When "down South" last spring I desired to know from whence came the ice used in that warm section, and one night when the colored bell boy brought to my room a pitcher of ice water I asked him the momentous question.

With a look full of pity he replied: "Why, massa, we gets dems out ob de ice box down stairs."

A Blizzard.

Imagine, if you can, a frozen fog driven with the velocity of a hurricane. The air is so full of minute frozen particles which strike your face like pin heads fired from a musket that you cannot see twenty feet ahead, and all this in an atmosphere from twenty to fifty degrees below zero, and you can form an idea of a blizzard as you'll ever care to get; its blinding, bewildering effect is first felt. The intense cold brings at first the pain of freezing, then numbness, then stupor, then a sense of blissful sleep and close upon its heels—death.

A glass of wine changed the history of France for nearly 20 years. Louis Philippe, King of the French, had a son, the Duke of Orleans, and heir to the throne, who always drank only a certain number of glasses of wine, because even one more made him tipsy. On a memorable morning he forgot to count the number of his glasses and took one more than usual. When entering his carriage he stumbled, frightening the horses and causing them to run. In attempting to leap from the carriage he soon struck the pavement and his head died. That glass of wine overthrew the Orleans rule, confiscated their property of $20,000,000, and sent the whole family into exile.

It had only been a few weeks that Kate had been all, and then she was struck being a stranger. Since that time he had passed her house regularly every day. She seemed to know who he was.

The very next day after Mollie's visit Kate sat sewing near the window. It was an unusually warm day, and she had thrown open the French casement in front of the house, which opened directly on the pretty dooryard.

Her father's office was in a wing which led out of the sitting-room, and Kate could hear the talk and laughter of Mingo, the irascible colored youth who had charge of it, and his little sister, who helped her mother preside in the kitchen.

Kate was just led to thinking what a happy life the colored people were, and how Mingo, in particular, was a good-natured, frolicsome fellow, never so happy as when in mischief, when suddenly she heard a sharp, strange noise, and with wild shrieks the door from the office was burst open, and Mingo's little sister rushed in enveloped in flames.

She rushed through the open window, and Kate, terrified beyond measure was about to follow her, when her unknown friend, if by magic, was by the side of the door, and, throwing his coat off an instant, rushed in.

"What a lovely tea rose!" exclaimed Mollie, catching sight of it and running to inhale its delicious fragrance. "You have the best looking plants of any I know. How do you manage them?"

"Oh, no differently from any else, I presume; it is warm here all the time, and the window opening to the floor gives them fresh air every morning."

"That beautiful tea rose Fred gave me just before he went away is almost devoured with rose bugs, and I have tried everything to get clear of them. Can you tell me what is good? Mercy—here is one in your own bush—there! I have dropped it!"

Presently Dr. Kirkdale came out of the office.

"Kate," he said, "can you spare a room upstairs for Mr. Abercrombie? He is hurt pretty severely, and I fear has inhaled some of the flames; and I don't want to send him to his boarding house, where there is no one to take care of him. I want to watch him myself."

"Oh, yes, papa!" cried Kate, her cheeks and heart aglow for her hero while the tears rained down her face as she flew about to prepare the very best room for his reception.

Young Mr. Abercrombie did not regret the pain he had endured when he was brought under the roof of such a charming girl as Dr. Kirkdale's daughter, and though he saw nothing of her at first, yet she gradually came to visit him once or twice a day with a bouquet of her own lovely flowers, which he, after she was gone, next his head.

Then it was queer all right, but afterwards very delightful, to have her feed him on the duties her own hands prepared.

And it is not surprising that he kissed those fair fingers one day so lovingly that they seemed clear to tips and not by weeks after the cement ring.

Kate's Hero.
The sun shone pleasantly in the sitting room of Dr. Kirkdale's residence, where his daughter Kate and a young lady friend were practising a new duet on the piano.
Somehow Miss Kate, who was very proficient in music, and played readily at sight made a great many mistakes this morning, and growing impatient, rose abruptly from the instrument and declared she would not play another note.
Mollie Emerson laughed.
"Just try this last page over," she said.
"There's no use," replied Kate; "music won't drop from my fingers this morning. I don't know what is the matter with me."
"You must have fallen in love," laughed Mollie, idly running her fingers up and down the keys.
"In love," echoed Kate. "I would like to see the man who could make me fall in love with him."
"I guess a certain young gentleman would like to see him, too, if he could do it by looking in the glass," responded Mollie archly.
But Kate didn't blush, as she expected, nor seem at all confused, showing that the thrust didn't reach her heart. She stood looking at the plants in the window.

