"What This Country Needs Is . . ."

This is the darkest period before the spring, when many citizens face the problems of income tax payments (or making ends meet after paying taxes) and facing the economic realities of a new year.

Conversation overheard around the business district points this out in a statement "what this county needs is a good soaking three inch rain to brighten everyone's spirits." That would certainly help the spirits of citizens in this area, but the wave of negative thinking which is spreading over the country goes deeper than our area's concern with possible drought conditions for 1976.

Newspaper editors are feeling the pulse of their citizens and are beginning to write about the wave of negativism. Norman Cousins, founder and editor of the Saturday Review, believes that the principal problem of our time is a shortage of hope and confidence—rather than a shortage of resources.

Cousins says the world is being divided into those who have given up in face of awesome problems and those determined to do the best they can under the circumstances.

Sure, the nation faces big problems, including the need for more oil, less inflation, a lower crime rate, but one of the greatest needs is for leadership in which we have confidence. Headlines scream at us, "Is Democracy Dying?" "The United States A Third Rate Power?" "U. S. Self-Criticism: An Unnecessary Trauma".

Historian William H. McNeill of the University of Chicago, says that deepening pessimism about democracy is new in its intensity and depth in this country.

The average citizen in this country can understand a realistic description of the state of affairs in our country. But negative thinking is destructive. We don't need a President who tells us that we've had it, our best days are behind us and from now on it's down hill, we've used up our resources and from now on it's tighten our belts and live on less, we've seen the end of economical fuel and energy, that not in this decade can we expect even a ray of hope, that we're bankrupt morally, spiritually and economically, that we couldn't successfully defeat a third rate power.

We heard a few years back that population growth alone would bury us as a nation by the year 2000. But now, latest figures indicate that family sizes are so small that the U. S. population will climb only moderately in the next 25 years, even to the point of creating no problems whatsoever in our nation. The cost of having and raising children has certainly brought about a decline in the size of families in the U. S.

What the United States of America needs is leaders who have the courage to speak out on the problems and, if elected, guide the ship of state on a new road out of the dilemma.

Our choice, realistically recognizing the serious problems facing us as a nation, is to roll over and die or get up and at least try to solve our problems. And if we decide to do the latter, we've got to have a leader around which to rally. We've got to have someone to inspire us.

Being realistic is painful at times. Consider the phrase "never again cheap energy." The author of this phrase is Big Oil. Of course we'll never have cheap energy if it is left up to Big Oil for they are loyal to the stockholders and shareholders interested in "profit". Does it make sense to suppose Big Oil is going to cut its own throat? Is Big Oil going to develop a new source of energy so long as it still has oil reserves to last at least 25 years? And is Big Oil going to permit a source of energy less expensive than oil?

We in this section of the country are certainly concerned about energy as oil is big business in our section of the state. Agriculture is also big business. For us to prosper, these industries must prosper.

Confidence in the future of this nation must come about on the feet of responsibility, political as well as economic.

Citizens have lived through a period of irresponsibility, where everyone disclaims the blame, vetoes by the executive branch are the order of the day, with no one really accountable for the state of affairs it seems.

Wouldn't it be refreshing to live again under strong leadership and see the sign "the buck stops here." This nation is ready to rally behind a strong leader, one who is responsible, accountable and dedicated to doing what's right for the nation and its generations of citizens to come.

In the past 200 years, the U. S. of A. has survived dark years, times when its citizens were hungry, at war even between brothers, and solutions have come as leaders have found paths through the problems.

We feel that 1976 is a time when citizens must seek and find another such leader, so confidence can be restored and solutions to our problems found. Needed is a President who can give us faith in tomorrow.

HOW REVENUE SHARING HELPS

The new recreational courts in city-county park, recently completed by the city, is another excellent community improvement sure to benefit all who use it.

The courts were so built that they can be used for basketball, volleyball and tennis, although for tennis the surface is not up to the high quality of the four courts across from the high school.

