The Pampa Harvester tennis teams hosted the district meet on Monday and Tuesday in Pampa. To qualify for regionals a team must have finished in the top one or two places. The third place team from each division goes to regionals as an alternate. Pampa had five teams finish second and two finish third across five divisions. The divisions are girls singles, boys singles, girls doubles, boys doubles and mixed doubles.

Tennis is a little different than other sports in the fact that each team plays as an individual. There are no Pampa team results. Each player, or double's group, are put into their draws and compete against other individuals for the top spots. Head coach Sarah Corse said she was really proud of the efforts by the tennis teams. "I am really proud of how they did," Corse said. "They played really well and fought hard to make regionals." The regionals will be April 22-23 in Lubbock. At regionals each division has 16 teams in a draw. From there, the top two finishers in each group will head to state. Kindle Hunt finished second in girls singles. Jordan Moore finished second in boys singles. The girls doubles team of Zoe Hulsey and Copper Horton finished second in their division. The boys doubles team of Chase Cree and Ajay Mitchell finished second in their division. The mixed doubles team of Lane Terry and Genevieve Zavala placed second in

Idali Solis: Bilingual speaker and insurance agent

By JOHN LEE
 jlee@thepampanews.com

With the ever-changing shift in population and the growth of Spanish-speaking customers, it's nice to have a proficient tongue for both English and Spanish. Idali Solis, insurance agent, has been at Brenda Guess - Farmers Insurance for more than two years. "I've been licensed for a year and a half," Solis said. "I was born and raised in Pampa and graduated from Pampa High School." Solis did some college at Clarendon College and some in the DFW area at Tarrant County College. Solis got into insurance as she noticed Brenda Guess would have trouble with customers who spoke Spanish. "So she would call me from time to time asking me to translate for her and then it just ended up being that I was going out to different businesses with her and it just kind of gradually happened," Solis said.

Idali Solis

"I had to stop for a little bit because I had a baby, but eight months later I started working in the office." Solis said she started to grow an appreciation for the field as she was going out to businesses with Guess. "It's tough sometimes because you deal with a lot of different people," Solis said. "I've learned to be flexible in that area of meeting people." Solis said the hardest part about insurance is the part of the country we are located. "It's rates and living in the Texas Panhandle," Solis said. "We have all of the weather-related losses. We have the worst weather here. That's the hardest part and the rates and trying to explain them." Solis grew up with both English and Spanish. "My neighbor was my age and she didn't speak a lick of Spanish," Solis said. "And I didn't speak English so we were little and she would teach me how to speak English and I would teach

Breaking the cycle of child abuse

By JANET WATTS
 Executive Director of CASA of the High Plains

Texas Child Protective Services (CPS) has been in the news lately for failing to protect children in the state's care. Many are just now learning about this tragic situation, but if we only focus on this issue when it is highly visible in the newspaper or on the morning news, it can be easy to miss the bigger picture. This April, as we observe National Child Abuse Prevention Month, it's important we recommit ourselves to ending the vicious cycle of abuse and to standing up for every child too young to speak for themselves. This month, and throughout the year, CASA of the High Plains encourages Pampa citizens to come together to promote awareness of the child abuse and neglect that exists in our local community. Join us on April 10 by wearing your blue clothing for Go Blue Day.

CASA of the High Plains is one of the 71 CASA programs across Texas that works to ensure all children placed in the foster care system due to abuse or neglect can have the safe, stable and nurturing environments they need to thrive. CASA programs recruit and train everyday members of the community to speak up for the best interests of children in court to ensure that they are placed into loving, permanent homes as quickly as possible. These extraordinary people are called CASA (Court Appointed Special Advocate) volunteers.

Last year, more than 46,800 children were in the care and custody of the Department of Family and Protective Services (DFPS) due to abuse or neglect. CASA of the High Plains, along with our statewide CASA community, provided 8,066 CASA volunteers who served 24,742 children in 207 of Texas' 254 counties over the course of the past year.

Children in foster care experience a tremendous amount of change and instability. Often, they don't have a consistent adult that they can rely on — someone to keep them safe and make sure their voices are heard. But children with a CASA volunteer spend less time in foster care and receive better access to support and services.

The future of Texas relies on the healthy growth and development of all children. So this April, as we mark National Child Abuse Prevention Month, I call upon all citizens, community agencies, faith groups, schools, government agencies and businesses to increase their participation in efforts to support families and prevent child abuse, thereby strengthening our entire community.

Last year, roughly less than half of the children in the child welfare system did not have a CASA volunteer to advocate for their best interests. Be that someone for a child in foster care — someone who speaks up to change a child's life forever. Consider becoming a CASA volunteer and take that first step in helping to break the cycle of child abuse and neglect. There are 17 children in Gray County waiting for a CASA volunteer. Please consider becoming a voice for these children.

If you see abuse, report it to (800) 252-5400 or go to www.txabusehotline.org. If a child's life is in danger, call 911. If you want to leave a legacy of positive change, become a CASA volunteer. For more information, visit www.BecomeaCASA.org or www.casahp.org, or call 806-669-7638.

Janet Watts is executive director of CASA of the High Plains, which recruits, trains and supports volunteers to advocate for abused and neglected children in Gray, Donley, Hansford, Hemphill, Lipscomb, Ochiltree, Roberts and Wheeler Counties.

her how to speak Spanish. By the time I was in Kindergarten I was already speaking English so I wasn't in ESL (English as a Second Language) very long."

