Club 806 for Kids to hold grand opening

By LINDSEY TOMASCHIK
 LKTomaschik@thepampanews.com

Formerly a club for an older crowd, Club 806 owner Chris Phillips recently decided to ditch the alcohol and open his doors to kids. "We wanted to have a safe place where kids can come and hang out," Phillips said. He said the decision was driven by the desire to be spending more time with his kids, so he decided to make the club specially for those from sixth grade and up. Club 806 for Kids will hold its grand opening on Saturday, Sept. 20. Local bands City Will Shake and Fear the Beautiful will put on a concert for the event, and there will be games, movies, dancing and other activities, too. He also plans to have snacks and beverages available. Phillips said his plan is to show two movies a night in the movie room with surround sound, and there is also a dance room, where there will be games and activities throughout the night as well as an arcade with pool, darts, ping pong, foosball, game consoles and arcade games.

New pastor in Pampa here to 'share the Gospel'

By JOHN LEE
 jlee@thepampanews.com

When Sergio Urrutia first came to Pampa in June, he was just filling in as a pastor for the church. A few months later and now he is the head pastor at New Life Assembly of God here in Pampa and said he feels like this was in God's plan all along.

"In June of this year, the first Sunday, we were asked if we would come here to help do a service," Urrutia said. "This church didn't have a pastor and we started volunteering our Sundays. During those times we felt like God was calling us to be in Pampa. Our prayer in Amarillo was to be in Dumas. While we were praying, God was opening another door. Once we came here, to fulfill the pulpit those Sundays, my wife and I both believed this is where we needed to be."

Urrutia's first official service was the first Sunday in July.

Urrutia said that he goal is not to "recruit" members of other congregations, but to get those who are "lost" and do not currently belong to a congregation or are not going to church.

"We are not here to be 'recruiting people,' I don't like that," Urrutia said. "Let them be there, God has a church home for them. We are here to reach the lost, the people not going to church. With 53 churches, I'm amazed. There are five or six churches just in this square. God has placed people in certain areas for a purpose. All of this work, I do with the Baptist Church. Unity is just one. We can really be a big impact if we just put aside differences, just share the Gospel.

"Not doctoring, not your beliefs, just doing what Jesus did, share the Gospel. People are dying while we argue about issues. Some agree and some disagree, that's okay. But let's just share the Gospel and let Jesus change people. It's not about building a mega church, its about building the Kingdom of God."

Before coming to Pampa, Urrutia worked out of First Family Church Assembly of God in Amarillo. Before that he did prison ministry.

"I met this guy in Lubbock who worked for Freedom in Jesus Ministry," Urrutia said. "They were coming to Amarillo for a meeting at the prison, so we submitted our forms and paperwork and were approved to go in. That was the beginning of our prison ministry, which I did with my wife for about 10 years."

Urrutia is a native to Santiago, Chile, and moved to the United States in 1977. He first started to study religion in Sept. 1997 when he was spiritually saved in Dumas after going to church while having marriage difficulties.

"(We were invited to a revival by a friend at work) We went, we didn't see his vehicle, so we started to leave and we ended at the 'Yield' sign," Urrutia said. "And we both looked at each other and said 'do you want to go back in.' We wrestled it for a little bit but I remember that sign. I believe it spoke to me that we were yielding to God. My wife also remembers God speaking to her saying 'What have you been asking me' because she had been praying to get closer to God and that God will find us a church that he wants us to attend."

The evangelist called non-believers to the front and Urrutia and his wife, Belinda, went.

"I began to weep and repented asking God to forgive me for all the things I have done wrong," Urrutia said. "I started to think of the things I had done wrong in my life. Something in me left and I felt this burden being lifted."

Urrutia started mission work in 2005, including going back his home, Chile, with the International Commission. In 2006-7 he went to Argentina. Besides Chile and Argentina, Urrutia has also missioned in Belize, Mexico and India.

Urrutia plans to bring in a congregation that studies the Gospel. He also hopes to expand the Latino community, as stated in the church's mission statement:

"New life Assembly of God is committed to fulfilling a four-fold mission. Our primary reason for being is to evangelize the lost, worship God, disciple believer and to show compassion.

"To build a multi-ethnic body of believers. New Life commits to reach-

“Our worship will be a reflection of our multi-ethnic mixture of disciples including Christian Latino music, contemporary music as well as the traditional hymns and songs of the church. Outreach will have as its goal to produce new believers who in turn are able to witness effectively and make disciples who will in turn continue this cycle. This will be effected through small group Bible studies, both bi-lingual services and Bibles.”

Urrutia was ordained in 2012 from the Global University in Lubbock. He lives in Pampa and has three daughters, Tiffany (24 going to Amarillo College), Isabel (15 going to Pampa High School) and Eliana (13 going to Pampa Junior High) and two dogs.

He added that he wanted this to be a safe environment for kids to come and hang out, and points out that the location of the kids’ club doesn’t get much safer, as it is right by the police station, Sheriff’s office and fire station.

Another thing that drove the decision to target a new demographic was to put less drunk drivers on the streets. Phillips didn’t like the idea of people coming to his business and leaving impaired, so he decided the best way to deal with the problem was to eliminate it.

He is looking forward to still being able to use the facility he has put so much time, effort and money into renovating and is excited to provide a safe place for the younger crowd to hang out. He added that he has put about $35,000 toward lights and stereo in the building.

Phillips said he wants to show kids that they can go out and have fun in the club environment without getting into trouble or drinking.

He added that although there will be supervision in the club, he recommends that children younger than the sixth grade age range come in with adults.

Ideally, Phillips would like for Club 806 for Kids to be a fun environment for the whole family. He plans to have age appropriate music provided through both live bands and DJ-provided music. Phillips is excited to provide the kids of the community with something to do at a place where they can interact with other kids their age through fun activities with sportsmanlike conduct.

Club 806 for Kids will be open from 7 p.m. to 12 a.m. on Friday and Saturday nights. Admission for the grand opening will be $5 per person and after that, the cost will be $7 for entry. The club is located at 120 W. Foster.

Multiple studies provide insight into drought tolerance of TAM wheat varieties

SUBMITTED BY TEXAS A&M AGRILIFE RESEARCH

AMARILLO – Drought is the most important constraint limiting wheat yields in the U.S. Southern High Plains, and the past four years of exceptional drought have provided a tremendous opportunity for research and genetic improvements.

Although wheat yield and drought tolerance have been improved over the years by the Texas A&M Wheat Breeding Program, the physiological mechanisms of drought tolerance among the TAM wheat cultivars have not been well understood, according to Texas A&M AgriLife Research scientists in Amarillo.

Three different AgriLife Research studies in Amarillo have been aimed at determining what traits within the TAM cultivars provide greater or less drought tolerance.

The results have recently been published in three international journals.

“Physiology and Transcriptomics of Water-deficit Stress Responses in Wheat Cultivars TAM 111 and TAM 112” was published in Journal of Plant Physiology; “Cooler Canopy Contributes to Higher Yield and Drought Tolerance in New Wheat Cultivars” appeared in Crop Science; and “Effective Use of Soil Water Contributed to High Yield in Wheat in the U.S. Southern High Plains” appeared in the Journal of Arid Land Studies.

Leading the AgriLife Research efforts from Amarillo are Dr. Qingwu Xue, crop stress physiologist; Dr. Shuyi Liu, small grains geneticist; Dr. Jackie Rudd, wheat breeder; Dr. Srirama Krishna Reddy, assistant research scientist; and Dr. Gautam Pradhan, a former postdoctoral scientist with AgriLife Research and now a North Dakota State University research agronomist.

Additionally, Dr. Scott Finlayson, AgriLife Research molecular physiologist at College Station, and Dr. Paxton Payton and Dr. James Mahan, plant physiologists at the U.S. Department of Agriculture-Agricultural Research Service in Lubbock, were a part of the projects. These studies were funded in part by Texas Wheat Producers Board, AgriLife Research and the USDA Ogallala Aquifer Program.

Rudd said it is not unusual for hard red winter wheat crops to experience moderate to severe drought stress, especially during the grain filling stage, resulting in significant yield losses.