Coupled with the playground equipment in the park for younger children, the courts provide an opportunity for older boys and girls to enjoy competitive sports.

City Recreation Director Joe Giddens is very pleased with the city's new improvement, and praises the council for its good judgement in improving park recreational facilities here have been long overdue. The availability of federal revenue sharing has benefited Post and Garza County in so many ways that the threat of its July 1 demise by Congress seems to us one of the craziest ambiguities of this election year.

It seems that the voice of the people should be heard loud and clear for the principal of federal revenue sharing with local authorities being given the choice of how to spend the money to improve the quality of local life.

Both city and county have used federal revenue sharing to benefit this town and area in many ways, the most important of which to our way of thinking is the new Post Community Center now being remodeled as the first step in a first class facility for use by both adults and young people.

The Dispatch for one doesn't think revenue sharing has been lost. We think in the end — say by mid-June — our lawmakers in Washington are going to decide to continue it (because of real political pressure from the voters back home).

It makes sense to have local control for the expenditure of such funds instead of enlarging the federal bureaucracy for more expensive programs which seldom — if ever — prove their fiscal worth.

—The Post Dispatch

LISTEN AND LEAN

Most churches around the country have the same problem in trying to enlist the attendance and participation of young people. Some churches do a lot better job of this than others, but all churches would like to do more.

Down at Azle, Texas, near Fort Worth, the Ministerial Alliance became concerned about this problem and last week held a series of discussions between ministers and teenagers.

Out of these discussions came four main reasons why churches don't relate to youth these days.

1. The churches are all run by adults and the youth are left out of things.

2. The churches do not offer enough so far as recreational activities are concerned.

3. The ministers use terms and cliches in their messages that go above the heads of the average teenager.

4. When young people do go to church many find the youth that are members of the church are "very clannish," and the youthful newcomers are made to feel like outsiders.

In these discussion groups, only a quarter of the young people said they went to church regularly. Others had gone for a short time and decided to "drop out."

But all interviewed said they felt the need for some kind of spiritual guidance.

In order that the reactions and comments of the young people should be spontaneous, none of them were informed of the upcoming meeting. The names of 15 teenagers from the junior and senior classes were called at random and asked to report to the library.

The interview with the ministers took place then.

These four reasons for not going to church may seem weak to some people and valid to others. Valid or not, they are there, and it should be of some concern to adults in other communities to learn just what teenagers in their community think about church.

While church attendance is down over the nation, membership remains high. This does not mean that churches will continue to grow because most denominations are concerned about the "deadwood" on their rolls, people to whom church membership is just a name on the roll.

If our churches are to remain strong, they have to have an infusion of young people. It may be a wise idea for local churches to take a look and see if they may learn something about their own similar problem.

Convert Waste Problems Into Energy Resources

By Robert L. Haney
TAES Science Writer

Our energy needs grow, we need to import more and oil in order to close the gap in energy we produce and we need to meet demands. Domestic energy sources are being tapped and additional resources are being sought and tapped continuously. Scientists are seeking ways to produce methane from the vast supply of animal wastes that are readily available natural resources. Methane is a flammable gas and a major constituent of natural gas. This efficient fuel is a source of hydrogen and is a wide variety of organic compounds. The rate of methane production under natural conditions is a very slow process but commercially feasible. TAES microbiologists in the Department of Veterinary Microbiology, Drs. Don Lewis and Ed Hidalgo, Texas A&M University, are working in cooperation with the Center for Energy Mineral Resources to improve this process by using specific microorganisms. They plan to introduce microorganisms that have the capacity to speed up the breakdown of the waste and produce methane and generate methane. It takes 3-5 weeks to produce methane from raw waste. The introduction of proper combinations of organisms into the process at this time in half or to a third of what it is now," Lewis says. This means we can produce methane per unit of time and greatly shorten the time required to dispose of the waste. His efforts on methane production processes concentrated on the engineering aspects. The new process capitalizes on biological approach, according to Lewis and Hidalgo. Initially, they see this process applicable on a small farm. The process will not only speed up the breakdown of waste but also produce gas to heat houses and buildings on the farm. The amount of waste accumulated day to day in this country is staggering. For example, 2 1/2 million cattle are fed each day in the High Plains area. This results in about 19 million pounds of waste per day. The energy-producing potential of these products is immense. Lewis and Hidalgo point out possibilities other than methane from animal matter exist for using the basic process of isolating organisms and using them to the advantage of mankind. If one of our worst liabilities, animal wastes, is turned into assets — from waste to energy — it may be a solution to the energy problem in

