USDA Unveils Key New Programs to Help Farmers Manage Risk

USDA just unveiled highly anticipated new programs to help farmers better manage risk, ushering in one of the most significant reforms to U.S. farm programs in decades.

New tools are now available to help provide farmers the information they need to choose the new safety net program that is right for their business.

The new programs, Agricultural Risk Coverage (ARC) and Price Loss Coverage (PLC), are cornerstones of the commodity farm safety net programs in the 2014 Farm Bill, legislation that ended direct payments. Both programs offer farmers protection when market forces cause substantial drops in crop prices and/or revenues. Producers will have through early spring of 2015 to select which program works best for their businesses.

To help farmers choose between ARC and PLC, USDA helped create online tools that allow farmers to enter information about their operation and see projections about what each program will mean for them under possible future scenarios. The new tools are now available at www.fsa.usda.gov/arc-plc.

Starting Monday, Sept. 29, 2014, farm owners may begin visiting their local Farm Service Agency (FSA) offices if they want to update their yield history and/or reallocate base acres, the first step before choosing which new program best serves their risk management needs. Letters sent this summer enabled farm owners and producers to analyze their crop planting history in order to decide whether to keep their base acres or reallocate them according to recent plantings.

The next step in USDA's safety net implementation is scheduled for this winter when all producers on a farm begin making their election, which will remain in effect for 2014-2018 crop years between the options offered by ARC and PLC.

Producers can contact their local FSA Office for more information on ARC and PLC or to schedule an appointment to update their yield history and/or reallocate base acres.

Not Happy Unless Miserable

Believe it or not, there are some people who act as if they love to be miserable. It's as if they are only happy when problems exist in their lives. Identifying people like this is very easy, they complain constantly about the same issues, over and over. Moreover, rather than looking for or being open to solutions, they make excuses for why their circumstances can't be changed.

Ed, divorced after a 15 year marriage, is now in another relationship. Ed has a 10 year old daughter. Betsy, the woman he has been seeing for a couple of years, has a 12 year old son. Ed is always moaning about the way he is treated by Betsy. He complains to anyone who'll listen. Many of his problems with Betsy are very similar to the ones Ed had when he was married.

Jim is one of Ed's good friends. Ed is always bending Jim's ear with examples of how poorly Betsy behaves. Jim always listens to Ed's complaints and tries to offer Ed some helpful suggestions.

Jim responds to Bill, "Betsy is who she is. She is not going to change just because you want her to. You either have to accept Betsy as she is or end the relationship. Your incessant complaining isn't going to change anything. You just got out of a marriage that had a lot of the same issues you are now having with Betsy. If you are unhappy and don't make some changes, nothing will be different."

Rather than being open to solutions, Bill has an endless list of excuses as why he won't take any action to resolve his problems. Among Bill's excuses are, "Betsy is just going through a tough period. I really care about Betsy. Betsy's OK, she just needs some more time."

Barbara is in her early forties and is still searching for what she wants to do with her life. For years she bounced from job to job. After she was laid off from her last position, Barbara started her own business taking care of other people's pets while they were away.

Barbara doesn't really like pet sitting but doesn't know what she would rather do. Although she has lots of ideas about what she likes, Barbara doesn't pursue any of them. Barbara talks to her friends about how frustrated she is with the lack of direction in her life.

Rather than exploring other avenues, Barbara prefers to complain. Her friends find that talking with her is like going in circles. The ideas and suggestions they offer to Barbara seem to be appreciated. However, the next time Barbara gets together with her friends, she once again complains about the same issues. Barbara has an endless supply of reasons why various options won't work.

Barbara and Ed act as if they would rather have problems than solutions. They both are able to justify why their circumstances persist. They make excuses for why they don't or won't alter their behavior.

People who are not happy unless they are miserable do themselves a great disservice. It doesn't take much effort to make a positive change in one's life. Ironically, more energy is

Borden County Pups Pound the Lubbock Titans

By Coach Richey

The Borden County Pups played host to the Lubbock Homeschool Titans for what would be the first home game of the season after having the previous week cancelled and the Pups did not disappoint as they won in dominating fashion to the tune of 47 to 7.

The Pups were able to play their entire roster a lot in this lopsided victory which allowed the younger players to gain some valuable experience. The second offense was able to contribute a couple of extra points as well along with playing a couple of offensive series to gain the valuable experience. This second group was made up of all 7th graders, center Olivia Reyes, guards Conner Wagner and Junior Gray, Ends Jason Robinson and Ryan Rathbun, quarterback Jake Avey, fullback Colbin Briley and running back Anthony Lopez who on a touchdown run injured his knee and will be out for a few weeks. This group managed that score and an extra point pass from Lopez to Briley.

