MOUNTAIN MAN RENDEZVOUS

By Dave Green

An original pencil drawing by Steve Johnson

If you should happen to be driving past Vealmoor near the Borden-Howard County line a week from Friday and see an assembly of Indian-style tepees, you needn't worry that the Comanches are on the warpath again.

Instead, feel free to drop by and check out the activities and lifestyles of some modern-day "mountain men." These are folks who like to get away from the 20th century for a while by setting up their cone-shaped lodges and competing in such archaic pastimes as knife and tomahawk throwing, cap-lock riflery, and trading hand-crafted items.

Participants in these gatherings -- which they refer to as a rendezvous -- come from all walks of life. Terry Flanagan of Lamesa, for example, likes to slip out of the outfit he wears as a cable splicer for General Telephone and into a full-length buckskin suit before taking part in rendezvous activities.

Flanagan has been getting ready for the Vealmoor Rendezvous by practicing the fine art of assembling his Indian lodge -- no small task, considering he must wrestle with 22 heavy timber poles and nearly 100 lbs. of canvas.

"It's more complicated than a regular tent," said Flanagan, who purchased the lodge about a year ago. He and his wife, Mary,

COYOTES MAULED BY BULLDOGS

The Ira Bulldogs came alive in the second half and crushed the Coyotes 50-8. The Coyotes suffered their fourth loss of the non-district schedule. The Coyotes good luck continued as Lance Telchik suffered a fracture of the wrist. Jimmy Rios did not play as a result of a wrist injury from last weeks game.

The Coyotes once again played a tough first half, but the Bulldogs raced away in the second half. The Coyotes were scored on with Ira's first possession. The Coyote defense scored first on a good heads-up play by Lance Latimer who hit the Bulldog ball carrier. Lance knocked the ball loose, but the Bulldog was able to recover the ball in the endzone.

The Coyotes had a chance to score as they moved inside the Bulldog's 10 yard line, but Ira's defense held. Just before half Lance Latimer caught a pass from Brian Bond to score a 29 yard touchdown. The kick for extra points was not good. The score at halftime was 20-8.

The Bulldogs used a balanced ground and air attack to completely control the game in the 3rd quarter, as the Coyotes only had the ball for 5 downs.

Marc Latimer led the Coyotes defense with 16 assisted tackles and 5 unassisted tackles. Older brother, Lance also had a big defensive game with 7 assisted and 11 unassisted tackles. Lance caused two fumbles, one of which he recovered and the other resulted in a safety. Paul Sturdivant had 9 tackles. Shane Kemper followed with 8 tackles. The other Coyotes with tackles were: Brian Bond 6 and a fumble recovery, Cole Vestal 5 with a fumble recovery, Chris Kilmer and Randell Hollis had 4 each, Cody Cooley 3, and Lance Telchik collected 2 before leaving the game.

The Coyotes will open the 1988 district schedule this week against Loop at home. The Coyotes are looking forward to opening district to get away from the tough non-district schedule.

Section 400: STUDENTS' ELIGIBILITY, Subject to the other sections of this subchapter, an individual is eligible to participate in a League varsity contest as a representative of a participant school if he:

(f) is a resident of the member school district (Section 408), and a resident of the attendance zone in which the participant school he is attending is situated, or:

(1) has been continuously enrolled in and regularly attending the school for at least the previous calendar year if his parents do not reside within the school district's attendance zone; or

(2) is a transfer student to a school district or attendance zone not containing his residence because:

(A) he is attending a school due to district or attendance zone lines being changed by the school board or other appropriate authority; or

(B) he transferred during the first year he had the opportunity to do so from a high school within a school district to the district's vocational high, a magnet school, or optional attendance area; or

(3) is a transfer student from a eight grade system not containing a high school, who transferred during the first year he had an opportunity:

(A) to select a high school with geographical boundaries contiguous to his K-8 school; or

(B) to a high school for which his K-8 school receives state transportation funds; or

(C) to the high school located nearest his residence.

