Community members band together to help Pampan in need

By LINDSEY TOMASCHIK
LKTomaschik@thepampanews.com

Recently, Pampa resident Brittany Nash posted on Facebook about her lawn mower being stolen about three months ago and the grass and weeds in her backyard growing to the point that her children could not go outside to play. With all the rain the area has gotten recently, the grass grew at an unbelievable rate and got to a point beyond control.

Nash couldn't imagine the community response that was to come from the Facebook post, which read as follows:

"I am a single mother in need of help not looking for hand outs but desperately need help. My kids can not play in the back yard. Our lawn mower was stolen, then we got another one and the motor went out on that one. Please I'm not asking someone to mow my yard I'm just asking to borrow something."

The post, which is on the For Sale in Pampa Facebook page, got close to 100 likes and more than 100 comments, but that's not the amazing part. She got several offers from people in the community to come out and help her get her yard back in tip-top shape rather than just lending her a lawn mower.

"I was amazed at the response to be honest. The outcome to the message and the response was something I have never seen before," Nash said. "It was powerful. God had shown himself in these people."

She said she wound up posting to the page because her son would beg her to go out and

Relay for Life Survivor Celebration dinner held Thursday

By LINDSEY TOMASCHIK
LKTomaschik@thepampanews.com

The 2015 Gray County Relay for Life Survivor Celebration dinner was held Thursday evening at First United Methodist Church.

During the dinner, Joanna Wheeley provided entertainment for those in attendance by singing two songs about cancer and winning the fight.

Next, Chalenia Freeman, who is in charge of the annual event, introduced the evening's guest speaker, Susan Rawlins. Rawlins has had three different types of cancer: melanoma, leukemia and breast cancer. She lives in Fritch with her husband Donnie, and the couple has three children, who are college graduates. She also now has six grandchildren.

After showing the audience the boots she wears when she goes places to speak, which are from the American Cancer Society, Rawlins shared the story of the past 21 years of her life that have been spent fighting cancer on and off.

She first had melanoma, and credited this to the amount of time she spent in the sun covered in baby oil getting tan when she was younger. Then, she got leukemia. This time, she required a bone marrow transplant. The search for a match began in April that year, and it was not until October that a match was found. None of her family members qualified as matches for the transplant, and the donor wound up being a man 10 years younger than Rawlins from England. She jokes that in getting the transplant, she got the y chromosome, which gave her such gifts as selective hearing and losing the ability to change the toilet paper roll.

All jokes aside, Rawlins went on to speak about her road to recovery. This included a fight with the insurance company, as they did not want to help out with payment for her time being hospitalized because at that

PAWS annual Chip and Dip this weekend

STAFF REPORT

The Pampa Animal Welfare Society will have a Chip and Dip today from 10 a.m. to 1:30 p.m.

The event will be at the Pampa Animal Shelter located at 806-669-5775.

The cost to microchip your pet is $20. The tick dip is free. "It's been several years that we have done it," Faustina Curry of PAWS said. "We try to do it sometime in June when the ticks are really in season."

Curry added that the recent rainfall has led to an increase in the tick population, and they don't just affect dogs.

"A person can also get diseases from ticks," Curry said. "We want to give people the opportunity to get them under control early. If people have outside dogs, they should really bring them and get them dipped."

Curry said PAWS may hold another event in July depending on the tick population.

For more information on PAWS, visit their Facebook page at www.facebook.com/PampaAnimalWelfareSociety.

play in the backyard. "Though I would love to let him go run and play, I couldn't," she said. "I was worried there may be snakes in the yard. I'm not from Pampa, and I have barely been here a year, so I didn't really know many people to ask."

She just figured why not post about it on Facebook. This led to about 10 community members coming out and helping Nash fix up her yard.

"They helped with everything really," she said. "They even helped haul the trash left from the previous keepers."

Nash added that she wasn't sure posting about her situation was a good idea, but was pleasantly surprised by the response she received.

"I honestly wasn't sure if it was a good idea or not. It could have drawn negative attention," she said. "But I had to swallow my pride and be realistic that we needed some help, desperately. My kids want to play outside and run."

When asked how her son feels now that he is able to go play in the yard again, Nash said they were beyond excited.

"That was the best feeling in the world, just to see my son get excited over the yard," she said. "He has taken to a couple that helped us, the Garcia family, and wanted to show them the yard they just helped him get. My daughter, at the age of one, shows her excitement with noises and finger pointing."

Nash said that in order to get the yard back to a manageable state took about two hours with everyone who came out to help her. She hopes to have another mower of her own soon, so her children can continue to have a yard to play in.

"I know I don't ever want to see the yard look like that again," she said. "What these people did was beyond words. They showed and proved so many people wrong. Each and every one of them did something absolutely heart warming, and I can't express my gratitude, I cried like a big baby seeing everyone come and help."

Nash is more than grateful for the people of Pampa, who never fail to show why this community is such a great place to live in.

"They touched our lives, and I will be forever thankful that there are more than less kind-hearted people, who care for not just their community but the people in the community."

time, she only had a three percent chance of survival. Each day spent in the bubble in the hospital in Oklahoma City, where she was staying was $10,000, and she was in that room for 68 days. Her husband fought the insurance, and eventually they did come around and pay up.

Rawlins had 21 straight days of chemotherapy to kill her bone marrow and the cancer before the transplant. She said she was basically brought to the point of death before the transplant. After the surgery, they then had to wait to see if her body would accept the new marrow, which it did. She still has to take anti-rejection medicine daily to ensure that nothing goes wrong.

Rawlins also said that today, people with the same type of leukemia she had just have to take a pill to kill the cancer and that's it.

Then, two years ago, she went in for her annual mammogram and found out that she had stage two breast cancer. Although at that point she felt that she had paid her dues, it turned out that God had other plans for her. By this time, however, she had had too much radiation prior for it to be an option with this new cancer. Her only option was a double mastectomy.

After the surgery, Rawlins found out she had MRSA and shortly after that, she had C. diff. After recovering from all of that, she had to take the pill form of chemotherapy. She did not lose all her hair this time, which was something she was happy about.

She is now scheduled to have her reconstruction surgery on June 23.

Rawlins says her husband jokes that she is so high maintenance that God cannot get the mansion ready for her, and that's why she is still here.

She went on to talk about the Quality of Life Bill currently in the works. This Bill assures that doctors and nurses will do all they can to not only treat the symptoms of cancer, but also to make patients as comfortable as possible during their period of hospitalization while they face depression, anxiety and other side effects. She was proud to announce that Texas Governor Greg Abbott signed this Bill last week.

After Rawlins spoke, to close off the evening, the cancer survivors in attendance were recognized based on the amount of time they have been cancer free.

This year's Relay for Life will be held from 3 to 10 p.m. Saturday, June 13 at The Gathering Place in The Pampa Mall.

OBITUARIES

Frank P. Slagle

Frank P. Slagle, 87, died June 3, 2015, in Pampa. Services will be at 2 p.m. Monday, June 8, 2015, at Carmichael-Whatley Colonial Chapel, with Rev. Norman Rushing, pastor of Central Baptist Church, officiating. Burial will follow in Memory Gardens Cemetery, with military honors courtesy of the U.S. Navy. Arrangements are under the direction of Carmichael-Whatley Funeral Directors.

Mr. Slagle was born Dec. 9, 1927 in Fannin County. He attended grade school in Fannin County and attended high school in Honey Grove. He was a veteran of the U. S. Navy, serving during World War II. After the war, he went to school to be an electrician. Frank had been a resident of Pampa since 1965. He worked for Phillips Petroleum, retiring after 26 years of service. He worked for Quarles Electric before receiving his master electrician's certification, and then later went into business for himself. Frank married Norma Baggerman in 1985 in Pampa. He was a longtime member of Central Baptist Church. He was a big Dallas Cowboy fan. Frank was a loving husband, father, stepfather and grandfather. Frank was preceded in death by his parents, Omer and Marie Elizabeth Roach Slagle; two sons, Bryan Slagle and James Douglas Slagle; five brothers, Grover, Bob, Henry, Jack and Wayne Slagle; and two sisters, Beatrice Weise and Reba Meade.

Survivors include his wife, Norma Slagle of the home; daughter-in-law, Pam Slagle of Amarillo; two stepsons, Earnest Baggerman and wife Dianne of Miami, and Roger Baggerman and wife Robin of Rowlett; two stepdaughters, Peggy Baggerman of Groom, and Madina Joshi of McKinney; 18 grandchildren, numerous great-grandchildren and a host of nieces and nephews.