Many Taxpayers Are Using Wrong Table This Year

DALLAS, TEX. —The use of the wrong tax table in computing income tax this year is causing many North Texas taxpayers to "undertake or overstate their tax liability, according to A. W. McCannless, Dallas district director of the Internal Revenue Service (IRS).

Taxpayers with incomes under $15,000 who do not itemize deductions generally take their taxes from tax tables which are numbered according to the number of personal exemptions claimed on a return. Some pages of the 1975 tax instructions contain more than one tax table, and the tax official said that this is apparently causing the confusion.

"Table three, for example, starts on page 26 of the instructions which accompanied Form 1040 this year," Mr. McCannless said. "But table three carries over to page 27, where table four begins. Quite a few people are finding that they must go to the next page of the tax tables to find their tax, and inadvertently report the tax from the higher numbered table.

Officials at the IRS' Austin service center reported that they received over 22,000 returns using the wrong tax table during the week ending March 6. IRS employees at the service center are correcting this error on taxpayers' returns, but Mr. McCannless pointed out that the delay caused by such mistakes can often be as great as five weeks. Taxpayers expecting refunds, therefore, should double check their computations in order to receive their refund in the shortest possible length of time.

The Eastern coyote male usually weighs 30 to 40 pounds, mates in the Northeast in February and stays mated for life. Although coyotes were virtually unknown east of Wisconsin at the turn of the century, the first true coyote appeared in New Hampshire in 1944 and in Vermont in 1948 and has since proliferated and moved south. The Eastern coyote, Canis latrans var., should not be confused with coyote-dog hybrids, popularly known as coydogs. While the male Eastern coyote is a devoted father and teacher, the male coyote-dog takes no interest in his offspring.

FIRST STATE BANK

An individual who wants to provide for his own retirement, and can qualify, can do so by setting up an Individual Retirement Account (IRA) at the bank. When retirement years arrive, there are some ground rules on withdrawals.

For example, if withdrawals are made by the depositor before 59 1/2 years of age, there is a penalty on the withdrawal amount — and income taxes will have to be paid.

On the other hand, after age 59 1/2 withdrawals may be made in a lump sum, or in monthly, quarterly or yearly installments. It's a good idea to review the distribution, or withdrawal system, at age 70 1/2, because at that point it might be worthwhile to withdraw the remainder in a lump sum, when income taxes on the amount probably would be negligible.

There is another tax benefit for an IRA plan: If an individual retires and receives a lump settlement from his employer, this amount is immediately subject to taxation. However, if the amount — less voluntary contributions — is deposited within 60 days to an IRA, tax can be avoided until withdrawals are begun.

Accent on Health

J.E. PEAVY, M.D., Commissioner of Health

Some people have it, and some people who don't have it don't want it.

What is it? Allergies, which affect about half the adult population in one form or another. This half may sneeze or sneeze, itch or wheeze, suffer intestinal disturbances or other uncomfortable symptoms, says the Department of Health Resources.

If you have burning, scratchy eyes and a running nose during ragweed season, it may be little consolation that some 13 million people in the United States have hay fever. About a half of adults and a third of our children are allergic to something—something they eat, smell, or contact. Some people have been found to be affected by a certain color.