Being bilingual is obviously a perk when dealing with customers, but Solis said it has its perks in daily life as well.

"With my family, of course," Solis said. "My parents do know English but not very well. So that's a better way to communicate with each other. But also with my daughter, I want to get her going with two languages. She is three years old and speaks two languages, almost three since her dad is Filipino."

Solis not only enjoys working insurance but also loves her relationship with Geuss.

"She's a really, really good person," Solis said. "She helps out everybody. She's helped me get a little edge in my personality. But she is more than just my boss, we've gone to Polar Express together. I've met all of her family, she's met mine. We've kind of become family throughout the years."

While Guess has certainly taught Solis what she needs to know, Solis hasn't forgotten the tough road to being licensed as an insurance agent.

"It was tough because I was driving to Amarillo everyday," Solis said. "Because the district office for Farmer's is in Amarillo. They were doing sessions for you to pass the test. I had already been working a little bit so I kind of knew what was going on, but it was still different (on the test). I studied so hard and as soon as I looked at my test, it wasn't anything I studied."

Solis passed her test on her first attempt and was proud because there were other test takers who were on their third or fourth attempt.

She added that the classes were real informative and did a great job of finding ways to make information stick with the learners.

Now a licensed agent and interacting with customers on a daily basis, Solis has seen a side of Pampa she has never seen before.

"Being members of the Chamber of Commerce and going to all of the community events [has been great]," Solis said. "I have never seen this side of Pampa even though I have lived here all of my life. I have met a lot of people and everyone has been really, really nice to me and I really like it."

Solis is married to Charles and the couple have a daughter, Danelly.

You can meet Idali at Brenda Guess - Farmers Insurance, Monday through Friday from 9 a.m. to 5 p.m. Brenda Guess - Farmers Insurance is located at 1534 N. Hobart in Pampa.

their division. Going as an alternate to regionals are Christian Ulrey, Cooper Anderson and Kaycee Sellers. Anderson and Sellers came in third in mixed doubles. Ulrey came in third in boys singles.

The next few athletes, despite not making regionals, still did well at district.

Kristi Klusmeyer and Kaitlyn Hart came in fourth in the girls doubles division. Chance Douglas and Shattner Reeve came in fourth in the boys doubles division.

The junior varsity Pampa tennis teams also had some success at district.

Molly Nelson came in first in girls singles. Madi Bolch was second in girls singles and Allison Daniels was third in that same division.

Jett Richards and Dannon Rickles came in second for the JV in the boys doubles division.

The Pampa News would like to congratulate all of the tennis players on a great season so far, but also wish them the best of luck at regionals as they try to make state!

Once again they will be headed to Texas Tech University on April 22-23 in Lubbock for the Regional Tournament.

Hundreds wrongly get acceptance documents for Texas State

SAN MARCOS (AP) — Hundreds of prospective students wrongly received acceptance brochures to Texas State University in an error blamed on a mailing service.

KVUE-TV reported Tuesday that more than 450 potential students received the congratulatory documents last week.

An official with the school in San Marcos says a third-party mailing service made the mistake. The informational brochure had details on orientation and directed students how to choose the right dormitory for TSU, with enrollment topping 36,000.

School authorities say the brochures went out to potential students who applied but their documents were incomplete. Some of the students have since completed their applications and were accepted, while others were denied enrollment.

TSU officials were mailing letters this week to all of the individuals acknowledging the error and clarifying their enrollment status.

Lawsuit filed over fire at GE's Appliance Park in Louisville

LOUISVILLE, Ky. (AP) — A lawsuit has been filed against General Electric over a fire at its Appliance Park last week.

The Courier-Journal says the lawsuit was filed Monday in Jefferson County Circuit Court by a resident who lives near the complex and claims the company was negligent in storing flammable material in its warehouse.

The lawsuit also says residents affected by the order to stay inside suffered harm from "noxious plumes of black smoke" and "excessive amounts of particulate matter."

Plaintiff Alex Ruiz lives 1 1/2 miles from the building that caught fire Friday. Ruiz is seeking a class-action lawsuit on behalf of all who live with the shelter-in-place area and anyone else affected by the remnants of the fire.

Derby Industries, which leases space from GE, was also named in the suit.

Elizabeth Nikolaivna Kuchkovskaya Fernuik

Graveside services were held at 2 p.m. Tuesday, April 7, 2015, in Memory Gardens Cemetery in Pampa with Ron Fernuik officiating. Arrangements are by Robertson Funeral Directors of Clarendon.

Elizabeth Nikolaivna Kuchkovskaya Fernuik, 86, passed away Easter morning, April 5, 2015, in Pampa. Born in Manchuria, China on April 16, 1928, to Paul Nicolas and Paraskeva Kuchkovsky, Elizabeth immigrated to San Francisco, Calif., in 1952. She married Romee Harry Fernuik on July 3, 1954, in Reno, Calif. They had one son, Ronald Nicolas Fernuik and made their home in the San Francisco area. After Romee passed away in May 1988, Elizabeth moved to Pampa to be near her family. She resided in the Pam Apartments for 14 years before moving in with her son and his family, where she was loved by a devoted team of care givers from Accolade Hospice and family for the past 18 months.