Memorials may be made to Central Baptist Church, 513 E. Francis, Pampa, Texas 79065.

The family will receive friends from 6 to 7:30 p.m. Sunday, June 7, 2015, at Carmichael-Whatley Funeral Home.

On social media, terror suspects left few signs of extremism

BOSTON (AP) — Usama Rahim "liked" an Islamic State page on Facebook, but he also spoke out against the kind of violence that Islamic State extremists are fomenting across the Middle East.

In his public postings, the knife-wielding man who was fatally shot by members of Boston's Joint Terrorism Task Force on Tuesday appeared to be a conservative Muslim, frowning on women plucking their eyebrows and musing on the proper length for men's robes.

His decision to "like" the Islamic State in Iraq page concerns some moderate Muslim leaders who reviewed the dead man's social media postings with The Associated Press, but they note that he posted no bloody pictures and made none of the violent calls to arms that many supporters of armed extremist groups espouse on social media.

Killing people is anti-Islamic, Rahim wrote, arguing that a key tenet of the faith is that "we do not fight evil with that which causes a greater evil."

Rahim, 26, knew he was being watched by the FBI: He posted about that, too, back in 2012, writing that he had hung up on an FBI agent who called wanting to talk about some "allegations."

"If you let them get close, trust me, they'll have you making statements about things that could get you jail-time," he wrote. "Try again, monkey-boys."

He taunted the agents again later that day, after he said an FBI agent had asked a neighbor about him as well.

"They are persistent but guess what, they got nothing on me. Keep on coming, you stupid fools and I'll sue the crap out of you for harassment," he wrote.

The task force intensified its surveillance of Rahim to an around-the-clock detail at least seven days before this week's fatal confrontation, after Rahim bought three military-style knives on Amazon.com. Agents listening to his phone calls also heard his nephew, David Wright, say something they interpreted as a reference to beheading, according to an FBI affidavit.

Boston Police Commissioner William Evans said officers decided to "take him down" after Rahim was overheard saying "I'm just going to, ah, go after them, those boys in blue."

I Love Lucy

The other night there was a special "I Love Lucy" show on television. There were two episodes—one where the Ricardos and the Mertzes were in Hollywood, and the other one about Superman. What made these episodes special to me is that they were in color. The original programs were in black and white, broadcast between 1951 and 1957.

In those days I was still in grade school, and the shows were on Sunday nights after my bedtime. I can remember sneaking down the hall and peeking through the fins in the heater.

This was southern California, and many homes had an electric heater that sat in the hallway between the hall and the living room. It worked okay until I started laughing, got caught, and sent back to bed. I couldn't stand it when I heard my mom and grandmother laughing from the living room and I couldn't watch.

Years later, I finally got to watch the show in syndication and see all the hilarious episodes I missed. Do you remember Lucy's nose melting and then burning when she finally got to meet William Holden, or when Lucy did a funny routine with Harpo Marx, where she and Harpo were mirror images? How about the time Lucy and Ethel tried to catch up with the chocolates on the conveyer belt?

One particular episode that put my grandmother in stitches was when Lucy got on the bus with her head stuck in a trophy. A trip to Europe found Lucy stomping grapes in a vat in Italy. One of the most memorable stretches of the show occurred when Lucy, and the actress Lucille Ball, were pregnant. In those days, pregnancy was not something that was considered appropriate for television.

Since there was no ultrasound then, no one, not even the parents or the real doctors, knew if the baby would be a boy or a girl. There was much hilarity over the final moments when Lucy told Ricky it was time to go to the hospital, and I understand most of America watched eagerly awaiting to know: boy or girl? I had to wait until Monday morning to find out myself. When, at the end of the show, "Little Ricky" was introduced, people were happy, and through the rest of the program's run on the air, the Ricardos only had one child, "Little Ricky."

In reality, Lucille Ball had given birth to her first child, Lucie Arnaz, long before the famous Ricardo baby was born. Lucille Ball was a pioneer in that she was the first woman to own her own studios (Desilu), and was a shrewd businesswoman. She was also a talented movie actress long before

"I Love Lucy," starring in some of my favorite movies: "Top Hat," "DuBarry Was a Lady," "Mame," and my favorite, "The Long, Long Trailer."

Lucille Ball started her career as a model, and after being diagnosed with rheumatoid arthritis, she had to relearn how to walk. She became a very talented dancer after this, and was very athletic.

A little-known fact I discovered while reading her biography states that she was terrified of birds of any kind. In the episode about Superman, Lucy had to stand on a ledge populated with pigeons, and it makes me wonder how she did it with her fear of birds!

With what is arguably very questionable humor on television these days, I find it interesting that "I Love Lucy" endures as a very funny series. My husband and I laughed at the special as people probably did over sixty years ago. There was never any foul language or sexual innuendo in this or most of the comedy series popular during that time.

One of Lucille Ball's favorite quotes is also a favorite of mine: "One of the things I learned the hard way was that it doesn't pay to get discouraged. Keeping busy and making optimism a way of life can restore faith in yourself." When Lucille Ball died in 1989, the world lost a very special lady.

Congratulations to the Class of 2015

By the time newspapers containing this column are available on Saturday, members of the Pampa High School Class of 2015 will be preparing for one last high school activity – graduation. Taking part in this rite of passage illustrates the close of a major life chapter for these young adults. It also represents the beginning of life after high school. These graduating seniors will pursue different interests after they walk across the stage on Saturday morning at Harvester Stadium. Some will directly enter the workforce, many will pursue college or some other type of post-secondary training, and still others will serve our country in the United States Armed Forces. Regardless of which of the aforementioned paths is chosen by each individual graduate, one thing is absolutely certain: life is about to change.

As the ceremony ensues, the stadium will be filled with smiling parents, grandparents, aunts, uncles, neighbors and friends that have gathered to bear witness to the seniors' last march together. However, there is another group of observers that is cheering these students on: their teachers, principals and other educators who have poured into them over their educational career. The graduation ceremony is the crowning achievement that represents the reason why teachers and other educators do what they do. It represents years of hard work on the part of both students and their teachers.

Today's ceremony is my 20th to participate in as an educator, but it also is a special day in that I will be experiencing graduation for the first time as a parent. I have been observing members of the class of 2015 since their first day of kindergarten in August of 2002. Throughout those 13 years of school, I have witnessed many significant achievements by this class across the entire state. The senior class at PHS has demonstrated quality leadership both inside the classroom and out. They have excelled in their academic pursuits, as athletes, and as members of other extracurricular activities. Our community has been represented by these students in an extremely positive way. To each of the members of the Class of 2015 I would like to say, "Congratulations on a job well done!"

Tap-dancing on immigration

Let me begin by confessing my own prejudices on the matter of immigration: I never personally had any decision to make, but — to my great good luck — my ancestors made the bold decision to leave their homeland and be Americans. So I benefit, every day, from the precious and totally unearned gift of being an American citizen, not by any act on my part but solely by the accident of my birth.

A bare majority of Americans, according to the respected Pew Research Center, believe that "immigrants today strengthen the country because of their hard work and talents," as opposed to their being "a burden because they take jobs, housing and health care." But there is a huge partisan divide on the value of immigrants to America. Whereas 57 percent of independent voters and 62 percent of Democrats think that immigrants strengthen the U.S., just 27 percent of Republican voters agree. In fact, according to the Pew survey, nearly 2 in 3 Republicans (63 percent) say they think immigrants today are a burden on this nation.

Numbers such as these may explain why so many of the 2016 GOP presidential candidates have abandoned their previously held position to permit the millions of people now in the country illegally to attain legal status or a pathway to citizenship. Wisconsin Gov. Scott Walker now opposes

'Spy' hits theaters, brings laughs

"Spy" came to Pampa's Cinema 4 on Friday and did not disappoint when it came to the comedy promised in the trailers.

The Plot
The movie begins with Susan Cooper, played by Melissa McCarthy, helps spy Bradley Fine, played by Jude Law, from behind the scenes escape when a mission goes awry. After saving him from danger, Fine takes his behind the scenes lady to dinner to show his appreciation for all she does for him before the next mission, during which he attempts to take down a group of terrorists who have in their possession a nuclear bomb.

Things turn sour during this new mission, and from there, Cooper goes under cover in an attempt to make things right. Oh, and another spy, Rick Ford, played by Jason Statham, is on the same mission, and tends to mess things up because the enemies already have his identity. The movie is basically a story of the underdogs who get to come out from behind the shadows to save the day, and there are plenty of laughs for viewers.