TAM 111 and TAM 112 are widely grown wheat cultivars in the region specifically because of their drought tolerance, he said. While they share some of the same parentage and are always among the highest yielding under drought, they have distinct adaptation mechanisms under water-deficit conditions.

“We know that TAM 111 is the best performer under intermittent drought and TAM 112 tops the trial under long periods of sustained drought,” Rudd said.

But because the physiological and molecular basis of their adaptation remained unknown, Liu and Reddy conducted a greenhouse study to understand the differences in the responses of the two cultivars to water-deficit.

Whole-plant data indicated that TAM 112 produced more biomass and grain yield than TAM 111 under water-deficit during grain filling. Leaf-level data indicated that TAM 112 had higher levels of the plant hormone abscisic acid, which results in partial stomatal closure to conserve water, as compared to TAM 111.

Sustained water-deficit also resulted in more changes in flag leaf metabolisms in TAM 112 than TAM 111. Many genes associated with metabolic processes and dehydration responses were uniquely regulated between cultivars, Reddy said.

“TAM 112 had three times more unique responsive genes than TAM 111,” Liu said. “This could be a reason that TAM 112 performed better under longer periods of drought stress.”

Studies under the supervision of Xue were conducted in the research field near Bushland. The canopy temperature depression study researched the difference between air and canopy temperatures, which has been suggested as a trait for identifying drought-tolerant genotypes.

The objective of this study was to investigate whether a cooler canopy temperature is one reason for higher yield in new drought-tolerant cultivars, Pradhan and Xue said. A crop that is cooler than the air temperature signifies a healthy crop and is generally associated with increased photosynthesis.

Field experiments were conducted with five genotypes, including TAM 111 and TAM 112, under dryland conditions in the 2010, 2011 and 2012 seasons. Canopy temperature was measured continuously from late jointing to the middle of grain filling using wireless infrared thermometers, Xue said.

Although canopy temperature varied with sky conditions, growth stage and time of day, the genotypic variation in canopy temperature was consistent, he said. In general, yield was negatively correlated with daytime canopy temperature, whether from a single clear day or a season-long mean.

"The cooler the canopy, the higher the grain yield," Xue said.

TAM 111 and TAM 112 had up to 37 F. degrees lower canopy temperature and 31 percent more grain yield than the other genotypes, the study showed. Therefore, cooler daytime canopy might be the reason for higher yield in the two drought-tolerant cultivars under drought conditions, the study showed.

The second study under Xue's direction looked at the use of soil water to contribute to high yields. This study investigated the differences in soil water depletion among four TAM cultivars under dryland and irrigated conditions in two growing seasons. Cultivars included TAM 105, TAM 110, TAM 111 and TAM 112, which were released from the late 1970s to early 2000s.

Based on measurement of seasonal dynamics of soil water depletion, the newer cultivars — TAM 110, TAM 111 and TAM 112 — extracted more water from the soil profile than the older cultivar, particularly from the deeper soil profile, Xue and Pradhan concluded.

The direct benefit with more water extraction is that these cultivars can maintain a cooler canopy and higher photosynthesis under water deficit conditions, which supports the results from the first field study, Xue said.

"Since the soil water extraction is determined by root growth and development, we recommend further studies on root traits to elucidate the different behaviors of new and old cultivars under extreme drought, moderate drought and irrigated conditions for soil water content," he said.

"We know that drought tolerance is a part of the increasing popularity of TAM wheat cultivars in the High Plains, but these studies have been the first to provide concrete evidence," Rudd said.

The data indicates that TAM 112 has an active response to drought and conserves water during drought periods, whereas TAM 111 is not as sensitive to environmental stimuli and will continue to grow and use water until a critical water deficit is reached resulting in premature death, he said.

"This explains our past observations that TAM 112 is relatively better under a sustained drought and TAM 111 is best under intermittent drought," Rudd said. "I am proud to be part of this outstanding research team, and I have no doubts that these studies have greatly increased our breeding efficiency to develop TAM wheat with even higher yield and better drought tolerance."

The brown recluse is ¼ to ½ an inch long, and is yellowish-tan to dark brown in color. Their legs are dark grayish brown and covered with short dark hairs. It has a distinctive violin or fiddle shape on its back, and may thus be referred to as a fiddle-back. The brown recluse is a nocturnal insect. It is also non aggressive and will only bite when bothered either in its secluded area or while it is hunting. When the recluse does bite it can be very dangerous to humans, causing sickness, skin lesions, and permanent scars. They are found mostly in wood piles, sheds, and dark corners within people's homes.

My association with the game of golf began in 1967. A co-worker found a set of golf clubs on the curb, and as she was barely five feet tall and I'm about five feet eight (or I was before gravity and age adjusted that downward). She thought I could use them.

JUDITH SMITH

There was a full set of irons, woods, a putter and a "spoon" sand wedge, all with hickory shafts, and inside a very heavy leather and canvas golf bag resting on a rather rickety-looking cart. I took a course of golf lessons and joined the women's golf league at work.

Just before the golf season started, I had to establish an average, so early one Saturday morning my mother and I went to the local golf course, in total ignorance of the fact that you can't just walk onto a golf course on a Saturday morning and play; however, the pro allowed me to tee off with Mom as my caddy. After about fourteen "whiffs" (where I never actually made contact with the ball), I finally connected and sent the ball soaring...about three feet.

A round of applause behind me from a couple of foursomes waiting to tee off brought me back to reality, and I courteously motioned for them to play ahead. I needn't have worried about catching up with them. After playing about three holes, it looked like there weren't as many clubs in the bag, but I didn't say anything.

On the fourth hole, the wheels broke on the cart, so Mom rested it against a tree and said she'd just carry the bag. We could pick up the cart on our way back. Another couple of holes later, and there were definitely fewer clubs in the bag.

I asked Mom about it, and she said, "Well, I figured you weren't using those, so I just leaned them against a tree. We can pick them up on our way back."

Four hours later, after allowing a large number of foursomes to play through, I finally finished my nine holes, and Mom and I, exhausted, retrieved all the equipment left behind and went home. I did fairly well that summer and ended up as the player with the most-improved average. I really didn't enjoy playing in a golf league, since we had to play in any weather. Summers in northern Illinois are typically hot and humid, and mosquitoes were the bane of my existence on the golf course, so I only played one more year.

Many years later, a neighbor asked if my husband, Ron, would like her dad's golf clubs since he had passed away. Ron hadn't played golf in a number of years, but he was happy to accept and take up the game again. He needed something to do during the summers when the bowling leagues weren't active. I was more than happy to let him have his fun on the golf course while I did things with our daughter or worked in our yard.

After we both retired and moved to Indiana, Ron made friends with a couple of guys in our bowling league, and he enjoyed playing golf with Ed and Josh for several years before we moved to Georgia. When we left Georgia and returned to Illinois, we lived on a golf course, and Ron bought me my own set of clubs. I enjoyed playing golf with him, and he didn't laugh at me when I hit "worm burners" — low-flying shots about six inches off the ground — or when I nearly hit some Canada geese.

We both still have our clubs, and Ron is looking forward to getting back to playing golf again, in spite of having Parkinson's disease. I'll be happy to go with him just for the pleasure of watching him play again, but I give fair warning to any worms that might be present on our local course.

The importance of child car seat safety

A few days ago I was getting out of my car and saw a father and daughter happily running errands together. He hoisted her out of the pickup and she happily hopped into the store with her blonde curls and cute little Levi's skirt and yellow top and matching sandals. It was obvious the dad really loved his little girl and enjoyed spending time with her. They were in and out of the store fairly quickly and the dad hoisted her back in the car. He helped her buckle the seatbelt but she didn't have a car seat. It was a single cab so she was in the front (I wasn't stalking them, this just happened really quickly).

Car seats are very important. There is a reason hospitals won't let you leave with your baby until you prove that you have a car seat. It's for the safety of the child. If you are in an accident, this could save your child's life. Car seats are not optional accessories. According to www.dmv.org:

Texas child car seat laws
You must secure any child under eight years old in a federally approved child car seat while operating the vehicle, unless the child is taller than 4'9".

Use the following guidelines when buying a car seat for your child:

- From birth to one year old and up to 35 pounds:

Use a rear-facing seat suitable for your child's height and weight. Make sure to check the height and weight capacity of the car seat and follow the installation and operating instructions carefully.

