ARMY SHORT OF GASOLINE FOR ITS AIRPLANES

Service Handicapped Because Fails To Make Adequate Provision For Flying Expenses.

By RODNEY DUTCHER (NEA Service Writer.)

WASHINGTON.—While other branches of aviation move forward with seven-league boots, the Army Air Service finds itself almost out of gas.

These days when an army aviator wants practice he often has to fly overhead in circles. He can't fly cross-country to some distant landing field because the army hasn't the fuel to bring him back.

The army has tried hard to keep its reserve corps pilots in trim, but the gasoline shortage has limited them to four hours a month in the air, which is the standpoint of efficiency, is not enough. The reserve pilots are the ones who have to do most of the circle flying, but even the regular officers have had to curtail the longer flights. The cross-country flying is really the most valuable experience of all, for it allows aviators to land at strange fields, to fly at night and otherwise to pick up more all-around training.

The National Guard birdmen are luckier than either the regular or the reserves, because they are frequently given extra money for gasoline by the state legislatures.

It may or may not be generally known that the army's gas shortage kept its planes out of the joint First Corps Area maneuvers off the New England coast more than a year ago. The original plan was to maneuver the army planes along with the navy and marine planes. But the army didn't have enough gasoline, so its troops maneuvered with none of their own aircraft.

Army officers don't like to talk very loudly about their problem, but the gas shortage is purely a matter of appropriations by Congress and the pruning knife of the Budget Bureau. The air service just gets so much money that can be used for gasoline and it has to worry along on that or take money needed to keep its planes in repair.

The army boys wouldn't be quite as sore about the matter as they are if they didn't feel they were being discriminated against in favor of the navy and the marines.

They have always grumbled privately that the navy, by playing politics and lobbying, was grabbing off the cream and considerable gasoline. Lately they have been especially peeved because of what they consider evidence that the navy is trying to push them out of the coast defense business.

They charge that the navy seems to have adopted a policy of easing itself in on army aviation fields and then trying to nose the army out altogether.

Bankhead Highway Cities and Towns In Counties of Palo Pinto, Eastland and Callahan Adopt Protective Measures

At one of the largest gatherings of representatives of towns along the south loop of the Bankhead highway, ever held in this portion of West Texas, the county judge and commissioners of Palo Pinto county were appointed as a committee to appear before the state highway commission and protest any action that towns along the north branch of the main line of the Bankhead highway might make to get aid from the commission in regard to changing the connection at Winks City.

Representatives of Palo Pinto, Winks City, Strawn, Ranger, Eastland, Cisco and Baird met at the Strawn city hall Wednesday night and the history of the Bankhead highway was gone over and plans made to keep it as it now remains.

Beginning with the stormy session held at Mineral Wells when the Bankhead highway project was in its infancy, the history of the road was traced through the Broadway of America convention at Memphis and up to the present time.

Judge Russell of Baird told how, at the stormiest session ever held in West Texas, Breckenridge was utterly defeated. He told how the representatives "on bended knees" begged for a loop after its official request for the main designation was turned down. This was conceded to Breckenridge, the north loop was constructed and seemingly everyone was satisfied and content to "let things remain as they were."

At the Broadway of America "harmony meeting," held at Cisco prior to the main convention, it was agreed that no town should do anything detrimental to the interest of another town and that if both loops could be designated all would be better for this section of the state.

It was charged that immediately after this meeting the Breckenridge representatives printed a map showing the north loop paved and without curves, while the south loop, or the main highway, was shown to be unpaved in portions and full of dangers double and right hand curves. These maps were placed in all hotel rooms at which the Broadway of America motorcycle members were to stop and were distributed along the

Round-the-World Fliers Due Today To See Australia

By United Press
PORTLAND, Ore., June 8.—Flying steady and true, despite headwinds, the Southern Cross at 6:45 a. m. today, was believed to be within 650 miles of Brisbane, Australia. The Mackay Radio and Telegraph company intercepted a radio message at that hour reading:

"Southern Cross position 24 degrees 2 minutes south; 164 degrees 12 minutes east."
Radio operators estimated that such position would put the Southern Cross less than 650 miles from Brisbane. At 7:05 a. m. P. S. T., the Southern Cross was calling Sydney, Australia, but seemed unable to reach that station.

