Wolverines Lose To Eastland "B" Squad 27 to 0

The Carbon Wolverine football team has come a long way since beginning of training this season under the direction of Coach R. L. Brandt. In the game with Eastland B squad last Friday night in Eastland they played the Eastland boys off their feet for the first three quarters holding the Eastland team to three first downs while the Wolverines were making twelve first downs and three touchdowns to lead 20 to 0. But with our small reserve strength, they ran in a group of new players and overpowered our boys in the last quarter to win the game 27 to 20.

The entire team played a good game with Brown in the line and Clark in the back field showing outstanding plays. They all came out of the game with no serious injuries.

They play Baird there Friday night, Oct. 7 in a conference game and a large crowd is expected to follow the team there and give them their support in this, their second conference game. McDaniel, who played very well in the Eastland game because of injuries, will be in fine shape for the Baird game.

Following is the starting lineup for the Eastland and Carbon game:

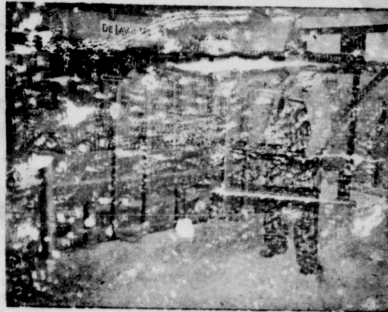

Carbon	Pos.	Eastland

Brown	C	Herring
Tucker	LG	Harrison

How It Started . . .

"THE GHOST WALKS"—The phrase "the ghost walks," is a theatrical expression for payday which has been widely adopted and is said to have originated during Shakespeare's early career as a dramatist. He worked in stock company productions of his own plays, serving often as financial manager. He also played small parts among which was that of the "ghost" in Hamlet. On Saturday nights, while still in the costume of the ghost, he would pay his fellow actors. So "has the ghost walked yet?" was an important query to performers.

"SOUTHPAW"—This term for a left-handed pitcher was coined some 20 years ago when all baseball games were played in the afternoon. Playing fields were customarily laid out from the west to east, with grandstands facing east so that the afternoon sun would not glare in spectators' faces. A left-handed pitcher facing home plate, under that setup, also faced due west, or approximately so. His right shoulder faced to the north and his left to the south. He pitched, therefore, with his "south" paw.

Barnaid's Rights
 By Will Bernard, LL.B.

State laws vary. For personal guidance, see your local attorney.

May a Man be Forced To Support Two Wives At the Same Time?

A young couple were divorced, and the wife was granted a monthly sum as alimony. After a few years, the man remarried. Finding it difficult to support both wives, he asked the court to relieve him of his alimony payments. However, when it appeared that the first wife had no other source of income, the court ruled that the husband must continue making the payment. The judge said: "A man may not shun the marital obligations undertaken in one relationship by contracting others!"

Is a Hospital to Blame For Letting a Smallpox Patient Escape?

A man caught smallpox and was confined to a special wing of a private hospital on the outskirts of town. One night the man's nurse fell asleep on the job, and the delirious patient wandered out into the fields. He finally was picked up at a farmhouse—but not until he had passed the dread disease on to the farmer. After the farmer had recovered, he sued the hospital for damages. The hospital protested that it wasn't responsible for the acts of a delirious patient, but the court disagreed and granted the farmers claim. The judge said the hospital was just as much to blame as a circus would be for letting a vicious animal loose on the streets!

Do Barmaids Have the Same Rights as Bartenders?

The owner of a barroom decided to economize by having his wife help him at the bar. As it happened, there was a local law prohibiting the employment of women to serve liquor. Somebody reported the matter to the police—and the man was arrested. At the trial, he

An amateur painter called in a doctor friend of his to look at a painting he had just completed. It showed a man in the last stages of a terrible struggle against death. After the good doctor had spent about ten minutes inspecting it thoroughly the artist asked him what he thought of it.
 "Looks like pneumonia to me," replied the doctor.

artist raved on and on about his paintings.
 "But what I can't understand," said the admirer, "is how two brothers can be so dissimilar. You're so tall and your brother is quite short, isn't he?"
 "Yes," agreed the brother, "he frequently is."