Elizabeth leaves behind a rich legacy. Her family always came first. She took a job to supplement family income so that her son, Ron, could learn to fly and obtain a college education. She faithfully attended dozens of school musicals and concerts, sporting events and special church functions in ever-constant support of her six grandchildren. Some of her grandchildren's earliest memories are of the books and etiquette videos she sent, and the annual Festival of the Trees in conjunction with the Pampa Civic Ballet's Nutcracker performance. Elizabeth never stopped learning and set a an example of openness to new experiences, whether skydiving at age 82, trying new cuisines, reading stacks of magazines, listening to radio shows or actively asking questions. Elizabeth exuded a deep sense of gratitude for the smallest blessings. Her eyes would sometimes mist over in the produce section, overcome with gratitude for this land of plenty and choice, always a touching reminder. She prayed sincerely from the heart, humbly approaching God in great thanksgiving and in petition for others. Known to all for her vivacity and quick wit, Elizabeth perpetually had a beautiful way of finding the positive in any situation with a contagious cheer. An avid and meticulous gardener, Elizabeth loved the outdoors and often would take her family on long nature walks, patiently examining all of God's creations. Never in a frantic rush, Elizabeth knew how to savor each moment in life, usually over a cup of tea.

Elizabeth will be missed by her son and daughter-in-law, Ron and Taci Fernuik of Pampa; by her six grandchildren and their families: Heather and Daniel Petrenko of Alexandria, Va.; Andy Fernuik of Salt Lake City, Utah; Aaron Fernuik of Pampa; Nicole and Ammon McNeff and their two children, Naomi and Edmund, of Provo, Utah; Michael and Logan Fernuik of Lubbock; Robin Fernuik of Dallas; and by a host of extended family, friends, neighbors and loved ones.

Thanks be unto God for his unspeakable gift of His Son and for the surety of resurrection in Christ (2 Cor. 9:15; 1 Cor. 15:22)!

Eastern Shore wind farm scrapped amid political opposition

SALISBURY, Md. (AP) — A Texas energy company says it's shelving plans for a wind farm on Maryland's Eastern Shore amid opposition from state and federal lawmakers concerned about protecting jobs at the Patuxent River Naval Air Station across the Chesapeake Bay.

Pioneer Green Energy wrote to the Somerset County Commissioners last month that it is indefinitely suspending the project due to “unanticipated hurdles and roadblocks.” Vice President Adam Cohen cited U.S. Sen. Barbara Mikulski's efforts to stall the project pending further study.

The 25-turbine project was championed by former Democratic Gov. Martin O'Malley and environmental groups. But opponents said the spinning blades could compromise radar that tests the stealth capabilities of fighter jets.

The General Assembly is considering legislation to permanently bar wind turbines from much of the Eastern Shore.

S.C. Gwynne event

The series of skirmishes and battles that followed the second Battle of Adobe Walls became known as the Red River War. In a strategy conceived by Generals Sherman and Sheridan, troops entered the Panhandle from five different directions, forcing the Indian warriors into the canyons. Violent encounters between soldiers and Indians continued over the next several months. Finally, a daring offensive led by Colonel Ranald Mackenzie, whom the Indians called “Bad Hand,” brought the war to a dramatic conclusion.

COURTNEY OXLEY

Mackenzie, an experienced Civil War commander, had been one of the leading military figures in Texas since the Salt Creek Massacre. Mackenzie was charged with establishing supply lines and depots on the Staked Plains. He created the first maps of the area and undertook a series of expeditions to stop Indian raiding both from Indian Territory and from Mexico. On Sept. 28, 1874, Mackenzie bottled up a large force of Kiowas, Comanches, and Cheyennes in upper Palo Duro Canyon. Attacking at dawn down the steep cliff walls, Mackenzie’s men concentrated not on killing warriors but on torching the Indians’ possessions and capturing and killing their horses. More than 1,100 horses were killed. This action destroyed the ability of the Indians to continue the war. Defeated, most of the Indians reluctantly surrendered and returned to the reservations in Indian Territory. A few bands continued to hold out into 1875. Finally, in June 1875, Quanah Parker brought in his last band of resisting Comanches. Parker’s surrender marked the end of a long era. Once the lords of the plains, the Comanches and their allies followed the rest of the Texas Indians into exile on the reservations. With the Indians gone and the buffalo all but exterminated, the Texas plains now entered a new era, one in which great ranches would cover the area once crossed only by Indian trails.

In 1876, after the disastrous Battle of the Little Big Horn, Colonel Mackenzie was named to replace George Armstrong Custer in the war on the Plains. He won a decisive victory over the Northern Cheyennes. For the next seven years, he was a key commander in the Indian wars in the West. In 1883, he suffered a mental breakdown and was forced to leave the Army. He never recovered and died in an asylum in 1889. (Reference Texas State Library and Archives Commission.)

On April 25, The White Deer Land Museum will be hosting S.C. Gwynne, author of Empire of the Summer Moon: Quanah Parker and the Rise and Fall of the Comanches, the Most Powerful Indian Tribe in American History and Rebel Yell: The Violence, Passion, and Redemption of Stonewall Jackson.

The book takes place close to home, in the heart of Texas. It mentions places your familiar with such as the Palo Duro Canyon and many others. We invite you all to join us for a closer look into the history of our area.