- From one year old to four years old and 20-40 pounds:

Use a forward-facing seat for as long as is recommended by the manufacturer.

- From four years old to eight years old and more than 40 pounds:

Use a booster seat. Failure to secure your child in an appropriate child car seat in Texas can result in a fine of up to $25 for the first offense and up to $250 for subsequent offenses.

So, please put your child in a car seat and if possible they should be placed in the back seat instead of the front. Children are such a beautiful blessing, and we should do everything we can to protect them.

Letter to the Editor

A call to action on pending tax increase

To the citizens of Pampa: I am writing this letter to let you know that our city is about to pass a tax increase higher than any tax increase in the history of our community. It is a 17.5 percent increase on your property, which includes your homes, businesses, second homes and business buildings. The increase is almost twice as much as any other community in our whole area, including Amarillo. Our tax rate will be more than 71 percent, while all others in our area are in the 30 percent bracket.

We have a tremendous debt, more than $30 million, in our city that takes several hundred thousand dollars each year just to pay off. This is one of the big problems that we have today. I feel that our administration and also our Commission have let you down. Because of this, we have to go to our citizens to bail us out because of things we have done the past few years that have created this big problem.

This past Tuesday, we had a public hearing on the tax increase and on the budget. Nobody showed up to voice their opinions either to support or to protest it. I was very disappointed. We have another chance this coming Tuesday, Sept. 16 at 4 p.m. at City Hall to voice opinions one way or the other. At that time, those in attendance can ask the administration and the City Council what has happened and question them on why we are in this situation that necessitates this huge tax increase.

In the event that it is possible for you to come to that meeting, you need to call each and every one of your representatives that you have elected to represent you. Your representatives are Mayor Brad Pingel; Council members Karen McLain, Ward 4; John Studebaker, Ward 1; Robert Dixon, Ward 3 and Chris Porter, Ward 2. If you can't find their phone numbers, call City Hall and they will be more than happy to give you their cell phone numbers. It is very important that you contact these people and voice your opinion on whether you are going to support this tax increase or oppose it.

This increase will hurt our community considerably. It will affect everybody, particularly home owners under the age of 65. Home owners 65 and older, if they have other property, it will be taxed at the 17.5 percent increase, Citizens who do not own property and rent, your rent will go up because that 17.5 percent increase will be passed on to you. The businesses located in city limits will be greatly burdened with the tax increase on their buildings and property and will have to pass the increase on to you, the citizens.

As a side note, if you don't pay attention to what your elected representatives are doing, we could be in a similar situation that a city in California was in a few years ago, with exorbitant salaries being paid to administration. It is up to you.

Where's the payoff in gambling?

For those who promote legalized gambling as a means of economic development or revitalization, or as a painless way to pay for public schools, the recent news from Atlantic City, New Jersey, is sobering.

Dominated by its famous boardwalk, the beach resort is familiar to Americans from the popular game of Monopoly, the Miss America pageant and the Democratic Convention that nominated Lyndon B. Johnson for president. Almost 40 years ago, when casino gambling was prohibited by every state except Nevada, New Jersey voters succumbed to a slick campaign that promised to remake the fading resort into Las Vegas East.

For awhile it seemed to work, as people from all over the Northeast rode buses to Atlantic City to sit for hours in front of mesmerizing slot machines. But casino revenues have fallen steadily to where they were 25 years ago, and this year four of Atlantic City's 11 casinos closed their doors, with a fifth expected to follow soon.

The closed casinos have eliminated 8,000 jobs in a city whose unemployment rate was already twice the national average, and the assessed value of the unoccupied properties will have to be sharply reduced. And no property was bigger or fell harder than the gargantuan Revel Casino Hotel, which was custom designed for high rollers who never showed up. What can be done with a 57-story, hermetically sealed glass building with 1,400 hotel rooms and 10 swimming pools occupying 20 acres on the boardwalk? When it filed for bankruptcy a second time last month, the owners declared the value of the property was worth less than 20 percent of what it cost, telling the bankruptcy judge that the casino is "a melting ice cube."

The $2.4 billion it cost to construct that now-useless "glass elephant" was greater than the taxes New Jersey collected from all the other casinos in the past eight years. New Jersey Gov. Chris Christie had the chance to pull the plug on the project four years ago, but instead he doubled down, committing $261 million of state funds to see it through to completion.

Atlantic City parallels what happened in Alton, Illinois, where my husband and I lived for 44 years raising our six children. A riverboat casino was touted as the new "services" economy to replace the manufacturing plants that once supported over 10,000 families there.

After the politically connected original investors cashed in their chips a decade ago, Alton's casino steadily declined to about half of its original revenue. Along the way, a local family-owned business was devastated when a trusted employee embezzled over $100,000 to support her gambling losses "on the boat," as people still say although the so-called boat never leaves the dock anymore. While Christie was bailing out the soon-to-collapse Revel Casino, he also committed New Jersey to enter the untested field of Internet gambling, which enables people to lose their life's savings in one fit of depression, without even leaving their office or home. Internet betting preys on the compulsive gambler because it invites him to feed his habit in secret, without criticism by family or friends. Gambling over the Internet was deemed illegal based on a 1961 law called the Wire Act. As recently as 2007, the FBI was warning Americans that it is against the law to gamble over the Internet, and the operators of online virtual casinos were prosecuted.

But in another example of the Obama administration changing a law without congressional approval, its Department of Justice surprisingly announced just before Christmas 2011 that many forms of Internet gambling are legal after all. Obama's DOJ declared that the Wire Act prohibited sports betting, but implied that other forms of gambling (such as online poker) may not be considered illegal under the Wire Act.

At that time — nearly three years ago — the size of online gambling was estimated to be already immense, between $6 billion to $100 billion a year. Chris Christie obviously salivated at the prospect of collecting a share of that money for New Jersey, projecting $180 million the first year — almost as much as the state now takes in from casinos.

But the state's actual revenue from Internet gambling this year was only a little over $9 million, which is 95 percent less than Christie expected. Meanwhile, more conservative states (such as Texas) have held the line against gambling expansions.

The lesson of New Jersey should not be lost on Republicans who are vetting potential presidential candidates for 2016. Some of the Republican "donor class" may be considering Chris Christie, who is not a conservative, as someone who could control the federal budget after eight years of Obama's deficit spending.

Like the liberal Republicans who are currently running for governor of two other blue states, California and Illinois, Christie offers himself as a non-ideological pragmatist who can manage the state's finances. The catastrophe of Christie's bad bet on gambling, both virtual and bricks-and-mortar, proves yet again that there simply is no such thing as a viable "social liberal, fiscal conservative."

DPS releases border security trends, recent activity

SUBMITTED BY TEXAS DPS

AUSTIN — The Texas Legislature has requested that the Texas Department of Public Safety (DPS) provide a publicly releasable summary of border incidents and a data report related to historical trends of crime along the Texas-Mexico border as well as current criminal activity in the Operation Strong Safety (OSS) area of operation. To that end, DPS has developed a Texas Border Security Dashboard and a Summary of Significant Border Incidents — both of which are unclassified and will be updated periodically.

At the direction of Texas leadership, DPS began conducting OSS on June 23, 2014, with partner agencies in a combined local, state, and federal law enforcement effort to combat the Mexican Cartels and other criminal elements operating along the Texas-Mexico border. During OSS, DPS continues to conduct around-the-clock land, air and maritime saturation patrols in coordination with law enforcement partners in the region to deter, detect and disrupt drug and human trafficking, and other related criminal activity. The Texas National Guard, at the direction of Gov. Rick Perry, has also deployed to the border and is supporting the mission of OSS.

"The goal of this data-driven, multi-agency operation in high-threat areas for a sustained period of time is to deny Mexican cartels and their associates the ability to move drugs and people into Texas between the ports of entry, as well as reduce the power of these organizations, whose success depends on their ability to operate on both sides of the border," said DPS Director Steven McCraw. "At the request of the Texas Legislature, DPS is providing unclassified, detailed information about the trends that have been developing along the border for some time, as well as the current activity occurring in the OSS area of operation."