THE NUMBER ONE QUESTION POSED to the UIL office in August and early September deals with parent residency. Some of the confusion is natural because schools often have different residence policies at the local level. Some schools accept transfers. Some districts have freedom of choice from junior high schools to the district high schools. State attendance laws permit an 18 year old to be eligible for attendance in a district where his parents do not reside. A student could be eligible to attend a school district but not be eligible to compete in UIL activities. Section 408 in the Constitution and Contest Rules outlines conditions of residence. This section is helpful, but does not answer all questions presented to school administrators. This column will attempt to clarify some areas of the residence rule.

° A student changing schools is not eligible for varsity competition in a school unless his parents are residents of that school's attendance zone.

° If only one parent (not divorced or separated) moves to the new district, usually the student and parent do not meet the residence requirements.

° A student is not eligible the first year in the school to which he is changing even if the parents work in that school district or have a business in that district unless the parents actually move to that district.

° Obtaining a post office box does not in itself constitute residence.

Some transfer-situations permit students to be eligible in an attendance zone where their parents do not reside.

1. A student could be eligible in a multiple-high-school district if he transfers the first year he had the opportunity to from a high school within a school district to the district's vocational or magnet school.

A. A student who passes up his opportunity to transfer to a magnet or vocational school as a ninth grader would be ineligible for one year if he chose to transfer his tenth grade year.

B. A student who makes a choice in a first-time freedom-of-choice or M to M transfer and attends the school of his choice then elects to return to his original school is ineligible for a period of one year.

2. A student who is a transfer student from an eight grade system not containing a high school could be eligible the first year he had an opportunity at:

A. A high school that borders his district; or

B. A high school for which his K-8 school receives state transportation funds; or

C. The high school nearest his residence.

° Parents who move into the district and then move out of the district before a year has transpired cause the student to be ineligible the day they no longer reside in the district. A student could regain eligibility only after continuously attending school in that district for one calendar year from his first day of enrollment.

° A student who has been attending a school for one continuous calendar year, may retain his eligibility at that school if his parents move and he does not withdraw from school provided:

1. He is a legal

Attempting to Clarify Confusion

transfer back into the school district without any privileges or allowances other than those given to any other student. Example: If tuition is charged to other students, then he or his parents must pay tuition.

2. He remains in the district living with a relative and living with that relative is legal according to the district's established attendance policies.

3. He remains with persons other than relatives and is paying a going rate of room and board (amount must be approved by the district executive committee).

4. He does not enroll in another school, attend and attempt to return to the district where his parents no longer reside.

°A student changing schools in NOT eligible in a school district to which he is changing if his parents are not residents of that new district even though the student DID NOT participate at the previous school and even though the student is eighteen years of age, and even though the student is a senior in his last year of eligibility.

°A student of divorced parents may be eligible if he changes schools and one of the divorced parents is a resident of the school district to which he changes.

°The district executive committee always has the right to rule a student ineligible under any circumstance of parent residence if they judge that the student is moving for athletic purposes.

°A student who is married could be eligible living in the district with his/her spouse.

°Student under most circumstances is ineligible if he changes schools to live with a guardian, unless that guardian was appointed by appropriate authority more than one year previous to the date of his enrollment in the new school.

°Guardianships established at the time of transfer or enrollment would not suffice to make a student eligible until one year has transpired.

°Certain students are eligible assigned by appropriate authority to a foster home or a home licensed by the State as a child care boarding facility, or placed in a home by the Texas Youth Commission.

°A student whose parents are deceased, could be eligible with a relative or other person by whom he is supported, provided that a specific guardianship has not been made by appropriate authority to another individual.

°A student who after his parents are deceased has been assigned a guardian and attends school, would be ineligible for a period of one year if he changes schools to live with another individual.

WHENEVER A STUDENT CHANGES school to a new district and wants to participate, that student and/or parents should be asked several pointed questions:

1. Do you live only in this district, or do you have another dwelling that you live in sometimes?

2. Is part of your family still living in another school district?

3. Do you have brothers or sisters living with either one of your parents and attending school in the same school you attended last year?