Parental Guidance
This movie is rated R, so if you don't want the kids to be exposed to the large amount of cursing and violence shown, I would recommend leaving them at home for this one. There are a ton of inappropriate jokes and curse words throughout the entirety of the film. Don't say I didn't warn you.

Fun Facts
IMDB had these fun facts about the movie:
• Like Spy Hard (1996) and Cats & Dogs: The Revenge of Kitty Galore (2010) before it, the picture's entire opening title credit sequence is a homage and reference to the style of James Bond film opening sequence titles.

• The Bradley Fine character played by Jude Law is considered to be a James Bond persona type whilst the Susan Cooper (Melissa McCarthy) character is likened to be a female James Bond type. The Rick Ford character portrayed by Jason Statham is described in the film's press kit as a cross between John Rambo and Inspector Clouseau.

• Melissa McCarthy's character in Mike & Molly (2010) was a school teacher, before she quit to become a writer. Similar to Spy (2015), her character was a school teacher before she quit to join the CIA (Central Intelligence Agency).

What did I think?
I'm not one of Melissa McCarthy's cult followers, but I thought this movie was hilarious. I would probably even go see it again in theaters. IMDB users gave the movie a 7.5 out of 10, which is pretty high for a comedy on the website.

It was refreshing for me to see Jason Statham play a comedic role for once. I am one of those people who hates seeing him play the same role in every single movie he is in. A bonus for me in this movie was that he actually was not even good at being a spy, which is the total opposite of the usual Jason Statham role.

Rose Byrne is also in the film, and I haven't really found her all that funny in other films I have seen her in, but her character is hilarious in this film.

Back to McCarthy. I know she's known for "Bridesmaids," among other comedic smash hits, but I haven't really enjoyed those films. I did go into the movie wanting to see it, but I had no idea it would be as funny as it actually was. For that reason, I would encourage anyone who has even thought about going to see "Spy" to do so, as it did not disappoint.

the path to citizenship he once supported, stating on Fox News Channel, “I don’t believe in amnesty,” adding: “My view has changed. I’m flat out saying it. Candidates can say that.”

Former Arkansas Gov. Mike Huckabee — who, in a 2007 Republican debate, forcefully defended, against Mitt Romney’s condemnation of it, his state law that allowed the children of immigrants who came here illegally to apply for college scholarships (“in all due respect, we’re a better country than to punish children for what their parents did”) — this year seems only to emphasize getting tougher at the border. The same is true for former Texas Gov. Rick Perry, who, in a 2011 debate, rebutted Romney and other Republicans who criticized the state law that permitted undocumented high-school graduates to pay the lower in-state tuition rate at Texas state colleges: “If you say that we should not educate children who have come into our state for no other reason than they’ve been brought there by no fault of their own, I don’t think you have a heart.” Now Perry wants you to know that he and Texas were tougher than anybody on securing the southern border.

A piece of advice for all these Republicans tap-dancing on immigration. Only one GOP candidate in the past 42 years has won more than 53.4 percent of the popular vote. In fact, this nominee won a landslide 58.8 percent. But more importantly, in the nationally televised presidential debate two weeks before Election Day, this GOP leader had this to say on the thorny immigration issue: “I believe in the idea of amnesty for those who have put down roots and who have lived here even though some time back they may have entered illegally.” Next, he forcefully blasted unscrupulous employers who “hire (these undocumented workers) at starvation wages and with none of the benefits that we think are normal and natural for workers in our country.” Then he lamented, “And the individuals can’t complain because of their illegal status.”

Of course, Ronald Reagan was right. Immigrant workers, human beings without legal status or protection, are powerless, exploited and disposable. And that treatment is literally un-American. In 2012, the GOP lost the nonwhite vote by a 4-1 ratio. To have a fighting chance in November 2016, Republicans would be wise now to ask themselves on immigration: What would the Gipper do?

SUNDAY Horoscope

A baby born today has a Sun in Gemini and a Moon in Aquarius.

HAPPY BIRTHDAY for Sunday, June 7, 2015:

This year you will feel more creative than you have felt in a long time. Your mind, emotions and energy work like a well-oiled machine. You will have the opportunity to go back to school to learn more or go into a different field of study. If you are single, you will intrigue quite a few people. The real question is: Who will intrigue you? If you are attached, your significant other expresses a great deal of interest in what you say and do, and vice versa. In a sense, you are getting to know each other again. AQUARIUS is a bohemian friend.

The Stars Show the Kind of Day You'll Have: 5-Dynamic; 4-Positive; 3-Average; 2-So-so; 1-Difficult

ARIES (March 21-April 19)

★★★★ You have an opportunity to take in some news that could affect your view of a friendship. Your sense of humor emerges when dealing with a neighbor. You might not be sure about what to say. Perhaps the less said the better. Tonight: Where the fun is.

This Week: Your emotional strength comes forward.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20)

★★★ Be aware of a commitment you have made to someone. You can't disappoint this person. Maintain a low profile, and understand where you need to pitch in more. You will gain insight because of your openness and willingness. Tonight: Get a head start on tomorrow.

This Week: Monday and Tuesday you will be a cheerleader for those around you.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20)

★★★★ You know what you want. Recognize that your perspective on a certain issue could be different from those around you. Sometimes it is difficult to explain to others the hows and whys of a decision, but do your best to elaborate. Tonight: Reach out to a loved one.

This Week: You naturally assume the lead by Tuesday.

CANCER (June 21-July 22)

★★★★ Manage what is happening with clarity and directness. Others respect your approach. One-on-one relating will get the best results. Be more subtle in how you approach a personal matter. Open doors rather than shut them. Tonight: Relate directly to a child.

This Week: Do some needed research.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22)

★★★★ Your imagination adds a quality of amusement to your day. Unless you want to share, you might want to hide your delight in the moment. Zero in on what is important, and don't settle for anything less. A friend could be unusually wild. Tonight: Go along with a suggestion.

This Week: You have a way of relating that naturally opens up others.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22)

★★★★★ You could be overwhelmed by everything you have to do, but you will accomplish what you want. Pressure builds no matter what direction you decide to head in. You inevitably will find that you have too much to do and too much that you want to do. Tonight: Use your instincts.

This Week: Defer to others.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22)

★★★★★ Interacting with a child will make you feel like a kid again. Holding you back could be nearly impossible, as you are likely to start really getting into a groove. A friend might be jealous of the fun you are having. Tonight: Time for some fun!

This Week: You will need all the self-discipline you can muster up.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21)

★★★★ You seem to have landed in a situation where you feel quite content. You might not be aware of the fact that others are observing you and witnessing you embrace this new opportunity. Tonight: Take your bows. Someone is giving you a lot of applause and praise.

This Week: Your ingenuity marks your actions and solutions.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21)

★★★★ Help someone come out of his or her shell. As a result, you could be surprised by what this person chooses to say and do. Be more open about your expectations; detach, and ask yourself how reasonable they are. Tonight: Catch up on some news with friends.

This Week: Without focus, you'll have a lot of fun but get little done.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19)

★★★★ You might not be able to make a sound judgment about a money matter. Postpone any conclusive statements for now. You might need more information. Understand that someone's resistance is there for a reason, as it allows more time for thought. Tonight: Hang out.

This Week: Make calls and schedule meetings before Thursday, if possible.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18)

★★★★★ You naturally absorb all the currents that swirl around you, allowing you the opportunity to decide which ones you would like to get caught up in. Be willing to pull back if you do not feel comfortable with a commitment. Tonight: Be as spontaneous as possible.

This Week: You might be greeted by a financial green light.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20)

★★★ Know when you're best off saying little. Respond only when you need to. If you can walk away from your Sunday routine, do so. Count your change, and be aware of where you are putting your money. Tonight: Take some time away from it all.

This Week: You blossom Monday and Tuesday, and others naturally respond.

Molesting Houston teacher pleads guilty, gets probation

HOUSTON (AP) — A Houston judge has sentenced a former high school teacher to probation and has ordered him to register as a sex offender after the teacher pleaded guilty to two counts of improper relations with a student and another charge of indecency with a student.

Harris County prosecutors say they're disappointed and victims devastated after 57-year-old Ysidoro Rosales-Motola pleaded guilty Thursday before his trial was to begin. Nine male students had told of being molested during tutoring sessions.

Prosecutors had urged prison time for the Spanish teacher, who was arrested in 2013. But State District Judge Kristin Guiney gave him deferred adjudication, meaning he won't have a felony conviction on his record if he completes the terms of his 10 years on probation. He also must surrender his teaching certificate.

