but do appreciate.

In special ways we have tried to let everyone know of our appreciation. Realizing it is impossible to have reached all, we use this means to do so.

This we know: When trouble comes your way, the good people of Matador will be ready and happy to make your burdens easier to bear.

Thanks to everyone.

What's New with Cows?

Catching up on my reading, I noticed three news items you might like to know about.

First, a farmer whose milk had a trace of garlic flavor is feeding his cows chlorophyll to sweeten their breaths.

Next, a college agricultural station has trained a herd to get milked when they are called by number. Seems 75 out of 80 cows learned their numbers in a few days. Guess the "dumb" five couldn't count that high. Final item — cows are getting "nose-printed" for identification.

From where I sit, I hope there is as much progress being made with humans... especially in regard to tolerance. Whether it's a choice of a political party, a basketball team, or a favorite beverage, let's learn to live and let live more. You may ask for a soft drink after a hard day's work — I'll choose a refreshing glass of beer. But let's not try to "cow" the other fellow into our way of thinking!

Ramsey Advocates Stock Piling Oil

Lieutenant Governor Ben Ramsey has stepped up his campaign for re-election with trips to West Texas and the Panhandle where he proposed stock piling oil for defense. The East Texas lawyer, a steady but quiet campaigner, said the increasing importation of foreign oil is hurting the petroleum industry which foots about half the state's tax bill. "A few Texas oil men could financially stand serious price cut-backs, but the majority of the people connected with our oil industry could not. Some of these include farmers and ranchers with leases and royalties.

Others are having a hard time now keeping their exploration going," Ramsey said.

"Many of our state services, including schools, colleges and regular operating expenses, are paid for out of oil tax money," Ramsey said. "If our state revenues from petroleum steadily decline, we are in for a pinch which I think is unnecessary."

Ramsey, who consistently works to keep state economy and state services in balance for the welfare of all the people, proposed a solution to the impact of foreign oil imports on state and national economy. The lieutenant governor said, "as long as the national government feels the importation of foreign oil is necessary for defense planning, and as long as we keep spending dollars abroad in aid programs, we might as well put the two together and come up with something that bolsters, and not weakens, our own economy." Ramsey said engineers have advised stock piling oil is feasible.

"I think," Ramsey said, "the national government might well consider stockpiling oil with funds in the foreign aid bill now being considered by Congress."

Native Grass Retained by Good Range Management

TRADITIONAL Scotch husbandry is reflected in range management of the D. I. W. Birnie ranch located in the Cap Rock foothill country about 15 miles north-west of Matador.

The approximately nine-section ranch is attracting interests of soil conservation and range experts because of its careful management and large variety of native grasses. In a recent survey James Priddy, Work Unit Conservationist of the local Soil Conservation office, identified the following grasses: Plains prairie grass, hooded windmill grass, Arizona cotton top, side-spike grama, switch grass, blue grama and New Mexico feather grass (all in mixed land areas). In the rough, broken areas he found hairy grama, buffalograss and little bluestem, black bling wild alfalfa and dotted dry feather.

One of the most colorful men ever to place a booted foot on the soils of West Texas owns and manages the ranch. He is the affable Scotchman, D. I. W. Birnie, born and reared in Scotland, he wore the kilts of the famous Black Watch "Ladies From Hell" serving four years of rugged combat in World War I. Mr. Birnie has been a naturalized citizen of the United States for about 12 years and except for his pleasant Scotch brogue and ready wit most of the traces of his native country have merged with the customs of his adopted country.

His careful management of the ranch has proven profitable. He is convinced that proper stocking and feeding is essential to success in the ranching industry in this area. Despite the temptation to buy additional cattle during good grass years he has maintained rigid animal control in his seven pastures. He runs about 20 animal units per section of land and says this amount is possible only when conditions are good. He says his grasses have improved despite the drought.