By United Press
SAN FRANCISCO, June 8.—The radio corporation of America at 9:58 a. m. Pacific Standard time today received a message relayed from Honolulu saying the Southern Cross reported "We now have only 400 miles more to go."

Dog Finds Body of Murdered Baby

By United Press
WICHITA, Kans., June 8.—A week old baby boy, strangled with a strip of cloth torn from a woman's nightgown, its limbs removed at the knee joints, was dragged into the front yard of Fred G. Pietschner this morning by the family bulldog.

The tiny body, further mangled by the sharp hold of the dog when it grasped the lifeless form in his jaws to drag it to the home of the animal's master, was found by Mr. Pietschner. The head was torn badly and just as the dog reached the yard the skull fell to the ground.

Just where the dog dragged the body from is not known, but it is believed by investigators that the mother of the child tied the rag about her baby's neck, dissected the body, placed the strangled child in a box and abandoned the horrible package on the banks of the Arkansas River, which runs within two blocks of the Pietschner home.

Detective Kaness removed the rag from the throat and upon close examination declared he could detect a laundry mark. Every laundry in the city will be checked in an effort to locate the mother.

BANKHEAD CITIES AND TOWNS, ADOPT PROTECTIVE MEASURES

(Continued from Page 1) Due to that violation of the highway agreement, the towns along the main highway automatically nullified any agreement and settlement with the towns along the north branch.

In an effort to stem the tide of ill feeling that was being developed between the towns another meeting was called at Hot Springs, Ark., to settle the matter, but this also proved futile.

When the delegates to the Broadway of America convention reached Memphis they succeeded in getting the main line designated as the Broadway of America while the north loop to State Highway No. 1 and Federal highway No. 80, was omitted in the designation.

It was brought out at the meeting last night that since that time Breckenridge has sent representatives before the highway commission asking them to build an extra mile at Metcalf Gap, thereby making a straight road from Fort Worth to Breckenridge and creating a left hand turn for towns through this section.

The negro Baptist Sunday school and E. Y. P. U. convention of West Texas opened Wednesday morning at Jenkins Chapel Baptist church of Eastland. Opening remarks were by Rev. W. T. Masquerade of Undersized Eggs Halted by Honest-Weight Move

WASHINGTON, June 8.—Modern weights and measures have made the old-fashioned cracker box grocery a thing of the past by laying the basis of chain stores in which nearly every liquid and solid commodity is sold in specially wrapped and weighed cartons.

The National Conference on Weights and Measures has just been learning how this transformation has come about and has heard also how checks are being made all over the Nation to insure accurate measures of gasoline, to prevent inferior sizes of coal being mixed with those ordered by the consumer, and also to stop undersized eggs masquerading as the normal variety.

O. C. Adams, president southern division, the Great Atlantic & Pacific Tea Company, told how his company is now even selling bananas by the pound rather than the bunch. A movement is on foot, he said, to sell other fresh products by weight.

Weights Displacing Measures.—Weights in the sales of groceries are displacing the use of measures as an indicator of quantity and the sale of commodities in sealed packages packed in small units in quantities by machinery has simplified the distribution, eliminated waste, protected the product and saved repairs on counter scales by reducing their use," said Mr. Adams. "We favor extending their use to the sale of butter. Loose liquids are as rare as loose dry commodities."

People of United States Give In One Year $2,219,700,000 To Help Others

NEW YORK, June 8.—Contributions to educational, philanthropic, religious and charitable organizations in the United States during 1927 totaled $2,219,700,000, an amount which exceeded the total year's income of the governments of France or Germany or that of the United States Steel Corporation, according to a survey just made public by the John Price Jones Corporation.

The study shows that 1927 was the fourth successive year in which such gifts have exceeded the $2,000,000,000 mark, and that they were outranked only by the incomes of the United States Government and the British Government, totaling $4,129,394,441 and $3,899,593,967, respectively.

MONEY SHOULD BE PROFIT AFTER SERVICE

A certain manufacturer visited Los Angeles last week, seeking financial assistance for his corporation. To assure investors that their money would be safe and yield dividends, he made the following statement: "We have to fix our profits in advance, or we should not be able to pay our charges. Unless we can calculate on the basis of a certain output and certain profit, we should have to go out of business."

