Clements Recalls Framing Bicentennial Quilt

Bill Clement has no idea how many custom made frames he designed and build during 14 years as the "B" in B&R Frame Shop, in Snyder, but he does know which one was the biggest -- Borden County's Bicentennial quilt.

Bill and his wife, Rosie, the "R" in the shop's name, worked together on the project, completing it last summer.

Some three months ago, illness forced them to close the shop they had operated in their home on Gary Brewer Road since May of 1981.

Bill, who "never turned a framing job down," accepted the quilt challenge from longtime friend Dorothy Dennis, without "having any idea of how to do it."

From the beginning, Bill said he wanted to frame to "compliment and enhance the quilt, but not draw attention away from it." For the project to succeed, he said, "People have to be drawn to look at the quilt first and then the frame."

Besides its queen size, Bill said another difficulty was that "quilts were never designed to be framed." Instead, they usually are laid on beds or divans.

Blocking the quilt proved just as challenging as designing the frame. Besides the frame, Bill also built the blocking apparatus. Hanging the quilt in Borden County Courthouse in June of last year required three people to work eight hours to get it "just right."

The frame, which measures 7-1/2 feet in width and 9-1/2 feet in height, was too large for Bill to manage by himself, so Rosie, who usually kept the books for the business, assisted him.

Special birch wood ordered through Higginbotham in Snyder was obtained from a hard wood supply business in Lubbock. A little extra wood was ordered to ensure that the frame would be large enough and would have no flaws.

He said they also stained the frame to match the interior of the courthouse.

As he created his design, Bill said he was determined to avoid the problem of dust and debris collecting in the bottom of the frame. He wanted to ensure that there would be an easy way to clean it without having to take the whole thing apart.

To remedy that, he decided that the quilt's frame should be "loaded from the front" rather than from the back the way picture frames are. Thanks to Bill's foresight, the front of the frame can be easily removed and re-attached.

Often a trailblazer in the local world of frame construction, Bill did not know anyone to consult with then he and his wife began the Borden County project. Later, he told a friend, Now I know what

1995-96 COYOTE FOOTBALL

Coyotes Have First Scrimmage of '95 Season Against Wellman Wildcats

The high school Coyote football team, who has been working out for the 1995 season since August 9th, traveled to Wellman last Thursday for a scrimmage with the Wellman Wildcats.

The Wildcats return a veteran squad from last year and are ranked #4 in the state in the pre-season polls. This is why the Coyotes had their work cut out for them.

The Coyotes took the ball first and moved it well against the Wildcat defense, but were unable to get into the endzone. The Wildcats took their turn with the ball and scored on their second play. The Wildcats ended up scoring eight times against the Coyote varsity defense.

The young Coyote team let their 'green' hang out Friday, but there were also plenty of highlights for the Coyotes. Everyone is working hard and improving with each practice.

There are 24 Coyotes on the high school squad this year. With the increased numbers, a Jayvee schedule of 9 games has been added to the regular season games. These games will be played on Thursday nights at the completion of each Junior High game. Be sure to check the revised schedule in the Borden Star for all the football action in Coyote County this season.

Everyone is invited to come and catch Coyote fever and yell for the Home Team.

Pointers For Parents

Stress And Your Child

Stress is not something experienced only by adults. Experts say that stress can be equally tough on kids. Knowing the causes of stress and how to manage them can help your child improve relationships with all family members.

A variety of situations can be stressful for children including divorce, a new stepparent, moving, a single-parent household, death of a loved one, a new sister or brother and stresses of parents sensed by children.

Everything from moving to starting school—even a hospital stay—can be stressful for children. You can help them cope.

Other common sources of stress include hospitalization, school, competition, growing pains and our complex changing world.

The National Cowboy Symposium & Celebration

September 7th, 8th, 9th, & 10th.

The seventh annual National Cowboy Symposium and Celebration is ready to kick up its boots, saddle up the horses, break out the chuck wagons, sharpen up the meter, tune up the fiddles and bring back to Lubbock four days of the cowboy life that once was a standard on the plains. It's the largest presentation in the United States of ranching, cowboys and the Western way of life.

