A Second Glance

By Leon Watson

Plainview Savings and Loan will soon have a branch office in Matador, according to officials at the home office. The firm has purchased the old gas station at the corner of Main and U.S. 70, on the southeast corner.

The station was purchased from Matador Motor and Implement, and has been empty for many years.

Bill Jameson has the job of fixing the place up for Plainview Savings, and plans to stucco the place.

Hometown girl, Jan Higginbotham, is on television these days. She works for radio station KKYN in the sales department. She appears on three different TV singing and speaking Tillie the Teller commercials for American State Bank, selling the idea for people to use the 24 hour computer teller service. She sings "I'm Tillie the all time Teller."

If you have been watching the value of the American dollar you know that it has been slipping in value both at home and overseas. Some well informed men in Washington say by October 1979 the dollar will be worthless; at which time a new script will be issued to take the dollar's place. Millions of people will be broke and those who owe money will be ruined. Those who owe the government money will have to work for the government to pay off their debt.

The president of OPEC, Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries, said Friday he will propose crude oil sales be pegged to a group of world currencies to prevent further revenue losses caused by the declining dollar.

He did not specify which currencies might be used, but in the past, the West German mark and the Japanese yen, both strong, were suggested.

With a nation as strong as ours there is no sense in having a weak dollar, unless a powerful and evil force, namely the Trilateral Commission, headed by our president and controlled by David Rockefeller, is behind the whole thing.

These same well informed men I speak of say that Rockefeller plans to control the American people by breaking the nation and then fatten his own overfat pocketbook on world markets.

Keep your eye on the dollar, and keep your eyes and ears open. The American people are about to be overthrown from within our own government.

Trail Dust

By DOUGLAS MEADOR

The elastic in our morals can easily be stretched to such a point that it no longer has sufficient strength to support self respect.

Failure has probably befriended as many people as has success, but its quaint method may never become popular.

Old windmills are as actors who remain on the stage after the curtain is drawn and the noisy audience has departed. In various stages of decay they bring a melancholy pageant to the changing scene of the times. Once the conquest of an empire rested on the turning wooden or galvanized wheels. They were close to the home and the prayers of a generation always fearful of thirst.

Livestock beat trails to the troughs of water and food was produced in small gardens below the overflow. Now they stand lonely against the sky, often a silent vane pointing into the wind; twisted and rusting pipe falling against the casing. Dry weeds atiling in the long-empty tank.

Women as a rule take suffrage with about the same amount of enthusiasm as a gambler who has won a girdle in a game of cards.

Peace of mind is not acquired through the solution of all of our problems, but rather in the approach we make to them. A mountain is climbed a step at a time.

Hazel had low putts (12) and a 3-way tie for most putts (17) was between Leona, Mary and Kathy - with Leona winning the draw - even had the best out of 3 draws - and Leona still won each time; SO she REALLY won the ball!

Enjoying lunch at El Matador were Frances, Lindy, Leona, Mary, Mickey, Winifred, Kathy and Hazel.

Loys back from vacation to Colorado and reported she and Joe had fun playing golf at Walsenburg State Park Golf course and at Pagosa - beautiful scenery and weather. They visited with Tim and Sherri Timmons and girls - and also with Randy Hicks and his brother, who have property about 5 miles from the Timmons and are building some cabins there.

TOURNAMENT AT SNYDER

Laverna, Lucretia, Louise and Geneva played in Team Tournament at Snyder Thursday. There were 18 teams (of 4 players each) and they won 3rd place in First Ladies Flight - receiving pottery casseroles. Reported a great time. They visited Finnie Seale and had a tour of her new home, most beautiful.

Your reporter played in tournament at Spur, Wednesday, June 28, and next morning at regular play discovered an iron missing out of her bag. After several calls to Marie Ratliff, who was aided by Minnie Stewart in searching for the missing club on the Spur course and asking everyone about it (with no success) the gals saw Minnie in Snyder and she had the missing club! Your reporter had played with two Tahoka women that day in Spur, and accidentally one of them put said club in her bag. When the South Plains Association met for their regular monthly play, the Tahoka gals brought the club and gave it to Minnie - to get it back to owner - and she took it to Snyder to give to the Matador gals - Thursday - so after a long, round about way - Laverna delivered it home again.