His statement was perfectly frank and sincere, but he was trying to drive the cart before the horse. He is setting out to gain, whether or not, a certain profit, instead of setting out to render tonio and other places.

riage was Miss Ina Lewellen, the youngest daughter of Mr. and Mrs.
M. A. Lewellen of Olden, Texas.

BRITISH MALAYA

While actual business transactions are somewhat curtailed, the outlook is not altogether unfavorable. Fear that some important Chinese firms may be forced to liquidate is causing tight credits, thus restricting legitimate business. Effects of recent events in China are felt to some extent among the Chinese dealers in piece goods. The textile market generally is dull with increase in rubber prices has had little effect on the market as further sharp declines are expected after November first.

PERSONALS

The Elks dance tonight will be one of the outstanding entertainments of the season.

Delightful music will be furnished by Harrison's Texans, a newly organized organization far in advance of the old one. The Blue Devils were unable to leave Dallas at this time. Surprise will await the patrons of the dance this evening in the attractive, white enameled grill work, which will convert the corner where the orchestra is usually stationed, into an attractive recess.

Mrs. Herbert Tanner of Olney returns home today after a four days' visit with Dr. and Mrs. H.
B. Tanner.

Miss Evelyn Taylor will be hostess to the S. A. P. club tomorrow afternoon at 2:30 o'clock in the Lamar Apartments.

Mr. and Mrs. Sam Semple are now located in the residence at Southwest corner of Hill and Bassett streets.

Mrs. A. F. Taylor will present her music students in a recital of unusual beauty Monday night.

Much Water ould Baby Get?

ous Authority's Rule
By Ruth Brittain

Specialists agree nowadays, during the first six months, infants must have three ounces of fluid per pound of body weight daily.
A four-pound baby, for instance,
needs twelve ounces of fluid.
The rule is two ounces of fluid per pound of body weight. The fluid absorbed by a breastfed baby is best determined by weighing before and after feeding for a day; and it is easily calculated. The bottle-fed one. Then make

When A Girl Loves

© 1928 by NEA Service
By DAITH DEWEY GROVES

THIS HAS HAPPENED
honor of his fiancée, Virginia, last, gives a party at his studio in Nathaniel Dann, struggling artist, beautiful daughter of Richard Brewster, Wall Street financier.

Niel's model, Chiri, is jealous of Virginia, and tells him that he will spoil his career if he marries a wealthy girl who cannot appreciate his art.

Virginia's father dies suddenly of heart failure and she is prostrated with grief. The doctor advises that death was caused by worry and shock, and it is later revealed that Brewster had lost his fortune in speculation. Niel urges an immediate marriage but his pleading is interrupted by Frederick, Dean, an old family friend, who persuades Virginia to come and live with him and his daughter, Clarissa, who is a girlhood chum of hers. He wins her over by saying that to marry Niel, now that she is poor, would wreck his career and be disgraceful to her father's memory. Niel is furious when she tells him her decision, for he suspects Dean's motives.

No go on with the story—

They were not to have an uninterrupted evening, however. All day Virginia had been turning away condescending friends, but he arrived and insisted upon staying.

"Dad tells me you've promised to be his at our place until the clouds blow over," she chirped to Virginia, palpably seeking to create an air of cheerfulness, however false. Grief was not sacred to Clarissa.

Nathaniel frowned as he saw Virginia wince.

"Are you sure you won't mind?" she returned doubtfully.

"Why should I?" Clarissa's tone indicated as plain as day that no other person's troubles could interfere with her life.

Nathaniel thought she might at least have made some effort to assure Virginia of a welcome.

"Of course you will have to put up with a lot of noise," Clarissa went on unfeelingly; "Russell and I are about to shout our love from the housetops."

It occurred to him that one of his friends who knew where he kept his door key had been in, entertained himself with coffee and some out, leaving the light burning.

Nathaniel had eaten practically nothing at dinner, unable to enjoy food, while Virginia left her untouched. The sight of the coffee pot stirred an appetite for a cup of the stimulating beverage. He carried the pot to the cuppy-hole that the real estate agent called a kitchen, put fresh water to boil and went into his bedroom for his lounge robe.