The starting group of Riley Lewis, JW Nix, Will Yarbro, Lukas Grantham, Jeremy Souder, Ben Justice and Payton Merket did the heavy lifting in this contest as this group for the second game this season dominated on both sides of the ball. In fact the first defense did not give up a score; it was the second group that gave up the touchdown. Also it was the defense that got the first points of the contest as a near safety on a tackle by Merket and Justice forced a punt near the Titans own endzone and the snap went out the back of the endzone to give Borden County a quick 2-0 lead. Moments later Merket set sail on a 15 yard run that was set up by a Merket to Riley Lewis pass play. This gave the Pups a quick 8-0 lead. Merket added another score, this time from 24 yards out to up the lead to 14-0 and then Lopez hit Briley for the extra point and a 15-0 lead to close out the first quarter of play. The Borden defense got into the action again forcing a second safety to push the lead to 17 to 0. The just before half, the Pups who lost a fumble earlier were able to get one more score before intermission as Merket found Lewis for a 16 yard pass and catch to make the score 23 to 0 at half.

The Pups extended the lead quickly as Merket returned the opening 2nd half kick 60 yards to up the score to 29 - 0. A short time later Anthony Lopez rumbled 6 yards to paydirt and a commanding lead at 35-0, but as mentioned earlier, Lopez was injured on the play. The Titans got their only score of the game on their next possession, but Ben Justice answered immediately as he returned the ensuing kick-off 45 yards and a 41 to 7 Borden County lead heading into the 4th quarter. The Pups would add one more score as Merket hit Justice on a short pass play that Ben did the rest of the work rumbling 25 yards to the endzone and the final touchdown for the home team and the final tally of the contest at 47 to 7.

Congrats Pups on the dominating victory. They will next travel to Ropes to take on a very tough Ropes Eagles junior high Thursday. Please come support these young coyotes as they work toward their goal of an undefeated season.

Building a Friendship With Your Spouse or Partner

Many people say that having a friendship with their spouse or romantic partner is an important goal of their relationship. Life usually becomes more complicated as intimate relationships progress. If a relationship is not built upon a solid foundation of friendship, it may become more difficult for partners to stay connected over time. It is also easy for partners to become less polite and respectful to each other as time passes because they feel more comfortable with each other. However, couples who remain good friends throughout life usually find much more enjoyment and satisfaction in their relationships.

There are many things couples can do to keep their friendship alive:

* Set aside time each day to talk and reconnect. All people change over time, and partners need to continue to learn about each other's thoughts, feelings, and ideas. Researchers have found that spending just 15 minutes a day catching up and filling each other in on what happened during the day helps prevent problems that can lead to emotional disconnection or relationship dissolution. Research has also shown that the amount of fun time spouses spend together is a major factor in the happiness of their marriage. Sharing enjoyable times prevents people from getting bored with their relationships and helps rejuvenate them when they are very busy and preoccupied with other concerns. Doing fun things together also helps create a set of shared memories that serve as an "emotional bank account." When the account is consistently filled with "deposits" of positive emotions and good times spent together, it is easier for the relationship to weather problems.

* Another way to maintain friendship in intimate relationships is to have regular "dates." Dates allow partners to spend fun time alone together, which can be especially important if they have children. A date might be a good time to share dreams with each other. A date should be a time to share an activity both partners enjoy. Conflict should be avoided during "dates." The goal is for both people to enjoy time together.

* Show appreciation for each other. Hold hands. Plan pleasant surprises for each other. Laugh together. Compliment each other often. Leave unexpected notes of praise. Develop signals that say, "I love you." Say "thank you" for little kindnesses. Say "I love you." Find out how your partner would like you to show appreciation and let your partner know what you would like. Showing kindness in little ways is important for several reasons. First, it enables spouses to increase their love for each other and become better friends. It also keeps little annoyances from being blown out of proportion, which helps the relationship stay strong. Daily acts of kindness can also promote the growth of romance in the marriage. John Gottman's research has found that true romance is best preserved when partners frequently respect and care for each other in ordinary ways.

