REGIONAL QUARTER-FINALS

AMANDA

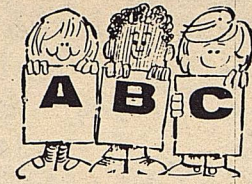

ANDERSON REACHES

TENNIS

In not exactly ideal tennis conditions, Amanda Anderson, a freshman at Borden County, reached the regional quarter-finals in the Region I tennis tournament in Levelland last week. Weather was not very cooperative as the high winds and cold temperatures made conditions somewhat unpleasant. But still Amanda came out in her first match with a convincing straight set win over Shannon Fields of Groom by a 6-4, 6-2 count. Then in the quater-finals she came up against Prissy Grey of Balmorra, who was making her fourth straight appearance in the Regional Tournament. Miss Grey placed third last year. Amanda jumped out ahead of her opponent 2-0 and held a game point to go up 3-0. Then experience took its toll as Grey ran off many unanswered games and would seem to come up with a big shot to erase any game points or break points Amanda had. Amanda dropped her quarter-final match by identical scores of 6-2, 6-2. The singles title was won by Stephanie Brockman of Nazareth over Cindy Barkley of Gruver. Miss Brockman was the 1987 state champion and the 1988 state runner-up. Miss Barkley reached the state quarter-finals last year in Class AA before Gruver dropped down a classification to Class A this year. Things look bright for Amanda in the future as six of the eight quarter-finalists were seniors, one was a sophomore, and Amanda the only freshman.

NOTES FROM HOME

STRESS AND ITS EFFECTS

Stress is a common event of everyday life and is related to the pressures everyone faces from day to day. No one is free from stress.

Babies as young as eight months of age can detect stress in their mothers and show signs of depression as a result. Only in death does one have freedom from complete stress.

Excessive stress stems from meeting the demands of family, maintaining a household or work. Sudden expenses, unemployment, sickness and death can also produce unexpected pressures.

However, some pressure serves as motivation to get things done. Stress is like medication; the right dose is good for you, but too much can be a poison.

Like poison, stress also affects the health. The body may signal the mind that stress levels are too high. The signals should be listened to before serious conditions such as emphysema ulcers, colitis or a heart attack develop.

Some of these health signals include:

*quickened heart beat

*increase in hormones produced by the adrenal glands.

*Increased circulation

*increased lung activity

* High blood pressure

*full energy as a result of glucose in the muscles and brain

*improved muscle function

*acceleration in blood clotting mechanisms

*improved hearing and eyesight

*cold hand and feet
*suspension of digestive processes resulting in indigestion.

Everyone reacts to stress differently, so there are different ways of managing stress. Breathing deeply to improve oxygen intake, exercising, or taking an imaginary 10 minute mind vacation to a peaceful place are all helpful methods of relieving stress. Talking to someone about the problem can also help.

Abuse of alcohol or drugs can worsen stress. In the long run, you have to get over both the stress and the side effects.

Since stress cannot be avoided, there are things a person can do to minimize the effects of it. Eating right; getting enough sleep; allowing time for relaxation and organizing personal life, home, or work area can all be helpful. Cultivation and use of faith and values also provides a source of support.

Pork Rinds: The Snack Food of Presidents

By Tom Clifford
PM Editorial Services

They are at the table when the nation's most powerful men and women sit down to talk. The president wants them there. And like the politicians in George Bush's Cabinet, they have come a long way.

A very long way.

They are pork rinds.

When President Bush mentioned on the campaign trail last year that pork rinds are his favorite snack food, a lot of people were left wondering just what the heck a pork rind is, anyhow. Technically speaking, a pork rind is a piece of pigskin cooked in hog fat until it looks like a pellet, stored for 30 days and then fried again in 400-degree oil until it explodes into a crunchy puff.

Sound appetizing? With the recent wave of publicity surrounding them, more and more people are discovering just how delicious they are. John Rudolph of Rudolph Foods in Lima, Ohio, the world's largest manufacturer of pork rinds, says that they can't make enough of them.

"We're awful busy," Rudolph says. "We finished the year 25 percent ahead of last year and have been working seven days a week, around the clock."

The company ships pork rinds around the world.

"They're practically the national dish in Mexico," claims Rudolph.

The center of pork rind popularity in the United States has always been the rural South, where many people grew up on homemade pork rinds.

"My grandfather raised pigs, so I guess I had some made pretty fresh off the hog," remembers Judy Fannin, an Ashland, Ky., native. "Sometimes you're more in the mood for them than others," she adds. "Instead of hot air popcorn, you grab a pork rind."