In some people, allergies occur only at certain seasons of the year, such as ragweed season. In Texas, thousands upon thousands time their allergies by the pollinating of cedar trees, which begins around Christmas time each year. It may last a month or longer. Others are bothered in early spring by the blossoming of trees and flowers. Grasses later in the spring and summer affect others.

The very unfortunate individual may have some form of allergy on a daily basis.

When the allergy-producing substance enters your system and comes in contact with the antibodies in the cell, that union produces dramatic effects. The best known of the results of these miniature explosions is the release of the chemical histamine from the cell. Normally, presence of histamine stimulates production of adequate amounts of antihistamine which would of course cause no symptoms to develop. Sometime enough antihistamine is not produced to counter the levels of histamine.

Histamine is perfectly harmless when inside the cell, but once released outside the cell it produces undesirable changes. It dilates and congests blood vessels to that fluids from your blood stream leak out into the tissue, causing swelling.

If this change takes place the result is hives. If this reaction occurs in the nose, the membrane swells and you have a condition known as hay fever or "sinus." Another action of histamine is to contract or put into spasm involuntary muscle fibers—muscles not controlled by your own will, such as stomach, intestine, urinary bladder, or the uterus. If this muscle effect takes place in the muscle fibers around the bronchial tubes, asthma is the result; if in the intestine, cramps and diarrhea may be the effect.

At least one in three Texans who have untreated hay fever will develop asthma. In many cases, seasonal asthma may fail to subside with the end of the season and may become chronic, says the Department of Health Resources.

Among the most common forms of respiratory allergy is "pollinosis"—a respiratory reaction to pollen. The severity of hay fever varies in different parts of the country, from season to season and day to day.

Molds commonly grow on plant life are particularly prevalent on grains, such as wheat, oats, rye and corn. Next to pollen, molds are the most common causes of seasonal hay fever and asthma.

Then there is contact dermatitis. Poison ivy dermatitis is one of the best known examples of this kind. But many other plants and common substances in use in the house can produce this disease, says the Department of Health Resources.

Three factors may play a part in the production of allergic illness. Susceptibility is one. Only certain people have the ability or the background to become allergic. Granting you have this background, you still must become sensitized to a special substance and then be re-exposed to it. If you avoid either of these steps, you will have no allergic illness. A third factor is what might be called contributing factors. Various conditions—temperature, chemical irritants, dust, emotional disturbances, etc.—may aggravate allergies or trigger their attacks. But by themselves they do not cause allergic symptoms.

Travis Baptist WMU Observed Home Mission

The W.M.U. of Travis Baptist Church observed the Home Mission Week of Prayer March 7-14, studying a "New Birth of Freedom" based on Galatians 5:1.

They met Monday, Tuesday, Thursday and Friday mornings at 9:30 a.m. and Wednesday at 7:30 p.m.

The titles of the five meetings were "Freedom to Grow," "Freedom from Tradition," "Freedom for Leisure," "Freedom from Want" and "Freedom to Serve." The different projects that the Annie Armstrong offering for Home Missions is used to promote were discussed—such as Missions started for foreign speaking people here in our United States, Missions and schools started in the thinly populated states, bus ministries, camp ministries in state parks, seamen's ministry board the ships when they dock, ministering and counseling to the young people, helping stranded servicemen, teaching children on lawn at apartment complexes and minister to the handicapped.

Celebrating the Bicentennial year along with the program, a discussion was given on the covered wagon, Liberty Bell, Declaration of Independence, Bill of Rights, Statue of Liberty and the flag of the United States. "My Country 'Tis of Thee" was sung at each meeting.

A season of prayer was held at each meeting, the prayer calendar read and the missionaries, the unsave, unconcerned, the sick and bereaved and the youth were all remembered in prayer.

The Acteens, G. A.'s and R. A.'s all took part in the Wednesday night program.