RUIDOSO WEEK END

Red Men charter presented to Cochise Tribe

The original charter for the Improved Order of Red Men, Mohotah Tribe No. 25, which was organized in Plainview in 1908, has been presented to the active Cochise Tribe No. 27 by Mrs. Dale Blakney whose father, the late Elmer R. Anderson, was a charter member.

The Mahotah Tribe was active until 1913 at which time it was deminished. The Cochise Tribe was formed here in 1974 as was the Sandy Creek Pochontas auxiliary.

Mrs. Blakney also presented a transfer of past sachem (highest office) certificate and a transfer card issued by the Great Council of the United States of the Improved Order of Red Men which belonged to her father. A postal employee for 40 years, Anderson later transferred his membership to the Quahah Parker Tribe 26 in Fort Worth.

Other charter members here were C. R. Collins, J. E. Collins, S. A. Morehead, Ray Pettit, J. V. Caver, J. D. Hamby, W. W. Morehead, J. H. Finney, Harry Ferguson, Charles W. Davis, Lee Mitchell, James R. Delav. D.

THE ORDER of Red Men came about as a result of several secret organizations of the Sons of Liberty, among whose leaders were Paul Revere and Samuel Adams, coming together in Philadelphia in 1813 to form one organization called the Society of Red Men. The various tribes organized nationally into the Grand Council of the United States in 1847 at Baltimore, Md.

Prominent Americans who have belonged to the Order of Red Men were George Washington, Thomas Jefferson, Patrick Henry, John Hancock, Theodore Roosevelt, Warren G. Harding, Franklin D. Roosevelt, Revere and Adams.

The degree of Pochontas was adopted by legislation in 1885 at Elmira, N.Y.

Intestinal Parasites Common in Most Dogs

Dog owners always worry about the problem of worms. Dogs may get many intestinal worms, but it is usually one of five intestinal parasites that cause the problems.

Worm symptoms are often confusing because one or more kinds of worms may be present at the same time. Diagnosis of worms is made in the laboratory through examination of a stool specimen (bowel movement) under a microscope. After the diagnosis is made, the appropriate medication may be administered by the veterinarian or dispensed for use at home. The medication varies depending on which worm is present.

"Much consumer advertising implies that the pet owner can handle a dog's worm problems simply by purchasing and administering an over-the-counter medication," explained Dr. Robert L. Fitzpatrick, small animal practitioner in Dallas. "While some of these medications are effective for certain kinds of worms, they are not effective for all the parasites that can affect a dog. The owner may well be wasting his money by attempting to de-worm the dog himself."

Common symptoms of worm infestations are:

1. Tapeworms cause itching in the rectal area and the dog scoots on the grass or floor to relieve the itching. The owner can usually discover if tapeworms are present by examining the stool specimen for tiny, white tapeworm segments which look like a grain of rice.

2. Roundworms are a most common parasite in puppies. The pup appears pot-bellied and the worms cause vomiting and diarrhea. Roundworms are not an emergency situation but merely an indication that the pup should be wormed.

3. Whipworms are small thread-like worms which cause weight loss and bloody diarrhea.

Hookworms are a very common parasite. They attach themselves to the dog's small intestine and suck blood. In young puppies, anemia is often a sign of hookworm disease. Other symptoms are fever and bloody diarrhea.

5. Coccidiosis is a microscopic parasite that destroys the lining of the intestinal tract. Puppies are often affected with diarrhea and dehydration. Good sanitation and antibiotic therapy take care of this pest.

Worm infestations in puppies can become a serious problem," Dr. Fitzpatrick continued. "Symptoms of various worms are quite similar and the correct diagnosis is necessary in order to treat the dog."

In a recent year, nearly 70 million Americans overpaid on their taxes, to the tune of nearly $33 billion.

Many people may find their tax money is going to support private as well as public schools if Congress passes the Tuition Tax Credit Bill. This could increase taxes for people who already find the burden very heavy.

Experts in the Coalition to Save Public Education point out that using tax money to support private schools is a bad idea because it would cost the U.S. Treasury a minimum of $2.5 billion per year in lost revenues.

CRIME SHOULD NOT PAY

WASHINGTON—Texas, traditionally, has not been thought of as a state rampant with criminal activity.

Most of our cities, where crime is usually at its worst, have not yet been ruined by urban decay, and as a result, crime has not been as prevalent nor as all encompassing as it is in so many cities in the north and northeast.

But a report released recently by the Texas Organized Crime Prevention Council indicates that beneath the relative tranquility simmers a dangerous and uneasy element, an element that should give all Texans cause for concern.

