Ann Richards' Daughter Campaigns In Brownfield

On Friday, July 20, Ellen Richards, daughter of Democratic gubernatorial candidate, Ann Richards, made a campaign stop in Brownfield at 2 p.m. She was welcomed by supporters from several area counties. Ellen is 25 years old, and is a student at St. Edwards University in Austin. She is the youngest of four children, and has been on the campaign trail for her mother during the past year and one half.

Miss Richards stressed three main issues of her mother's campaign: Education, Crime and Drug Addiction, and Economic Development. Concerning education, Ellen said it was the top issue in the campaign. Ann Richards is a former teacher who believes that teachers are the backbone of a community and that they need to be involved in education decision-making. Richards supports equalization of state funding and advocates strong efforts to curb the dropout rate. She further believes young people need to be gainfully employed, and education is the key to a highly skilled workforce. Richards also believes education is the key to economic development. The quality of life and quality of education in a community go hand in hand, and new industries are always keenly interested in the quality of schools in a prospective location. Texas needs to continue improving its students' test scores so that we can be competitive in education and industry. Miss Richards also said her mother supports developing new industries in Texas to process Texas products such as mohair for clothing items, which are now customarily imported. The importance of oil and agriculture in Texas was noted by Miss Richards also.

The Ann Richards anti-crime agenda contains three main positions: 1) Violent offenders need to stay in prison. She opposes parole for such offenders. 2) Programs are needed to deal with drug and alcohol addiction, because the majority of offenders in prison have one of these two problems. Each prisoner costs the state $33,000 per year on average. 3) Most inmates are illiterate, and fundamental education programs are needed in our prisons so that inmates can read and write when they are released, and are thereby less likely to be repeat offenders.

Plea Issued To Plains Women

Women of the community are needed to furnish potato salad and cobbles for the Old Settlers Reunion Barbecue Saturday, Aug. 4 in Stanford Park. Individual serving size containers will be furnished for the cobbles and may be picked up at Mary's Country Flowers and Gifts.

1990 Property Tax Rates in Plains Independent School District

This notice concerns 1990 property tax rates for Plains I.S.D. It presents information about three tax rates. Last year's tax rate is the actual rate the taxing unit used to determine property taxes last year. This year's effective tax rate would impose the same total taxes as last year if you compare properties taxed in both years. This year's rollback tax rate is the highest tax rate the taxing unit can set before taxpayers can start tax rollback procedures. In each case these rates are found by dividing the total amount of taxes by the tax base (the total value of taxable property) with adjustments as required by state law. The rates are given per $100 of property value.

Last year's tax rate:
Last year's operating taxes	$ 2,957,128
+ Last year's debt taxes	$ -0-
= Last year's total taxes	$ 2,957,128
÷ Last year's tax base	$ 690,272,642
= Last year's total tax rate	$.4284 /$100
This year's effective tax rate:
Last year's adjusted taxes (after subtracting taxes on lost property)	$ 2,949,563
÷ This year's adjusted tax base (after subtracting value of new property)	$ 778,276,517
= This year's effective tax rate	$.37894 /$100
× 1.03 = maximum rate unless unit publishes notices and holds hearing	$.3903 /$100
This year's rollback tax rate:
Last year's adjusted operating taxes (after subtracting taxes on lost property)	$ 2,949,563
÷ This year's adjusted tax base	$ 778,376,517
= This year's effective operating rate	$.37894 /$100
× 1.08 = this year's maximum operating rate	$.40926 /$100
+ This year's debt rate	$ -0- /$100
= This year's rollback rate before adjustment	$.40926 /$100
+ Rate to recoup lost state funds	$ -0- /$100
= A. Adjusted rollback rate	$.40926 /$100
B. Rate that would result in maximum state funds	$.40926 /$100
Rollback Rate (greater of A or B)	$.40926 /$100
= This year's rollback rate	$.40926 /$100

Unencumbered Fund Balances

The following balances will probably be left in the unit's property tax accounts at the end of the fiscal year. These balances are not encumbered by a corresponding debt obligation.

Modified Tillage Systems Topic Of Dinner Forum

Most cotton producers in the southern High Plains are considering and planning to implement some form of conservation tillage system in 1990-91.