Women attending the morning programs were Mmes. J. I. Herridon, C. H. Davidson, T. C. Stevens, Lynn B. Jones, Myrtle Dunn, J. W. Chappell, A. L. Rogers, W. S. McQueen, Grace Richardson, L. G. Rasco and Miss Joyce Richardson.

About 50 men, women and young people attended Wednesday night.

Delphian Club Enjoys Program On Amer. Women

The Delphian Club met in the home of Mrs. Henry Hays on March 16.

Mrs. Wayne Sweatt called the meeting to order and led in the pledge to the flag. During the business meeting an invitation was read inviting the members to attend a Bicentennial luncheon in Canyon on April 24, honoring outstanding clubwomen.

Mrs. Dean Yarbrough introduced the Americanism program, "Meeting Women of America" with an excerpt from a letter to John Quincy Adams from his wife Abigail in which she wrote, "We will not hold ourselves bound by any laws in which we have no voice or representation."

Mrs. Morris gave a very timely devotional entitled "Not So Little Women."

Mrs. Kenneth Dale, Mrs. Norman Archer and Mrs. Ben Moss gave some interesting facts about three women who contributed their talents to developing the economy, forming new social and religious philosophies and shaping the fine and folk art in early America.

Anne Dudley Bradstreet stands out in early colonial history as the first English poet to write in America. She was considered America's finest poet for almost a hundred years.

A contemporary of Mrs. Bradstreet, Anne Hutchinson is noted for challenging conservative Puritanism in America. She was described by Governor John Winthrop as a woman of ready wit and bold spirit. She was very articulate and religious. She made significant departure from custom by establishing weekly religious discussions for women. A result she was excommunicated and sentenced to banishment. Mistress Margaret Brent arrived in America in 1638 and is considered America's first feminist. Her administrative competence the colony, referred to in later years as Margaret Brent, Gentleman, is good indication that she

Country Club Has Season's 1st Best-Ball Tour.

The team of Melroy Cofer, Mr. and Mrs. Don Cockrell and Craig Arnold Cruise and Steven and Darrell Cofer won the tournament with a 9-under-par score, 59.

Placing second was the team of James Bray, Roddy Rice, Don Carl, Johnnie and Miles Farnsworth, and Gordon D. Maddox.

Third place went to the team of Mr. and Mrs. Dink Miller, Dale Lawrence, Vestal Vaughn and Harold Smith.

Eight teams competed in the tournament.

The next Best Ball tournament being planned at the club will be Sunday, March 28, if weather will permit.

Tom Greene, who is a student at Houston University Optometry School, is here this week visiting with his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Gayle Greene during spring break.

Silver and gold coins have a rough edge because if they were smooth it would be easy to file off some of the valuable metal without changing the coin's appearance.

How Satellites Can Improve Food Production

By Robert L. Haney
TAES Science Writer

Each year in the United States farmers lose over one-third of their crops to insects and disease. Selecting these problems earlier could help prevent major losses, and what sensory tools does the average farmer have available besides his unaided eye?

Carefully designed remote sensing instruments placed in satellites as far as 500 miles above the earth's surface will be able to detect certain crop diseases even before the farmer in his field can recognize them, according to Dr. James Harlan, research scientist at the Remote Sensing Center at Texas A&M University.

Using data from aerial photography scientists with the Texas Agricultural Experiment Station have traced the movement of a airborne fungus through Blackland soils. The fungus can't be seen by the naked eye; its location is determined from the sound only by finding dying cotton plants. But a grower can't kill a fungus then — he must wait until after the cotton is harvested to apply treatment.

Remote sensors simplify detection of the fungus by mapping its location as it moves through the soil. Once the location of the fungus is determined, treatments can be applied. Sensing instruments will then be able to follow up with information on the effectiveness of the treatments," Harlan said.