How more western can you get than a trail ride on September 7th on the Lonesome Coyote Ranch? It's a regular business hours trail ride - - from nine to five, and it's to happen rain or shine.

On Friday, September 8th, cowboy poets, musicians, storytellers, artists, historians, authors, editors, publishers, photographers, cooks and real live cowboys will begin the program of information and entertainment that has been an entertainment tradition in Lubbock since 1989. Exhibits, hourly sessions of poetry, storytelling and panel discussions are scheduled from 9 a.m. until 9 p.m. It all takes place at the Lubbock Memorial Civic Center.

Outside the Civic Center on Friday and Saturday, expect chuckwagon cook-offs, horse training, the 4th Cavalry Memorial drill, outdoor musicians, buggy rides and anything that the early west might offer will come alive again.

Each year, Lubbock's event gains more and more national and international attention to the extent that Bob Phillips, of Texas Country Reporter fame will bring a tourist group in to attend the performances, along with a camera crew that will video the Symposium for a future feature on Texas Country Reporter. A group of tourists from Germany, interested in the cowboy way of life will also attend the event.

Best poets, story tellers and musicians will perform in the civic center theatre Friday and Saturday nights with performances scheduled at 7 and 9 p.m.

On Sunday, the symposium moves to the Panhandle South Plains Fairgrounds for conclusion but

You can help your child manage stress by helping them become a flexible and confident adult. Here's how:

*Encourage the ability to welcome change, not fear it. Provide a range of experiences and activities as your child grows.

*Stand back as your child tries to resolve problems - - even if you think of a better solution.

*Leave time for day-dreams and unstructured play. Free time is essential for emotional growth and good mental health.

*Applaud success in all area - - not just in school or sports. Praise the ability to make friends, express feelings, do chores, etc.

*Set goals within a child's reach, to develop a feeling of competence. A child is not a miniature adult; don't demand perfection or compare one child to another. Above all, love your child unconditionally.

A free booklet called What You Should Know About Stress and Your Child is available from the IOF Foresters by calling 1-800-922-4-IOF.

only after a chuckwagon breakfast from 8:30-10:00 a.m., a devotional service at 10 a.m., a chili cook-off at noon, team roping, cutting and penning beginning at 1 p.m. and an auction of Western Art and merchandise benefiting the Symposium.

Tickets for any and all of the events may be reserved by calling 806/

Family Volunteers Time and Talent

The Borden Co. EMS would like to extend their appreciation and gratitude to the Toby and Nan Sharp family. They, along with their sons Preston and TJ, donated their time and talents to remodel the ambulance barn. The west side of the barn was extended to accommodate the new ambulance. Also, the north wall was removed to allow the ambulances drive-thru access. It is because of community support like the Sharp's volunteer services that the EMS organization is able to continue to function and serve the community of Borden County.

A little boy grew to the age of three but never uttered a word. His mother took him to all kinds of doctors and he was pronounced healthy and mentally alert.

One morning the boy startled his mother and father by screaming at the top of his lungs, "The eggs are terrible."

Overjoyed at hearing him say something, his mother hugged him and asked, "Why didn't you say anything before?"

"Because," he answered, "up to now, the eggs were always good."

Sad, isn't it, that we're more prone to criticize than to compliment, to be gripey than grateful, to discourage than to encourage.

Borden County Landfill To Close

The Borden County Landfill will be closing as of October 7, 1995, if the EPA (Environment Protection Agency) does not approve a proposed rule change that will delay the implementation of Subtitle D for two years. The Borden County Commissioners' Court regrets having to take this action, but because of the high cost of the tough, stringent environmental standards dictated by the EPA Subtitle D this action was necessary.