No Rotation Grazing

With seven pastures varying from 105 acres to 1,800 acres, Mr. Birnie could practice rotation grazing. Experience has shown him that it is not the most profitable method. He grazes all the pastures the year around but divides his cattle for more efficient feeding and care. He believes proper grazing in spring and summer assures satisfactory winter pasture.

At present he has a 90% calf crop and expects several more cows to calve. Careful records kept since 1944 show the average weight of his calves at 475 pounds. He usually sells at the age of 8 to 10 months. Average weight of his calves last year was 527 pounds (sold at 9 to 11 months). Many calves throughout the range country go to market around 400 pounds.

Usually he culls older cows in the fall but because of low prices last season he kept them. He had sufficient grass to provide roughage. He expects to cull closer this fall. Mr. Birnie said he probably had sufficient grass to run 80 to 100 additional head, but is keeping it as a margin of safety.

"It's more important to have grass to spare than to run out," he declared. He accomplishes two objectives in his feeding program. One is to keep his cattle in good condition and the other is to make them easier to handle. He provides mineral for his cattle but never mixes it with salt (salt is free choice).

No Boots And Spurs

The hard-riding, roping, boots and spurs cowboy has no place on the Birnie ranch. He calls his cattle in for branding. Last year he gathered his cattle (with exception of eight head) in five or six hours with no horse work, except cutting and penning in the traps.

Traps are located around all watering places and cattle are fed in them. The feed ration is four pounds of 20% breeder cubes per animal every other day, starting about January 1 and continuing through the April branding. He continues "reward" feeding through summer and fall.

Water is a problem on the Birnie ranch which has four ponds, four windmills and one spring. Greatest distance which his cattle need to travel to water is one and one-half miles, with the average much less.

Mr. Birnie has drilled over 20 dry holes in his search for water. Two holes were abandoned because the water was unfit for use. Water distribution as a means of grazing control is one of his greatest problems.

Mesquite Problem

As a member of the Upper Peace Soil Conservation District and user of the Soil Conservation Service, Mr. Birnie is constantly seeking to improve the management of his ranch.

One of his greatest problems, however, is one shared by other ranchers throughout most of Texas. He has too much mesquite. He sprayed 1,500 acres in 1951, and received an exceptionally good kill. He believes the spraying helped his better grasses to increase more rapidly—made possible when associated with proper stocking and sound feeding practices.

This year he has chained (dragged) 1,000 acres of mesquite and is carefully checking the results.

Article Features Mrs. Don T. Martin

A recent article in the Hereford Brand, featured Mrs. Don T. Martin, president of the Bud To Blossom Club of that city. Mrs. Martin is the former Betty Jo Simpson of Matador, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Fred Simpson.

The article was concerning Mrs. Martin's interest in collecting items for flower arrangements, such as unusual containers and rocks, driftwood, gnarled branches and far dried arrangements, leaves, berries, pine cones and various grasses.

"She is always on the lookout for containers to buy or perhaps ways to make them herself, and thinks neutral shades are better, leaving the color and brightness to the arrangement itself."

"She thinks it will add to the fun of any vacation if part of the time is spent in looking for beautiful and interesting things to be used in dried arrangements later on." The writer of the article described other attributes of Mrs. Martin's personality.

"She enjoys meeting people who are interested in these things too, which is perhaps her main reason for garden club work... since the purpose of the Bud To Blossom Club is to increase the knowledge of horticulture, study flower arrangements and landscaping as well as to encourage the development of civic beauty, her association with the club has been very pleasant.

"Mrs. Martin is looking forward to her club work this fall, but she also has many other interests. Homemaking is her first interest and she likes to sew and makes most of her little girl's clothes, and some of her own. She also enjoys working in the children's department of the First Methodist Church."

Candidate we know says it's almost impossible to do house-to-house campaigning during the heat of the day. For an hour or so after 1:30 p. m. housewives are usually napping, he says. Besides, they don't like to open the doors — lets in too much hot air... of two kinds," he explains.

