That the Wheeler Board of City Development has completed its organization and is now a cohesive group, ready to consider such problems as may properly come within its scope and to work for the aims heretofore enunciated, is now an accomplished

As a preliminary gesture to bring together not only the present membership, but all interested parties, arrangements have been made for a banquet and "get-together" meeting at the Lewis Cafe on Thursday night, May 10. A committee in charge of the affair hopes to contact every citizen of Wheeler who can possibly attend and urge his or her presence at this meeting.

An informal program, subject to revision to suit the occasion, is contemplated. A modest cover charge will prevail.

At a meeting of the officers and directors, held Monday night in the city hall, detailed matters were presented and disposed of.

The session was called to order by President Brazil, and R. H. Forrester was chosen chairman of the board. Other officers present were Glen Porter, C. G. Miller and C. R. Weath-

He was instructed to submit a detailed statement of finances on or before the 10th of each month, the information to be available to all members. The statement will also appear in The Times.

LOCAL PARTIES GROW MANY VEGETABLE PLANTS

With the exception of close friends or those who have accidentally learned the facts, it's a safe bet that few Wheeler people know of the huge volume of vegetable plants grown and distributed by Mr. and Mrs. Julius Carter, who reside in the northeast part of town.

The Carters have lived in Wheeler since 1906, and for the past 12 years have devoted much time and labor to their plant industry. Considerable study has been made of the subject in an effort to produce a better proand gardeners throughout Wheeler county and nearby territory; they also ship large quantities of plants, some going as far away as Arizona.

The hot beds, cold frames and growing spaces in the Carter grounds are systematically arranged and well cared for, every effort being made to produce quality plants free from diseases or other defects.

LET'S CLEAN UP

Right now Spring is in the air, and nature, in her annual awakening, is doing, her utmost to beautify this old world of ours. A little help on our part would not be amiss.

In the Winter many things are ne glected. Vacant lots, yards and even streets become unsightly. Now is the time for a thorough spring cleaning, in the interest of better health, safety and improved appearance,

Such a clean-up campaign is splendid activity for civic clubs, chambers of commerce or Boy Scouts to sponsor. One of them will have to assume the leadership in order to start the ball rolling, then obtain the co-operation of others. Streets and parkings should be cleaned. Vacant lots, cleared of rubbish, can be made into healthful play-grounds, parks or gardens. Not the least important phase of this work is the jobs it provides.

When a movement to clean-up paint-up and beautify sweeps through a community, it leaves in is wake a healthier, safer and more sanitary town than it found. From the angle of fire safety alone, it is worthwhile In this connection it is interesting to note that the National Board of Fire Underwriters reported that during the year 1932, rubbish and litter caused a fire loss of almost $1,200, 000 throughout the United States Let's beautify our communities save that money this year.

Clothing Girls Get State Honors

Last Wednesday morning at fifteen until three, the two girls and their sponsors left for Austin where they were to enter in the state clothing convention. Ruth Dill entered a tailored costume and Orveta Puett modeled a school dress. Enroute to Childress to meet a group of other schools that were sending representatives, they got into a rain storm just south of Shamrock. They brought Mrs. J. L. Gilmore a fine vase and some flowers because she was so nice to help with the Operetta. At Temple, the bus broke down and the travelers were way-laid for almost an hour. They passed by Bailor Belton campus and also the Southwest University at Georgetown. Orveta and Ruth were sleeping soundly when all at once Miss Williams woke them up and said, "Girls, look at the dome of the capi The girls gazed and found that they only saw the dome of the of the court house at Georgetown They got to Austin about 11:30 that night and stayed at the Sephen F. Then everyone went to the Hagg Memorial Auditorium and received the prizes that were to be awarded. At two o'clock the girls were Childress bound. The travelers ate supper in Fort Worth that night. About five o'clock Sunday morning, everyone reached Childress safe and sound. Everyone had a splendid trip. The Wheeler girls did not return to night. They spent almost all of Sunday in Childress sleeping as they were very tired after traveling all night As the girls would not tell any jokes on themselves, they cannot be published

Now for a few words about a roung lad that has spent about all of his schooling here at Wheeler. Earl Farris was a member of the track team two years and was captain last season. He also played football two years and basketball one year.