Whistler, the famous English artist, was complimented on his paintings by an admiring lady.
 "Yes," she said, "I was reminded of some of your works when I walked along a river bank the other day. The air was so clear that the trees and foliage looked as if you had painted them."
 "That's true," he remarked, "even Nature is beginning to get on to the trick."

The unimaginative brother of a well-known artist was somewhat jealous of the way people talked in glowing phrases of his brother but never gave him a thought. He had reached the stage where he paid scant attention to conversations concerning his brother.
 He nearly went to sleep one day as an enthusiastic admirer of the

May a Chef Collect Compensation if Assaulted By the Dishwasher?

During the breakfast rush, a restaurant chef became annoyed by a mounting stack of dirty dishes. He told the dishwasher to move them out of his way, but the latter was slow to comply. When the chef grew more insistent, the dishwasher became very angry and finally gave his tormentor a jolting uppercut to the jaw. The chef was injured, and put in a claim for workmen's compensation. At the hearing the restaurant owner opposed the claim, saying that the dispute was purely a personal matter between the two employees. But the court granted the chef an award. The judge said the fight did not arise from some private grudge, but from the problem of how best to do the work. Thus, said the judge, the mishap was covered by the workmen's compensation law.

THE BIBLE SPEAKS
By DR. KENNETH J. FOREMAN

What is a Call of God?
Lesson for October 2, 1949

IF YOU knew exactly what God wanted you to do, would you do it? Of course you would. The trouble is: How does any one know what God's will is? For example, a young man is thinking about his life's work; what should he choose? Most young men would do what they were sure God called them to do, but what is a call?

The story of Isaiah throws some light on this problem. (We are beginning this week a three month's study of the great prophets Isaiah and Jeremiah.) True, he lived some 700 years ago, and half way to the other side of the world; but human nature has not changed in 2700 years.

Dr. Foreman

From Man about Town To Man of God

ISAIAH was a young man about 17, the smallest but wealthy city of Jerusalem, about 700 years before Christ. He was a personal friend of all the important people, a man of good education, with wide horizons of interest, independent means, eloquent, polished, the sort of man who makes a good career diplomat.

He tells in some detail the story of how he came to be a prophet. The story is in Isaiah 6. Perhaps if we had been there with a camera and a wire recorder we might have been able to photograph the seraphim and take down their cries, just as Isaiah saw and heard them.

What we do know is that that experience changed Isaiah's life. Up to that time (on his own showing) he had been a "man of unclean lips" from that time on he began to be a spokesman for the Lord. Let us try to say what the story of that life-changing vision, that call, means in terms of our own experience.

The Flame of God

FIRST there was the overwhelming sense of God's reality and power and holy majesty. No one can ever experience a call who does not take God seriously.

A God "afar off," a God who is only a problem, an idea, a hypothesis, never called any one. God alone can make himself real to man; and only a man with a real sense of a living God is going to hear his call.

Then comes the burning coal from the altar; Isaiah feels that his guilt is gone. No one can fully do God's will with an unforgiven heart. Isaiah was not sinless at one stroke, of course, yet it is possible to turn from all known sin; it is possible to devote one's loyalty to God; and this Isaiah did.

It was only then that he heard the call: Whom shall I send? In modern and less picturesque language, Isaiah was conscious of a need he had not felt before—that is, of God's need, of his people's need.

"Here Am I; Send Me."

THEN comes the last stage—Isaiah's willing offer of himself. His great talent was the ability to use language. He could make words march and sing as few men of any race have done. But up to that time, it seems, his gift of eloquence had been used chiefly in telling dirty stories.

Now he has repented, and been forgiven, and he says to God: Use me. His voice, his knowledge, his eloquence, which he had been using against God (or at best, only for Isaiah) he was now to use for God and man.

So there is a call: A sense of God, near and commanding and holy; repentance; forgiveness; a sense of need; willingness to devote all one's gifts to fill that need.