The report said organized criminal activity last year cost Texans $3.3 billion. Illegal drug traffic and gambling accounted for much of it, the report said, but prostitution, pornography, motor vehicle theft, arson, cargo theft and fencing stolen merchandise are other problem areas.

In fact, Texans during 1977 had $328 million worth of property stolen from them, the report states, only $177 million of which was recovered.

The figures reflect the climb in crime rates nationwide during the 1970s.

A recent survey showed that half of all Americans are afraid to walk within a mile of their homes after dark.

Other statistics show that during the 1970s, crime has increased eight times as fast as the population; the average burglary nets the burglar at least $500 in goods; crime costs Americans $60 billion a year; and the rate of serious property crime has risen 150 per cent since 1960.

Statistics also show that only one in every fifty burglars serves time for each burglary committed. As a result for many, crime does pay.

Crime has become something that many Americans must contend with daily. It is no longer just a household word; it is a household fear.

Our systems of justice, meanwhile, seem to be making, at best, only nominal headway in coping with this country's growing crime problem.

I have several specific proposals that I believe would bring about the changes that must occur if crime is to be curtailed.

Earlier this summer, the state enacted the Speedy Trial Act which requires that persons come to trial within a certain number of days after they've been indicted. I believe this act is a move in the right direction. With it must come a genuine commitment by the legal profession and the taxpayer, however, to make certain that expeditious and fair trial processes are a vital part of the spirit as well as the letter of the law.

I have proposed that, at the federal level, we enact a mandatory jail sentence for all persons convicted of serious offenses, such as armed robbery, assault and other crimes of violence.

Studies have shown that as the likelihood of punishment increases, the likelihood of criminal activity decreases. If every person considering a serious crime knew that if apprehended, he would face certain punishment, our system would have a built-in deterrent which currently does not exist.

Too many variations exist as well in the sentences that are handed down. Some judges develop reputations for being extremely harsh, while others are known for their leniency. Either extreme is not in the best interests of the rest of the population.

I would never wish to remove the human element from sentencing, but more stringent guidelines for specific crimes instead of the open-ended and informal structure now in existence would be a step in the right direction.

One of the procedures that has done a great deal to ease the burden of overloaded court dockets and overworked prosecutors has been the practice of plea-bargaining. Through this practice, defendants may plead guilty, usually to lesser charges than the ones for which they are indicted, thereby avoiding a costly and timely trial and expediting the legal process.

We all know, however, that there are instances when plea-bargaining is abused, cases in which it works to the advantage of career criminals who have the best legal counsel money can buy.

This should not be the case. Plea-bargaining can be and is an essential tool in our legal system—but the judiciary and legal profession must use it wisely in order to make sure it is not abused.

Another area which needs careful scrutiny is our penal system. Great strides have already been made in Texas in regard to upgrading our prisons, but further advances can and must be made. There must be closer coordination between the legal profession, penologists and public officials in order to make sure that our prisons are curbing the growth of crime, not perpetuating it.

If the steady growth of crime in this country is to be halted, it must be met head-on by a legal system and citizenry determined not to leave a legacy of fear to future generations.

For many criminals these days, crime does pay. Working together, we can, and must, reverse that trend.

Candidate Bill Clements Urges Tax Relief For Texas

Austin — For the second time in recent weeks, gubernatorial candidate Bill Clements has testified before a committee of the Texas Legislature and urged lawmakers to give the people of Texas much-needed tax relief.

Clements testified for more than an hour today before the House Committee on Constitutional Amendments. His opponent, John Hill, has yet to testify before any legislative committee and there publicly endorse the tax relief proposals of Gov. Dolph Briscoe.

In his statement, Clements said, "During the past few months I have traveled extensively, listening to the taxpayers of Texas. Let me assure you, that the citizens of our state believe it would be a mistake for this special session to merely adopt a few cosmetic changes in the law and fail to use this unique opportunity to provide meaningful tax relief."

He also said, "State expenditures have increased by nearly 260 percent in the last ten years, and more specifically, the attorney general's office expenditures have increased 600 percent in five years. For this reason, the taxpayers of our state want their legislators to use this special session to build into our system long-term safeguards to ensure against excessive taxation and excessive government spending in the future."

Specifically, Clements pledged full support for:

(1) Increasing the residential homestead exemption from the current level of $3,000 to $10,000 and an additional $10,000 exemption for people 65 or older to relieve the burden on those who live on fixed incomes and are hardest hit by inflation.