OPEC agrees to keep output target at 30 mln barrels a day

VIENNA (AP) — OPEC decided to keep its output target at 30 million barrels a day Friday but left it to members to restrain their overproduction, reflecting the cartel's inability to strictly enforce its own limits in attempts to control the world supply of crude.

While the Organization of the Petroleum Exporting Countries accounts for over a third of the world's oil, its power to determine supply and demand has been steadily eroding as outsiders capture large shares of the market. It gave up imposing quotas on individual members four years ago after these were consistently ignored.

That has led to an overhang in recent months of more than 1 million barrels a day of OPEC production beyond the target. But the likelihood of continued overproduction persists.

OPEC powerhouse Saudi Arabia is fighting to keep market share against U.S. shale oil, Iran plans to increase production in anticipation of an end to sanctions that have crimped its crude exports and other countries are trying to compensate for low prices by selling more.

The international price of crude was down 20 cents at $61.83 after Friday's announcement.

Announcing the decision to keep the present target, an OPEC statement urged members "to adhere to it," and Abdullah al-Badri, the organization's secretary general, also urged member nations to "abide with that 30 million." But he acknowledged that, as in the past, countries had only been assigned "indicators" — not quotas — in attempts to hew to the target.

In contrast, Saudi and Iranian comments Friday reflected the countries' determination to produce what they decide.

"Production policy is a sovereign right," Naimi told reporters.

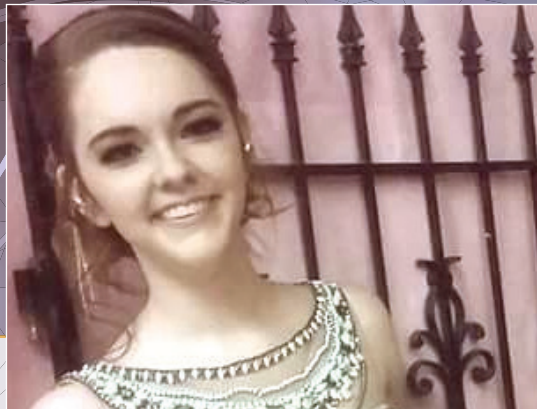

Iranian Petroleum Minister Bijar Namdar Zangeneh, meanwhile, advised OPEC to make room for increased output from his country as early as the end of the month. That's the target date for a deal between Tehran and six world powers envisaging an end to sanctions on the Islamic Republic in exchange for curbs on its nuclear program.

Iran hopes to ramp up production by up to 1 million barrels a day within a year once sanctions are gone, and Zangeneh said his country doesn't "need any decision from the OPEC side to return to the market, because it's our right."

AgriLife Research-led study examines dairy cow genetics for impact on fertility

SUBMITTED BY TEXAS A&M AGRILIFE EXTENSION

AMARILLO — Genetic selection in dairy cattle has long been used to help improve milk production and other traits that make dairy cattle more efficient, but attention to fertility hasn't been a big part of the mix until recently.

Texas A&M AgriLife Research is leading a multi-university study aimed at helping producers determine if genetics can help improve the fertility of their herds.

"Genetics and reproduction have not been extensively explored," said Dr. Pablo Pinedo, AgriLife Research ruminant animal health scientist in Amarillo. "We think that genetics play a role in fertility, so we are looking beyond the effect of environment, which includes proper nutrition, management, health and comfort."

The project, "Genomic Selection for Improved Fertility of Dairy Cows with Emphasis on Cyclicity and Pregnancy," was awarded almost $3 million over a five-year period from the U.S. Department of Agriculture within the National Institute of Food and Agriculture as a part of the 2012 Agriculture and Food Research Initiative's Food Security program.

Halfway through the project, data from 11,000 Holstein cows has been gathered on commercial dairy operations by researchers in Texas, Ohio, Florida, New York, Wisconsin and Minnesota.

Project researchers include: Dr. Jose Santos, Dr. William Thatcher, Dr. Ricardo Chebel and Dr. Klibs Galvao, University of Florida; Dr. Rodrigo Bicalho and Dr. Robert Gilbert, Cornell University; Dr. Gustavo Scheunemann, The Ohio State University; Dr. Guilherme Rosa, University of Wisconsin; Dr. Sandra Rodriguez-Zas, University of Illinois; Dr. John Fetrow, University of Minnesota; and Dr. Christopher Seabury, Texas A&M University.

"We have been checking cows for fertility, measuring multiple performance variables we can see, or phenotyping," Pinedo said. "We have been following these cows from calving to pregnancy, with two to three farms in each state and also including cows that calved both in the warm and cool seasons. Calving season has an important effect on fertility due to heat stress during the summer.

"We now have all the reproductive information, and we are building an index to rank these cows based on their fertility," Pinedo said.

The information gathered included: reproductive diseases, resumption of ovarian cyclicity, body condition, lameness, metabolic diseases, time to pregnancy and pregnancy loss, he said.

"The top cow will be the one that never got sick and got pregnant in a timely manner," Pinedo said.

The next step is to take the indexing information from this group of 11,000 cows and narrow the numbers to the top 1,000 cows and the bottom 1,600 cows, he said. This selected group will go through a DNA analysis, utilizing the highest density genotyping chip available.

Then the bioinformatics group on the team will analyze the genetic information and try to find significant associations between genetic variations and fertility, Pinedo said.

He added that so far, a large variation in both disease presentation and fertility across farms and regions has been found, providing excellent data for this study.

"What we expect is to eventually be able to provide genetic markers for fertility that could be used by the artificial insemination companies for selection of highly fertile sires," Pinedo said. "If this is possible, then the dairy producer could improve the fertility of his herd by use of these top fertility sires."

He said this integrated project has developed Extension and education components, and works with an advisory panel made up of dairy farmers, dairy consultants and veterinarians.

And, while fertility is the ultimate goal of this study, he said, the data that was gathered by going onto these farms every week for the past two and half years can later be used to determine which points or markers are indicators of good health.

Jeb Bush joining a race featuring nearly a dozen competitors

WASHINGTON (AP) — Jeb Bush is stepping into the Republican race for president, finally taking his place — after months of hints and relentless fundraising — amid an unwieldy field of GOP candidates unlike any in recent memory.

The son of one president and brother of another, the former Florida governor has the rank of front-runner and the donors to match. He now has eight months before the first votes are cast in the Iowa caucuses to prove he's worthy of both.

"It's as wide-open a race as we've seen in a long time," said Republican strategist Kevin Madden, who described Bush as the "technical front-runner" in a field that stands at 11 major declared candidates.

Among them: former Texas Gov. Rick Perry, who returned Thursday to presidential politics four years after his 2012 presidential bid ended in disaster, vowing during his own campaign kickoff to "end an era of failed leadership."

While both men were widely expected to enter the race, which got its unofficial start when Bush said in December he was exploring whether to seek the Republican nomination, the confirmation from aides that Bush will indeed run is nonetheless a defining moment for the GOP.

The son of George H.W. Bush and younger brother of George W. Bush, he is a favorite of the Republican establishment, the experienced and well-connected party faithful who have showered the 62-year-old with money, staffing talent and encouragement in recent months.

His decision ensures the possibility of a general election showdown between two political families as Hillary Rodham Clinton seeks the Democratic nomination.

Senior aides confirmed that Bush, who left the Florida governor's mansion in 2007, will enter the race June 15 during an event at Miami Dade College. They spoke on condition of anonymity to disclose his decision ahead of his formal announcement.

"I want to be the guy to beat," a confident Bush said while campaigning in Florida earlier this week.

The GOP contest now features candidates of different generations, races and genders, whose policy prescriptions are far from monolithic and whose personalities often clash. There are more to come: four sitting governors — Wisconsin's Scott Walker and New Jersey's Chris Christie, among them — are likely to join the race before the GOP's first presidential debate in August.

"Everyone is bunched together in the polls, and no one candidate in particular has emerged as a clear leader in the early state contests," Madden said.

Perry opened his campaign in a fight for relevancy among the many Republicans trying to knock Bush from his front-runner position. Despite his record as Texas' longest-serving governor, Perry may struggle to reach the polling threshold that will decide the 10 candidates who will take part in the party's first debate on Aug. 6.

He announced his candidacy in a humid airport hangar alongside a C-130 cargo plane, like one he flew for the Air Force, and wasted little time in trying to distinguish himself from the swarm of Republican contenders not named Bush.

"Leadership is not a speech on the Senate floor," he declared in an apparent swipe at the four Republican senators in the race: Marco Rubio of Florida, Rand Paul of Florida, Ted Cruz of Texas and Lindsey Graham of South Carolina. "It's not what you say. It's what you do."