"What a lovely tea rose!" exclaimed Mollie, catching sight of it and running to inhale its delicious fragrance. "You have the best looking plants of any I know. How do you manage them?"

And Mollie went down on the carpet to hunt for it.
"There he is!" exclaimed Kate.
Mollie raised her head and looked inquiringly.
Kate was gazing out into the street with heightened color and a smiling face.
"Where?" asked Mollie in surprise.
Kate started and turned confusedly.
"Oh, are you looking for that bug yet?" she asked.
"What?" cried Mollie, wondering if Kate had lost her wits, and look-

ONLY a few years ago Blaine withdrew a libel suit which he had instituted because he said he could not get justice in Indiana. Now he is stumping the state.

We have noticed several well-written letters to the Express lately over the signature "B." The Express is fortunate in having such an able correspondent at Brackett. Tuesday's Express contains an excellent article on Sam Houston.

Election matters are very quiet this week every candidate is resting upon his oars waiting for District Court to summon our friends from the country into town, when the batteries will be opened and hot shot poured upon the voters. As in the past, we have not advocated the claims of any particular candidate, leaving it to our readers to determine who are the men best fitted for the different offices to which they aspire. We sincerely hope that every intelligent citizen in the county will weigh all candidates "in the balance" and drop those "found wanting."

There is a report in circulation that the Mexican government will take a hand in the proposed irrigation ditch business, which will draw its waters supply from the Rio Grande. It is said that a strong protest has been entered against the enterprise on international grounds, and that some correspondence on the matter has already passed between the two Governments. It is hoped that this may not retard the work at all, as everything is now ready to proceed and the irrigation company expect to have the ditch in good order by spring. W. O. Titus, late of the Mexican International railway, has been appointed engineer and superintendent of the company.—Eagle Pass Cor. Express.

The San Antonio Fair.

Our friends at San Antonio have our thanks for the following letter and pass enclosed:

San Antonio, Texas, Oct. 15, '88. Dear Sir:

We herewith enclose complimentary season pass to our great International Fair, to be held in this city from Nov. 13th. to 22d.

The International feature of our Exposition will be fully maintained in a splendid exhibit from the Monterey, Mexico, exposition and by mineral exhibits from the finest mining districts in the sister republic.

Our premiums and purses aggregate the generous sum of $50,000 and cover everything worthy of reward.

Expressing the hope that we will see you at the fair,

We remain yours truly, J. S. ALEXANDER, President.

Geo. T. DICKINSON, Secretary.

From our Exchanges.

From The Eagle Pass Guide. With commendable foresight, Senator Felipe G. Gaznueve, the Mexican consul in this city, has issued a notice to his fellow-countrymen warning them against taking any part in the election next November without taking out naturalization papers, and explaining the effect of the latter on their citizenship in Mexico.

Large sales of sheared muttons at $2.25 a head have been made by Maverick county ranchmen to parties in Mexico this week. Yet some sheepmen want protection against Mexico.

It is reported that Mr. J. W. Riddle, and Jas. Lane have effected some very large sales of beef cattle in Mexico City this week. Several thousand head will be shipped there in the immediate future.

Pearl-necked. About supper time on the evening our quiet was often interrupted into a fearful excitement by the alarm. Mrs. Rowland, who lives in the N. E. part of town, and sent a mounted Mexican, who spoke but little English to "holler" fire. He couldn't answer the oft repeated question—"where?" but obedient to instructions, rushed hither and thither in a home stretch speed and cried "fire." The women screamed, the dogs barked, the unbelieving men loitered, and looked for fire, but the fire failing to flame up, the strained expectations of a coming calamity slowly relaxed, and our wonted calm came upon us mellowed and made familiar by the plaintive whine of a thousand curs.

Del Rio Record. Hon. Solon Stewart, Assistant U. S. District Attorney, is here on both U. S. and State business.

Lieutenant and Mrs. Cunningham rejoice over the birth of a little daughter, who put in an appearance on the 8th. The Lieutenant says she is a healthy child, and gives him nightly exercises.

Dr. King, our handsome affable and competent dentist, leaves for Del Rio next Thursday, where innumerable patients await his coming. We have yet to hear one complaint from any of those whom the doctor has treated in this city.

It is with feelings of profound sorrow that we learn of the bereavement of Mrs. Joseph Veltmann, the loss of her beloved father, who died at San Antonio this week. The late Mr. Hauelsen was a gentleman highly respected by all who knew him and who among other positions of trust and responsibility, was at the time of his death, City Clerk of San Antonio.

To those bowed in sorrow by the sad blow, we tender our sincere sympathy in their irreparable loss.

Notice.