Mexican cartels are the most significant organized crime threat to Texas, with seven of the eight cartels operating command and control networks in the state, moving drugs and people into the United States, and transporting cash, weapons and stolen vehicles back to Mexico. In short, an unsecure U.S.-Mexico border is a state and national security problem. DPS personnel, as well as the brave men and women of the U.S. Border Patrol, local law enforcement agencies, state partners and members of the Texas National Guard, are working around-the-clock to keep the local communities safe through Operation Strong Safety.

Man named human loses primary in New Hampshire

ROCHESTER, N.H. (AP) — Human's race ended in defeat.

A candidate who legally changed his name to human — with a lowercase "H" — lost his bid to run for office in New Hampshire on Tuesday.

The former David Montenegro lost a primary contest to incumbent Democratic state Rep. Rose Marie Rogers by a count of 181-30.

Montenegro changed his name in 2012. He made headlines this year when the state's highest court ruled he could have a vanity license plate that reads COPSLIE. He had sued after the Division of Motor Vehicles said he couldn't have the plate because it denigrated police officers.

Rogers was first elected in 2012 and represents Rochester, a city of about 30,000 residents.

'The November Man' lacks luster

By LINDSEY TOMASCHIK
LKTomaschik@thepampanews.com

"The November Man" came to Pampa's Cinema 4 on Friday. The movie follows ex-CIA operative Devereaux, played by Pierce Brosnan, as he seeks revenge and is pitted against his former pupil and strives to remain a step ahead of all other parties.

The plot

The movie begins with Devereaux training his pupil, Mason, played by Luke Bracey. Mason fails to follow the directions of his teacher, and then the movie fast-forwards five years.

At this point, viewers follow a woman going through Russian president-elect Lazar Ristovski's safe to get some incriminating information on him. She is discovered doing this, and then there is a chase, where we see Devereaux again. The woman gets into his car, gives him the information, and the chase ends when the woman is shot and killed.

Out of anger, Devereaux chases down the killers and fatally shoots all of them except one. The one he can't bring himself to kill is Mason. The two men have their guns pointed at each other, but neither pulls the trigger and both walk away.

With the information the woman gave him before dying, Devereaux is able to track down and protect a woman, Alice, who all parties in the movie are after, and the duration of the film is a series of Devereaux running into Mason and outsmart-ing him while simultaneously saving Alice from interacting with the wrong people.

Fun Facts

IMDb.com had these fun facts about the movie:

- Near the end of the movie, the SUV is a Mercedes, but after the crash into the wall, the emblem on the wheel is of a BMW.
- Mason goes into a gun battle with two rounds in his Beretta; we can see the slide locked back indicating an empty gun shortly after shooting at Peter. No CIA operative would go into a deadly force situation without a full load.

• The movie was filmed in Serbia and Montenegro.

Parents' guide

This film is rated R, and for good reason. Being a spy movie, there is a lot of violence, and "The November Man" has a sex scene and an implied rape scene as well.

What do I think?

From the beginning, I found the movie hard to follow in terms of who was on whose side, so I pretty much just lost interest until things got interesting well into the middle of the film. The ending was pretty anti-climactic, too, which was a disappointment. I generally like to see more plot twists in these types of films, and this one was lacking. IMDb rated this movie a 6.7 out of 10, which I deem pretty generous. At 108 minutes, it still bored me throughout the beginning and took too long to pick up. Clearly, I don't think it's worth paying to see in theaters.

Men only: Kathy Griffin's guide to late-night TV

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Last year, as a late-night TV shake-up ended with yet another chorus line of white male hosts, Joan Rivers decried the lack of women in any of the coveted jobs as "beyond frustrating."

Days after the death of the only woman to host a late-night network show, the status quo was reaffirmed as CBS on Monday anointed Craig Ferguson's successor: James Corden, a popular British performer, but one largely unknown to American viewers.

Kathy Griffin, who lost a close friend and mentor when Rivers died at 81, was disappointed but unsurprised by the decision. She has good reason: nearly three decades after Rivers' brief run with her talk show on Fox, the late-night network landscape remains entirely male.

"I was interested in the Ferguson spot long before it was announced because I had a feeling things might shift," said a candid Griffin. "My joke phrase is, 'I can start Monday.'"

The response of one executive to her query: "They're not considering females at this time," she recounted.

"You realize that's illegal to say in a business meeting?" was Griffin's comeback.

When she told by another industry exec that the absence of female hosts was "embarrassing" and that women who represent half the population should hold half of such jobs, he had a ready answer: "Well, you have 'The Talk.'"

That show, of course, is in daytime and has four co-hosts, not one powerful female comedian owning the nighttime stage.

The effect, even for a resilient professional like Griffin, is dispiriting.

"I walk into the (meeting) room thinking, 'I'll give it a shot.' I leave the room thinking, 'I never had a chance,'" she said.

While the rest of TV catches up to diversity, with fictional portrayals daring to imagine women as U.S. presidents and mirror the reality of an African-American leader, networks simply are unwilling to roll the dice on either a female or minority in the lofty position of late-night host.

Rivers' brief tenure on the fledgling Fox network nearly 30 years ago remains a lonely emblem. The network cited low viewership for the cancellation and she blamed a business clash, but whatever happened, it was one chance and out for her and the rest of her gender.

Imagine if Conan O'Brien's NBC experience quashed the deal for white guys.

Cable, meanwhile, has inched forward with BET's Mo'Nique and E!'s Chelsea Handler (both shows are now ended), and the upcoming Comedy Central program with black comedian and writer

Larry Wilmore.

To make it in the big leagues, a performer needs the unwavering support of power brokers including producers, agents and network executives, Griffin said, pointing to "Saturday Night Live" founder-guru Lorne Michaels' grooming of Jimmy Fallon and Seth Meyers for NBC late-night jobs.

One especially damaging industry argument, made privately, is that women want to get their pre-bedtime monologue jokes from a man, while female hosts such as Ellen DeGeneres and Queen Latifah are welcome in daytime.

In fact, the audience for Handler's "Chelsea Late-ly" was about 65 percent female, more than any other late-night show.

Around The Globe

AP: More than 5,000 dead in C. African Republic

GUEN, Central African Republic (AP) — More than 5,000 people have died in sectarian violence in Central African Republic since December, according to an Associated Press tally, suggesting that a U.N. peacekeeping mission approved months ago is coming too late for thousands.

The AP found at least 5,186 people were killed in fighting between Muslims and Christians, based on a count of bodies and numbers gathered from survivors, priests, imams and aid workers in more than 50 of the hardest-hit communities. That's more than double the death toll of at least 2,000 cited by the United Nations in April, when it approved the mission. There has been no official count since.

U.N. peacekeepers prepare to take over from African forces on Monday, bringing about 2,000 extra troops to the country. It will fall short of the almost 7,000 more that were authorized in April, with the rest expected by early 2015. Yet violence in the Central African Republic has only spread since.

"The international community said it wanted to put a stop to the genocide that was in the making. But months later, the war has not stopped," said Joseph Bindaoui, president of the Central African Human Rights League. "On the contrary, it has gotten worse."

The U.N. is not recording civilian deaths on its own, unlike in Iraq or Afghanistan, and has cited figures gathered by the local Red Cross.

It has taken months simply to gather troops from different countries for the mission launch on Sept. 15, especially with poor infrastructure in landlocked terrain, said Stephane Dujarric, spokesperson for the U.N. Secretary-General.

"Mobilizing troops for peacekeeping mission takes time because it's not like they're waiting in New York for us," Dujarric said Wednesday. "We have to go knock on doors for troops, for equipment, helicopters..."

Many deaths in this country of about 4.6 million were never officially counted, especially in a vast, remote swath of the west that is still dangerous and can barely be reached in torrential rains. Other deaths were overlooked by overwhelmed aid workers but registered at mosques and at private Christian funerals. Even the AP tally is almost certainly a fraction of the true death toll.

The conflict started when Muslim rebels captured the capital last March and killed hundreds, possibly thousands, of Christians. When Christian militias forced the rebels to withdraw in late January, they killed as they went.