Basically, scientists use remote sensing instruments to gather and interpret information about the earth's surface. From instruments placed in satellites, airplanes, and even hot air balloons, technicians obtain data concerning the earth's climate and land forms, then process this information through computers. The data may show fluctuations of surface land and water temperatures throughout the seasons, or may show the living conditions of different life forms in the Antarctic. Also, using satellites and balloons scientists have been able to identify, study and track thunderstorms.

One of the most practical uses of information obtained from remote sensors will be to tell farmers the condition of their crops. Sensors can detect at the earliest possible time signs of water stress, disease, mineral deficiency and insect problems.

Right now a LANDSAT satellite circling the earth at 500 miles can view one acre of land at a time and could send the information back to earth within seconds. Satellite instruments will soon be able to detect diseases such as wheat streak mosaic from the air before a farmer can detect it in his field!

Such information, when supplied to farmers, would enable them to apply treatments early enough to be effective, or if no treatment could be applied, to estimate crop losses more accurately.

LANDSAT and other such satellites can also help ranchers by determining range condition. When ranchers are supplied information on the condition of their ranges they can more easily decide how to utilize the forage present without overgrazing.

In the past, ranchers have used maps of regional forage conditions that took nearly six weeks to produce. These maps were drawn up from information obtained from a postcard survey. Using satellites such as LANDSAT to examine regions, scientists can produce similar maps within ten days, Harlan said.

Foliar diseases in peanuts have been experimentally reduced through information from aerial photography by instruments similar to those in LANDSAT. Scientists have used the information to better time fungicide treatments and have used figures on the amount of foliar dropoff to predict peanut yields. Treating peanut foliar diseases is economically important; Texas has the second largest peanut acreage in the nation, yet has the lowest yields.

Remote sensing can help a grower increase his yields and help ranchers improve forage utilization. But its applications are not limited to agriculture; it supplies information to weathermen, geologists, and scientists in many other fields.

United Methodist Youth To Canvass For Mental Health

The Rev. Ken Metzger of Memphis announced that Bellingranger workers will go house-to-house during May collecting for mental health.

The Rev. Ken Metzger is Bellingranger chairperson for the drive benefiting the Texas Association for Mental Health (TAMH).

As a volunteer agency, TAMH works on behalf of the mentally and emotionally disturbed and to promote mental health. The association is not a state agency and so must exist entirely on private contributions such as funds collected in the Bellingranger drive.

The need is great. Rev. Metzger cited these reasons—one in four families is affected by mental illness; an estimated 75% of those who attempt suicide are seriously depressed; mental illness is America's most costly health problem—excess of $21 billion.

Bellingranger workers collecting in Memphis will be the United Methodist Youth of First United Methodist Church in Memphis.

Shamrock To Hold St. Patrick's Celebration On March 19 and 20

SHAMROCK — Irishman from all over the Southwest and the rest of the nation are planning to attend the 30th annual St. Patrick's Day Celebration in the Irish City. The theme for this year's festivities is "Stars, Stripes and Shamrocks Forever."

The Festival is scheduled for Saturday, March 20, this year and will be preceded Friday by the traditional Pre-St. Patrick's Day banquet, featuring the Honorable Dolph Briscoe, Governor of Texas.

In addition to Governor Briscoe's speech, entertainment at the banquet will be furnished by the Pampa High School Woodwind Ensemble, an award-winning unit which has performed throughout the area. Banquet tickets, priced at $6.00 each, may be reserved by calling the Shamrock Chamber of Commerce.

One of the highlights of the annual St. Patrick's festivities here, the gigantic St. Patrick's Parade, will begin at 11 a.m. Saturday morning at the south end of the business district and will move north down Main Street. Highlighting the parade will be dozens of elaborately decorated floats and several bands, drill teams and other marching units.

For the kids of all ages, an All Day Carnival will run Saturday to accommodate the enthusiastic, fun-loving crowd which annually packs the Irish City on its big day.