Farris says his hobby is horse back iding in the dark. Wonder why he and "Tuffy" have the same one? Earl is one of the kind that never says much, but at that he would make a good salesman for second hand

Earl's ambition is to travel and he lans to fullfill it when school is out or as he says, "travel 'till I get hunry and then work on the farm."

As his parting words he said, "I ire have enjoyed goin' to high chool. I hope under classmen accomplish more than I have and esperially that they study Spanish harder Can't guess who this is? Yes, she was one of those short girls, about live foot, seven and one-half inches tall, who played forward on the senior girls basketball team this sea-She also was a member of the olley ball squad and was a good layer on both the teams. She served as secretary for the B. B. girls and at times had a rather hard job. She thinks that her hobby is reading and wing, although she likes to ride rse back and "Going Places," but work she says that she turns a ld shoulder. But you see she is ly kidding, because this is one girl sho ain't afraid of work and she is lso a good sport. Yes, she has a eller and a temper, but her boy ost her temper.) She belongs to the debating team that won third in th district this year, and is one of the haracters in the next senior play Some call her "Holley May Willie ough," but ner real name is Willie Mae Hollabaugh. Now we knew that you couldn't guess who it was so we had to tell you. As soon as school is out she plans to go to Shamrock and take a beauty course, but she says by the time that this gets to the paper she may have changed her

"My hobby is going to Mobeetie, says Inez (Tuffy) Shipman. She is probably the only senior with such an ambition, although a saner hobby of hers is horse back riding.

"Tuffy" has spent one year of high school at Chicota, one at Mobeetie, and the remaining two at

She doesn't have "sech" a thing as ambition and adnits she received the biggest thrill this year when the seniors went to Carlsbad. Inez plans to go to C. I. A., but if she don't get to go there she'll probably cook biscuits for a living.

"Tuffy" is a member of the pep squad, also a member of the Spanish and Home Economics clubs. She has played two years of basketball, one at Mobeetie and one at Wheeler, and has played two years of volley.

Asked for a last statement, "Tuffy" said she has had the biggest time this year in school than she has ever had

"Yep", he's the corn fed boy from Missouri and his name is John Ficke. He has blue eyes and blond hair. He likes to play football, although this was his first year he was one of the main string men most of the games. He regrets that where he went to school they did not play football so he could have played more because he really likes the game. He played in the first game that he saw, and of course he did not see much. He attended all the basketball games In spite of the rain Tuesday night, and was a loyal booster. He likes to May 1, there were several present at attend movies at all times and tease the teachers if possible. He played Teachers Association at the Legion the part of a woman in the first sen-Hall. A total of $5.25 was made. The lor play given this year. This senior woman winning high score was Mrs. is chairman of the entertainment committee and has done a good job.

This is the second term that John has gone to school in W. H. S. and and angel food cake were served to as yet he hasn't acquired any nick-Jonell Crowder, Geraldine Deering, Mrs. Roy Badley, Mr. and Mrs. H. M. ambition at present is to number names. He "sez" that his greatest of the newspaper to him is the comic section and he gets rather peeved (he plays like) when the Current Bessie Mae Ficke came back to Event test does not ask about Dick Tracy and some of the other well known comic stars. Yes, he's witty, plays a great part in the senior class and is always teasing someone.

John plans to enter Amarillo Business College some time this summer. He played the part of the squire in the one act play for the county meet.