In the tiny, mostly Christian village of Nzakoun, the rebels set ablaze more than two dozen houses in early February and then went door-to-door. One 13-year-old boy, Maximin Lassananyant, stumbled out of his hut into the darkness and hid for two days in the bush, petrified. He left only when other survivors found him and told him it was time to come home and bury his family.

Maximin's hands still shake as he tries to write down their names, and he cannot bring himself to say them aloud. A village chief has printed the names of 22 buried victims on a weathered piece of notebook paper. Maximin's mother, Rachel, is No. 11 on the list of females, and his 5-year-old sister, Fani, is No. 13. His 7-year-old brother Boris is on the list of males.

It was only a matter of time before Christian militias took revenge and in turn killed thousands of Muslims. Muslims make up about 15 percent of the country's population, and Christians 50 percent.

In the town of Guen, Christian fighters stormed a house where dozens of Muslim men and boys had sought refuge, according to survivors. The fighters herded the Muslims to a shady lawn beneath two large mango trees, ordered them to lie on their stomachs and shot them, one by one. The 43 people dead included two 11-year-old boys.

The lives of three Muslims in town were spared: They transported the bludgeoned bodies to two mass graves on a wooden stretcher.

A villager named Abakar lost four sons between the ages of 11 and 16, and sobs so hard at the thought of his boys awaiting death that he cannot speak.

"Each night before I go to sleep I pray to God that I don't have nightmares about that day," he chokes out, too afraid to give his full name in case the militants come back.

Edmond Beina, the local leader of a Christian militia, is unrepentant. Everyone killed that day was a Muslim rebel, he says. Even the children.

The violence is now bubbling up in previously stable corners of the Central African Republic, hitting both Christians and Muslims. In Bambari, northeast of the capital, at least 149 people were killed in June and July alone, according to witnesses. In the Mbres area, Muslim rebels left at least 34 people dead in August.

In the tiny enclave of Boda, there are grieving fathers everywhere.

Abakar Hissein, a Muslim man, has lost two sons, both shot to death — Ahmat earlier this year in Bangui and Ali on Aug. 20 in Boda. His wife has been missing for five months and does not know if Ali is dead.

"Somehow I was able to carry my body back in my own arms, but it was very hard for me," he said. "I was truly in shock."

Even in death, there is no peace for the victims.

Earlier this summer, a Muslim man was buried at a cemetery in Boda, just a mile away from the zone where Muslims are barricaded.

Later that evening, after the sun set, his body was dug up from the ground and set on fire.

Fitch downgrades RadioShack's credit rating

NEW YORK (AP) — RadioShack's credit rating was downgraded by Fitch Ratings Friday, a day after the electronics retailer warned it may need to file for Chapter 11 bankruptcy protection. Fitch said cut RadioShack's issuer default rating one notch to "C" from "CC," which puts the retailer's credit rating one level above default. That means the company is likely to be unable to pay its debts. The downgrade comes after another credit ratings agency, Standard & Poor's Ratings Services, cut RadioShack's corporate credit rating further into junk territory on Thursday. RadioShack said in a regulatory filing Thursday that is talking with its lenders, bondholders, shareholders and landlords to fix its balance sheet. But if it can't, it will file for bankruptcy protection. The Fort Worth, Texas-based company has been trying to turn around its business for the past 18 months. Fitch said that RadioShack, which has more than 5,000 stores around the world, may have a funding shortfall during the holiday season. RadioShack Corp. declined to comment Friday. Its shares fell 12 cents to 90 cents in midday trading Friday. They are down 77 percent over the past year.

Enjoy nights out on the town even when it's cold

As temperatures start to plummet, people look for ways to safeguard themselves from the chilly weather and the idea of attending festivals or street fairs tends to be less appealing. But just because the mercury is falling does not mean it's time to hibernate.

Dine out

All fresco dining may have to be put on hold for a few months, but restaurant dining can still be enjoyed when it is cold outside. In fact, a hearty, hot meal with friends may be just the thing to banish winter doldrums. Plenty of restaurants embellish the ambiance with twinkling lights or bubbling water features to create a serene and interesting atmosphere. Choose a restaurant with a fireplace, as a roaring fire can create the feel of a winter ski lodge or time spent sitting with loved ones in a cozy family room.

Movie night

Climate-controlled movie theaters make going to the movies comfortable no matter the weather outside. Attending the cinema can be an enjoyable way for couples to socialize. Catch a new release and then visit a diner or cafe for coffee and pie to relish your favorite moments from the film. Research theaters nearby, and you may find one that is showcasing a classic film that you have never experienced on the big screen.

If going out to the movies in bad weather is not tempting, host an at-home movie night with neighbors. Stream a movie from the comforts of home or order a recent release from your cable TV provider. Heat up a bag of microwave popcorn, and you are all set for an evening of enjoyment with close friends.

Dancing and/or live music

Many cities and urban centers boast some sort of nightly entertainment, particularly on weekends. One way to beat the chill is to heat up the dance floor at a club or nearby social center. Clubs cater to various musical tastes, and you're bound to find one that offers your preferred musical genre, whether it's country, rock, hip-hop, or Latin-infused.

Live performers offer their brand of entertainment at bars, clubs and any space that offers them a stage and spotlight. Take in a set from a local performer, and you just may witness the first moments of a future star's career. Live entertainment need not be costly. Many bars offer live music free or for a small cover charge.

Embrace the cold

Fashion activities around the colder temperatures with an "if you can't beat them, join them" mentality. Plan a family-friendly day out on the slopes or race down snow-covered hills aboard sleds and snowboards. Visit an ice rink and take a few laps around the frozen surface. Once everyone has had their fill, gather for hot chocolate or cappuccinos to warm up.

Cold weather does not have to mean the end of socializing. Keep in contact with friends and family throughout winter days to buoy your spirits.

How retirement benefits are figured

TOM MARGENAU
Creator's Syndicate

Almost every day, I get questions from readers asking how a Social Security retirement benefit is computed. I looked back and learned that it's been a couple years since I did a column explaining the process. So I thought it might be a good time to go over it again. The formula is simple in a general sense, but a bit more convoluted when you get to the details.

Here is the simple part. A Social Security retirement benefit is a percentage of your average monthly income, using your highest 35 years of inflation-adjusted earnings. Note that there are four parts to that formula: 1) a percentage; 2) your average monthly income; 3) an inflation indexing factor; and 4) a 35-year base. We'll work backwards to explain how things work.

The 35-year base is the easy part. When you file for retirement benefits, the Social Security Administration will look at your entire earnings history and pull out your highest 35 years. They don't have to be consecutive. If you don't have 35 years of earnings, SSA must plug in "zero" years to get to the 35-year base. And please note that 35 means 35. Despite all the rumors out there, your retirement benefit is NOT based on your highest 5 years of earnings, or your last 10 years of earnings, or any other number of years other than 35.

Here is a related issue based on that 35-year rule. As part of the discussion of long-range Social Security reform, you will frequently hear proposals to change the "computation years." A number I've heard most often is adopting a 38-year base. What they are talking about is basing future Social Security benefits on a retiree's highest 38 years, rather than the highest 35. That would have the effect of lowering future benefits because the more base years used, the lower benefits are. Think of it this way: If your retirement computation was based on your high three years of earnings, for example, that would result in a much higher benefit than one based on 35 years. So, adding even more years to the base would lower benefits further.

But now let's get back to the current computation formula. Before they add up those "high 35," they index each year of past earnings for inflation. And this is where the formula starts to get messy. That's because there is a different adjustment factor for each year of earnings, AND each year's adjustment factor is different based on your year of birth.

Here is a quick example. If you were born in 1949, and earned $20,000 in 1980, they would multiply those earnings by an inflation adjustment factor of 3.25, meaning they would actually use $65,000 as your 1980 earnings. But if you were born in 1950 and earned that same $20,000 in 1980, they would use an inflation factor of 3.33 resulting in $66,600 as the 1980 earnings used in your Social Security computation.

You can find a complete breakdown of those inflation adjustment factors for each year of birth (for folks nearing retirement age) at www.socialsecurity.gov/pubs/10070.html.

So the next step in the retirement computation formula is to add up your highest 35 years of inflation-adjusted earnings. Then you divide by 420 — that's the number of months in 35 years — to get your average inflation-adjusted monthly income.