Western entertainment, beginning at 1:00 p.m. Saturday, will unfold at the Sheriff's Posse Rodeo Arena, as many of the area's best steer ropers demonstrate their talent. An old fiddlers contest will be held at Clark Auditorium beginning at 2:30 p.m. Saturday, featuring fiddlers from several states.

Entertainment of various flavors will be presented throughout the day Saturday from the downtown sound stage, the hub of all the festivities.

Attractive collectibles from area schools will ride floats in the street parade and compete for the title of Miss Irish Rose. The winner and runners up will be crowned in an impressive coronation at the National Guard Armory during the afternoon and awarded college scholarships.

Other Saturday afternoon activities include an auction of Shamrock coins, the presentation of awards to winning drill teams, floats, and riding clubs, and donkey beard judging.

The Irish Festival will end Saturday night with two dances. The Texas Swingsters will furnish music for the regular St. Patrick's Day Dance at the Armory. A dance at the junior high school gymnasium, designed for the teenagers, will feature C. C. Crow, Amarillo radio personality. The Shamrock St. Patrick's Celebration, dating back to 1938, is one of the biggest and most exciting festivals held in the Southwest. Each year thousands of visitors crowd the city on the big day and enjoy the many, varied forms of activities.

Although St. Patrick's Day comes each year on March 17, the celebration in Shamrock is observed on a weekend date so that more people can attend and participate in all the activities.

Two-Dollar Bills To Be Available Currency Soon

Two-dollar bills will again become a circulating currency next month when the Federal Reserve System will make available at commercial banks a new series 1976 $2 Federal Reserve note.

The previous $2 bill, last printed in May 1965, was the 1963-1963 A U. S. note. The Treasury Department discontinued the issue in August 1966.

The reissue of the two dollar denomination was prompted in part by a Harvard School of Business study that showed a need for a currency between the $1 and $5 bills. Another factor was the savings that could result from reducing the volume of currency handled.

About 1.6 billion $1 bills, or about 60 percent of all currency, are printed each year. The new $2 notes are expected to cut the volume of $1 notes in half over the next several years, resulting in savings for the Federal Reserve System and the Treasury Department of about $30 million.

The Harvard study also indicated that given an ample volume of $2 bills, the public would likely accept the new note. Weak public demand, primarily a result of the $2 bill's relative scarcity, contributed to the discontinuance of the previous issue.

Two-dollar bills accounted for only a third of 1 percent of the Nation's outstanding currency in 1966, as average annual production was about 6 million pieces.

By contrast, some 225 million notes will be available on April 13. And by July 4, the Federal Reserve System will have injected about 400 million notes — the projected average annual production of the new issue — into the banking system.

The issue on April 13 commemorates Thomas Jefferson's birthday. A portrait of Mr. Jefferson appears on the face plate of the new bill.

Marijuana Is A Perverse & Dangerous Drug Says Francis A. Davis, MD

"Marijuana is a perverse and dangerous drug," says Francis A. Davis, MD, "and the attempts to portray it as nearly harmless are irresponsible in the extreme. As a practicing physician, I have seen the tragic human wreckage left by heavy marijuana use."

Dr. Davis, publisher of Private Practice, a monthly journal for physicians, and president of the Congress of County Medical Societies, deplored the recent Federal government statements about the drug: "We know that marijuana has very serious mental and physical effects on anyone using it regularly."

Writing in the January issue of Private Practice, Dr. Davis B. Jones, professor of radiology and physiology at the University of California at Berkeley and Assistant Director of the Donner Laboratory, described the effects for practicing physicians. This top scientist pointed out that: 1) Marijuana's effects are cumulative, since it is stored in the cells and brain cell membranes; 2) It causes irreversible brain changes; 3) It quickly produces precancerous lesions in the lungs which usually appear only after thirty years of heavy cigarette smoking; 4) It changes the personality — for the worse, usually causing paranoia; 5) It lowers the male hormone level; 6) It lowers the body's immunological defenses; 7) It causes chromosomal damage. It is truly called "the dangerous weed."