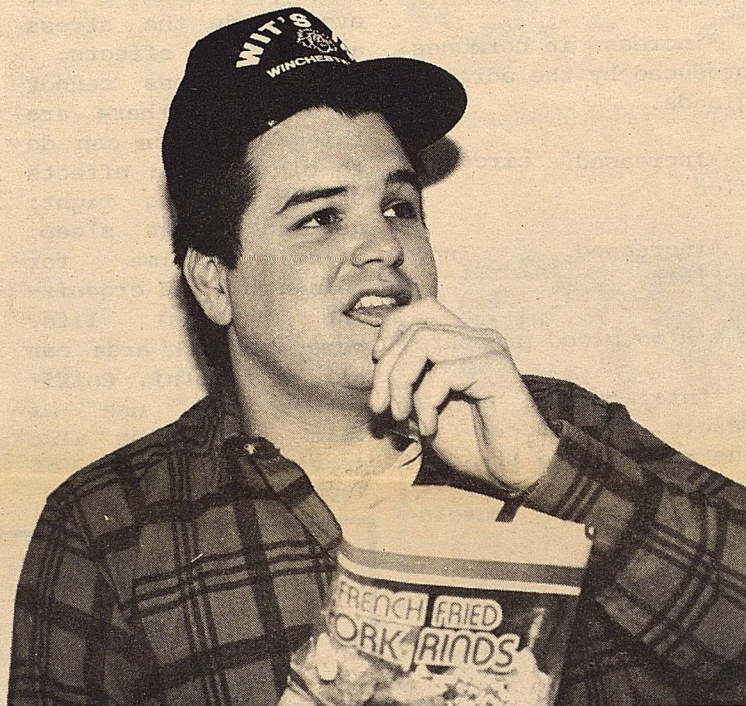

While the rinds aren't exactly stealing the snack food market away from potato and corn chips, farmers who supply the pigs for pork rinds couldn't be happier.

"We're delighted that it spotlights pork every time they are mentioned," says Charles Harness, director of communications for the National Pork Producers Council, based in Des Moines, Iowa.

Bill Conner, of Evans Food Products Co. of Chicago, sent 3,000 pounds of pork rinds to Washington, D.C., for the Bush inauguration.

For now Barbara Bush admits to growing a bit weary of the pork rind. The First Lady and her husband have been swamped with gifts of the fried hide ever since her husband's victory last November.

GEAR UP FOR GARDEN PESTS

Gardening season is just around the corner, and with it the need for early preparation against insect pests that are sure to be around.

First, gardeners should inspect insecticides left over from last year to determine if they are still good.

Product age and storage conditions must be considered.

If properly stored, most products should have at least a two-year shelf life once they begin to be used. Dusts sometimes have a tendency to absorb moisture if the bag is not sealed tightly after each use; they should not be used if lumpy.

Place bags containing insecticides in a clear, polyethylene bag and seal it with a rubber band to keep moisture out.

If dusts are two years old or older and there is any doubt about their storage, dispose of them according to label directions and buy new insecticide.

Although liquid materials are not as likely to absorb moisture, storage is still important. Caps should be resealed tightly on the product after each use. Do not use liquids which are cloudy or milky in color or which have sediments on the bottom of the container.

Do not store pesticides on a shelf in front of a window, especially if the window gets strong afternoon sun. Do not store liquids in an area subjected to extreme temperature fluctuations. Extremes from summer to winter temperatures may not hurt the active ingredient in the insecticide, but it may damage the ability of the product to mix properly in water. It's important to anticipate pesticides that will be needed for the crops to be grown. Select insecticides by considering the plants and the period for insect control before repeating the application. This also will affect time from application until a safe time for harvesting.

To all customers of Southwestern Bell Telephone Company:

Public Notice

On March 14, 1989, Southwestern Bell Telephone Company filed with the Public Utility Commission of Texas an application which proposes to revise its Toll Restriction Tariff in Section 21 of the General Exchange Tariff. The Commission received the application as Docket No. 8700.

The application proposes to reduce the monthly rate for Toll Restriction residence service from the current $15 a month to $5 a month per residence access line. This proposed application will affect approximately 2,487 residence customers who presently subscribe to toll restriction. It is estimated that the proposed rate schedule will reduce the Company's annual revenues from this service by approximately $298,000, which is less than one percent of the Company's total intrastate revenues. If the application is approved, the effective date of the rate reduction will be set according to the Commission's Order.

Persons who wish to intervene or otherwise participate in these proceedings should notify the Commission as soon as possible. A deadline to file motions to intervene has been set for May 30, 1989. A request to intervene, participate, or for further information should be mailed to the Public Utility Commission of Texas at 7800 Shoal Creek Blvd., Suite 400N, Austin, Texas 78757.