The final step brings us to the "social" part of Social Security. The percentage of your average monthly income that comes back to you in the form of a Social Security benefit depends on your income. In a nutshell, the lower your average wage, the higher percentage rate of return you get. Once again, the actual formula is messy, and varies depending on your year of birth. As an example, here is the formula for someone born in 1949. You take the first $749 of average monthly income and multiply by 90 percent. You take the next $3,768 of your average monthly income and multiply that by 32 percent. And you take any remainder and multiply it by 15 percent. For a worker with average earnings, this formula comes out to about 40 percent. In other words, the average worker will get about 40 percent of his average indexed monthly wage in the form of a Social Security check.

You can find a complete breakdown of those computation bend points at the same link mentioned above.

Q: I was thinking of retiring at age 60. But I'm worried that this will have a major impact on my future Social Security benefits. In other words, right near the start of my Social Security years (I plan to take my Social Security at age 62), I will not be paying into the program. Am I making a big mistake?

A: If you can afford to retire at age 60, I don't think you have to worry about the few bucks you might lose in your Social Security retirement check. Retiring at that age will have a minimal impact on your future benefits. Here's why.

As explained above, your benefit will be based on your highest 35 years of earnings. Assuming you have a normal earnings pattern of gradually increasing income throughout your working career, that means they will use your last 35 years to figure your benefit. In other words, they will use your earnings between age 25 and age 60.

Had you kept working until age 62, they would have based your benefit on your earnings between age 27 and age 62. So you would have had two more years of the higher earnings near the end of your career added into your benefit replacing two years of the lower earnings you had back in your 20s.

But when that is factored over 35 years, and given the fact that your past earnings are indexed for inflation, that two year difference really won't be a big deal. My educated guess is your monthly Social Security benefit might be about $10 to $20 less than it would have been had you kept working until age 62.

If you have a Social Security question, Tom Margenau has the answer. Contact him at thomas.margenau@comcast.net.

Harvesters fall in Hereford 35-7

BY JOHN LEE
jlee@thepampanews.com

HEREFORD — The Pampa Harvesters (1-2) traveled to Hereford (1-2) to take on the Whitefaces in their first road game of the season. The Hereford defense, who got to senior quarterback Tyler Hooper three times, was too much for the Harvesters as they defeated Pampa 35-7.

Hereford started out with the ball and the Pampa defense appeared to be much improved from last week and had a couple stops in the back field.

"It's funny we are just trying to get them to work together at the same time. It seemed last week our offense played really good and our defense didn't play really good," Pampa Harvesters head coach Greg Poynor said. "This week I felt like our defense played really well, and we just gave them no help on the other side of the ball on the offense. We just kept putting them out there over and over again. I actually thought our defense played really good, we had a couple of break downs early in the passing game."

They forced Hereford to punt and gave the Harvesters the ball at their own 28-yard line.

After a Pampa three-and-out, the Whitefaces were able to score the first points of the game and take a 7-0 lead.

"A lot of it is the Hereford defense. They're a very good defense, very sound and they do things good and they're very physical and they got to us up front a little bit," Poynor said. "But a lot of it's our execution, we just didn't execute very good. Every time we seemed to get something going we would get some penalty, drop a ball (and miss a block. A lot of it was our execution and a lot of it was them (the Hereford defense). They are a good football team we knew that going in and we are just very, very disappointed with how we executed."

The Harvesters received the ball and Aaron Arreola took it out to the 26-yard line. Hooper connected with junior Alec McClendon for a 51-yard pass, but was unable to take advantage of the big play.

In the second quarter, the Whitefaces were able to turn two of their drives into 14 points, while Pampa struggled to get the ball moving on offense. Their special teams on kick returns played well however, as Arreola had unofficially 72 yards on three attempts by halftime as the Harvesters trailed 21-0.

The Harvesters received the ball to start the second half and Hooper looked for sophomore Jayson Thomas on consecutive passes. In a scoreless drive, Thomas amassed 38 yards on two catches. Senior Brycen McClendon had a carry that gave the Harvesters a first down in the drive.

The Harvesters struggled moving the ball offensively until their final third-quarter drive.

Hooper connected with Thomas who took the ball 15 yards, then six yards, then 11 yards and finally capped it off with a 21-yard touchdown off of a screen pass, putting the Harvesters on the board 28-7.

In the fourth quarter, Hooper had a 10-yard scamper, but suffered a sack which ended the drive. The final Harvesters drive was started when Hooper found senior Zack Gates on a 10-yard pass. Hooper then found sophomore Brenden Woelfle for a 10-yard pass, followed by short passes to Thomas and sophomore Bryce Parker. Thomas had a 16-yard gain and a 24-yard gain setting up the Harvesters at first and goal.

That Hereford defense, which gave Pampa fits all night, was too much for the Harvesters, however, and closed the game out for the Whitefaces.

The Pampa Harvesters return to action next week for Homecoming against the Falcons from Bushland.

"Bushland is a team very similar to us, they kind of run a similar offense," Poynor said. "Defensively, it's not completely like us but it's similar. I think we'll be two evenly matched teams, I look forward to that game, I think it'll be a good game."

Pampa freshmen and JV fall versus Hereford

BY FORREST GRIMES
fgrimes@thepampanews.com

The Pampa freshmen and junior varsity football teams both came up short versus Hereford Thursday night.

The freshman team opened their game by forcing a fumble that was recovered by Corbin Anguiano. Pampa's offense couldn't take advantage and went three and out.

Pampa's defense made another stop, then the offense gave the Harvesters the lead when Hunter Alls connected with Justin Thomas for a touchdown pass. Brenden Baker kicked the extra point to give Pampa a 7-0 lead at the end of first quarter.

Hereford scored on a long touchdown run, but a holding penalty brought the play back. Pampa took advantage of the penalty when Jacobe Mills came up with a fumble recovery.

The Pampa offense was unable to get a first down, then Hereford blocked the punt. Hereford turned the good field position into a touchdown, but botched the extra point. Pampa led 7-6 at halftime.

Hereford controlled the third quarter, scoring two touchdowns and converting a couple of two-point attempts, one of which came of a botched extra-point snap to take a 22-7 lead.

Thomas made a juggling catch at the 4-yard-line, then Pampa scored their second touchdown of the game on a pass from Fernando Anguiano to Darrell Fields. The two point attempt was no good, and Pampa trailed 22-13.

The defense made a stop and Pampa's offense got the ball back. A hook-and-lateral play to Brendan Grant got the ball down the opposing 26-yard-line, but Pampa was unable to score and ultimately lost by a final score of 22-13.

Next was the junior varsity game. Pampa got off to a rough start, finding themselves down 21-0 midway through the first quarter.

After Hereford's third touchdown, Jordan Baker returned the kickoff to the opposing 11-yard-line. Pampa fumbled on the one-yard-line, but Newt Dodd recovered the ball in the endzone to give the Harvesters their first score of the game. Dodd converted the extra point to make the score 21-7.

The first half didn't get any better for the Harvesters as Hereford led 42-7 at halftime.

The Pampa defense forced a three and out to begin the second half. Brandon Steward completed a pass to Cody Scarlett to get to the five-yard-line. Steward then connected with Corbin Hair for a touchdown. The extra point was blocked, but Dodd picked up the ball and ran it into the end zone to make the score 42-15.

After another three and out for Hereford, Baker returned the punt to the 10-yard-line. Steward scored on a keeper and Dodd's extra point made the score 42-22.

On Hereford's next drive, Angel Saldierna came up with a fumble recovery. Pampa immediately turned it into points as Steward connected with Scarlett for a touchdown on the very next play.

Despite the comeback effort, Hereford held on to win the junior varsity game, 49-28.

The Pampa freshmen and junior varsity teams play at Bushland on Thursday. Freshmen kick off at 5 p.m., with the junior varsity teams playing immediately afterwards.

Stanton pegged

MILWAUKEE (AP) — The Miami Marlins lost much more than a game. They've likely lost All-Star slugger Giancarlo Stanton for the rest of the season after a frightening scene at Miller Park.

Stanton sustained multiple facial fractures, dental damage and cuts that needed stitches after being hit in the face by a fastball from Milwaukee's Mike Fiers.