Americans may be free and equal but COTTONSEED IS NOT.

There is nothing free about cotton seed. Even ordinary cotton planting seed costs money. Good seed costs a little more.

And all cottonseed isn't equal. There are two varieties of cotton planting seed that stand out from the crowd. They are the product of years of research by two of the most respected firms in Southwest cotton. The seed for each variety is produced under the most exacting quality control. Depending on your land, one of them is a superior variety for your particular farm. They are:

LANKART® BRAND LX 571

It is an excellent, storm-proof, stripper variety capable of high yields of long, strong fiber with good micronaire ratings. It has good seedling vigor and matures somewhat earlier than the famous Lankart Selection 57. It is highly recommended for the dryland areas of Texas and Oklahoma.

LOCKETT® BRAND BXL

Lockett BXL has excellent resistance to nematodes and fusarium wilt. It has high yield potential of quality fiber on all types of soils either dry or irrigated. It has staple length in the 1" and longer range with storm-proof type bolls. It is an excellent stripper variety well-adapted to this area and is especially recommended for the light soils where fusarium wilt-nematode complex causes heavy losses.

"CERTIFIED" SEED WORTH THE MONEY

The only way you can be sure you're planting the variety you select is to buy certified seed in the Lankart or Lockett trademarked bag. You can get them from your ginner.

Produced and distributed by PIONEER

PIONEER HI-BRED INTERNATIONAL, INC.

Lankart® brand LX 571 and Lockett® brand BXL are U.S. Protected Varieties. Unauthorized Propagation is prohibited. It is to be sold by variety name only as a class of certified seed.

Performance of seeds or the crop produced therefrom may be adversely affected by factors beyond our control including environmental conditions, insects and diseases. The limitation of warranty and remedy attached to each bag of seed is a part of the terms and conditions of the sale thereof.

Adapted Veg. Grow Better And Make Bigger Yields

By Robert L. Haney
TAES Science Writer

If you grow vegetables, whether in your backyard or whole fields of them, you can benefit from using improved varieties tailored to our local conditions.

Texas ranks third nationally in fresh market vegetable production with about 250,000 acres returning a farm value of more than 200 million dollars per year.

An industry of this size generates substantial additional business related to supplying the producers and transporting, processing and marketing of the vegetables.

Commercial vegetables are produced from the High Plains to the Rio Grande Valley and from El Paso to East Texas. Specialized breeding programs for improving vegetables have been set up at a number of locations to meet the demand for top-yielding varieties grown under widely varying conditions.

Vegetable breeders, at the research centers established by the Texas Agricultural Experiment Station, develop high-yielding top quality vegetables with built-in disease resistance. In some cases, where labor shortages are critical, a special machine - harvestable vegetable's developed.

For example, a new high-yielding, disease resistant, three-way hybrid pickling cucumber gives twice the yields. The TAMU Triple Cross, developed by Dr. Leonard Pike, which can be used to make three crops per year on the same land, has been a boon to the pickling industry.

The Saladette tomato which is both disease and heat resistant, as well as machine harvestable, has helped Texas tomato producers.

These few examples, out of the comprehensive TAES improvement program, point up the fact that whether you're a backyard gardener or a commercial grower, you'll do better with vegetable varieties adapted to your area.

Listed below are a few of the vegetable varieties developed by TAES plant breeders for commercial as well as home garden use in Texas. Sam Cotner, state horticulturist for the Extension Service, recommends that you try them.

TOMATOES: Of the small fruited types, Saladette is an early maturing variety producing medium sized fruit capable of setting fruit well into the heat of summer. Improved Summertime a medium maturing variety producing medium sized fruit. It is highly resistant to fruit-cracking, blossom-end rot and nematodes. Chico