4. Did your parents change jobs?

5. Did you have trouble at the other school that prevents your participation there?

6. Have your parents actually moved into the district, or just in the process of moving?

°School authorities have the responsibility to investigate residence of students. The minimum penalty for playing an ineligible student is forfeiture of any contest in which that student participates.

There are exceptions to the residence requirements in some adverse circumstances. A student not eligible by the residence rule 400(f) and 408, (residence rules) may apply for a waiver of the rule to seek eligibility. If the Waiver Officer at the UIL determines that circumstances which cause the ineligibility are such that result in inability to comply, the Waiver Officer may grant eligibility. If the waiver is denied, the student has the opportunity to appeal the decision of the Waiver Officer to the Waiver Review Board. The Board may sustain the decision or grant a waiver.

UIL member schools have maintained strong support for the residence rule, especially for athletics. New proposals are now under consideration which would remove certain residence requirements from non-athletic activities. But the requirements of residence in athletic activities will still remain part of the rules. Critics of the rule insist it is too broad, but every state has residence rules. Through the years, modification of the original rule has developed a system that permits exceptions through the waiver process. Almost all administrators believe that the basic structure of the rule needs to remain intact to keep "school hopping" to a minimum. They contend that the absence of the rule would make strong athletic schools stronger and weak schools weaker.

Certainly, parents in a district do not want to see local athletic teams composed in majority of athletes whose parents or guardians are not residents of that district. In some cases, local students would be denied participation because of the influx of transfer students. At any rate, the rule and all subsequent modifications, was passed by a majority vote of schools. Changes in society and different philosophies will no doubt bring more changes in years to come.

EATING NUTRITIONALLY IN RESTAURANTS

If you're trying to eat nutritiously, you don't have to give control over your diet to a restaurant when you decide to eat out. Try some of these ideas from the Society for Nutrition Education to eat well without abandoning a good diet.

Unless you're restricting calories, you don't have to stick with plain fish and a green salad when you eat in a restaurant. It's best, of course, to choose lean foods, but you can eat almost anything as long as you remember portion control.

Tell the waiter you want a smaller than normal-size portion. Some restaurants will give half-portions and charge less, but many won't. Tell the waiter to bring you half the regular serving anyway. If you just can't bring yourself to ask for a smaller amount, eat only half of a full entree and ask the waiter to take the rest away.

Other ways to reduce the amount you eat is to choose one or two appetizers rather than a regular meal, order items ala carte for less total food and when you have a dessert, share it with a friend.

If you have trouble avoiding the high-calorie, high-fat temptations at the salad bar, ask the waitress to get a bowl of fresh greens and vegetables for you.

Read the menu with an eye toward cooking terms that mean "fat-added." For example, "saute" also means added butter, "tempura" is batter-fried, "au gratin" means cheese sauce. If the entree you want is fried, ask if it can be broiled instead.

Since butter is 100 calories per tablespoon, switch to sour cream at 26 calories per tablespoon. Or even better, ask the waiter for a small dish of cottage cheese or yogurt for your baked potato.

Ask for all toppings--salad dressings, sauces and gravies -- to be served "on the side." Then you control how much will be added to the dish.

And if you can't resist the french fries, order the thicker "steak" fries instead of the thin type. They soak up less fat.

HEALTHY ADDITIONS TO YOUR FOOD PREPARATIONS

You can multiply the health benefits of foods you prepare without spending one more minute in the kitchen.

It's as simple as adding three canisters to your countertop set--fill one with nonfat dry milk, one with whole wheat flour and one with oatmeal. Then whenever you can, add them to foods to enhance nutritional value.

For example, mix nonfat milk into yogurt or a glass of skim milk for extra calcium. Or you can add a few tablespoons to biscuits, corn bread or pancake mix. Also, try reducing the amount of sugar in a baked goods recipe and add back that amount in dry milk powder for extra calcium protein and riboflavin.

Substitute whole-wheat flour for half or more of the white flour you normally use in any dish. It will add fiber and more vitamins.