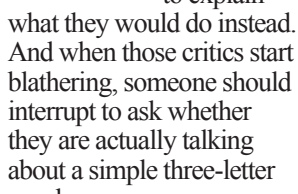

The event will kick off with the Quanah Parker Trail arrow dedication at 4 p.m. The arrow is located on Cuyler street just across the street from the Museum. In the same lot as the old Pioneer Cottage. Following at 5 p.m. is a Friends and VIP reception with S.C. Gwynne. The reception will be held at the Historic First National Bank Building and tickets are $25. At 6 p.m., at the First National Bank Building on Cuyler St., we will introduce to the public, Mr. S.C. Gwynne. There will be a Q&A session and book signing following the presentation. Books will be available for purchase.

For more information or to purchase tickets, please contact the museum.

To learn more about Pampa and the Gray County area, visit the White Deer Land Museum in downtown Pampa. Regular tours are offered Tuesday through Saturday from 1-4 p.m. If you would like to schedule a special or group tour, please call or email the museum at 806-669-8041 or courtney.oxley@graycch.com.

Iran deal: Do the critics want war?

Before too much credibility is lavished upon Republican critics of the Iran nuclear agreement draft, including all of the assorted would-be presidential candidates, someone ought to urge them to explain what they would do instead. And when those critics start blathering, someone should interrupt to ask whether they are actually talking about a simple three-letter word: war.

JOE CONASON

From the beginning, the familiar faces that favor war over negotiation have prepared their talking points against any eventual deal. But they were surely surprised by the comprehensive, positive and detailed character of the framework announced in Lausanne, Switzerland, by Secretary of State John Kerry. The tentative nuclear agreement includes significant concessions by Iran that will achieve the most important metric demanded by the United States and its diplomatic partners — namely, to extend the “breakout” period required for Tehran to develop a single nuclear weapon.

According to President Obama, Kerry and the P5+1 alliance in Lausanne — where the talks had continued until the last possible moments — the government of Iran has agreed to cut its uranium-enriching centrifuges from 19,000 to 6,000, greatly reducing its capacity to rapidly produce weapons-grade material.

Iranian Foreign Minister Javad Zarif also agreed that his country will not enrich uranium over 3.67 percent for the next 15 years and will slash its present inventory of more than 20 tons of low-enriched uranium to well under a ton for the same duration. Moreover, Zarif and his team conceded that Iran will ship all of the spent fuel from its heavy-water reactor at Arak, which might have been reprocessed into bomb-ready plutonium, to other countries for reprocessing — a sticking point earlier in the talks. The Arak facility itself will undergo a reconstruction process — including the destruction of the reactor’s original core — rendering production of plutonium impossible.

The deal provides for continuous IAEA monitoring of all Iranian nuclear reactors and programs — described by Obama as the most intensive ever undertaken — and for sanctions relief that will only begin when Iran has met all of its initial commitments to restructure and dismantle its weapons-related equipment and programs.

As Obama said in welcoming the agreement, these negotiations — and their ultimate success — are an opportunity of historic significance to reduce the risks of war and proliferation.

But the Iran talks also represent a chance to promote peaceful change in that unfortunate country, whose people desperately hope that the government of President Hassan Rouhani can move toward normal relationships with Western countries, especially the United States. The best guarantees of peace and security — for the world, the U.S., the Middle East and, yes, Israel — will be realized by strengthening forces in Tehran that seek to transcend Iran’s status as a diplomatic and economic pariah.

So what would the critics propose? Extending the current sanctions regime is not a workable option and would not, by their estimates, permanently deter Iran from developing nuclear weapons — even if international unity behind the sanctions could be maintained indefinitely, which is even more unlikely.

Evidently, the critics intend to embroil the United States and Israel in a series of military strikes against Iranian nuclear facilities, another strategy that will not achieve any enduring impact. Is their real plan a full-scale land invasion leading to “regime change”? Unlike Iraq, the target of the last misadventure promoted by these same savants, Iran has a large and well-equipped military. Last time, the neoconservative advocates of war assured us that invading Iraq would cost us practically nothing — a prediction that was tragically wrong. What will their bad advice cost us this time?

The American people support Obama’s use of internationally backed sanctions to achieve a negotiated agreement rather than armed conflict — and now his approach is proving more effective than the belligerent attitude promoted by his critics over the past decade. Let us hope that he and Kerry, both of whom deserve enormous credit for their moral courage and pertinacity, will be able to bring forth a signed agreement by the next deadline in late June.

Hump Day with Humphrey

Humphrey’s new furniture restriction

I’d like to start off this week by thanking the handful of you for stopping by Humphrey’s Facebook page. I’ve started putting some of his older articles on there, and it’s been kind of nice for me to go see what I used to write about my trusty steed.

LINDSEY TOMASCHIK

I had a picture of Humphrey in his bunny ears from Easter that I was going to use for this week’s column, but my phone took a nasty fall onto the asphalt, so that’s no longer in the realm of possibilities. With my luck, I just had to drop the phone without the otterbox on it.

Anyway, a picture of Humphrey’s yawn face will have to suffice, which is probably my favorite thing to catch when photographing my hound. It looks like he’s screaming, and totally fits in with his personality.

As predicted, Humphrey has been spending a lot of time laying on the linoleum floor to keep cool. He’s pretty excited about the cooler weather heading into the second half of this week, though.

I was reading through one of the old HWDH articles about Humphrey watching movies, and it made me go out and rent “Big Hero 6” last night (Monday). I put it on and expected him to watch it, but all Humphrey wanted to do last night was play tug of war, so that didn’t work out like I’d planned.