The Marlins said Stanton, the major league RBI leader and a top candidate for the NL MVP award, would return to Miami on Friday.

"We do not believe he will require surgery," the team said Friday.

Asked if Stanton could play again this season, Marlins manager Mike Redmond said, "It does not look good."

"It's devastating for us. Devastating. For his season to end like that, I mean, that's not good," Redmond said.

Stanton's father was at Thursday night's game and came onto the field while his son was treated.

Hill leads No. 25 BYU past Houston

PROVO, Utah (AP) — If Taysom Hill needs to take off running 26 times every game, so be it. As long as BYU is winning.

The dual-threat junior quarterback ran for 160 yards on 26 carries with one score, and threw for 200 yards and another in No. 25 BYU's 33-25 victory over Houston on Thursday night.

"My mindset is, whatever it takes," he said.

Jamaal Williams rushed for 139 yards and two TDs for BYU, which has won its opening three games for the first time since 2008. BYU moved into the rankings after a 41-7 victory over Texas last weekend.

But it wasn't pretty.

BYU jumped out to an early 23-0 lead, but Houston (1-2) scored 15 straight points before halftime. Overall, BYU had 11 penalties for 98 yards, had a player ejected, and committed three turnovers.

"I'm glad that we continues to battle, continued to fight," coach Bronco Mendenhall said. "We had some offensive momentum in the first half, and we moved it when we needed to. Overall, it was a hard fought win. There's plenty to work on, but a lot of things that I was pleased with."

Houston's John O'Korn passed for 307 yards and three touchdowns, including a 45-yard desperation heave to Daniel Spencer as time ran out in the first half. Deontay Greenberry made a pair of touchdown catches.

"You have to give a lot of credit to our team for not giving up and not folding. We just kept fighting," linebacker Derrick Matthews said. "When we were down 23-0 early it could have been easy for us to lay down, but that's not who we are. I feel like we showed a lot of passion and a lot of heart."

The teams met last season with BYU pulling out the win on Hill's 11-yard touchdown pass to Skyler Ridley with less than two minutes to go for a 47-46 win.

BYU's fake punt to cap its opening drive of the second half Thursday failed and the team was also hurt by a personal foul penalty on Tejan Koroma, who was ejected from the game.

Trevor Samson kicked a 26-yard field goal to extend BYU's lead to 26-15 late in the third quarter. Williams added a 2-yard touchdown run early in the final period.

BYU appeared to score on its first drive of the game, but Hill's 32-yard pass to Devon Blackmon was called back by an illegal formation penalty.

Houston's Ryan Jackson later fumbled in the end zone, and the ball was recovered by Zac Stout for the safety to put BYU up 2-0. Williams' 11-yard touchdown run pushed the lead to 9-0 before Hill scored on a 5-yard keeper.

Houston's Kyle Bullard attempted a 38-yard field goal early in the second quarter but the ball barely got off the ground because of a muffed hold.

Hill hit Mitch Matthews with a 6-yard scoring pass to make it 23-0 with 8:57 to go before halftime.

Houston rallied, and after Bullard made a 29-yard field goal, defensive tackle Joey Mbu intercepted Hill at the BYU 29. Houston capped the ensuing series with O'Korn's 7-yard touchdown pass to Greenberry.

Hill found Mitch Jurgens with a 38-yard pass, but safety Adrian McDonald forced a fumble and ran the ball back 28 yards to the BYU 45. With time running out, Spencer pulled down O'Korn's 45-yard heave to make it 23-15 at the break.

"It was one of those unbelievable plays that worked out. That's what happens when you give your guys a chance," O'Korn said.

Bullard missed the extra points after both Houston touchdowns.

"We started out great. We just come off the gas a little bit," Williams said. "We weren't used to getting up so quickly in the first half. Defense always holds up, but the offense just can't take the foot off the gas."

Hill had 360 yards of total offense, and he and Williams combined for nearly 300 of BYU's 323 yards rushing.

Hill, who has been popping up as a Heisman Trophy contender, has been chosen as the FBS Independents' player of the week after each of the season's first two weekends.

He rushed for five touchdowns and threw for three more and accounted for an average of 342.5 yards in total offense in those first two games.

Union reps to discuss NFL drug policy again

NEW YORK (AP) — Player representatives to the union will again discuss the NFL's latest drug policy proposal, and on the table are changes that could provide for HGH testing.

A conference call was scheduled for late afternoon and a vote was possible. The 32 player reps did not vote earlier this week after a similar call.

The league and union initially agreed to testing for human growth hormone when the collective bargaining agreement was reached in 2011. But the players have balked at the science in the testing, and also at the appeals process for positive tests.

Alterations to the substance abuse policy also could result in several currently suspended players having their bans reduced. That could include Browns receiver Josh Gordon, who is suspended for the 2014 season.

"Just because we've heard everything and seen everything, until we get official word from the league and then start to respond, you don't get your hopes up, it's rumors and innuendo," Browns coach Mike Pettine said Friday. "I'll believe it when I see it."

The sides have discussed changes to the policy on substance abuse and driving under the influence of drugs/alcohol. A potential hang-up on that issue was the league's desire to immediately discipline players — as well as NFL owners, executives, officials, coaches and league office personnel — arrested for DUIs. NFLPA President Eric Winston told The Associated Press last week that ignoring a player's rights to due process would not be considered by the union.

The NFLPA also is pushing for neutral arbitration in the appeals process and is seeking higher thresholds for positive marijuana tests.

In marijuana testing, the union feels the league's threshold for a positive test of 15 nanograms per milliliter is too demanding, citing the IOC's threshold of 150 nanograms, 10 times as high.

The NFL threshold was collectively bargained. But, Winston said last Friday, anyone within the vicinity of people smoking marijuana without partaking themselves could wind up testing positive at such a low number.

The union has insisted that a satisfactory proposal to them must deal with a multitude of drug policy issues. Spokesman George Atallah said last week a "piecemeal" agreement did not interest players.

Walker suspended

AUSTIN (AP) — Texas guard Martez Walker was suspended indefinitely from all team activities Friday after he was charged with misdemeanor assault for allegedly beating his girlfriend in a campus dormitory.

According to campus police, Travis County Emergency Medical Services was called to the dorm Wednesday night, where the victim reported Walker slapped her and punched her four times in the left side.

According to Walker's arrest affidavit, Tanecia Gardner said Walker became angry because she went to happy hour with a male supervisor from her job. She also suggested her relationship with Walker has a history of physical violence.

"Gardner said she knew from previous fights with Walker that he was going to hit her, so she hid her face and went into the fetal position on the couch," the affidavit said.

Gardner told police Walker punched her "hard" four times, then dragged her by the arms and threw her out of his room.

No. 12 UCLA Bruins more centered headed to Texas

ARLINGTON (AP) — UCLA quarterback Brett Hundley felt so much better taking snaps from Jake Brendel, the center who now gets to go home with the 12th-ranked Bruins. Hundley has accounted for a touchdown in each of his 29 consecutive starts, but things were clearly out of synch when UCLA struggled offensively in the season opener that Brendel missed with a sprained left knee.

“We came in together, and I’ve really only taken snaps from him since I got here,” said Hundley, who rebounded in Week 2 as the Pac-12 offensive player of the week with 422 total yards. “It’s a big difference to have him back, and I think you could see it.”

The Bruins (2-0) on Saturday night take on the Texas Longhorns (1-1) in Arlington, Texas. The game is at the $1.2 billion Dallas Cowboys’ home stadium where the national championship game will be decided in four months, and where Brendel played a few games while at nearby Plano East High School. “I played there in high school and playoffs. It’s impressive. The whole stadium, the whole atmosphere, especially when it’s full,” Brendel said. “It’s an impressive place to play.”

While the Texas campus is only about three hours away from the stadium, this will be the first time the Longhorns play there since the 2009 Big 12 championship game the same year it opened.

The Longhorns easily won their opener over North Texas, but are coming off a 41-7 home loss to BYU. First-year Longhorns coach Charlie Strong made it clear publicly and privately to his team this week that those kinds of performances are not acceptable. “It’s embarrassing and humiliating when you get beat at home. I don’t think I’ve ever been a part of throwing your team under the bus, and they heard it from me,” Strong said. “And they’ve heard it from me for two or three days, and have continued to hear it from me.”