* Observing family traditions and rituals is another way couples can strengthen their relationship. Traditions and rituals serve many important functions in families. First, they enable couples to figure out what is important to each partner and to their relationship. They also give meaning and predictability to relationships and family life. Rituals help couples recharge themselves from the stresses of everyday life and increase the amount of intimacy in their relationships. Relationships that are marked by many traditions and rituals are often richer and more purposeful than those that are not.

BCISD Donates Items to Neighboring School

Post ISD board members and Post residents came to Gail last week to collect furniture to replace items burned in the Post Elementary fire on September 21.

Director of Maintenance Phillip Benavidez and his staff loaded a truck and trailer with chairs and tables donated from the Borden County Independent School District.

Post Elementary students are now being housed in the old Post High School as the newly constructed high school is opening for those students. The Post Middle School, which had been scheduled for demolition, will continue to serve middle school students and staff until a new elementary school is built.

Texas Stories

A Showcase of the Texas Spirit
Tumbleweed Smith

The Creator of Wednesday's Child

Jack Bowen's start in journalism began while an 8th grade student in Big Spring when the teacher asked him to be the photographer for the school annual. He took to photography in a big way and soon had his own dark room. While still in high school he got a job as a cameraman for the local TV station, KWAB and eventually started doing news and weather. He was 18 years old at the time.

"Back then it was sort of primitive," he says. "I'd be behind the camera, then while a commercial was on the screen, I'd step in front of it and do the weather or news. When another commercial was on the screen I'd get back behind the camera."

Jack, who now lives near Fort Worth, sometimes covered stories with a Polaroid camera and a cassette recorder. "While doing the news live, a still picture would be on the screen and I'd bend down so my lapel mike would pickup the sound bite from the speaker on the portable cassette recorder. Real big time."

After graduating from Texas Tech he did television news on KERP TV in El Paso for three years, then went to the ABC affiliate in Oklahoma City as assignment editor. After a year he started doing weekend news and finally became the prime time anchor for the two major evening newscasts. He always did reporting chores and covered some major national stories outside of Oklahoma City.

He was with the Oklahoma City station 36 years. He says the best thing he did there was to start a program called Wednesday's Child where he did profiles of children who were having a hard time getting adopted. "Everybody wants a baby, but with an older kid who might be handicapped it's a different story," says Jack. The name came from a line in a nursery rhyme that states, "Wednesday's child is full of woe."

"I went to private adoption and child protective agencies and told them my idea. They were hesitant at first, but finally a private agency agreed to let me do a program with a little girl. She got adopted immediately. The program had a profound response from viewers. The state people were watching and called me to say they were impressed. After the program was on the air for a while, ABC television asked me to appear on Good Morning America. After I did that, television stations all over the country called and said they wanted to start a program like that. I created for each one a press kit with samples of our stories and write-ups about the success of the series. I wasn't getting anything out of it financially, but I thought it was great that so many kids were being adopted. I've run into adults 30 years old or more who would see me out in public and they would tell me, 'I was on Wednesday's Child and got adopted.'"

Jack loves dogs and admits the program developed from his finding homes for dogs. At the end of his 6 PM newscast every Friday he had a segment called Pet Saver. "I would have someone from the animal shelter come in with a dog, put it on the screen and tell the viewers that this animal needs to be adopted. Well, a whole lot of dogs started getting adopted. Somehow I found out there were a lot of kids waiting to be adopted so I started Wednesday's Child."

Dare to Live...

required to suffer than to change.

There is no reason for you to be miserable. Even if you are in a rut, you can get out. Improving your situation starts with a desire to do so. Then, make changes instead of excuses. It's well worth the effort. Being happy because you are happy is the best way to go.

Special Needs Children

Parents with special needs children in the Borden County Independent School District, Dawson ISD or Klondike ISD are urged to contact Becky Nix, Special Education Director by calling 806/756-4313 extension 3.

If Becky cannot be reached at that phone number call the Child Find Coordinator at the Education Service Center by calling 806/792-4000.

The special need may be in the area of mental, social, emotional or physical development.

Fall

Into Family...

You are invited to join us on Tuesday, October 14th at 6:00 p.m. in the Borden County Event Center for a Fall program to help harvest tips and methods for organizing your life to enjoy more time with you family - from menu planning, grocery shopping, home management, time management and ways to enjoy quality time together.

Enjoy a sampling of a few simple recipes and make an easy take-home project (for even the least creative people).

Cost is $15 per person (will cover supplies and recipe/idea booklet).

Please RSVP by Friday, October 10th (to allow for enough supplies) at 5:00 p.m. to (806)756-4336, via Facebook or julie.smith@agnet.tamu.edu