Whereas, W. W. Lambert, executor of the last will and testament of Z. W. Morrow, deceased, has on the 17th day of September filed in the county court of Kinney County, his account as executor, for final settlement.

Now therefore notice is given to all persons interested in said estate, that said account will be acted upon at the next term of our Hon. County Court of said Kinney County, beginning on the first Monday in October 1888, at Brackett Texas, when and where they may appear and contest the same, should they desire to do so.

Questions of Gildea Answered.

BRACKETT, TEXAS, Oct. 18th, 1888. EDITOR NEWS.

Dear Sir:—My "circular letter" published in your paper of the 6th. inst. had the desired effect in giving to the world the name of the circulator and author of the slander set in motion against me, who signs himself to communication published in the issue of your paper of the 13th. inst. C. A. Gildea. It is hardly necessary to refute that slanderous report any further for the parties, whom the report says I tried to defame, $800 and the president of the Association, have already published theirures, given the fact that your paper of the 13th. inst. would be satisfied with the publication, which was published in the issue of the 13th. inst.

not destroyed. Messrs. Ronch & M... accepted by the board of directors at the time the Treasurer's bond was accepted. There was never any refusal to enter into bond, the question has its own answer, the board of directors were careful business men, I could not have been their secretary if the necessary security would not have been in their hands, and as stated by the President in the issue of the 6th. inst. that I accounted for every cent that came into my hands, consequently, if the board of directors would have been negligent, still they were no losers, but since that question implies negligence on their part, of which they were not guilty. I state my bond was handed to Mr. Mahon for safe keeping.

Questions Nos. 2, 3, 4, 5, 6, 7, 8, 9 and 10. I will answer together, and I call your attention to the fact that in prosecuting these questions, and stop where he did, comes in his guilt of the most insidious black-heartedness man can be guilty of. My answer is a statement of facts as they are, which can be verified by every man who wishes to arrive at the truth of this transaction, by asking those parties who were interested in the matter.

The B. & L. Ass'n concluded to stop collections on shares in March and settle up. The date of settlement was set until the next pay day. I think about three weeks from the time the directors concluded to wind up the affairs of the Ass'n. I did not under their instructions collect from anybody money due on shares. The time for settlement arrived but some of the borrowers could not make arrangements to settle, and the settlement was deferred till some time in July. In June Mrs. Ann Ross sent for me, and said: "Mr. Flatow I don't think this B. & L. Ass'n business will be settled. I have a good deal of money at stake and I owe $900 on my shares, which I want you to receive and give me your official receipt as secretary for same."

nor had I received three months' dues. She insisted and I thereupon took the money and kept such in my possession, and gave her my receipt. When final arrangements were concluded for settlement, I myself made out a detailed account of the amounts to be collected from the borrowers and the amounts due the non-borrower. Business preventing me from attending that meeting I handed a copy to C. C. Clamp, Esq. and handed original to T. R. McAlpin and also the minute book. The accounts were approved by the directors then present, and the treasurer authorized to pay the non-borrowers the amounts due them. During my absence Mr. Ed. Ross went to Mr. Mahon and naturally the $900 which Mrs. Ross paid me and which she knew and admits of knowing were not included—whereupon he very naturally made the remark he was out of my mind after my return and I was not to be trusted.

He is an aspirant to the office of sheriff, and therefore is material for investigation. Sir, so am I a candidate for office and though my friends believe, a candidate should only take care of his own interests, I must differ, for every man should hold the rights of citizenship higher than his own profit, and I would not part with the freedom that right confers for any office in this country, State or United States.

This county I ask you Sir, man who is guilty of such an act of baseness is he fit for any office? for question arises what will even man do in place of what will be do.

Now Sir, as to my business relations to Mrs. Ross and Ed. Ross, since the promulgation of that slander, I may state with pride that they have shown me their highest regards and have confided to my integrity, transactions of business involving large amounts of money in fact I returned only yesterday evening from a business trip made in their behalf involving thousands.

This my letter is my last answer in anything pertaining to that slander, or anything which may come from the pen of C. A. Gildea. Respectfully, T. FLATOW.

To all whom may concern:—The statement made by Mr. Flatow in his letter to the editor of BRACKETT NEWS, dated OGS, is as follows: "I quote my action was a particular truth."

This cried aloud—
"Up, Messieurs, and try the cure
Every evil man endure
A powder which will give
Change for which you strive and die
Tools it gives intelligence
To the guilty innocence
In rascals it bestows
No woman brings young beauty

To Drive Away Mosquitoes.
To expel mosquitoes, take of gum camphor a piece about one-third the size of a hen's egg, and evaporate it by placing it in a tin vessel and holding it over a lamp, taking care that it does not ignite. The smoke will soon fill the room and expel the mosquitoes, and not one will be found the morning next, even though the windows should be left open at night. —Doston Dodge.