He was none too pleased with me last night as he realized he was not going to be sleeping in my bed with me. I got some new bedding and decided to start making him sleep on the floor again.

Those of you who may not know, bulldogs shed A TON, and having to basically carry a lint roller in my back pocket is getting old. King of the furniture will have to settle with having free range of the living room for the time being, which means I will be hearing a whole lot of Chewbacca.

My little super diva has been enjoying spending lots of time in front of the fan, which has been really nice for him, but he’s been annoyed with me lately since I haven’t been taking him in the car as much. I always worry that it’s too hot for him in the car even though he loves going everywhere with me. This time of year when he goes places with me, I am sure to leave him in there with the air conditioner on if I am running a quick errand.

I’m gonna keep it pretty short this week because Humph really hasn’t been up to all that much lately. Maybe he’ll be a little more exciting for next week’s column.

If you haven’t checked it out yet, go find Humphrey James III on Facebook to keep up with some of his old articles.

CHURCH SPOTLIGHT

Selling grit papers in the cold

Ever had God put someone right in the middle of your life so that you could not only be there for them, but so that they could bless you too. I've had it happen a bunch of times, but today I was remembering one special time with a boy in Ontario, Ore., that still stands out in my memory, even after 24 years.

It was 1990 and Shari and I had been to Bi-Mart, our town's equivalent back then to Wal-Mart now. I don't know what we had purchased, but I do remember what happened when we walked out of the store. There was a nine or 10-year-old boy standing out in the cold, using his coat and the porch area to screen himself from the chilly breeze. As we walked up to him, he respectfully asked, "Want to buy a Grit paper from me, mister?"

The Grit was a weekly newspaper that began back in 1892 and was popular in the rural US during much of the 20th century. It carried the subtitle: "America's Greatest Family Newspaper." Throughout my life it was common to see young boys selling them to earn spending money, just like this boy was doing. I told Shari to go on to the car and that I'd be there in a moment.

"So what is your name young man?"

"My name is Joey, sir."

"So why are you selling those Grits, Joey?"

"I don't have any spending money and it's the only way I know to get some."

"You mean you don't get an allowance from your parents?"

"No sir. There's only mom and she has to use her check to take care of us." That comment about did me in.

"So how many papers do you have there, Joey?"

Quickly he counted and reported, "20 papers sir."

"I'll take them all."

His eyes burst open as wide as silver dollars and his smile stretched from ear lobe to ear lobe. I know he was happy, but he couldn't have been as happy as I was. All I could say under breath was, "Thank You, Lord for bringing this boy into my life today. I needed him more than he needed me."

I handed him the money for the 20 papers and he handed me the papers. He thanked me over and over again. Then I told him, "Well, I have to go home now, Joey, but I want you to know that you are one finest young men I have met. Most boys your age are home playing games in their warm homes and expecting their moms and dads to fork over the money for whatever they want. But you are out making your own way in this old world. You have made my day. Now you can go home and warm up too."

As I turned to walk away, I reached to throw the papers in the trash can near the front door. I didn't really want the papers. Just as I started to release them, I heard a familiar voice. "Hey mister, are you going to throw those papers away?" I confirmed that I was about to do just that. That is when Joey filled my eyes with tears.

"Would it be OK with you if I dug them out of the trash and sold them?" He was asking my permission to do what most boys would never do and he wasn't heading for that warm apartment where he lived. What a boy!

"Here you go, Joey. You take these papers and you sell every one of them. God bless you and your family."

I still remember Joey and those Grit papers and the lessons that he taught me that day. I hope that Joey has taught you a thing or two as well. God bless you and God bless Joey wherever he is. Mike

Growing boys in false worlds

For the last two weeks I have been writing to help you understand what impact too much screen time can have on our kids. As I have gone deeper and deeper into the research I have found that both young girls and young boys suffer under the consequences of too much screen time. But overwhelmingly, it is the boys, our future young men who suffer the major consequences associated with too much screen time.

RICHARD HAWTHORNE

Scientists have mapped out the brain growth in individual children and teenagers. I do not pretend to understand it at all. But, it is fascinating research and it shows that during the ages of three and twelve there are some hardwired connections made in the front of the brain. This is the area that controls attention. These are connections that must be made for young men to function cognitively in the world. But those connections are being broken, or at best, rewired during the over use of screens.

Dr. Jay Giedd from the National Institute of Mental Health says, "Our leading hypothesis... is the 'use it or lose it' principle. If a teen is doing music or sports or academics, those are the cells and connections that will be hardwired. If they're lying on the couch or playing video games or [watching] MTV, those are the cells and connections that are going to survive."

Other studies show that those connections being made are not for the benefit of the young man. Chapman and Pellicane in their book Growing Up Social say, "With increased screen use, the neural circuits that control the more traditional learning methods used for reading, writing, and sustained concentration are neglected."

So it is not only that an abundance of screen time is rewiring the brains of our young men but that it is rewiring it in such a way that these young men are not gaining proficiency in areas that will help them grow. Their brains are being broken in the areas that are specifically needed to help them excel in school and in life.