I'll take your advice. I am a little She rose and entered the deep house, a cool place, its walls laid up of flat stones chinked with adobe mud, its bare floors bright with Indian rugs. Sonya Savarin loved her brother's house, his wife, his child, and himself best of all. For five years she had lived with them in this lone land of cactus, sand, and sunlight, and it seemed as if a hand tugged at her heart whenever she thought of leaving them. She had thought of that gravely the last year. Of New York and Rodney Blake and all they stood for-convention and affluence and what the world called life. It had been a year, on the nineteenth of next month, since she had promised to marry him. Rod was the soul of gallantry and had made three trips to Arizona in that time, always urging her to come away with him, to give up her work, and always she had put him off a little longer. Not that she wasn't fond of him. Who could fail to be fond of him with his good looks, his smiling good-nature? And he was Serge's closest friend. Dated from college days. But how could she give up her work here among the people whom she had learned to love and who needed her and her skill so badly? Wasting herself, Rod said. If she must practice medicine, why not do it where the results were valuable, among folks who counted, where she could make a career for herself in her chosen field?

These thoughts passed through her mind as she divested herself of her dusty riding clothes and bathed in the low pool in one corner of her room where the living waters of the spring ran softly through and out under the wall in a pipe. A treasure, this indoor pool. A blessing it would be hard to leave, along with Darkness, her horse, and Lila and little Babs.

Yet she had come near as a breath to leaving them three hours back and had not given them a thought. There had been no thought in her when she flung her body out of the arms of the man who held her and over the edge of Lone Mesa-only the age-old terror

The Man, the Tall, Lean Vandal of Saddle and Spur, Who Had Ridden Her Down to the Mesa's

She had essayed death as instinctively as she drew her breath, and had done it on the instant. The man, the tall, lean vandal of saddle and spur, who had ridden her down to the mesa's edge and lifted her bodily from Darkness' back, came back in her vision, as he had come again and again on the ride home, in the patio with Rod. She could see the long blue eyes of him, wild with inner fire under their sleepy look. They had large pupils under their bronze-colored lashes, and they were fierce and cruel, swift eyes that could change in a second from one vital expression to another.

She had seen them change, instantly, when she looked up after the sliding fall over the rim, the jolting catch of her clutching hands in the pinon roots. From that promising, sleepy wildness to wide shock. Had seen them literally sober themselves from half-drunken dementia to anguished sanity. Strange eyes. Beautiful, even in their beastlike cruelty. There had been no mercy for her in them. A wave of the cold terror of that moment went over her, followed instantly by a burning flush of anger.

"I'll take my pound of flesh from him for this," she told herself through tight lips, "if it takes me the rest of my natural life. If a free citizen of this country can't ride in safety I'll know the reason why."

Then she finished dressing and went out to where Lila, dark Serge's longhaired, golden wife, put the finishing touches on the table for the evening meal. They were a striking foil for each other, Sonya and her sister-inlaw, one so tall and dark and vital, full-lipped, full of brow above her dusky eyes, sinuous in her movements, the other small and fragile as a flower, a fair thing to look at, to know. They were close as a hand in its glove, these

A tight conspiracy against the crown, Serge sometimes told them smilingly, meaning himself. But it was a conspiracy of love and loyalty and that dear service which only love engenders, and he knew it. It had served him well, for things had not been too easy on the ranch in the sagebrush country where Serge Savarin ran his flocks of sheep, and women can hold up the hands of men when the waters of circumstance become too deep. These two had waded with him, leaning in against his shoulders. Frail Lila had carried his child, too, and Sonya had stood by at its deliverance. That had been three years back, and he knew in his heart that if it hadn't been for their strong courage he'd have given up. But he had been ashamed to quit, and times were better now. The flocks had become herds. He had Indians with them in camps all over the sage.

"Hello, Sonya," said Lila, "How's Two Fingers' wife?"

"Bad," said Sonya. "I'm afraid I'm going to lose her. She's a sweet thing, too, pretty and young. Two babies. The patience of these Indians is pathetic. She whispered to me that if she had to go away, why sorrow? It was the common lot."

"Poor creature," said Lila her eyes filling. "What more can you do, dear?" "Only a very little more. I'm going back early tomorrow and stay with her till the crisis passes." "If she dies," said Lila, "what will become of the bables?"

"Two Fingers has a sister over in Long Ruins. Maybe she'd take them. I'd hate to see them go into the school. They're so little and so wild-like baby quail. They need a woman's love, not a routine."

Lila sighed and looked at Babs through the open door.

"This world is hard on children—and women," she said, "and only a man's true love redeems it."