Tribune, Matador, Matley County, Texas, Thursday, July 15, 1954

Sue Stevens, 7, recently tried to persuade her mother to don a bathing suit for a dip in the pool with the rest of the family. Helen, who has been wearing Page Boy suits for several months, refused on the grounds that she wouldn't look very good in a swim suit. "Well, you'd look as good as daddy," was Sue's reply.

Comes now an ad glamorizing the squaw dress by referring to it as "Pocahontas" dress.

During World War II, when the Army maintained an air base at Childress, the Boone Simpsons entertained a number of the air force boys who were training there, at their ranch at Northfield. Many humorous incidents are recounted by Boone, about the boys, most of whom were from Brooklyn and other points north.

One of the boys thought Boone was "pulling his leg" one day in Childress when he remembered he had to go by the feed house and buy some shorts for his boys.

The wife of another lived at Childress while her husband was in training, and visited at the Simpsons ranch too. She was intrigued with the windmill, and watched it closely for some time before asking how the blades could take the wind and transform it into the stream of water that ran out the pipe at the bottom of the stand.

One soldier declared he had never set foot on earth, until he was enlisted in the air force and sent to camp for training. His entire life until then had been spent in apartments, and on city pavement.

Notice Bill Seale's trim figure since he had his tonsils out lately, and started golf "exercising" Finnie says after he lost 25 pounds, he bought himself a new suit to wear to his class reunion at Vernon recently, so's he could dazzle all his old girl friends.

Incidentally, Finnie doesn't have to go to much trouble to be a dazler herself. We heard her described once as being so good looking it made your teeth hurt, though the person saying so wears dentures, we happen to know.

Memorial Cited As Constant Reminder Of Sacrifices Made By 7 Flomol War Heroes

It is our hope that this memorial we are dedicating today will serve as a constant reminder of the sacrifices that have been made in order that we may continue to live in freedom. Major Roy Amick of Dayton, Ohio, was a deep reverence in the Sunday, July 4th, as a memorial service was held to dedicate the seven former students of Flomol school who gave their lives in the service of their country.

Major Amick, a graduate of Flomol High School and decorated veteran of World War II, gave an impressive address in an emotional ceremony Sunday morning which concluded the day's homecoming of former teachers and students.

The text of his address is as follows:

Queen Frances, Mr. President, ex-teachers, ex-students and friends:

It is a great pleasure to be here in Flomol and to join in the reunion of former teachers and students of the Flomol school, and I am highly pleased to honor and privilege of dedicating a fitting memorial to perpetuate the memory of those former students, classmates and friends of ours, who during the last World War, in the line of our way of life, were called upon to make the supreme sacrifice.

You, who have given of your money, and efforts to make this memorial a reality, are to be commended for this work.

We here in the United States are prone to forget the personal sacrifices that have been made in defense of our way of life. By our inheritance we are an aggressor nation, we do not strive by military might to force our will upon people of the world. We will expend all means to keep the peace. However, when all other means of maintaining peace are expended and we are drawn into armed conflict, no other nation under the sun can muster greater support, morally and materially, from its people than this great nation of ours. Our every effort is pointed to one goal—that is to overcome the enemy and return to the established pattern of individual pursuit of life and happiness. It sometimes appears that we may be overly anxious to return to what we consider our normal pattern of living. It is only natural that we want to forget all that is horrible and burdensome, but by ruthlessly pressing these from our conscious mind, we sometimes tend to forget those who bore the brunt of the conflict, and by forgetting—we fail them.

"How many of us ever give serious thought to what we owe these seven men and countless others, who by their very life's blood have made it possible for us to continue our lives in the freedom we cherish so much? It is these that we must always remember, and hold in a position of honor, for they have given all that we may enjoy the fruits of freedom.