Mrs. Burnett and the Game.
Mrs. Frances Hodgson Burnett, talking about "Little Lord Fauntleroy" says: "Most of the scenes in the book are real; that, for instance, in which Cedric undertakes to teach his grandfather baseball. One day the original thought it necessary to instruct me in the great national game. After a great deal of explaining, I was obliged to admit that I was rather stupid. 'Oh, no, you're not, dearest,' protested the little boy, 'you're not at all stupid; but I'm afraid I'm not a good explainer, and that, as you're a lady, of course baseball is not very easy to you.'" —New York Tribune.

Colors from Coal Tar.
Some 150 different colors are now obtained from coal tar, and these have almost entirely supplanted vegetable and mineral dyes. In fact, only two of the vegetable class—indigo and logwood—are still of any considerable importance. Coal yields me a large amount of coloring matter, the naphthalene from a ton being sufficient to dye 600 yards of flannel; the anthracene, 120; the vermilline, 200; and the algarine, 257. —Arkansas Traveler.

My lad, if you, without shame,
Will take advice from one who's wiser,
And put his wisdom to more use
Than ever yet did you advise;
If you will let, as some will do,
Another's heartbreak serve for two,
You'll have a care, some four years hence,
How you lounge there by yonder fence
And blow those kisses through the screen,
For Lydia will be avenged.
—T. B. Aldrich in The Atlantic.

Washington Letter.

From our Regular Correspondent.
Washington, Oct. 17, '88.
To the Editor of NEWS.

A decision was rendered last week by Judge Stuart, of Alexandria, denying the rights of residents of Washington to register and vote in the state of Virginia. As under the existing form of government there are no elections held within the District of Columbia, it has been the practice of merchants and business men generally to return each year to their former places of residence in the States to cast their votes upon election day. The law relating to the subject is clear so far as it relates to persons residing in the District who are actually in the employ of the Government, and the fact that a Government clerk retains his right to vote at his former place of residence has not been disputed, the decision of Judge Stuart, effects only the business men of the city outside of Government employ. The matter is of the greatest interest to the citizens of Washington, and a combined effort is being made to transfer the case to the United States courts, as involving a Constitutional question.

Now that the Senate Finance Committee has completed its labors and the tariff bill has been presented, a great load has been lifted from the shoulders of the Republican and Democratic members of the committee. The work of compilation of the bill and the hearings of the various interests effected by it has been in progress for several months, and the members of the committee have been compelled to devote their almost individual attention during that time. It is expected that several addresses will be made in the Senate during the present week upon the bill, but it will of course be impossible to dispose of the measure during the present session.

The relief is that the two of Congress will very agree upon a date of adjournment. The only hitch appears to consist in the fact that while the Senators of both political parties are anxious to adjourn, they insist that the resolution should originate in the House. On Tuesday last it was thought that the matter had been satisfactorily arranged, and that an agreement to adjourn on the 10th instant would be made, but all calculations were knocked in the head by Mr. Breckenridge, of Arkansas, who insisted that he would object to the resolution having its origin in the House, and would demand a quorum on the passage of the resolution. So the matter stands at present; but it is thought that either Mr. Breckenridge can be persuaded to withdraw his objection or that the Senate may recede from its position and agree to have the resolution originate in the Senate, and that an adjournment will soon be agreed upon.

The sundry civil bill just signed by the President provides an appropriation of $10,500 for the care of the Washington Monument and for running the elevator during the coming year, and it is expected that the monument will be thrown open to visitors at once. It will be remembered that upon account of damage done to the monument by thoughtless visitors and an order was issued near ly two years since closing the shaft to all visitors. Since that time the only persons who have ascended the shaft have been those connected with the work. The order has resulted in the disappointment of visitors to the city who desire to view the interior of the monument.

II.
What am I to do.
The symptoms of Biliousness are unhappily but too well known. They differ in different individuals to some extent. A Bilious man is seldom a breakfast eater. Too frequently, alas, he has an excellent appetite for liquids but none for solids of a morning. His tongue will hardly bear inspection at any time; if white and farred, it is rotten. The digestive system is out of order and Diarrhea may be a symptom or the bowels alternate. There are often hemorrhoids or even loss of blood. There may be giddiness and often headache and acidity or flatulence and tenderness in the pit of the stomach. To correct all this if not effect a cure try Green's August Flower, it costs but a trifle and thousands attest its efficacy.