Here are few things to know when the Bruins and Longhorns hook up in a “neutral” location game:

Burden Of Expectations?: After its highest preseason ranking since 1998, UCLA has dropped in both polls since even while winning its first two games in which they were heavy favorites. The Bruins needed three defensive touchdowns to win 28-20 at Virginia in the opener, and Hundley threw a tie-breaking touchdown at home last week in a 42-35 win over Memphis. “For us, you’ve got to always be happy when you win, because that’s the first objective,” coach Jim Mora said of the close wins. “But I don’t think anybody was satisfied. ... Knocking us back on track? No. Maybe refocusing a little bit.”

More For Swoopes: Tyrone Swoopes will make his second start as the Texas quarterback in place of concussion plagued David Ash. There was a simplified offensive game plan in place for the sophomore’s first career start last week. It won’t be that simple against UCLA. “It’s going to be expanded,” coach Strong said. “The thing he did was he executed the offense and he managed it very well. ... Just each and every week, it’ll be something added for him because now he’s shown that we all were just wondering how it was going to go, and I think it ended up going very well.”

Homecoming Tickets: Sophomore linebacker Deon Hollins was recruited by Texas before going to UCLA. This week, his entire family from the Houston area will get a chance to see him play. “It should be wonderful. Let’s just say 20 or 30 (tickets) is not enough,” said Hollins, who had reasons for not saying closer to home. “I just felt like here gave me a little bit more love.” The Bruins have nine players from Texas on their roster.

Sack Attack: The Texas defense has recovered 10 sacks through the first two games — only three FBS teams have averaged more than the Longhorns’ five per game. Nine players have been involved in those sacks.

Dallas at Tennessee trying to avoid 0-2 start

NASHVILLE, Tenn. (AP) — It’s only Week 2, and the Dallas Cowboys already face a crucial road trip to Tennessee. The Cowboys are coming off a 28-17 opening loss to San Francisco at home in which they turned over the ball four times in the first half, with Tony Romo intercepted three times. Now Dallas is trying to avoid its first 0-2 start since 2010.

That season the Cowboys started 1-7, and Jason Garrett was promoted to head coach for the second half of the schedule. “It’s going to be difficult, but we’ve got to go in there and do what we need to do and try to figure out a way to get a win,” Romo said. Garrett said they have a lot of respect for Tennessee after the Titans won 26-10 in Kansas City. “Our focus is on ourselves ...,” Garrett said.

They went 13-3 — their last playoff appearance. Now Whisenhunt, their third coach since then, wants to build off that opening win and make LP Field a special place to be. “We have to establish a bond with our fans,” Whisenhunt said. “We haven’t done that yet. This team hasn’t done it. That’s important for us to come out there and do that. The only way you can do that is playing a game and getting a win, because that creates a special bond.”

Here are a few items to watch Sunday:

Romo’s Recovery: Romo said he was fine physically in his first real game since back surgery last December. But he said the mental side of the game might have suffered through lighter work in the offseason and preseason. “What can happen is you lose certain subtle things that need to continually be there beforehand,” Romo said. “I think that comes with playing. I’m disappointed it obviously took a game to get to that point, but it’ll be different going forward.”

Locker Time: Titans quarterback Jake Locker is off to a strong start in a contract year. The Titans didn’t pick up his 2015 option, so the eighth pick overall in 2011 has to prove he’s worthy of a new deal. Locker threw for 266 yards and two touchdowns against Kansas City, giving him a 111.4 passer rating. That was the third highest in his 19 career starts and was fifth best among NFL quarterbacks in the opening week — second in the AFC to only Peyton Manning.

McClain Back In SEC Country: Dallas linebacker Rolando McClain, who tied for the team lead in tackles in his first game since 2012, comes back to SEC country. The former Alabama star will make his second start for the Cowboys less than two months after getting sentenced to 18 days in jail on charges of resisting arrest and disorderly conduct in his hometown of Decatur, Alabama.

Defensive Issue: The Cowboys, who gave up 127 yards rushing, will be tested with linebacker Justin Durant possibly out with an injured groin. The Titans ran for 162 yards in Kansas City, and their defense played even better, coming up with four sacks and three turnovers.

Series: This will be only the 13th meeting between these teams, and Dallas has won two of the last three. This will be the Cowboys’ first trip to Tennessee since Oct. 1, 2006, another Dallas win better known for Titans defensive tackle Albert Haynesworth stepping on center Andre Gurode’s face. That earned him a five-game suspension.

daily horoscope

HAPPY BIRTHDAY for Monday, Sept. 15, 2014:
This year you often send out mixed messages. Be aware of this tendency, as it could make others crazy. Listen carefully if someone gives you feedback. You are likely to do a lot of personal work on yourself and move quickly through any issues you encounter. You also will want to examine your life and try to tweak whatever is not working. If you are single, get to know someone very well before making any commitments. You will have a tendency to attract people who are emotionally unavailable. If you are attached, your relationship benefits from weekend dates and vacations away. Being alone together strengthens your bond. GEMINI can irritate you, but he or she has great ideas.
The Stars Show the Kind of Day You'll Have: 5-Dynamic; 4-Positive; 3-Average; 2-So-so; 1-Difficult
ARIES (March 21-April 19)
★★★★ You'll speak your mind as you typically do, yet your tone could motivate others to take action. Make sure your information is correct. You might want to move in a new direction because of a partner. Deal with this person directly. Tonight: Don't hold back.
TAURUS (April 20-May 20)
★★★ Be aware of what is going on within you. You will gain a new perspective if you slow down. Follow your instincts. New information comes forward that could cause you to reorganize your plans. Relax and get past the immediate issue. Tonight: Keep stress levels low.
GEMINI (May 21-June 20)
★★★★★ You'll flourish despite someone else's attempt to put you down. You understand the relevance of this behavior and how to bypass it. You could be challenged by a friend who acts in a most unexpected way. Tonight: Do what would make you most happy.
CANCER (June 21-July 22)
★★★ Take your time in how you deal with someone and the choices you make. You will need to take your time and look within yourself in order to find the right answer. Don't allow someone's attitude to distract you. Decide if taking action is necessary. Tonight: Keep an easy pace.
LEO (July 23-Aug. 22)
★★★★ You'll be able to visualize a good idea and then make it a reality. One person inevitably will give you flak, but the majority of people will support you. News from a distance could surprise you. Resist a tendency to be fussy. Tonight: Let it all hang out, even if it is Monday!

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22)
★★★ You'll have a tendency to feel overconfident -- that is, until you have a discussion with someone you look up to. Use this conversation to clarify your views and understand others. Defer to someone who might be more creative and diplomatic. Tonight: Burn the midnight oil.
LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22)
★★★★ Use your ability to stay above the fray. Take a complete overview of an event that might have caused a difficult situation. This perspective will be needed when dealing with a key person in your life. You could be taken back by a loved one. Tonight: Opt to make a change.
SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21)
★★★★ You might want to listen to news with a bit of cynicism. Just because someone says a situation is a certain way does not mean it is; that person's perception simply defines the matter in that way. Decide to gain your own perspective. Tonight: Togetherness works.
SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21)
★★★★ You might want to ease some of today's tension. Detach from an immediate situation, rather than add to your stress level. Sometimes you need to back off and give a situation or others a break. Tonight: Share with a dear friend or loved one.
CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19)
★★★ Keep an even pace, and attempt to see how you can delegate certain tasks, or find a shortcut. Use your leadership skills and efficiency to head down a new path -- not only for you, but for others as well. Listen to news more openly than you have in the past. Tonight: Happy at home.
AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18)
★★★★★ Your playfulness might not work with friend who has a solemn attitude. Be smart, and try to avoid this situation. If possible, take off in the evening and do something just for you. Allow greater give-and-take with a child or new friend. Tonight: Let loose!
PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20)
★★★★ Relate to others directly, and avoid getting involved in any gossip. Your personal touch will make all the difference in your dealings. A family member might want your attention. Recognize that you need to focus on your priorities. Tonight: Enjoy being home.