He snapped on the light, dug his robe from the closet and turned around to remove his coat. Then, for the first time, he saw that his visitor had not departed.

"I might have known it was you," he scolded, shaking the sleeping girl by the shoulder. She put up a feeble hand, brushed hastily at her eyes, turned her head on the pillow and relaxed into slumber.

Nathaniel noticed that the bed was made, the extra blanket folded neatly at the foot. He glanced back at Chiri. There was a smudge on her unrouged cheek—now and gain nothing by slaving for him. Yet, on the other hand, he appreciated what she had done. Hired cleaning women made so much bother. Still he could not let her spend the night there simply because he was grateful to her. But she had looked so darned tired. It wouldn't be necessary to turn her out until he was ready to retire.

There was a pile of new novels on the table. Nathaniel turned his attention to them. He came to one that promised to absorb his interest and began to read. He read only occasionally, but when he did he liked to finish whatever it happened to be—novel or article.

He read on and on, forgetting both Chiri and time. But he did not reach the end before his lids had drooped many times, finally to settle down firmly in overpowering sleep. The book slid unnoticed to the floor.

He was awakened by the ringing of his telephone. He was half aware that it had been ringing for some time. The instrument was on a small stand near his bedroom door and before he could stir himself to answer it Chiri appeared, took the receiver off the hook and greeted the caller with a lazy

CHAPTER IV.
Virginia continued to stare at Nathaniel as though he had suddenly changed to an entirely different person right before her sight. Jealousy was blazing in his eyes and turning his lips to stone. He frightened Virginia to see him so aroused.

"Mr. Dean only said what I already knew was right," she faltered.

"Then you are going to live with him," Nathaniel asked grimly.

"Don't be so hard, Niel."

"Hard! If I dared be as hard as I feel I'd find Dean and wring his confounded neck. What right has he to interfere between us?"

"He's my oldest friend and he promised father . . ." Virginia's words broke off in a tear-wet handkerchief.

Nathaniel was instantly ashamed of having hurt her.

"Forgive me," he begged; "I'm sorry I lost my temper, but you don't know how much I hate to think of you living in that man's home, seeing him every day, being where he can see you, even touch you."

Virginia looked at her inquiringly. Nathaniel continued to scowl.

"I wanted to drop down to the courthouse and get it over with quickly, but Russell, you know, is a Wainwright through and through. Wants the whole thing, engagement and wedding, done up with candle and bell and handed to the reading public with all the thrills that are printable."

"Good for him," Nathaniel contributed with feeling.

Clarissa surveyed him coolly. "I understand you were an artist—or something," she said insolently. "Surprised to hear anyone of that sort admitting a taste for conventionalities."

"I admire his sticking to his guns," Nathaniel retorted.

Clarissa looked from him to Virginia and smiled knowingly. But she said nothing. She had been exposed to politeness during her bringing up, and there were times when the contact bore fruit.

"Oh, naturally you would agree with him, being a male yourself," she laughed, and began to talk of something else.

Nathaniel was utterly weary of her before the evening was over but she ignored his several hints that he would like to be alone with Virginia. To pay him off for taking sides with her fiancée, he decided. A petty spirit. It troubled him to think of Virginia at the mercy of her shallowness and his weak home was filled with plans for getting Virginia into a home that he would make for her.

When he opened the door of his studio he saw that his reading light was turned on. A cup and saucer stood beside a smoky coffee pot on the teakwood table. He looked around and saw no one. Chiri appeared, took the receiver off the hook and greeted the caller with a lazy "hello"

Virginia looked at her inquiringly. Nathaniel continued to scowl.

"I wanted to drop down to the courthouse and get it over with quickly, but Russell, you know, is a Wainwright through and through. Wants the whole thing, engagement and wedding, done up with candle and bell and handed to the reading public with all the thrills that are printable."

"Good for him," Nathaniel contributed with feeling.

Clarissa surveyed him coolly. "I understand you were an artist—or something," she said insolently. "Surprised to hear anyone of that sort admitting a taste for conventionalities."

"I admire his sticking to his guns," Nathaniel retorted.

Clarissa looked from him to Virginia and smiled knowingly. But she said nothing. She had been exposed to politeness during her bringing up, and there were times when the contact bore fruit.

