Agriculture Secretary Statement on Passage of Trade Promotion Authority

Agriculture Secretary Tom Vilsack today released the following statement regarding Senate passage of Trade Promotion Authority legislation:

"Today the Senate helped move America closer to securing responsible agreements that open markets for America's farmers, ranchers and agribusiness and create jobs and improve wages across the country. Over 70 organizations representing America's farmers and ranchers, and past secretaries of agriculture in both parties dating back to the Carter Administration all support trade promotion authority because export sales are vital for U.S. agriculture. Last year, agricultural exports totaled more than $150 billion and for many of our products, foreign markets represent half or more of total sales. Those exports supported approximately 1 million U.S. jobs last year. The economy is strengthened and better paying jobs are created in rural America and communities throughout the country by the additional economic activity that flows from expanded farm and food businesses.

"Standing still is not an option. Our farmers and ranchers face exorbitant tariffs and others barriers in important foreign markets, and if we do not act to maintain and gain market share in these places, our competitors will. U.S. agriculture's interests are best served by ensuring America is at the table with strong negotiating authority."

The couple will marry on June 20, 2015 at the Ruthe Jackson Center in Grand Prairie, Texas.

Following a honeymoon the couple will reside in Ft. Worth.

A little boy slipped into church with his father. He enjoyed singing the songs about heaven.

But when the ushers passed the offering plates, he asked, "Pop, how much is it costing us to get into heaven?"

It doesn't cost you anything to get into heaven. It's "the gift of God." But it did cost God everything to make the way for you to go there.

Your works can't put you right with God. But once you've been put right, there's something wrong with your religion if it doesn't issue in good works.

You can't merit God's grace. But you can manifest gratitude for it by living graciously.

Let's do it!
