The Federal government, through the Resettlement Administration, doing some splendid work in this territory in the way of making loans to farmers who otherwise are not able to secure such relief.

The local office, located in the City Hall, over which P. L. Payne, is farm supervisor, and Mrs. Mary Watson Jones, Home Supervisor, received in one day recently 24 checks, totaling $12,700, for approved loans for farmers.

According to Mrs. Jones, the local staff are working night and day to keep up with the work that is required of them in the making of these loans.

Mrs. Jones is a Home Economics graduate, and one of her duties is to visit homes for the purpose of supervising and helping the housewives in the budgeting, home planning, gardening, etc. The purpose of the resettlement office is to get the farmers resettled on the land, making them loans when they are unable to secure such assistance elsewhere.

"Come quick, Charlton," said Macduff, "Joan Foster is dead. She jumped into the pool. It was drained, for landing tomorrow."

For once in his life, words tumbled the impersonal glare of his spectacles. Dick went white and caught at his arm. Without a word he followed Macduff across the corridor and passed from brilliant light into the darkness of the pool, Briefly he hung over the edge, then covered his face with his hand. Macduff stretched out an arm and gripped him round the shoulders.

"It's all right, old man," he said, realizing that the girl had meant something in Charlton's life. "It would have been hell for her, had she lived."

"She came to my room tonight. I shut the door in her face." The words were squeezed through Dick's closed teeth. He pulled himself together. He was the chief officer. "I must report at once to Captain Baring," he said, automatically.

Once more Dick looked at Joan, whose pale body was moving softly with the rise and fall of the boat. Her rhinestones shone like cat's eyes through the green gloom. A dark trickle spread over the tiles.

Macduff went down to his cabin, which was as austere as when he had sailed. He had spurned the spears of

His hand plucked nervously at his companion's coat. Their glances were telling their story, but nobody cared, Angela was there—cool, composed, in a black tailored costume and a small black over to the wall. The throbbing hat, with a fur around her shoulders. Her face was drained of color. As usual, she had dreamed through thin, pale hands clutching at the water. It dawned on Macduff that none of them knew about Joan, not even Angela. He moved over to-

"Not really?" "Yes, really."

They stood close together and watched the buildings swimming into view-tall grey spires, glittering through the morning haze, like a gi-gantic fresco flung against the sky. Angela could imagine thousands of people going to work, typewriters clicking behind the myriad panes of glass, and captains of industry out on their daily tasks.

"An exciting city!" she exclaimed. "Yes, if you get what you want in it," Macduff conceded.

"I shall feel quite dull when I get back to my tulips and roses, knowing that, all over the world, Japanese and Chinese and Filipinos and Hindu are doing these strange things we have seen them at, with everyone grasping for a little bit of happiness near at hand. And in America the great panacea is work, isn't it?"

"One simply has to work in New York or perish of boredom and disapproval," Macduff observed.

Angela's thoughts were centered on Macduff, who was looking pro-

In preparation for putting the program into effect the Extension Service staff spent two days studying the plan for the Southern Region as explained by R. H. Rogers, senior agricultural economist from the planning division of the AAA who flew here in company with A. L. Smith, former chairman of the Texas Cotton Allotment Board, Smith has been in Washington for the past two weeks helping to work out details of the new program as they affect Texas and the other Southern

Following the conference at College Station, Extension agents in the counties will be called together in group meetings at convenient points in their districts and district agents will lay the general plans for organization and soil conservation before them to take back to their farmers.

At meetings in the counties the county agricultural agents will explain the terms of the Act and the proposed organization to be set up under it. Election of committees of farmers to administer the work will be the nert step.

The organization will begin with "community" committee of three members who will represent approximately 500 farmers. Committeemen from all communities will constitute a county board from which a county committee will be elected to have special responsibility for administering the Act in the county.

"Every farmer in Texas will have an opportunity to hear the Act explained and to cooperate in making the new farm program a success," Shelton stated. "It is their program, it was passed by Congress at their urgent demand, we believe that they will want to understand it very fully and that they will want everybody else to understand it too, because the old saying that "what you are not up on, you are apt to be down on is still true."

Shelton further emphasized the fact that the old program and the organization that went with it are completely out; that this is an entirely new set-up; that it is a soil conservation and soil building pro- candidate for re-election.

"The blowing sand in the air right now and the floods which have made thousands of people homeless in cities and towns as well as on Base figures used in the 1935 AAA farms give a rather dreadful emphaprogram, but better late than never, I think we will all agree."

SLIM-FITTING SLIP

Pattern 8505: Slim and well-made foundation garments are a necessity to every woman whatever her age or size, but the large woman particularly needs to have her lingerie smooth and form-fitting so that the chic appearance of her gowns will not be marred by "bunchy" undergarments.

The clever and modish slip shown in the sketch is so well designed and sensible that it will appeal to every woman. The built-up shoulder, for instance, is extremely comfortable (the straps never fall off). The moderate V of the neckline makes it possible to wear under most any frock except the backless evening frock. It is form-fitted by means of bust and waist darts and the skirt has sufficient width for comfortable walking Beautiful cut flowers and plants decorated the entertaining rooms, Pink candles in green holders were used in the lighting, and an array of Easter flowers formed the base of the punch bowl, over which Miss Eva Gertrude Chisholm and Miss Eddythe Walker presided. Favors were Easter bunnies.

Misses Ruth Wells, Dorothy Hungate, Nettie Belle Batton and Dora Belle Smith assisted in the serving. The program included an Easter reading by little LaRue Clark, piano solo by Miss Laura Virginia Bills; two quartettes by Misses Ruth Wells, Dorothy Hungate, Nettie Belle Batton and Dora Belle Smith; and two readings by Miss Maxine Cash.