"And here comes one of the crusaders now," said Sonya nodding her black head toward the northern sage. "Serge."

A pink flush spread quickly up under Lila's fair skin. Her blue eyes crinkled at the corners. Always the sound of her husband's coming brought this phenomenon of joy to sight upon her face.

A little later he came in from the back patio, scrubbed and shining, his riding clothes brushed free of the day's sand and dust, his dark face burned by sun and wind.

A handsome man was Serge Savarin, taller than Sonya, showing his Russian blood in the bold contours of his face, the fire in his black eyes, the slowness of his movements.

He kissed Lila with a long kiss, smiled at Sonya. "Whew!" he said. "Sure is good to get home." Rodney Blake came in, his hands in the pockets of his plus-fours. "This is the darnedest family," he complained, grinning. "Here am I, a guest under its roof, and I've twiddled my thumbs all day waiting for it to see I'm around." "Now, Rod!" said Lila, "is that nice? Haven't Babs and I paid you all the attention possible?"

"Babs! The young autocrat! She's slept most of the time and ignored me the rest. You've done pretty well, Lila, considering the thousand things you've done today about the house, but as for these others, well, I know I should be highly affronted by their indifference. Some day I'm going to be, no kidding."

"Yeah, like h-l you will," said "Come here, Babs, and sit on daddy's lap for supper."

It was a pleasant meal that followed, and later the small group sat in the big patio watching the twilight march across the mysterious land in unspeakable beauty.

Sonya, resting her head against the long chair's back, sighed in sheer ecstasy of appreciation.

"Tired, dear?" asked Rod tenderly. Sonya moved and looked at him. "Tired? Why, no, I'm not tired now," she said.

"Then why the sigh?" "Oh, I don't know. Just-just drinking in- all this, I guess." She waved her hands apart, and the gesture compassed the whole lone country with simple eloquence. The man, smoking, watched her with speculative eyes in which there was a glint of hardness. This country and its problems-they menaced his hope, with a deep and abiding batred.

Serge was talking about the bands of his sheep on Rad Land Levels, and Lila was asking this and that question at intervals, and presently Sonya, watching the great stars come out upon the blue beavens, lost the purport of their words. She was thinking of the woman in the lowly hogan beyond Chee wash, and of the dark-faced man who loved her in his silent fashion, and her heart was sad and heavy with her fear

And then, superimposed upon their pathetic tragedy, she saw again the sky beyond Lone Mesa's rim and the wild fair face of a man sobering in bewilderment and anguish. She stirred in her chair, and Rod Blake touched

"Eh?" she said, startled.

Good Citizenship and Law Enforcement, or Duties of a Citizen In Respect to Law Enforcement

Modern life and the duties and responsibilities that go with good citizenship now demand that we pause in our daily work and consider what our obligations are with respect to the LAW as a private citizen.

We appoint and elect our fellow men to attend to our public affairs for us and it seems that we are then prone to think that we have no other duty or responsibility especially as to the enforcement of the law.

It is not incumbent upon us as citizens to make arrests and carry weapons as the pioneer citizen did for self protection but we have other duties which are just as essential toward the well being of our citizenship and our safety as it was formerly essential for the pioneer to arm himself in order to protect himself, his family and property. It is the duty of a good citizen to report violations of the law to the enforcement officers, and when called upon to render aid to them in the execution of legal important duties of a good Citizen in regard to Law Enforcement, as we find that our arresting officers are not hampered so much in this regard as they are in LACK OF ENCOUR-AGEMENT TO PERFORM THOSE DUTIES AND BE DILIGENT IN DOING SO. This can be remedied to a great extent by the citizens doing their part in performing the duties of jurors when selected to try those charged with violations. A citizen, when selected as a juror to try a criminal case, is as much a part of the law enforcing body of this country as any officer whose duty it is to make arrests. This in my opinion is the most important duty of a citizen in respect to law enforcement. The jurors have the FINAL WORD in law enforcement. When the citizens consider seriously what their duties are as jurors and do their duty, then will we truly have law enforce-