(2) Taxing agricultural land at the lesser of its fair market value or agricultural use value to relieve the growing tax burden of farmers and ranchers near rapidly growing urban areas. And, he said the state should consider replacing to the school districts any revenues lost due to the implementation of agricultural land use valuation and the increasing of the homestead exemption in the next biennium.

(3) A Constitutional amendment that would allow Texans to initiate binding referendums on tax reform. (4) A Constitutional amendment requiring a two-thirds record vote of both Houses of the legislature to enact any new tax bill or increased tax measures.

(5) Requiring a majority vote of the people voting in a locality to initiate any new or additional tax.

(6) Abolishing the state sales tax on residential consumer utility bills which will result in a reduction of about $314,800,000 at the state level and $65,800,000 at the local level.

(7) Increasing the state inheritance tax exemption to the current federal level of $200,000 which will save the taxpayers about $31,600,000.

(8) A Constitutional ban on personal or corporate income tax in Texas.

"The special session will be viewed as incomplete if the Constitutional amendments being considered by this committee are not placed on the Nov. 7 ballot," Clements said. "The people deserve the right to voice their opinion on these measures."

Clements also urged that the legislature explore ways of returning large budget surpluses to the taxpayers by reviewing all existing taxes every two years and by reenacting any if necessary.

"Such limitations force state legislators to face up to hard priority choices: which government services are really essential and which can reasonably be cut back or eliminated," Clements said.

Another alternative for reducing large surpluses, Clements said, would be to cut the state sales tax by 35 percent; or return 25 percent of the state's sales tax to local school districts with the understanding that local property taxes will be substantially reduced.

In his closing remarks to the committee, Clements said, "I believe your agenda has been set by the people of Texas. They have given you a broad mandate to oppose any measure that will ultimately result in higher taxation. My travels around this state have shown me that the people want meaningful tax relief now."

He also said, "Now is the time for the legislature to ensure that Texas' healthy economy is preserved for future generations of Texans."

Bentsen Opposes Oil Entitlements Change

Senator Lloyd Bentsen said recently that a proposal to use the Oil Entitlements Program to increase subsidies for utilities on the East Coast would increase gasoline costs in Texas by some $18 million a year.

Bentsen testified before the Senate Energy and Natural Resources Committee in opposition to a proposal by the Department of Energy that would increase the entitlement subsidy for imported residual fuel oil — used largely to generate electricity along the East Coast — from 30 percent to 100 percent.

The Entitlements Program is a complex mechanism for equalizing the cost to refiners of crude oil. Under the oil price control system, for example, the cheapest domestic crude oil costs as little as $5.50 a barrel while the most expensive imported crude oil costs as much as $14.50 a barrel.

Increasing the entitlement for imported residual fuel oil would increase the cost of products refined in this country, including gasoline.

"Because Texans travel greater than average distances to reach their places of employment and commerce, they stand to be the big losers in this program," Bentsen said in his testimony.

"I am told that in one year alone, Texas gasoline costs could increase by as much as $18 million. The total cost of the increased subsidy will come to as much as $624 million nationwide."

"I simply cannot understand why consumers in one part of the country should be asked to chip in to help pay their neighbors' energy bills, especially when their neighbors' bills are no more costly than their own," Bentsen said.

Bentsen noted that, since 1967, electric utility rates have increased by 72 percent in Boston and 88 percent in Houston. According to the Bureau of Labor Statistics, he said, the retail price index for all energy has gone up by 205 percent in Boston compared to 205 percent in Houston.

"The Entitlements Program has become a Rube Goldberg contraption; one that is troublesome to both the public and private groups that have become entangled in its bureaucratic tentacles," Bentsen said.

"I must strongly object to this effort to use this program to cut East Coast energy bills at the expense of every other region of the country," Senator Bentsen said.

COTTON TALKS

A total of $243,750 was earmarked July 12 for market development, research and other services to High Plains cotton producers during 1978-79.

That's the budget adopted by the Board of Plains Cotton Growers, Inc., Lubbock, representing producers in 25 High Plains counties, for the fiscal year beginning July 1.

In other action the Board elected three new members and re-elected three members to its Executive Committee and discussed a Federal Crop Protection Act proposed by the Carter Administration to replace the current disaster program in 1980.

The new budget exceeds by over $35,000 the $207,500 budget for last year. Most of the increase is allocated to the hiring and support of "supplemental field personnel" to better acquaint PCG members with the organization and its work.