"Your action here in raising this memorial is an outward symbol that there is gratitude in your hearts for the service rendered by these men. It is our hope that this memorial we are dedicating today will serve as a constant reminder of the sacrifices that have been made in order that we may continue to live in freedom, and inspire us and the generations to come to remain

IN TRIBUTE to seven former students of Flomol school who gave their lives in the service of their country, the above bronze plaque was dedicated at an impressive service July 4th. The Sunday morning memorial service concluded the two-day homecoming of former teachers and students of Flomol school. Seven flowers in the vase (foreground) also honored the community's seven heroes. Major Roy Amick of Dayton, Ohio made the dedication address published in this issue of the Tribune. The memorial plaque was arranged in the school gymnasium. Pictures of the honored students surround the plaque.

morally strong so that we may perpetuate our Christian way of life.

"With these thoughts in mind I dedicate this memorial plaque to the memory of the students of the Flomol school who gave their lives in the service of their country:

Pfc. Roy E. Baker

Schools In County Receive $131,470 From State Funds

AUSTIN, Texas, July 15—Matley County school children are among those over the state sharing the most impressive period of Texas Public Education in state history, a compilation of figures from 1949-1953 released in Austin this week shows.

IN APPRECIATION

We wish to take this means of expressing our profound appreciation to all who have donated blood for transfusions for Mrs.

ary and operations. Fifteen thousand more teachers with average salary increases of $1,000 in the last few years took a large percentage.

Shivers also explained that last year school administrations received more money to spend for needed improvements than ever before.

Figures also showed lesser known—but important—uses for funds. These included school buses that pick up children in rural areas and transport them safely to school.

Cafeterias with hot noon lunches, only recently becoming less than a luxury to public schools, received financial help also, figures showed.

Shivers, who called the present school system "the best yet in Texas' bid for better education," said that the picture looked even better for future students.

"With the continuance of this aggressive improvement program, Texas can expect to meet efficiently increasing demands of public education," he said.

MORE MONEY for SCHOOLS

During Governor Allan Shivers' administration more money has been spent for schools than ever before. The result?—better schools, more and higher paid teachers, and better guidance for your children.

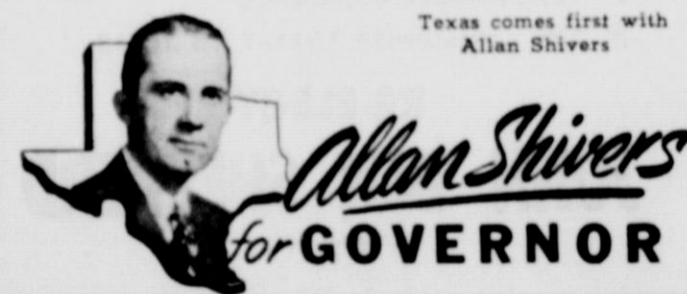

Since Allan Shivers became your governor, school funds have increased from 145 million to 211 million dollars per year. Teachers get $1,000 a year more. Your child receives individual attention from 15,000 more teachers.

This educational climb is your child's guarantee of a profitable and happy future. For you it means assurance about his growing-up years. It means a better Texas for everyone.

Besides her husband, she is survived by her mother, Mrs. Anna Essary of Haskell; 2 sisters: Mrs. Vera Sadler, Haskell and Mrs. Ineta Mayfield, Bet-any, Okla.; 3 brothers: E. V. Essary, Van Nuys, Calif.; I. B. Essary, Quanah, and M. T. Essary, Blunt, South Dakota and one step-daughter, Mrs. Cecil Swin, of Compton, Calif.

SINGING HOE....

The geese pull up all small Colorado grass and leave it in the middle, as if it had been cut with a hoe. They attack tall Johnson grass at the top and cut it down to the ground, seeming to eat some in the process. In places where the soil is loose the geese pull up turfs of Colorado grass the size of a small plate and leave it to die. The happy fowls eat the "goat-heads". No insects have been found in the fields where the geese have worked.
In a few instances the geese nip the cotton, especially around the water wagon, as if they might be appeasing a form of restlessness. The geese which the two farmers secured are approximately eight weeks of age. A few were injured in transit and a few have died.
Hand decided to try geese in his cotton after watching three head which he has owned for several years. They kept the Bermuda grass in his yard "mowed" close and prevented its spreading altho water runs on it continuously.