Their reading levels are lower. Their writing abilities are hindered. They are no longer able to concentrate. One study found, "Tissue development can be retarded in certain parts of the brain, especially among young children whose brains are developing rapidly. The human brain is genetically wired to develop in natural, sensorial, and kinesthetic settings by doing things with one's senses. A brain that develops in front of a screen for too long can miss out on its natural growth trajectory."

This rewiring sets young men back in their mental development. This is something that we cannot afford to allow to continue. This decreased mental capacity leads to other problems as they grow into their twenties and thirties. Tim Elmore in his book Generation iY says, "For instance, one undebated finding of video-game research is that the more time a child spends playing video games, the less likely he is to do well in school. It has also been shown that spending two hours a day in front of a screen negatively affects maturation."

Reading, Writing, and Concentration are all being affected. But that is not all that is being changed. Young men's thought processes are actually being changed. Elmore also says, "The 'i' world also tends to foster different thought patterns. Instead of proceeding in a linear fashion (with thoughts moving from A to B to C), 'iBrains' work more like computer screens with a choice of icons. Random, even contradictory, sequences are marks of their world."

There is more research out there that I could share with you but hopefully you see that our young men are facing a problem today. It is a problem that they are not even aware of. We, as adults, must begin to work on solutions. I am scared that our young men are going to be stuck

Stay on the Highway of Holiness

Greetings in the name of our Lord Jesus Christ!
This past Sunday we celebrated the resurrection of Jesus from the tomb! It was an exciting time for me as we saw how the crucifixion and resurrection worked together to accomplish the greatest saving work ever. We looked at the work Jesus accomplished in bringing about the salvation we so desperately needed in our lives. He did it as He walked the Via Dolorosa — all the way to Calvary and then made it solid as He walked forth from the tomb. It was a wonderful time to see how God moved in the lives of individuals.

In the coming days it looks as though I will be on the road between Pampa and Amarillo. People will be having surgeries and I will want to be there with the families. This will require me to be on U.S. Highway 60 between Pampa and Amarillo (yes along with 1912 and Interstate 40). I'm not complaining, simply stating a fact that many times the road keeps stretching out in front of me.

While I am on the road many times I have family out there as well. Either the kids are traveling to see us or to see friends. I am confident in their driving skills, but it causes them to spend a lot of time in harm's way. But it just goes to show you that the highways are busy with the traffic of America

I think of those truckers who spend their days hauling goods across the highways of America. I can't believe how many of them there are at times. They fill the interstate highways trying to get their load to its destination or trying to get to where they will pick up their next load. All this highway talk gives me a thought.

Recently I read from a passage in Isaiah. It is found in Isaiah 35. There is a verse in that chapter that talks about our lives in relation to God. Let me share v. 8 with you — "AND A HIGHWAY WILL BE THERE, A ROADWAY, AND IT WILL BE CALLED THE HIGHWAY OF HOLINESS. THE UNCLEAN WILL NOT TRAVEL ON IT, BUT IT WILL BE FOR HIM WHO WALKS THAT WAY, AND FOOLS WILL NOT WANDER ON IT."

Anyone can get out on Highway 60 and head for Amarillo. The only thing it takes is a car. In fact there is not a highway in America that one can't get on if they have a car. Sure there are laws that have to be followed, but if you've got the car, you've got access to the highway. There are people that can get on the highway without a car. They won't go fast, but they can walk along the road, but never realize the full benefit of the highway.

It's not that way on the Highway of Holiness. There is something a person needs if they're going to get on this highway. They have to have a personal relationship with Jesus. Verse 9 tells us "NO LION WILL BE THERE, NOR WILL ANY VICIOUS BEAST GO UP ON IT; THESE WILL NOT BE FOUND THERE, BUT THE REDEEMED WILL WALK THERE." Unless the blood of Christ has redeemed you, you cannot get on the road — remember the unclean will not travel on it.

This Highway of Holiness is really the path of personal commitment. When you make that personal commitment to Christ, He sets you on that road that will ultimately take you to the place He has prepared for you (John 14:1-3). For believers to be holy, separate from the world, there must be that distinction in their lives of walking with the Lord a walk that calls for a deeper commitment in our lives.

Each person must decide for themselves exactly how they will approach the highway. But the highway of holiness will only be accessed through the redeeming work of Jesus Christ. There is only one on ramp and Jesus is the One. Have you got on that ramp in your life? It is my prayer that you have.

Jesus loves you and His desire is for you to be on the Highway of Holiness with Him. If you will agree with Him that your sin separates you from Him, confess that sin, and believe that Jesus can save you, He will. You might read Romans 3:23; 6:23; 5:8; 10:9-10, 13. Just ask Jesus and I promise you that He will not turn you away as you seek Him with your whole heart.

So, the next time you turn onto the highway in your car, think about the greater Highway God desires you to be on. Let that Highway of Holiness be the road you travel. Something to think about, isn't it?

Well, I've got to get on the road now and check on some folks. Take care and I hope to see you on the Highway.

JESUS, JESUS, JESUS, there IS something about that name!

Christ only, always,
Bro. Paul

He is risen

"He is not here: for he is risen, as he said. Come see the place where the Lord lay." (Matthew 28:6)
Jesus Christ is alive. We serve a living Savior. If His bones are still in Jerusalem, there is no hope of salvation for us. But His body is not there. He is alive. His resurrection is the Bible's greatest miracle and the most important fact in history.