Major PCG expenditures in 1978-79, as in previous years, are anticipated under such headings as Agricultural Research, Fiber Research and Services, Legislative Activities, Publications, Advertising, and Domestic and Export Market Development.

PCG has one elected member on its Executive Committee from each of six districts. Re-elected to represent producers in District 1 (Deaf Smith, Parmer, Castro, Swisher and Briscoe Counties) was W. L. Edelman of Friona.

Lloyd Miller of Morton was re-elected from District 2 (Bailey, Cochran and Hockley), and Frank Jones of Lamesa was returned to the committee from District 6 (Gaines, Dawson, Borden, Martin, Howard and Midland).

New members were chosen from the other three districts. Kenneth Wofford of Lockney was elected from District 3 (Lamb, Hale, Floyd and Motley), replacing Paul Bennett of Littlefield who is no longer on the Board. Representing District 4 (Lubbock, Crosby and Dickens) will be Tommy Fondren, a new Board member in 1978, of Lorenzo. He replaces another former Board member, Jimmie Holder of Lubbock. Newly elected Board member Gerald Caswell of Meadow was elected to represent producers in District 5 (Yoakum, Terry, Lynn and Garza Counties), taking the place of Truett Jones of Brownfield, Jones, who farms in Yoakum County, will continue serving as a Yoakum County director on the PCG Board.

Cline and PCG Board Chairman W. B. Criswell reported on the Administration - proposed Farm Crop Protection Act. Both attended a meeting in Dallas July 10 and 11 where the plan was explained and discussed. Their report revealed that the Administration envisions crop coverage based on a moving USDA-determined cost of production figure, now 52 cents per pound on cotton, and on a 10-year average of actual yields on individual farms. Producers, the Administration says, could choose to cover 50 percent, 70 percent or 90 percent of production costs at progressively higher premiums.

The Board took no official action, pending receipt of further details, but the consensus was that the program as proposed would be grossly inadequate. PCG has a proposition, adopted in 1977 and still in effect, stating its intention to work for an extension of the disaster program if an acceptable alternative is not in operation by the end of 1979.

New Treatment Is Being Tested

A new photochemotherapy treatment for psoriasis is being tested at Texas Tech University School of Medicine. The treatment, combining oral doses of a psoralen drug with exposure to longwave ultraviolet light radiation, is relieving the red skin patches, itching and flaking of the disease for many patients.

The Department of Dermatology is one of several sites across the country testing the PUVA (psoralen-ultraviolet-A) treatment. To date, 86 percent of the TTUSM test patients have shown total clearance of skin symptoms. Clearance was achieved in from 134 to 27 treatments. Half the individuals 43 percent remained clear of symptoms after halting treatment. Half require periodic maintenance treatments to manage flare-ups of symptoms recurring after five to six months.

"The PUVA treatment does not cure psoriasis," said Barbara H. Way, M. D., associate professor and chairperson of dermatology. "The disease cannot be cured by any known treatment. But, for many patients, the treatment seems to offer an effective means of clearance and control of symptoms."

Psoriasis is caused by a rapid production of skin cells. Imperfectly formed cells build up on the skin surface in unsightly red patches which itch and flake off. The red blotches on exposed skin surfaces and the itching can be very distressing to the patient.

The PUVA treatment includes taking a dose of a psoralen drug which makes the skin extra sensitive to ultraviolet longwave radiation (UVA). After taking the drug, patients expose their total skin surface to ultraviolet light radiation. An array of 48 special fluorescent light tubes mounted in a cabinet about the size of a shower stall provides the light. Drug dosage and exposure time are regulated for the individual patient until the desired results are achieved.

During exposure, the patient wears protective goggles to prevent possible eye damage. For several hours after the treatment, the patient must wear protective clothing and glasses to prevent harm from exposure to natural sunlight.

Traditional treatments for psoriasis include regimens of colloid baths, coal tar creams, corticosteroid creams and exposure to ultraviolet light. "The PUVA treatment can provide relief for many patients," said Way. "But it is not the answer for everyone."

The saxophone was invented by 19th century Belgian instrument maker Adolphe Sax.

Some people do not respond to the treatment. Others may have additional medical problems which make the treatment inadvisable.