The Texas Agricultural Extension Service, USDA Soil Conservation Service, Monsanto and Dow-Elanco chemical companies and Yoakum County Soil and Water Conservation District are co-sponsoring a forum to answer questions and discuss the highlights and pitfalls of these type management systems.

The dinner meeting will begin at 7 p.m. Tuesday Aug. 7 in the Denver City Community Building. Speakers will include Dr. Wayne Keeling with the Texas Agricultural Experiment Station at Lubbock, Jim Risley and Brad Palmer and other Yoakum County producers employing the technology.

Dr. Keeling will cover weed management strategies for high residue tillage systems and field any questions attendants may have. Local producers, already using the systems, will describe their successes and maybe some failures brought on by the switch in farming practices.

County Extension Agent, Kirk Lewis, will discuss economic impacts of the new systems as well as an entomological view.

The attractiveness of modified tillage systems grew exponentially in 1990 as a result of the dry, windy spring which injured many fields in their early stages. As veterans of the systems gain control of weeds and other variables involved in the change, many producers saw the inherent advantages of reduced labor and wear and tear on equipment, reduced wind and sand damage, earlier fruit set and possible increased yields.

Almost all those currently using the approach describe many problems not encountered in conventional tillage systems. The program Aug. 7 is geared to help those interested in trying the system for the first time to avoid some of these mistakes and problems. Much of the meeting time will be spent sharing ideas and discussing ways to improve the system for each individual's management program.

The two herbicide company representatives (who are providing the meal), will discuss the effectiveness of their respective products in a modified tillage system.

All interested producers are invited. For more information contact the Yoakum County Extension Office at 456-2263 or the Yoakum County Office of the Soil Conservation Service at 456-3703.

Training Workshop For 4-H Planned

All 4-H Club officers for 1990-91 should plan to attend officer training workshop at 10 a.m. Aug. 2 in Denver City Community Building.

Responsibilities and parliamentary procedure will be discussed. Program will be planned for the Aug. 10 Family Night. Those who attended Leadership and Electric Camps are invited.

Each person should bring $5 for pizza.

Xeriscaping saves water, money for Texas gardeners

By Leticia Vasquez

(AUSTIN)--Xeriscaping is fast becoming the by-word of water-conscious gardeners and landscapers all over the state. And for Texas home and business owners who need to keep an eye on the monthly water bill, this concept in gardening that depends on the use of native and low-water-consuming plants has proven itself a money saver.

The word xeriscape (zeer-i-scape) comes from the Greek word xeros, which means dry. The term originated several years ago in the Denver Water Department to describe a horticultural concept for home and business landscapes that was being promoted by that city.

Erv Sandlin, marketing and xeriscape specialist with the Texas Department of Agriculture, believes xeriscaping will become more common in Texas gardens by the turn of the century.

"As part of the effort to make more efficient use of our water resources in Texas, xeriscaping will come into use more and more especially in newly landscaped commercial developments," Sandlin said.

Sandlin points out that the benefits of a xeriscaped landscape extend beyond low water use. Many of the plants and trees used in this kind of gardening are "natives" or "naturalized," having been brought here so long ago that they now require no fertilization. Furthermore, the kinds of plants found in a low-input sustainable landscape resist pests and disease better than imports.

He cites the mesquite tree as being a "naturalized" Texan. Many naturalists believe the seeds of this ubiquitous tree were deposited here by migratory birds and burros that came from Mexico, where this tree also is abundant. Also, the word "mesquite" is of Aztec origin.

While the numbers of home and commercial gardeners interested in xeriscape continue to grow, many others have yet to give it a real look, Sandlin says.

"For many people, the word 'xeriscape' evokes images of a desert-cape, and while some xeriscape landscaping calls for the use of native plants and those more commonly found in the desert Southwest, the xeriscape palette certainly is not limited only to those, but rather to those that are most water-efficient," Sandlin says.

"A xeriscape landscape can be as lush, green and colorful as practically any that utilizes imported plants that need lots of water. In addition, the xeriscape palette contains a long list of perennials that will add rows of color to any home garden," he says.

In urban areas, 40 to 60 percent of all water used is for landscape watering, Sandlin says. By making ample use of native and water-efficient plants and shrubs, home gardeners and commercial landscapers can cut water use in half, and the water bill, too.