Madden, who previously worked for Mitt Romney, predicted that Bush's entry would prompt "more obvious head-to-head engagements among the candidates" as they jockey for position.

Eight current and former governors could ultimately be in the race, along with five current and former senators, a former neurosurgeon and two business executives.

The only woman in the Republican field, Carly Fiorina, has never held elected office, yet the former technology executive appears to be gaining momentum as she campaigns across early-voting states including New Hampshire and South Carolina. There are two Hispanic candidates — Cruz and Rubio — while Bush is married to a Mexican native and speaks fluent Spanish.

Perhaps more than any of his rivals, Bush has refused so far to bend to his party's conservative base, sticking to unpopular positions on illegal immigration and education standards. And he regularly proclaims loyalty and love for his brother, George W. Bush, whom he lists as a trusted adviser.

"Jeb Bush has a good record as a conservative governor, but Common Core and immigration are two huge obstacles he is going to have to overcome," said Amy Kremer, past president of the Tea Party Express. "It will be interesting to see if he listens to the American people or doubles down on his positions. He has fierce competition."

While heads roll, a FIFA-backed movie opens in the US

NEW YORK (AP) — The FIFA saga, already awash in alleged corruption, international intrigue and long-arm justice, can now add irony to its unending tale.

On Friday, just nine days after FIFA officials and executives were dramatically indicted for what the Department of Justice claimed was pervasive racketeering and bribery in international soccer, a movie largely paid for by FIFA and trumpeting its glories is set to open in a handful of U.S. theaters and on video-on-demand.

"United Passions" is a $30-million production starring some big names, including Tim Roth as FIFA president, Sepp Blatter, who himself resigned Tuesday after winning reelection just last week. It's a starry fiction that casts FIFA's history and its leaders in a glowing light, just as hard reality is crashing down on an organization long viewed as a bastion of corruption.

The timing is largely a matter of luck or misfortune, depending how you look at it. "United Passions," directed by French filmmaker Frédéric Auburtin ("Paris, Je T'Aime") and also starring Gérard Depardieu as World Cup creator Jules Rimet and Sam Neill as former FIFA president Joao Havelange, first debuted last summer ahead of the 2014 World Cup.

But after premiering at the Cannes Film Festival, it was released in only a handful of countries and went straight to DVD in France. Screen Media Films, which is distributing the film in the U.S., scheduled the release months ago to coincide with FIFA's presidential election and the upcoming women's World Cup.

"We're not here to promote FIFA's image," says Suzanne Blench, president of Screen Media. "They made this film. I'm releasing this film because it's a soccer story. We're not here to try to do anything to alter the truth of what's happening. It's a biopic. Liberties are taken. We are just giving people a chance to take a look at it."

"United Passions" has the benefit of being uncommonly timely and the embarrassment of having its faux-narrative blown apart by real-world events.

The film tells the 110-year history of the Fédération Internationale de Football Association, skipping from president to president. Its official tagline earlier promoted it as the heroic story of "three deeply ethical men." In one scene set in 1998, Roth's Blatter is cast as the upholder of ethics: "The slightest breach of ethics will be severely punished," he chides.

About 80 percent of the movie was financed by FIFA, and its executives were deeply involved. In a letter to FIFA members last June, Jerome Valcke, secretary general, wrote that the film is an "open, self-critical and highly enjoyable" story of FIFA. Valcke is currently under scrutiny for allegedly helping authorize $10 million in bribes for World Cup bidding votes, which he has denied.

The close involvement with FIFA has opened up

"United Passions" to a lot of scorn. On "Last Week Tonight," John Oliver wondered: "Who makes a sports film where the heroes are the executives?"

Auburtin, speaking by phone from France, said he didn't want to heap further criticism on FIFA, but also noted he's happily now very distant from the film, beginning work on a new film. "I've moved on," he says. "It's behind me, far away."

Did Auburtin know what he was getting into? Only to a certain degree, he says, noting he was hired by a production company, not FIFA, and that FIFA's financial backing of the movie doubled just before shooting started. But he knew he would be limited in how he presented the federation.

"I'm not so dumb," says Auburtin. "I knew that FIFA producing the film for around 80 or more percent, it would be narrow for me to say more things that I wanted to say before. You don't bite the hand who's feeding you."

The film does show the way money greased the way for various decisions, even the location of the first World Cup (Uruguay). And it depicts the encroaching power of big business and corporate sponsors into a once simple sport. Now, Auburtin notes, referring to the events of the last week, "We are in the 'Godfather' movie."

"I wanted with this film always to be honest with the audience and honest with my producers, and FIFA are part of the producers," Auburtin says. "You have to be honest with them, too, even if everything is rotten in the kingdom of Denmark, as Marcellus says in 'Hamlet.'"

Auburtin describes an arduous process of trying desperately to find a way to tell a 100-year history flat-teringly but also inserting whatever subtext he could.

"I accept that people don't like the film," he says. "Maybe I don't have any distance, but I watch a lot of movies. I don't think it's such crap. This is a real movie telling a story. I knew it couldn't be something else with all the conditions."

"What I regret, of course, is to be associated with such a big disaster, which is what's happening to FIFA right now," he adds. "Everything is rotten with sport and business."

Clinton: GOP trying to make it difficult for people to vote

HOUSTON (AP) — Hillary Rodham Clinton accused potential Republican presidential rivals such as Jeb Bush of Florida and Scott Walker of Wisconsin on Thursday of trying to make it more difficult for millions of Americans to vote, laying down an early marker on voting rights in her Democratic presidential campaign.

Clinton, in one of her most partisan speeches as a presidential candidate, directly criticized Walker, Bush and two other Republican presidential hopefuls, New Jersey Gov. Chris Christie and former Texas Gov. Rick Perry.

She described those current or former governors as members of a GOP vanguard that has made it more difficult for students to vote, cut the numbers of days set aside for early voting and demanded voter ID provisions.

"Today Republicans are systematically and deliberately trying to stop millions of American citizens from voting," Clinton said at historically black Texas Southern University. "What part of democracy are they afraid of? I believe every citizen has the right to vote and I believe we should do everything we can to make it easier for every citizen to vote."

The issue is closely watched by black voters, who supported President Barack Obama by sweeping margins in 2008 and 2012 and will be an important constituency for Clinton to mobilize in next year's election. She received an award named after Barbara Jordan, the late Texas congresswoman and civil rights leader, and the event came a little more than a week before Clinton is scheduled to deliver a major speech in New York that aides are billing as a formal campaign kickoff.

FIFA corruption: Could Russia, Qatar lose their World Cups?

(AP) — If there is enough evidence of wrongdoing, FIFA has the power to strip the World Cup from both Russia and Qatar.

Soccer's governing body, currently engulfed in the worst corruption scandal in its 111-year history, has a provision which allows it to revoke hosting rights for "unforeseen contingencies and force majeure."

"If there is still evidence that a substantial amount (of votes) have been bought by illegal means, then of course it could be changed," Swiss law professor and anti-corruption expert Mark Pieth told The Associated Press. "I would not totally rule it out, and of course there are many other questions linked to it."

So far, the Russians and Qataris don't seem to be worried.

FIFA has been plunged into crisis since seven officials were arrested in dawn raids last week at a luxury Zurich hotel ahead of the FIFA congress. They were among 14 indicted by U.S. authorities on corruption charges.

In a separate probe, Swiss authorities are investigating the 2018 and 2022 World Cup bidding contests, which went to Russia and Qatar.

In the wake of the two investigations, FIFA President Sepp Blatter announced his decision to resign. That came only four days after he was re-elected for a fifth, four-term.

U.S. authorities are also looking specifically at the 79-year-old Blatter, but he has not been formally charged.

Russia was awarded the 2018 World Cup and Qatar was given the 2022 tournament in an executive committee vote in Zurich in December 2010. Accusations of vote-buying followed quickly, and FIFA appointed American lawyer Michael Garcia as the lead investigator into possible wrongdoing. Garcia submitted his report late last year, but soon resigned after a disagreement over what was in the file.

Garcia's full report has never been released, but FIFA turned over the document to the Swiss authorities who are still investigating possible corruption.

Several members on that 24-man executive committee have been largely discredited since the vote, including a life ban for Qatari official Mohammed Bin Hammam and some resignations and shorter bans for others.

Besides the Swiss investigation, Australia has added to the pressure with its own police investigation. Australia was one of the losing bidders in the 2022 contest.