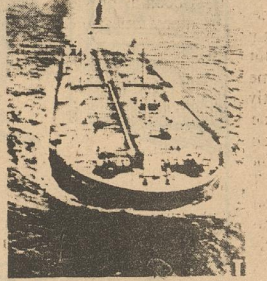

Patients used for the test all are volunteers with involvement of 30 percent or more of the skin. Each patient is screened medically before beginning the treatment, and periodic tests are made on the patient's condition during the series.

"Our results have been encouraging, at least on the first group of test patients," Way said. "Our findings appear to be consistent with those of other centers testing the PUVA treatment."

The PUVA program at TTUSM is conducted by Way in collaboration with Bruce A. Bartholomew, M.D., and David M. Mills, M.D., of the department of medicine.

FACTS & FIGURES

Cars aren't the only vehicles that save fuel by going at lower speeds. A very large crude carrier (VLC) used to transport oil saves 75 metric tons (20,000 gallons) of fuel a day when cruising at 10 knots instead of the speed of 16.5 knots.

Ships at sea also save fuel by plugging the best combination of favorable currents and weather. Experts at the Center for Environmental and Estuarine Science estimate that their VLCs could use 40,000 tons of fuel a year at the speed. So each percentage point improvement in efficiency means 4,000 or 127,100 gallons saved per ship per year. Through such fuel saving procedures, the Center saving about 75 million gallons of bunker fuel a year. Every VLC in its fleet.

County Agent
Pallmeyer Says

Often I am asked about cross pollination between vegetables, and here is the best information that I can provide on the subject. Normally this arises about cucumbers planted next to melons or squash.

Cross pollination is the transfer of pollen from one flower to another flower on the same or different plant. Opposed to cross pollination is self pollination where the pollen of the flower is used to accomplish pollination of the same flower. All beans, peas and tomatoes are self pollinated by wind, and melons, squash, cucumbers and pumpkins are cross pollinated by insects.

In the case of lima beans, Southern peas and corn, it is the seed that we eat, with the shell or covering removed. With melons and winter squash, we eat the shell or covering and discard the seed. With cucumbers and summer squash, we eat the shell and immature seed. The shell is actually part of the plant and is not influenced by the source of pollen. To compare this to cattle breeding, when you breed an Angus bull and a Hereford cow, you get a crossbred calf, but this doesn't change the bull or cow.

With vegetables, the Southern pea and lima bean are not very closely related and probably will not cross pollinate even if they were not in the self pollinating group, and in addition the lima bean pod is the same as the cow which isn't affected by cross pollination.

Squash, melons and pumpkins are a large group in which some cross pollination can take place, with watermelons only distantly related to the others and will not cross pollinate even if they were not in the self pollinating group. Summer squash are all very closely related and do cross pollinate, as do some of the winter squash and pumpkins, but the only concern is to the seedmen, or those who keep seed to plant next year.

Cucumbers are closely related to cantaloupe, but do not naturally cross pollinate.

Boys and girls who plan to show steers in the Motley County Jr. Livestock Show in 1979 are reminded that now is the time to start locating the animals. It won't be long before deliveries start, so to obtain the best animals available, find them before they are gone.

Marvels Of The Caucasus And Central Asia

Once you have visited Moscow and Leningrad, are you finished with the marvels of the Soviet Union? Not by a long shot.

A look at the three republics of the Caucasus—Armenia, Georgia and Azerbaijan, which lie between the Black and Caspian Seas—makes it clear that they're in the running for a traveler's time. Armenia has been called an open-air museum, with countless relics of pagan temples, ruins of fortresses, cave monasteries and castles astride mountain tops.

Or, take Tbilisi, the capital of Soviet Georgia. Rich collections of jewels found in excavated tombs can be seen in museums, and Mt. Mtskhinda towers over the town, offering a cool spot in summer and breathtaking scenery all year round. And there must be something very special about Azerbaijan—because it holds the world record for average life span, 72 years!

Across the Caspian Sea is one of the largest Soviet republics, Kazakhstan, and its capital Alma-Ata is a good center for touring the countryside, with its splendid forests, breathtaking gorges—and a mysterious vanished lake. If you go south, you come to Kirghizia, whose capital, Frunze, lies amid the blossoming orchards and vineyards of Chu Valley, looking like an emerald carpet because of the 250,000 trees planted there each year. Its with splendiferous ruins that span the ages. So is Bukhara, a museum-like city with a monumental fortress at its heart, which has escaped the passage of time, protected by the desert that surrounds it. It boasts five hotels for sightseers and those shopping for its famous silk fabrics and embroideries and the world's best karakul.