MAJOR EPA SUBTITLE D REGULATIONS

1. Drilling and testing of groundwater monitoring wells
2. Financial assurance for thirty years after closing
3. Methane gas monitoring
4. Leachate disposal
5. Endangered wildlife assessment by qualified biologist
6. Stormwater runoff control
7. Benchmark surveying of site
8. Daily cover of waste
9. Permit modification to meet Subtitle D regulations by licensed engineer

If the EPA approves the rule change, the Borden County Landfill will remain open until the Subtitle D regulations take effect. This will allow the citizens of Borden County approximately two years use of their landfill. The EPA will announce the decision on the proposed rule change in 30 to 45 days (October 1, 1995).

The Borden County Commissioners' Court encourages anyone who would like to assist in getting the rule change approved to write or call their U.S. Congressman and/or U.S. Senator.

If the Borden County Landfill is forced to close, each family will be responsible for obtaining waste disposal at their own expense; therefore, please assist the Court by contacting the above public servants.

to do if I ever do another one."

Working after business hours and on weekends, Bill spent some 85 hours designing and building the frame. Work began on May 12 of last year.

The frame was so large that Bill said they hauled it to Gail on a 16-foot trailer, adding "we took every tool we owned with us because we did not know what we would need."

G&G Glass provided the acrylic covering for the framed quilt.

Bill's philosophy about framing is a simple one, but it fueled his creativity during his many years on the job.

Realizing that "people only want to frame things that are important to them," he always strived for the best frame he could create, but never duplicated his work, enough similarities do exist among the many frames he has constructed.

Paid advertising really wasn't necessary, he said, because they had such good "word of mouth" advertising.

While Bill never kept count of the frames he has made, he client list "would read like a telephone book," including numerous repeat customers, former residents and persons visiting family and friends in Snyder, all of whom brought him work over the years.

Besides the Borden County quilt, Bill remembers his other projects, including the framed shadow Box of "Star Wars" figures he made several years ago for a young fan of the George Lucas trilogy.

As with the Borden County job, Bill said many times he had no idea of how to do what people wanted, but after much thought and study he said he always formulated a design.

Bill readily admits "framing is in my blood." His enthusiasm began many years ago when he worked for a Houston company. The company had acquired a paint store in Corsican through a bad debt and asked Bill to manage it. A small frame shop operated

One Texas Horse Quarantined With Virus

One infected horse is currently under quarantine in West Texas with vesicular stomatitis (VS), a virus that mimics foot-and-mouth disease. The Texas Animal Health Commission reported the state's first case in late July. The horse was moved from New Mexico to Texas and quarantined on an operation near Abilene at McCaulley, Texas in Fisher County. The quarantine area extends for a ten-mile radius of this operation. No livestock may be moved out of the quarantine area until 30 days after the last lesion heals.

Because of this one case, Texas is considered an infected state and all federal and state restrictions on movement of livestock into and out of the quarantine area and the state now apply. All hooved livestock coming into or going out of Texas will be required to have a veterinarian's inspection certificate stating that the animals have not been within a ten-mile radius of any infected area within the last 30 days.

New Mexico has more than 200 confirmed cases. Arizona and Colorado also have several quarantined operations. More than 25 other states have imposed added restrictions on movement of livestock into their states. Canada has stopped movement of horses across the border from the United States until this outbreak is under control.

There's no major threat from this highly contagious disease. However, awareness and caution are needed to prevent further spread of vesicular stomatitis. Moving exposed animals not yet showing symptoms, plus ignorance of the potential for spreading infection, are the most likely causes of future infections. If everything goes right, this one horse will recover without infection any others.

These restrictions to movement will have a major economic impact on local and regional economies. Dairy and horse industries, both breeding and training, are at the greatest risk of major economic loss if this virus spreads in Texas.

We must be aggressive in containing this virus outbreak. Restriction of livestock in Texas could place an even greater burden on producers already faced with low cattle prices.

North Texas is the center of Texas horse breeding and training operations. There are nearly 500,000 Quarter Horses in Texas, the Fort Worth the home of rodeos and horse shows like the Junior World Show sponsored by the American Quarter Horse Association (AQHA).

If possible, it would be best not to move horses to areas of concentration, such as exhibits, rodeos and shows until this problem is under control. This is no time to be careless or to disregard state and federal laws.