FIFA has made late changes to big tournaments before, though not on the same scale. Colombia withdrew as the host of the 1986 World Cup four years before kickoff because of economic problems and Mexico stepped in. The 2003 Women's World Cup was switched from China to the United States with only six months' notice because of the outbreak of the SARS virus.

England, Germany and the United States could be potential replacement hosts for the next two World Cups.

The FIFA executive committee — the powerful panel of officials that awarded the World Cup to Russia and Qatar in the first place — would likely have the final say on where the next two World Cups will be played.

And the position of some of the top executives and possible contenders to succeed Blatter as president are complicated, especially when it comes to Qatar's bid, the most contentious.

Michel Platini, the president of European body UEFA and a stern critic of Blatter, voted for Qatar. Africa soccer confederation president Issa Hayatou, the most senior executive after Blatter, has close links with Qatar. And Prince Ali bin Hussein of Jordan, who lost to Blatter in last week's election, has consistently said Qatar deserves to host the first World Cup in the Middle East.

The Qataris have been saying little since the FIFA crisis erupted, but claim they were cleared by FIFA after Garcia's report was submitted.

"The results of his investigation showed there was no suspicion," Qatari foreign minister Khalid bin Mohammad al-Attiah said.

FIFA ethics judge Joachim Eckert, who assessed Garcia's report, cited "problematic facts and circumstances" about the Qatar bid and other candidates but said the evidence was not enough to compromise the bidding process as a whole.

The Russians have criticized the United States for its part in the investigations, with President Vladimir Putin saying the American authorities were meddling in soccer affairs.

"There is a persecution going on with a maniacal desire to accuse Russia of some improbable crimes which then force others to decide to take the World Cup away from us," Russian deputy sports minister Natalya Parshikova said.

The United States was another losing bidder in the vote for the 2022 tournament.

Things to know about NCAA super regionals, which will determine field for CWS

By ERIC OLSON
AP Sports Writer

OMAHA, Neb. — Next stop on the NCAA baseball tournament's Road to Omaha is super regionals.

Four of the best-of-three series are Friday through Sunday, with the other four Saturday through Monday. The eight winners advance to the College World Series at TD Ameritrade Park in Omaha starting June 13.

Some things to know heading into the round of 16:

SEC bragging rights: Football isn't the only sport the Southeastern Conference likes to toot its horn about. For the fourth time in the 17 years of the current tournament format, five SEC teams made super regionals. No other conference can say that. Arkansas, Florida, LSU, Texas A&M and defending national champion Vanderbilt all advanced.

Long ball's back: The numbers show the flat-seam ball introduced this season is doing what it was supposed to do. A total of 105 home runs were hit in the 101 regional games. Last year, for the entire NCAA tournament, 87 were hit in 139 games.

Keeping it in-state: Three super regionals match teams from the same state: Florida State at Florida, Texas A&M at TCU and Louisiana-Lafayette at LSU. FSU won two of three over the Gators in the regular season. The teams also met in the 2005 super regionals, with Florida sweeping. A&M and TCU will be playing for the first time since TCU beat the Aggies in the 2012 regionals. Louisiana-Lafayette and LSU played on March 31, with the Tigers winning 8-6.

Let's do it again: Maryland's move to the Big Ten hasn't done much to keep the Terrapins separated from old ACC rival Virginia. The teams will face off in super regionals in Charlottesville, Virginia, for the second year in a row, this time after sharing a charter flight back from their regionals in California. The Cavaliers won last year's super regional in three games.

Draft picks galore: When Vanderbilt plays at Illinois, some of the best major-league prospects will be on display. Vandy shortstop Dansby Swanson could be the first player taken in next week's draft. Other potential top-10 picks are Vandy starting pitchers Carson Fulmer and Walker Buehler and Illinois closer Tyler Jay.

Woo hoo, VCU: A lovable underdog always emerges. This year it's Virginia Commonwealth, which visits college baseball blue blood Miami after knocking out Dallas Baptist.

The Rams are only the fifth No. 4 regional seed to make it out of regionals. They're all about pitching and defense, ranking among the national leaders with their 2.86 ERA and .976 fielding percentage. They're gritty offensively, having been hit by pitches a nation-leading 112 times.

Grin and bear it: No. 8 national seed Missouri State's reward for winning its regional is a trip to Arkansas. A national seed typically gets to host its super regional, but the Bears share Hammons Field with the Springfield Cardinals, and the Double-A team is on a homestand through Sunday. The teams played March 31 in Fayetteville, and the Bears won 2-0. Before that, Arkansas had won 10 straight over Missouri State.

About that rally: The college baseball world is still abuzz over TCU's comeback from an 8-1, seventh-inning deficit to beat North Carolina State 9-8 in 10 innings in the Fort Worth Regional final. According to Associated Press research, it was the biggest comeback in the NCAA tournament since UNC-Wilmington used an 11-run ninth inning to turn an 11-4 deficit into a 15-11 victory in a 2008 regional elimination game.

Looking for payback: Cal State Fullerton dominated Louisville the last time they met in super regionals, outscoring the Cardinals 23-2 in a two-game sweep in California in 2009. This time the teams play in Louisville. The Titans won in their only meeting since 2009, 8-6 in Clearwater, Florida, four months ago.

Tough ticket: Louisiana-Lafayette and LSU, schools separated by 56 miles, are playing each other in a super regional for the first time. How big a deal is this to fans in the Bayou State? Well, the price of an outfield bleacher seat — face value $10 — was listed at $365 on StubHub on Wednesday.

Golf Thought of the Week

Get back in the game!

Being in the industry, I read a lot about what we should do to grow the game. Adding juniors and women to the numbers who play quite rightly gets a lot of column inches. In every country there are introductory programs developed to expose more people to the game. But today, I'd like to turn our attention to those who might have quietly played less and less golf and even stopped playing.

Often these golfers have found it harder to find the time. Sometimes they've struggled to enjoy the game. Often they've moved and lack the social contacts in their new area. Whatever the reason, let's make June the month we try and "recover" a golfer. Think about your friends and acquaintances. Who in that list knows how to play golf but doesn't play anymore? Come on, invite them out to enjoy your company and the great game of golf.

Warriors hold off James, Cavs for 108-100 OT win in Game 1

OAKLAND, Calif. (AP) — After an eight-day break, the NBA's top teams and biggest stars put on quite a show.

Only one kept it up for 53 minutes.

And only one survived without a serious injury.

Stephen Curry had 26 points and eight assists, and the Golden State Warriors held off LeBron James and the Cleveland Cavaliers for a thrilling 108-100 overtime victory in Game 1 of the NBA Finals on Thursday night.

"It was just a classic five minutes that we needed to get that win," Curry said of the overtime.

In the finals for the first time in 40 years, the Warriors gave their long-suffering fans quite a treat. They rallied from an early 14-point deficit, absorbed a finals-best 44 points from James and shut down Cleveland in the extra session.

James shot 18 of 38 from the field and had eight rebounds and six assists in 46 minutes. But the four-time MVP missed a long jumper at the end of regulation, and Cleveland missed its first eight shots of overtime — and 12 straight going back to the fourth quarter.

"We got to do more around him," Cavs coach David Blatt said.

Adding to the Cavs' frustration, point guard Kyrie Irving limped to the locker room after aggravating his troublesome left knee in overtime. He did not return.

With Kevin Love already out, the Cavs obviously need Irving. He missed two games in the Eastern Conference finals because of knee and foot injuries and sounded unsure of his status for Game 2 on Sunday in Oakland.

"Obviously you can see in the tone of my voice I'm a little worried," said Irving, who buried his head in his hands at his locker and left on crutches.

Warriors coach Steve Kerr said he hopes Irving is able to play the remainder of the series.

"I mean that," Kerr said. "You probably don't believe me, but I mean that."

There were 13 lead changes and 11 ties in a game tightly contested across the board. There was little edge in shooting (Warriors 44.3 percent, Cavaliers 41.5 percent), rebounding (Warriors 48, Cavaliers 45) or assists (Warriors 24, Cavaliers 19).

The biggest difference might have been the benches. The Warriors' reserves outscored the Cavs' 34-9, with J.R. Smith the only Cleveland reserve to score — and he was 3 of 13 from the field.

TAMPA, Fla. (AP) — Although Teuvo Teravainen is already nicknamed “Turbo,” Chicago Blackhawks forward Marian Hossa came up with another evocative way to describe the 20-year-old’s smooth, clinical approach to hockey.

“He’s Finnish cold,” Hossa said after Teravainen scored a goal and assisted on another in the Stanley Cup Final opener.

When Teravainen was told about his veteran teammate’s praise, his pulse still didn’t jump.