Jesus Christ rose from the dead bodily. When the disciples came to Jesus' tomb, His body was not there. It had not been stolen, but God the Father had raised Him from the grave. It was not merely Jesus' spirit or influence that came out of the tomb, it was His actual body.

Jesus rose from the dead victoriously. When Jesus walked out of the tomb, the grave and death were defeated (I Corinthians 15:54-57). He came forth with the keys to death and hell (Revelation 1:18). The grave could not hold Him. Death could not harm Him. Satan was defeated.

Jesus rose eternally from the dead. God used Elijah and Elisha to raise people from the dead. Lazarus and the widow's son at Nain were raised from the dead, but all of those people died again. Jesus Christ came forth "alive for ever more ..." (Revelation 1:18)

The great fact of His death is the resurrection of Jesus Christ. He died for our sins and was raised for our justification (Romans 4:25). Because He lives, we also will live as we trust Him by faith as our Savior. Rejoice and be glad as a child of God. Death cannot harm you. Jesus Christ is risen indeed!

Hawthorne

in adolescence. I am scared that we are not developing creative, thoughtful, virtuous men. What can be done? I offer two action points.

Become Aware. This is something I said in last week's column. By reading the information in this article you have been introduced to some of the facts available about the consequences of screen time for our young men. Search out more information. But also do some real life research.

Watch the young men around you. What happens when they play video games for a while? Do you notice a change in their attitude? Do you notice any behavior changes? Have you noticed a change in performance in school as your young man spends more time in front of a screen? As you become more aware of what happens you will realize that screen time is not neutral in the life of the young men around you. Hopefully this new found awareness will move you to action.

Offer Challenges. Young men are wired to be challenged. They are wired to grow through challenges. Frankly, we do not challenge our young men enough. We do not challenge them to grow emotionally or mentally or even physically. Why are they so drawn to video games that deal with war and fighting? Because they long for challenges. Video games offer challenges and adventures that our young men are not having in the real world. False world challenges are not challenges at all. We must begin challenging our young men to grow and develop in the real world.

Challenge them to read a book. Challenge them to serve their community. Challenge them to learn a sport. Challenge them to learn to play a musical instrument. Challenge them to learn another language. The possibilities are endless. Find something they are interested in and challenge them to grow in that area.

It is my opinion that we cannot wait any longer to act. Our world is hurting for men. It is hurting for men that can think. Men that can solve problems. Men that stand on principles. Men that will fight for what is right. You and I are responsible for developing this generation of boys into men.

Let us get to it!
I leave you this week with a quote:
"Tomorrow's illiterate will not be the man who can't read; he will be the man who has not learned to learn." — Alvin Toffler

GEMINI (May 21-June 20)

★★★★ Defer to someone else, and worry less about this person's reactions. You can't always get others to be on the same page as you, but this person knows how to take your ideas and run with them. Express your confidence in his or her approach. Tonight: A force to be dealt with.

CANCER (June 21-July 22)

★★ Your ability to organize and delegate will determine your ability to clear out a project that might be a high priority. An older relative might keep interfering without realizing it. Politely let this person know that you need him or her to back down some. Tonight: Off to the gym.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22)

★★★★ It might seem as if a muse has suddenly appeared, as you can't stop creating. Romance could be enhanced by a conversation involving a trip or vacation. You might be surprised by how excited a loved one becomes at the idea of getting away. Tonight: All smiles.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22)

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22)

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21)

★★★★ Be aware of the financial implications of a new idea or business venture; otherwise, you could encounter a problem with your budget. Someone you admire will be quite pleased when observing your chosen direction. Tonight: A must appearance.

★★★★ You might be impossible to stop, as you'll be full of great ideas and have the energy to make them realities. Your creativity soars, but you also will appreciate feedback from friends. Tonight: Be a flirt if you want, but know that you could cause some jealousy!

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19)

★★★ You sense a lot of activity around you, but some information seems to be hidden or withheld. A partner or dear friend will fill you in when he or she can. Meanwhile, don't worry so much. Schedule a fun lunch with a loved one. Tonight: Be near good music.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18)

★★★★ Focus on what you want, and be aware of the role of a friendship in achieving this goal. Conversations might have you busy by just having to answer and return calls. Don't lose your focus -- you're heading down the right track. Tonight: Be where the crowds are.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20)

★★★★ Stay on top of a situation that demands your guidance. Remain sure of yourself. Money could play a role in making decisions, but you might need to have a conversation first with someone else involved in this matter. Tonight: Chat over dinner.

Dear Abby...

By Pauline & Jeanne Phillips

DEAR ABBY: I'm the mother of an 18-year-old daughter. Her dad and I are divorced and she lives with him. We were married 20 years and I know he's a good parent, except for one thing. My daughter has told me her father and his partner sometimes engage in very loud lovemaking when she's in her room, and it embarrasses her. She's shy to begin with, so she hasn't said anything to him. I feel angry and frustrated because I don't know if I should say something to him about it. I have suggested she put on some loud music or use headphones if she can't bring this up with him. I think she wants me to intercede, but I don't feel it's my business to do so. Can these adults be that clueless? Please help. -- CAROL ON THE EAST COAST

DEAR CAROL: Yes, adults can be that "clueless." Her father and his partner may not realize how much noise they make. Headphones and turning on loud music are good suggestions. But remember that clear communication is important in relationships both personal and professional. At 18, your daughter is old enough to start speaking up for herself. Encourage her to talk about this problem privately with her father. But if she can't, then you should handle this for her.