Oatmeal can go in many recipes, from muffins and cookies to meat loaf. It adds fiber and will help lower blood cholesterol.

Adding nutrition to your diet can be a matter of simply having the right ingredients easily available to use as you cook.

Ice Cream Cones: 85th Anniversary

That all-American treat, the ice cream cone, is 85 years old this year. On Sept. 22, 1903, Italo Marchiony, an Italian immigrant, applied for a patent for his new invention, the ice cream cone. He was issued a patent on Dec. 15, 1903.

Marchiony invented the cone to hold the lemon ice he sold from a fleet of pushcarts in New York City. Although his first cones were made of paper, he switched to using rolled waffles. The edible ice cream cone has continued to grow in popularity ever since. lil spent five hours setting up the lodge during their first effort last Sunday. Their second try took about four hours. An experienced team can assemble a lodge in an hour to 90 minutes, he added.

The results are well worth the effort, as the lodge provides accommodations which are spacious and snug. Standing 20 feet wide at the base, the lodge contains about 314 square feet of floor space -- or rather ground space, since there's no floor in Flanagan's lodge. The structure stands 15 feet tall, so there's no need to stoop while inside. Lodges are erected with the doorway and vent facing the east, said Flanagan, so they will catch the first light of day but shield the occupants from the hot afternoon sun.

For all its roominess, the lodge is quite cozy during the winter, Flanagan maintained. "The Indians discovered central heating," he declared, pointing to the simple wood fire burning at the center of his lodge. "There's an old saying that 'The red man lives in his chimney,'" he related. The lodge is constructed with an airspace located between two layers of canvas along the bottom of the structure allowing a draft to come in and pull the smoke up toward the opening at the top, he explained.

The furnishings around Flanagan's lodge are simple, sturdy and reminiscent of backwoods life of the 1800's: a couple of rude wooden chairs draped with Indian blankets, a trio of candle lanterns to provide light, some tin cups for drinking, and a pair of elk hide trousers with a deer skin tunic, both sewed by Mary. Serving as wall decorations are the skinned hides of a bobcat and coyote. "I plan to make a hat for winter out of the coyote," said Flanagan.

at mountain men rendezvous, said Flanagan, where modern conveniences are looked down on if not prohibited outright.

When mountain men arrive at the rendezvous he explained, they have two hours to remove their gear from their vehicles, which must be parked away from the campsite. They may take along modern devices or provisions as long as they are not in plain sight. An ice chest is okay, for example, provided it's kept hidden under a blanket inside the lodge. Radios and portable televisions, on the other hand, are virtually forbidden, as these would destroy the 19th century atmosphere the camp builders are trying to create.

Obviously, some concessions are made to modern conveniences. Prepackaged food is allowed, since it isn't possible for the campers to set out and hunt deer. Porta-poties are also permitted, provided they are kept from view.

"I won't carry anything modern with me, not even filter cigarettes," joked Flanagan, who later admitted he would make one small exception: sleeping on an air mattress instead of the pine needle mattress commonly used by mountain men.

Activities at a rendezvous often focus on the survival skills used by outdoorsmen of the past century: accuracy in throwing knives and tomahawks, and testing marksmanship with caplock or flintlock rifles.

Also of high importance is the trading of goods, all of which must be hand-crafted. "We don't want anything that has 'Made in Taiwan' stamped on it," said Flanagan.

Old-fashioned ideas of virtue and honesty play a major role at these gatherings, said Flanagan, where any instances of theft or disturbance are exceedingly rare. Much to the contrary, he stated, a loss by one is considered a loss by all. When a participant's lodge burned down at a rendezvous held at Raton, N.M., he recalled, other members of the camp passed the coonskin cap to help out and ended up with enough funds to purchase two lodges.

Most of all, a rendezvous provides its participants with a chance to escape the humdrum activities of the workaday world and to enjoy a backwoods style of comradeship.

Flanagan stated the idea more succinctly: "It's like a grown-up game of Cowboys and Indians."