“I guess that’s right,” Teravainen said Thursday. “I try to be pretty calm out there, do my thing. Don’t have to stress too much about it. I think I play better if I’m just calm and ready.”

With a beginner’s mustache clinging to his lip, Teravainen barely looks old enough to be playing against grown men, let alone starring against the Tampa Bay Lightning. Yet overachievement has been a theme in Teravainen’s life ever since he took the ice back home in Finland.

“I’ve always been playing with the little older guys, always been like the smallest guy out there,” said Teravainen, who is 5-foot-11 and 178 pounds. “I heard that before: ‘You’re small, you might never make it.’ I always try to work hard, do something else better, like skating and skills. Just work hard and get my chance. Just trust myself.”

Teravainen slipped to the Blackhawks in the back half of the first round of the 2012 draft, but has progressed to the point that Chicago fans expect him to ease the club’s salary-cap transition when new contracts for Jonathan Toews and Patrick Kane force a reconfiguration of their lineup this summer. He has eight points in 13 playoff games, nearly matching his nine points in 34 regular-season games.

After spending much of this season in the AHL and only sticking with the Blackhawks in late February, Teravainen has contributed impressively to Chicago’s Western Conference title and its run at a third Stanley Cup championship in six years — but never more than in Game 1 of the Final.

“I think he grows every day,” said Johnny Oduya, the Blackhawks’ Swedish defenseman. “I think everybody sees that, just the maturity level off the ice.”

Coach Joel Quenneville said Teravainen was “quietly confident” and respectful of his teammates — a “nice, nice start.”

US employers add solid 280k jobs; rate inches up to 5.5 pct.

WASHINGTON (AP) — U.S. employers added a robust 280,000 jobs in May, showing that the economy has regained momentum after starting 2015 in a deep slump.

The unemployment rate ticked up to 5.5 percent from 5.4 percent in April, the government said Friday. But that occurred for a good reason: Hundreds of thousands more people began seeking jobs in May. Not all of them found work and so were counted as unemployed.

Last month's strong job growth suggests that employers remained confident enough to keep hiring even after the economy shrank during the first three months of the year. The government also revised up its estimate of job growth during March and April by a combined net 32,000.

The steady hiring should help drive the economy through the rest of the year.

"We've restored income for well over 3 million people over the past 12 months, and that's adding a lot of spending power to the economy," said Carl Tannenbaum, an economist at Northern Trust.

The rise in the number of people looking for work also sounded a collective note of confidence, Tannenbaum suggested.

"That suggests that those who have been on the fringes of the job market are seeing opportunities," Tannenbaum said.

Construction, health care and hospitality companies drove the May job growth. On the negative side, persistently cheaper oil led energy companies to shed workers for a fifth straight month.

Average hourly wages rose 2.3 percent from a year earlier, showing some pick-up. Even so, pay is barely rising above inflation, a persistent trend that has limited the economy's growth.

Over the past three months, employers have added an average of 207,000 jobs. That's a decent gain, though lower than last year's average of 263,667.

Prices for the benchmark 10-year Treasury note fell after the jobs report was issued, raising its yield to 2.42 percent from 2.35 percent just before the figures were announced. U.S. stock futures held steady.

Federal Reserve Chair Janet Yellen has said she expects the Fed to raise rates this year if the economy continues to improve, thereby ending nearly seven years of record-low rates.

On Thursday, though, the International Monetary Fund suggested that the Fed should hold off on raising rates until 2016. IMF Managing Director Christine Lagarde, saying a rate increase could disrupt the economy, urged the Fed to await signs of healthy wage growth.

"This evident strength in the labor market probably isn't enough to persuade the Fed to hike rates in July, but it leaves a September liftoff looking more likely than ever," said Paul Ashworth, chief U.S. economist at Capital Economics. "Only 24 hours later, the IMF's suggestion that the Fed should wait until 2016 looks very dated."

Though employers continue to hire freely, consumers — the main engine of the U.S. economy — remain fairly cautious. Still, Friday's solid jobs report confirms the economy's vitality.

The 3 million new paychecks added over the past year have helped raise spending on housing and autos. Sales of newly built homes have surged 23.7 percent through the first four months of 2015 compared with a year ago, government data show. Rising demand for new homes led construction firms to hire 17,000 workers in May.

Americans bought 1.64 million vehicles in May, the most since July 2005. Manufacturers added 7,000 jobs last month, primarily in the auto sector.

HAVE YOU EVER HAD AN OUT-OF-BODY EXPERIENCE?

IF I DID ...

DO YOU THINK I WOULD RETURN TO THIS BODY?!

Mother Goose and Grim

HOW ARE YOUR KIDS?

OH, THEY'RE GROWING UP SO FAST

DID YOU START A COLLEGE FUND?

OH SURE, I'VE HAD A COLLEGE FUND FOR YEARS

LUCKY FOR THEM

THEM? NO, I'M STILL PAYING OFF MY COLLEGE

WHAT ARE THOSE CREASES BY YOUR MOUTH?

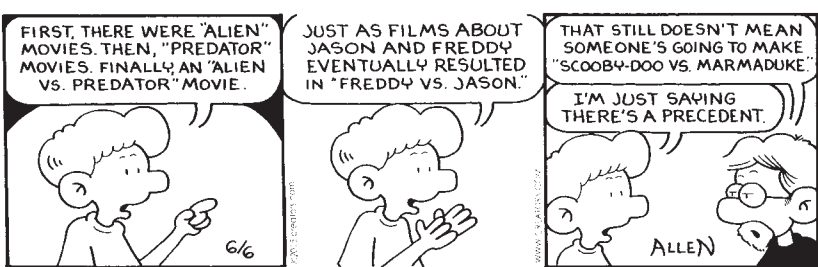

THEY'RE CALLED "LAUGH LINES."

IS THAT BECAUSE PEOPLE LAUGH WHEN THEY LOOK AT YOU CLOSELY?

TURNS OUT, LAUGH LINES AREN'T ALL THAT FUNNY.

THEY SHOULD CALL THEM "GRIMACE GASHES."

FIRST THERE WERE 'ALIEN' MOVIES. THEN, 'PREDATOR' MOVIES. FINALLY, AN 'ALIEN VS. PREDATOR' MOVIE.

JUST AS FILMS ABOUT JASON AND FREDDY EVENTUALLY RESULTED IN 'FREDDY VS. JASON.'

THAT STILL DOESN'T MEAN SOMEONE'S GOING TO MAKE 'SCOOBY-DOO VS. MARMADUKE.'

I'M JUST SAYING THERE'S A PRECEDENT.

DAILY Horoscope

HAPPY BIRTHDAY for Monday, June 8, 2015:

This year you opt to direct your attention to your image, profession and public life. You have a way with words, and it naturally puts you in a position of leadership. You attract others' attention. Be careful, though, as your words easily could be misinterpreted. If you are single, be aware of any secret admirers. In the next few months, a surprising attraction to someone unique is likely. If you are attached, you and your sweetie enjoy your time together away from others. Getting time away alone supports the bond between you. PISCES' emotionalism sometimes makes you uncomfortable.

The Stars Show the Kind of Day You'll Have: 5-Dynamic; 4-Positive; 3-Average; 2-So-so; 1-Difficult

ARIES (March 21-April 19)

★★★★ You will wake up tired or out of sorts; your dream life has been active. You might want to pull back and not be so spontaneous. Although an element of tension is clear today, a conversation will clear the air. Still, hold back some. Tonight: Take some personal time.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20)

★★★★ You finally will see the results of your intense focus and hard work. Do not underestimate the power of your ideas and leadership. A meeting could provide information that will put a smile on your face. Tonight: Embrace a moment of insight, then celebrate.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20)

★★★★ You could feel as if there are many possibilities coming in from various directions. You see a personal matter differently from how those around you see it, especially an older friend or parent. Your time and attention will push a project to completion. Tonight: Till the wee hours.

CANCER (June 21-July 22)

★★★★ You might want to look in a different direction. Your ability to see past the obvious is likely to emerge. Detach from your feelings before making a decision. Look at a situation from the perspective of an observer, and your decision will be right-on. Tonight: Relax with a movie.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22)

★★★★ You know how to work with a partner who can be touchy. Understand what is motivating this person, and perhaps you will see a change of mood. You will have a very positive effect on others right now; use that magic well.