DEAR ABBY: My husband had an affair 18 years ago. We worked through it and are doing well in our marriage. My question

■ One and done.

One thing that has become the norm in college basketball is the one and done theory.

Schools like Wisconsin and Duke as well as Michigan State have been different and done all they could to keep players for four years.

That changed last night for the Duke Blue Devils as they won a national title using primarily freshman athletes to get the job done.

Coach Calapari has made this become the norm by using that as a recruiting tool. Come to Kentucky for a year and then off to the NBA.

This method has started to take shape at Duke now as well. Credit Coach "K" for being able to get the Jahliil Okafor's and the Tyus Jones' and the Justice Winslow's to come to Duke under that same plan.

In the previous four National Titles that Coach "K" won he had three freshman score in the games and combined for a total of 23 points in those four games.

Monday night the Duke freshman scored 60 points out of the teams 68. That is unheard of for Coach "K" until now.

Players like JJ Reddick, Carlos Boozer, Sheldon Williams and Shane Battier, who went on to have lengthy pro careers, all played their college ball for Coach "K" and stuck around to see it out.

I understand that this is the direction that coaches are having to go to "keep up with the competition" but I for one am not a fan of this theory for the following reasons.

1. Rivalry — There is something to be said about playing the same opponent year after year and the same kids going at each other. When Duke and North Carolina play they won't be seeing the same kids it will be like a shift change. The coaches are somewhat hamstrung on this because the top notch players have watched the players before they do the same thing so you can't blame them for wanting to do it as well.

2. Maturity — Many of these one and done players are not ready for the NBA game and for many of them it cost them millions of dollars. Some of these guys enter the draft and end up in the D-league or don't get drafted at all. Had they stayed in college their stock would have risen and they would have entered the NBA more mature and ready to compete with the best of the best.

Some make it, but it takes them several years to become the player that they could have been had they stayed in college and developed a little longer. And then there are players like Kevin Durant who are the exception to the rule. Guys like KD paint a picture to a 19-year-old young man that doesn't realize he isn't KD.

3. Education — To the ones that have a long career it doesn't necessarily apply to them, but many of them don't make it and they have no college education. They were getting a free education but now they will have to pay for their own school if they choose to go back and we all know how expensive that can be.

Imagine a team that had LeBron James, Derrick Rose, Kevin Durant, Kevin Love and Dwyane Wade on it all as seniors. That would be something to watch. It's unfortunate that players of that caliber will never play four years of college basketball. Frank Kaminsky may go down as the last senior to be AP player of the year in college basketball.

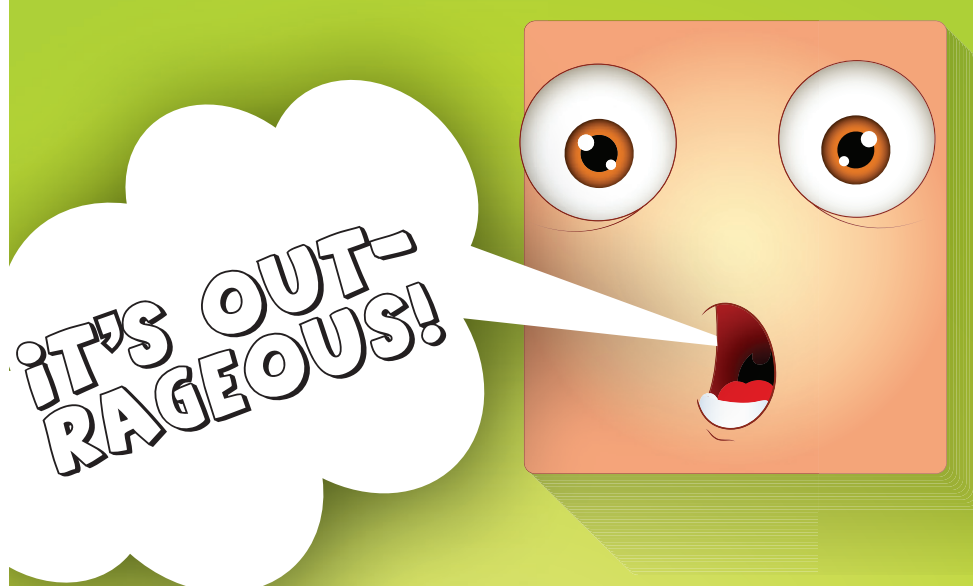

I think the rules need to be looked at again to fix the problem and make the college game better as well as increase their chances for success at the NBA level. Forcing kids to play three years like they do in football would be a good start. This would bring more parity back to the game as well.

Congrats to all the Duke fans out there who can celebrate their team winning a championship, as well as those who picked them to win the tourney in their bracket. I for one picked Kentucky to make history but wasn't too upset that Wisconsin was able to keep that from happening.

Celebrations

Celebrations are something that we here at Community love to do. The staff and the children work really hard with activities and preparing for these parties. Parents are encouraged to come and participate in these celebrations and when they do it gives them a great opportunity to see what the children have learned and how they interact with the other children. Teachers get an opportunity to show the parents as well what they are doing with their children throughout the day. Times like this can be very beneficial, not only to the children but also for the parent/teacher relationship. We all learn so much from these fun times and why wouldn't you want to show up anyways.....We have treats!! Have a Wonderful rest of the week and stay tuned for more fun.