Letter to the Women of Lamb County-

Littlefield, Texas, April 2, 1936

Dear Patrons:

For the first time you are offered a permanent wave given completely by a new scientific method of permanent

If you have that undesirable BABY FINE and FLIMSY hair, now you can have a tight permanent wave as others who have a beautiful texture of hair. The fine and flimsy hair is made coarser and firmer by this scientific principle by building up the condition of each hair in one permanent wave.

If your hair is subnormal by the lack of daily care, inferior permanents, excessive bleaching, improper dying and tinting, excessive exposure to sun, improper shampooing, and abnormal physical conditions, you need not fear this new scientific method of permanent waving—YOUR HAIR will take a nice TIGHT, yet soft wave as if it were perfectly normal hair.

Come in and let us explain to you in full detail this new method—It makes GOOD PERMANENTS BETTER! Yours truly, were stiff with cold. "Yes, my dear, at once? Now leave me before I burst into tears. I shall see you some time in England."

Macduff caught and held her hand. He raised it slowly to his chest and his eyes burned into hers,

"Angela," he said, "I-well, goodbye!" he snapped, and turned his back on her.

The gangplank was down. He walked across it in time to see Johnny embraced by his father, and to hear him say: "Dad, this is Patty, your future daughter-in-law." · He and Patty's piquant face turned up the to him, sweet and eager.

"Good-bye, Mr. Macduff," Johnny

49-5tp duff responded, cursing as he made ed bruises. his way to the letter M in the customs shed. Halfway down the wharf he noticed Dick, talking ardently to a girl in powder blue. She was handing him a card with an address, while she devoured him with her eyes. He remembered now that it had been like this at every port, always a girl waiting for Dickexcept at Bombay, where he had devoted himself so disastrously to Miss Mudge.

Angela would be across the docks and on her other boat now, finding ped with 2-row lister, planter and her way to a new stateroom. He felt like driving back to see her again, to tell her some of the things that were welling up within him. Better not to see her again, better to see her some time later in England, wait for her life to straighten hogs, Milk cows, head and bundle out. He wished that he could help her over the difficult bit that was ters, 1 and 2-row cultivators and coming. She looked so calm when used tractors. E. B. LUCE, Am- he left her on the beat, the only 52-2tp woman he had ever known who was clever enough to accept a crushing blow without showing her distress.

He did not like being at home. He had nowhere to sit, and even his bookshelves looked unfriendly. He glanced over the titles and came to rest on one of his own books. That made him think of his typewriter, which was still in its dusty corner among his papers, safe from Susan-nah's cleaning. She did not dare to touch his papers. He opened it up and started to type, but his fingers were stiff from lack of practice. There was nothing to write. His mind was a blank. The bloody flatness of everything! His thoughts went round in circles - the boat, Angela, cherry blossoms, the mists of Darjeeling, the elephants Kandy, Johnny and Patty, Jenny squeeling her way into the China Sea, Joan crushed at the buttom of the tank, Angela, Angela! He cov-ered his face with his hands to ward off the spectres that haunted him now. Macduff was stung at last to suffering; alive as he had never been alive before. This, then, was the way that Angela had felt about Lovat, and Jenny about Rumford, and

Joan about Dick. It was easier to understand things now ... In desperation he went to the win-

John Witt Hendrix, Pastor

The church swings wide its door next Sabbath day with its offer of life, of opportunity, of privilege. It is the very gate to Heaven, It offers Christ the only to peace of soul, either here or hereafter.

It offers to teach you and your child the word of God next Sunday by teachers who have been asked to teach and are making ready now for that service. It offers two hours of public worship and rich fellowship, among the best people of the town, Some may be faulty but it holds true that among them who attend are the best of the community. The choir will offer you their very best and the pastor will lay himself out to give you his best. "Spiritual Erosion," will be the subject of the morning service, 11

"Public Question Number One," will be the subject of the evening

In these sermons you might make some big discovery, one which might change, make different, your whole life, who can tell? Thousands, ye millions, have found a new life at her altars. You might be next, who knows? It offers a Heaven for the youth of this age in the services, in their own service in the evening

TO YOU IT OFFERS IT'S BEST!

CHURCH SERVICES AT RITZ Evangelist Jno. R. Denning

Were you there last Sunday? If you were, we feel you will be back again. If you were not, come next Sunday night and enjoy the good singing and the old-time Gospel

In the after service Sunday night another young husband was gloriously saved. If you love God and lost souls and hate sin, then come and join in this battle against evil in all places, both high and low.

You have heard many sermons on the "White Throne Judgment". Next Sunday night, we shall let the Scriptures answer the question "Will Every Soul Be Judged Before the Great White Throne?" Services begin at eight o'clock. Come early for a good seat.

Next Tuesday at 2:30 p. m. the Ladies' Bible Class meets at the home of Mrs. Ralph Green,

The Gospel Crusaders will broadcast over KFYO at their usual hour, from one to two o'clock. Listen in and worship with us.

"Wife Vs. Secretary" To Be Presented At Palace Saturday

From time to time, a few of Hollywood's stars have been caught skating on "thin ice"-but not Clark Gable and Jean Harlow.

They have skated on "hot ice!" The "hot ice" provides the glistening and slippery floor of the largest and most perfect ice-skating rink ever constructed for a motion picture production.

The rink was a replica of New York's "Ice Palace" and provides the setting for several important sequences in Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer's "Wife Versus Secretary," opening Saturday midnight at the Palace Theatre and continuing through Sunday and Monday with Clark Gable, Jean Harlow and Myrna Loy.

And, strange as it seems, the surface of the rink was made of "hypo," the same chemical solution used in the developing of photographs.

The floor of the rink covered 6000 square feet, requiring 18 tons of "hypo." As explained by Arthur R. Maas, president of the chemica company that built the rink.