Dairy operations also should be reluctant to transport any animals into their herds from states with reported cases. Vesicular stomatitis infections cause dramatic losses in milk production and secondary mastitis infections. Severe weight loss follows and a marked decrease in milk production. During a 1982 outbreak in Colorado, an average loss of $253 in production per cow was reported.

According to a Texas Animal Health Commission fact sheet, the VS virus causes blisters in and around the mouth, on the tongue, hooves and teats. When the blisters break, large sections of skin slough leaving large open lesions. While the virus is rarely fatal, it leads to secondary infections in the lesions which, left untreated, could cause death. Infected animals refuse to eat or drink until the painful lesions begin to heal. There is no treatment except support therapy.

Incubation is two to eight days from exposure and infections last about two weeks. Animals then must be quarantined for 30 days after the last lesions heals to prevent further spread of the disease. Vesicular stomatitis is a reportable disease. Any suspected infections must be reported to the Texas Animal Health Commission or USDA-APHIS. This disease can be transmitted by biting insects, such as black flies, midges and mosquitoes. Transmission also occurs from contact between animals and farm using equipment contaminated with the virus. VS can be contracted by humans when handling infected animals. Humans contracting the disease experience flu-like symptoms.

Producers who need to report suspected cases of

VS or need other information can contact several sources for assistance.

Ladies Heirloom Luncheon

First Baptist Church of Gail sponsored a Ladies Heirloom Luncheon August 19th., in Post at the Garza Hotel. This is the second Ladies Luncheon hosted by the Church. The first being in May at the Waldrop's Well Bed and Breakfast in Lamesa.

The afternoon began with a delicious meal followed by special music performed by Amy Smith of Post. Then on to a time of sharing the history of the heirlooms that the ladies brought with them. Our speaker Mary Margaret Norman of Post then concluded the evening sharing her thoughts of her Christian Heritage and how God gave her and all who will accept the greatest heirloom that could ever be given and that is Jesus.

The Ladies Luncheon is a ministry of the First Baptist Church to minister the love, care and sharing of Jesus to the ladies of our community. The ladies are greatly appreciated who have attended our previous luncheons and would like to encourage more ladies to come to the next Ladies Luncheon which will be announced later in the Borden Star.

within the store and as soon as Bill started framing he said, "I became hooked," Although it would be years before he opened his own shop, Bill never forgot the pleasure he derived from framing.

He moved to Snyder in 1972 and worked for Clark Lumber for six years. Rosie is a native of Ira. They married in 1976. Two years later, Bill went to work for Dal-Worth Paint Co., a paint wholesale company, but quit after three years because he no longer liked "life on the road."

When the couple opened their shop, Bill said they "thought it was going to be a plaything," but instead it turned into quite a business, one that they both regret having to give up.

Framing for others kept him so busy, that Bill said he and Rosie put off framing things for themselves. Now, if he could do his own work, "it would take me about five years to catch up," Bill said.

As Bill and his wife cope with his illness, they rely on their "strong faith in God" to see them through. As he continues to undergo cancer treatment, Bill said he "waits to see what will happen next."

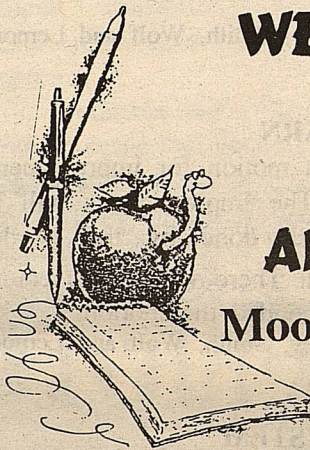

He said he is learning to have a good attitude because he believes that "I have had a good life 'til now." Besides working along Rosie in their frame shop, the couple also reared three children.

A son, Randy Underwood, lives in Snyder. Another son, Jeff Clement, lives in Abilene. A daughter, Catherine Keith, lives in Abilene.

They also have two grandchildren.

Towering genius disdains a beaten path. It seeks regions hitherto unexplored.