The areas of the state where water supplies are less abundant are, not surprisingly, where xeriscape is most popular, Sandlin says. In Central Texas and especially the city of San Antonio, xeriscape has gained a strong foothold.

"Part of xeriscape's popularity has to do with the interest generated all through the '80s in Southwestern art, cuisine and architecture," Sandlin says. "The 'mystique' of the Southwest and the sense of pride people feel in their heritage also have contributed greatly to xeriscape's popularity."

The philosophy behind xeriscape also figures prominently in the TDA-sponsored "Trees for Texas" program, Sandlin says. "We advise people who want to plant trees to be responsible, to ensure that the trees they have in mind are well-adapted to their area and will survive there. One of the program's goals is to help Texans create a low-input maintenance landscape."

Seven principles guide xeriscape gardening:

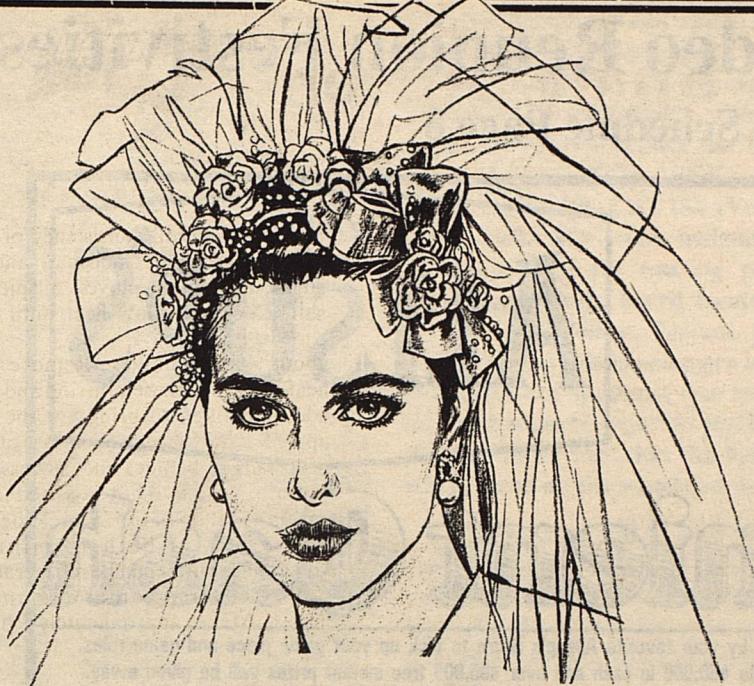

- a water-conserving garden design;
- limiting turf areas;
- an efficient irrigation system;
- soil improvements;
- use of moisture conserving mulches;
- selection of drought-tolerant plants; and
- use of appropriate maintenance practices.

Every region of Texas has its own set of natives and not-so-thirsty plants, shrubs and trees that can add beauty as well as slash the water bill, Sandlin says. A number of state agencies are involved in getting out the word that saving money on the water bill doesn't mean sacrificing beauty in the landscape.

"The Lower Colorado River Authority has built several xeriscape demonstration farms in Central Texas," Sandlin says. "Additionally, various cities have developed their own xeriscape programs, and Texas A&M University and water districts all around the state promote the use of xeriscape gardening techniques."

As water becomes more precious, xeriscape landscaping will likely become the best, perhaps the only, way to save water while keeping the landscape filled with color.

Check Out The History Of Checks

You may be glad to endorse the idea of a look at the past, present and future of checks.

THEN: Checks were probably first used in Italy in the 15th century and in Holland in the 16th, from where their use spread to England and the American colonies in the 17th century.

NOW: Today, studies show checks are involved in 90 percent of all transactions in the U.S. An idea that may make them more popular than ever is an easy way to keep track of the checks you write. It's called duplicate checks, a format that records all the check information, including the amount, on a second, or duplicate page. You get a complete record of each check transaction. Parents with check-writing college students, couples with joint checking accounts and anyone who ever forgot to fill in a check register could find this useful. You don't even need to carry around your whole checkbook. Just a few duplicate checks should usually do.

The checks are available in 18 different designer backgrounds from Checks In The Mail. The cost is $5.95 for 150 duplicate checks. Each order includes a checkbook cover and a register that you can keep at home or carry with you. The order number is 800-733-4443.