Tonight: Whatever knocks your socks off.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22)

★★★★ You could be in a situation where you believe it is an either/or matter. Understand that it isn't. With detachment and willingness to explore beyond your normal restrictions, you'll come up with a unique perspective and response. Tonight: Defer to someone else.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22)

★★★★ Putting in a hard day's work or focusing on a key issue might be difficult, as someone from your personal life keeps trying to distract you. You'll wonder how to handle this person. First ask yourself what you want or desire from the situation, then proceed. Tonight: Play it easy.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21)

★★★★ Allow your imagination to take over where your logic ends. If you're trying to add a creative touch or find a unique response to a problem, look within. For those who are open and ready, a romance suddenly could pop into your life. Enjoy being distracted. Tonight: Be naughty.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21)

★★★★ You have the ability and know-how to move a personal situation forward. You might be overthinking a situation. Be careful. Some of you could be checking out an investment involving property. Move forward with care. Tonight: Happiest at home.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19)

★★★ You might be focused on your routine, but conversations will distract you a good part of the day. You could feel as if something is off, yet you haven't seemed to figure out what exactly it is. Tonight: Open up and have a long-overdue talk. You will feel better.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18)

★★★★ The way in which you express what you want could differ from person to person. Keep conversations light and easy, especially in the morning, when there is a wave of confusion. A dear friend who always makes you feel great might show up. Tonight: Make plans accordingly.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20)

★★★★ You might be on top of your game, but everyone else seems to be a bit out of sorts. They will sense your effectiveness and possibly even resent it. Look toward more understanding by working through any issues. You have reason to celebrate. Tonight: All smiles.

Dear Abby...

By Pauline & Jeanne Phillips

DEAR ABBY: I am 22. I met my boyfriend, "Jordan," in college. We live together with a roommate. Throughout our relationship, there have been times when Jordan was inconsiderate and didn't seem to put much effort into it. Sometimes he says he's going to be out "late." Then he ends up staying out all night without letting me know he's not coming home. He has done this quite a few times. His excuse is that I am supposed to call to hound him, and ask where he is and when he's coming home. He's often not respectful of my time and comes home hours after he says he will. Most of the time he's out with friends I know, but I am losing trust and feel less important. When we ARE spending time together, the relationship is great. Jordan is the one person I feel I can live with. We don't get annoyed with each other, have the same sense of humor and common interests and hobbies. I have tried many times to get the point across that he doesn't make me feel like a priority. He tells me he cares and that I'm "the one." Where do I draw the line because he fails to back up his words with actions? — LOW-RANKING GIRLFRIEND IN CALIFORNIA

DEAR LOW-RANKING: Draw the line now and remove your blinders. Although you say you don't get annoyed with each other, it seems you are plenty annoyed with Jordan, and you have a right to be. You are being treated like your feelings don't matter. You are not his mother and you shouldn't have to "hound" him. When a boyfriend stays out all night, it is cause for concern. And that his actions and his words don't match means that he's not being truthful. Prepare yourself for the inevitable because it's coming.

DEAR ABBY: I am annoyed by how sexist the conversation is in regard to weddings. It is always HER day, HER wedding, all about HER. It's like the groom is just a check in the box. Nearly everyone forgets that this is one of the most important events in the groom's life, too, and he has an equal investment in the event. As for our own wedding, there were no brides involved — just us two grooms, our minister friend who officiated, plus all our friends and family who celebrated with us. Both of us were involved in the planning and execution of our wedding from beginning to end, and the entire process was so meaningful to us. Now I feel bad for our straight male friends whose involvement in their own weddings gets completely discounted. Please stay vigilant, Abby. Remind people that it is THEIR day, THEIR wedding, and all about THEM. — EQUAL OPPORTUNITY IN RHODE ISLAND

DEAR EQUAL OPPORTUNITY: Your point is well taken. However, in generations past, traditionally the bride's parents paid for the wedding. The groom had little to do with the planning — and few, if any, of them objected to it or wanted more responsibility. Today, because couples marry later and brides often have incomes of their own, it is far more common for couples to pay for their weddings and plan them together.

Great Plains Pest Control

Our Commitment to Quality Assurance Point #4

“To continually train ourselves so that our services are more and more intelligently performed,” We are introducing a leading edge product that includes the same active ingredient as our most recent front line product plus a second active ingredient. This second ingredient operates from a separate mode of action, uniquely providing dual modes with each single application we perform. Additionally, the sophistication of an improved iCAP microcapsule formulation provides a quick knockdown as well as long-term control (up to four months) without being degraded by environmental conditions. This will give our customers peace of mind that control will last through our company’s quarterly service protocol.

California’s drought spurring water recycling at home

BERKELEY, Calif. (AP) — Showering during California’s drought is a guilt-free experience for homeowners Catarina Negrin and Noah Friedman.

The Berkeley couple — she runs a preschool, he’s an architect — are early adopters of a home plumbing do-over that’s becoming more popular during California’s record four-year dry stretch.

California, like many states, long required all water used in homes to be piped out with the sewage, fearing health risks if water recycling is done clumsily.

Since 2010, however, the increasingly dry state has come around, and now even encourages the reuse of so-called gray water, which typically includes the gently-used runoff from bathroom sinks, showers, bathtubs and washing machines.

As mandatory conservation kicked in statewide this month, forcing many of California’s 38 million people to face giving up on greenery, these recycling systems have become attractive options in new homes, right along with granite countertops. California Building Industry Association executive Robert Raymer rattles off the drought-conscious top builders that now routinely offer in-home water recycling.

And California’s building codes are catching up as well, allowing owners of existing homes to create the simplest systems for the safest gray water without a permit.

So while others think about hauling buckets to catch stray drips from their sinks and tubs, Negrin and Friedman can relax: Each gallon they use in the shower means another for the butterflies that duck and bob over their vegetable garden, for the lemon tree shading the yard, and for two strutting backyard chickens busily investigating it all.

“I love a lush garden, and so it seems like why not, right? I could have a lush garden if it doesn’t go into the sewer system,” Negrin said. “So, yes, “I’m going to take a shower.”

Because pathogens swimming in untreated gray water can transmit disease if humans ingest them, most modern health and building codes have long made recycling it impractical. Many families did it anyway, without official oversight or permits. Greywater Action, a group that promotes household water recycling and trains families and installers on the do’s and don’ts, estimates that more than a million Californians had illegal systems before plumbing codes were updated.

But interest in doing it the right way has soared since April 1, when Gov. Jerry Brown ordered a 25-percent cut in water use by cities and towns. Palo Alto gray-water system installer Sassan Golafshan saw his website crash within a day from the surge in traffic.

“There’s huge interest,” said Laura Allen, a co-founder of Greywater Action. Contractors “told us they’re getting so many more calls than before.”

Water savings could be significant. A 2009 study by the University of California at Los Angeles found that if everyone in the southern part of the state recycled the water that currently goes down drains from their showers and washing machines, there would be enough to satisfy Southern California’s entire outdoor residential water use needs.

At the California Water Resources Board’s recycled water unit, chief Randy Barnard is fielding many calls from homeowners desperate to save their beloved lawns and gardens. “If they’ve got a prize fruit tree they’ve been babying for years, they don’t want to lose that tree,” he said.

But for many, he has some bad news to share. Recycling water at home is not as easy as just hooking your shower up to the lawn sprinklers, and recycled water probably won’t save the lawn.

“Just like there’s no one sure way to fight the drought, there’s no one sure way for gray-water treatment,” the state gray-water chief said. “Everybody has to look at all the options and figure out what works for them.”

Water from toilets is considered “black” water and sent straight to wastewater treatment plants. Many states also bar water from kitchen sinks, since homeowners may have contaminated it by washing raw meat.

In California, homeowners are now allowed to irrigate with untreated water straight from bathroom sinks, washing machines and bathtubs, as long as — among other requirements — the water lines run beneath soil or mulch, so as not to come in contact with people. That rules out using untreated gray water on lawns, which typically need above-ground spray heads or sprinklers.

Gray water can even go to vegetable gardens like Negrin’s and Friedman’s, as long as it doesn’t touch root vegetables or any other plant part that’s eaten. Tomatoes are fine, but forget about carrots.

The latest plumbing-code changes have enabled families to install these straightforward laundry-to-landscape systems without a permit, sending wash water into the yard with a valve to divert it back into the sewage system when needed. A handy homeowner can do it with no more than a couple hundred of dollars of piping and parts.

More complicated systems, involving automation, filters and pumps, can top out at $30,000, contractors said.

About 20 states now allow gray-water recycling, and around the country, Arizona has some of the friendliest laws. California still has more to do, Allen and other advocates say. Raymer, at the building trade group, hopes for more legal changes in the coming years to align state gray-water codes with the rules of hundreds of cities and towns.
