Mother-Daughter Tea Set In Lubbock

Lubbock Alumnae Panhellenic Association invited area senior high school girls and their mothers to attend a Mother-Daughter Tea Saturday afternoon, from 2:30 to 4:30 p.m. in the Lubbock Garden and Arts Center at 4215 University in Lubbock.

Alumnae and collegiate sorority representatives will be on hand to answer questions and give specific information about rush. This is an excellent opportunity for high school seniors to learn about preparations and procedures for sorority rush.

Community Honors Service Of Fire Department Volunteers

Plains Volunteer Fire Department has been serving the community since 1946. Of those 45 years, two public servants, Sherm Tingle and Bob McDonnell, have played dedicated roles in the organization for 43 years.

McDonnell's son, Little Bob McDonnell, joined the department in 1951 and has continued to serve these 34 years.

The veteran trio has been recognized for their contribution to the community. Each has been named Fireman of the Year at least once. Each has served at one time as Fire Chief. Tingle served as Fire Marshall from 1946 until this year.

Other men who have served the community well are Bear Wauson, Tommy McDonnell and Dr. Bill McCulloch. Many others have served in the volunteer capacity through the years.

Through the passing years, this squad of volunteers have given their time and energies in protecting lives and property, willing to risk their own lives when necessary as they battled fires that included oil wells and tank batteries.

One memorable event in the history of Plains Volunteer Fire Department occurred in 1953 when a dynamite explosion resulted in a large number of injuries.

Plains Volunteer Fire Department has also served the community many years as drivers and operators of the ambulance, a service given without charge.

Jackets have been purchased for members of the department. Tingle and the two McDonnells were given jackets in appreciation of their first years of service to the community. Nellie Wauson was also given a jacket in appreciation and memory of her husband, Bear Paw Wauson.

Project Celebration Approved Again

Announcement has been made by William (Mel) Pope, district engineer with the State Department of Highways and Public Transportation for the Lubbock District, that funds have been secured for participation again this year with "Project Celebration".

"Project Celebration" is a national promotion of alcohol, drug free parties sponsored by communities through their high schools. These parties are generally held in conjunction with senior graduating activities.

Schools or communities interested should make a written request to Mr. Ken Sylvester, District Safety Supervisor, P.O. Box 771, Lubbock, Texas 79408-0771.

Funding is limited and interest has been high for the mini-grants. Mini-grants are for $300 per participating school or community.

ALL DISTRICT HONORS in basketball have been given Cowboys Layne Morrow, Mario Medina and Dan Rushing.

John Deere & Earth Day 'An On-Going Commitment'

Twenty-one years ago, on April 22, 1970, the American environmental movement sprang to life and the first ever Earth Day was observed across the nation. Last year, as public awareness of environmental problems has grown, Earth Day was revived with a great many ceremonies, media events and activities in cities around the United States.

Recently, Congress designated April 22 as the official celebration of Earth Day "to promote the preservation of the global environment." At John Deere the Earth Day idea has been a continuous commitment as the company explores new technology that can help improve the environment.

John Deere has supported ecologically sound business policies for decades. In fact, this commitment can be traced back to the 1920s.

"Back then, Deere started taking steps to avoid discharging pollutants into the atmosphere," says Ralph Grotelueschen, director of safety and environment at Deere & Company. "Since that time, countless processes and technologies have been incorporated into our factories and products to help clean up the environment."

Foundries, once thought to be manufacturing's largest pollution source, have become a source of pride for John Deere. Modern, all-electric foundries in East Moline, Illinois, and in Waterloo, Iowa, have been used by the United States Environmental Protection Agency to establish air pollution standards.

The John Deere foundries continue the long tradition of purchasing thousands of tons of scrap steel and iron for melting and processing into new John Deere equipment - thereby reducing the amount of scrap waste accumulating in the environment.

Stream pollution controls have been in force at Deere facilities for several decades. Mike McGuire, manager of environmental control for John Deere, says the company set strict water-effluent standards even before the federal government became involved in these processes.

"John Deere treats its own hazardous and nonhazardous waste water in state-of-the-art facilities," he says. "And in our Waterloo, Iowa factory, excess water treatment capacity is used by local businesses - those lacking the necessary facilities - to assist them in the treatment of their compatible wastes."

Many additional improvements have been or will soon be incorporated into Deere factories as the company continues to implement plans for a better environment for its employees and factory communities.

For example, buried fuel tanks are being removed and replaced with above-ground storage facilities. Waste oil is being reclaimed, and waste wood and paper waste are being burned to produce steam for building and for process heating. Freon from air conditioning equipment is being recycled. Deere also has discontinued plating with cyanide and with cadmium in order to reduce toxicity.

"The concept of designating one day as Earth Day is a good one," notes Ralph Grotelueschen. "However, we believe the effort to clean up the environment is a 365-day a year job and we strive to encourage our employees to incorporate that philosophy into their lives both at work and at home."

Mavis Montgomery Directs Program For Art Association

Mavis Montgomery of Brownfield presented a program Tuesday evening for Yoakum County Art Association. She demonstrated a painting of a white pony in pastels on Valour paper. "Expressions in animals' eyes bring life to animal portraits," she stated. Johnnie Conner was the winner of the animal portrait.

In business session, the upcoming variety show slated for 8 p.m. April 12 was discussed. Members voted that any money raised over the expense of rewiring the art building be donated to the Arthritis Foundation.

Insurance on the building was also discussed.

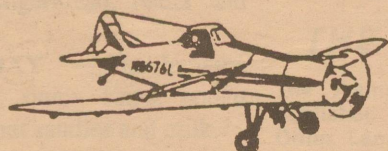

A letter from Governor Ann Richards, in response to a letter written concerning state school funding, was read.

Thirteen members and one guest attended. Hostesses were Marguerite Barron, Mary Lou Parks and Wilma McDonnell.

Artist of the Month is Louise Fitzgerald.

Art Association meets the first Tuesday of each month. Interested persons are invited.