Chiri appeared, took the receiver off the hook and greeted the caller with a lazy "hello" then she eschewed makeup completely just to show her friends that she was human, she said—on the arm that she had thrown up over her dark, bit and miss bob.

Nathaniel felt a moment of softness for her. "Poor little donkey," he murmured. He stood and looked at her sleeping for a while, then turned, reached for the blanket and threw it over her feet. The studio was a bit chilly as the weather had turned unexpectedly cold for late Spring.

A little later, over his coffee, he mused on the ways of women, particularly women of Chiri's sort. An inspection of the place had acquainted him with the reason for her deep sleep. Apparently she was dead tired. The studio had been scrubbed from end to end, but in a way that would not disturb his work. Only the dust that gathers so quickly in the Village had been removed. Scattered papers were still scattered.

He felt warmly grateful and more than a little annoyed. Surely Chiri must know that she could

Happy Bride of 1928

Life is going to be good to you!

(Girlhood dreams come true . . . Happiness so great, ah, none is so happy as you! The future . . . a shining road stretching into the distance, and now, a new dignity, a hostess in your own right, a home of your own, and at your command, such luxuries as a Princess of old might envy.)

WHEN your mother was married, things were different. The chances are that her home did not even have gas and electricity. Certainly there were none of the drudge-saving wonders that are going to be in your home!

This age is kinder to brides.

The limited budgets of early married days are easier to meet now because of gas. Those first little meals you cook with such painstaking care—just turn the handle and the fuel is there. Suppose you had to chop wood for the stove first? You won't heat up the kitchen either, and spoil the sweet disposition you want to keep, for gas cooking is cool. Home preserving of fruits is sound economy, and at canning time, you will really appreciate the coolness and convenience of gas cooking.

Because you live in a clean natural gas community, your laundry bills will be much less, and that will help you in balancing that bewildering budget.

Gas is going to be a good friend to you, happy girl!

ROUGH AND TUMBLE MAT MEN TO MEET

Tom Stracener and "Kid" Leon To Wrestle At Elks Club Next Tuesday Night.

Tom Stracener has no idea as to the ability of the grappler that he is to tackle next Tuesday night at the Elks Club, and Tom is going to find himself up against one of the toughest and cleverest 160 pounders in the game, for Kid Leon, the Dallas grappler, who is to tackle him, is just this type of wrestler, and Tom is likely to find himself sitting on the outside of the ring or his shoulder blades pinned to the mat.

For the past year Leon has been climbing up very fast and is now rated as one of the foremost contenders for the world's title. Stracener being in this district for a long time, and although showing considerable class and ability, will get a real test against Leon.

Newspapers where Leon has appeared have given him credit for having a cunning brain to use in pinches, and he has a re-

EMILE BARNES

Just a rookie, and a red-headed, freckle-faced, bow-legged rookie is Emile Barnes, Washington outfielder, but he showed the way to American League batters during the month of May by keeping his batting mark up around .400. Barnes is another University of Alabama product and was a football star there for four years, captaining the team that tied Stanford in 1926 at Pasadena. He's proving one of the sensations of the year.

Wrestling Fans Looking Forward To Exciting Meet

As the night of the grappling bout between Kid Leon of Dallas and Tom Stracener, local star draws nearer there is considerable interest among local sport fans in the event.

The match is to be held at the Elks Club Tuesday night, and should prove one of the most exciting and eventful bouts of the season.

The promoter states that every man on the card will be on hand for forfeits have been posted and each man has been training hard for the bout.

If ever local fans witnessed a hard fought and tough battle, the match Tuesday night will be one. Each man is determined and neither will give up until the very last breath of life is gone.

Leon, rated as a clever, skillful, as well as adept rough and tumble star, is out to get Stracener as quickly as possible.

Stracener is out to show his friends and fans here that no newcomer from Dallas is going to come in here and beat him.

There have been no arguments over weights or referees, for neither man has looked in that direction each centering his attentions on the ability and records of the other.

Stracener's ability is well known locally. Leon, a newcomer, carries a string of 54 consecutive wins to his credit and intends to make Stracener's name go down as number 55.

The match will be for the best two out of three falls to a finish.
