- Bargain Damages
- Collect for Terror
- Bees and a Mule

By Will Bernard, LL.B.

State laws vary. For personal guidance, see your local attorney.

May a Shopper Collect Damages if Knocked Down At a Bargain Sale?

A dry goods store ran a month-end sale on bed linen, and got results far exceeding its fondest hopes. A huge crowd gathered and began milling around. Women screamed, fainted and even climbed up onto the counter. During the excitement, one housewife was knocked down a stairway.

Though not badly hurt, she determined to sue the store for damages. She claimed that the company should have taken special measures to prevent this kind of accident. However, the court rejected her suit. The judge pointed out that the store had no reason to expect such a violent response to the sale!

If a Man is Terrorized By Escaped Convicts, May He Collect Damages from the City?

A group of convicts were doing construction work in a wooded area on the outskirts of town. The families living nearby were charged to find that the men were very poorly guarded. Hardly a day passed that a criminal didn't make his way to freedom through the surrounding countryside. In constant fear for his family, one of the home owners finally had to move out. The situation was so nasty that he couldn't even get anyone to move into his house rent-free! At last he sued the city for damages. Municipal officials insisted that a private citizen had no right to collect damages from the city. However, the court granted the man's claim. The judge said that even the city could be held liable for creating such an intolerable situation.

Is a Beekeeper Responsible if His Bees Attack a Mule?

A farmer set up a beehive alongside his back fence, right close to the favorite grazing spot of his neighbor's mule. One hot day the bees lit out after the mule and stung him so badly that he died. When the neighbor sued for the value of the beast, the farmer protested that he was not to blame for what his bees had done. However, when he admitted that the same bees had once attacked his own mule too, the court decided to hold him responsible. The judge said that, since the farmer knew his bees were vicious, he should not have stationed them so close to the neighbor's animal.

Must an Officer Show His Warrant to a Person He is Arresting?

A policeman stopped a young woman's car and told her she was wanted on a misdemeanor charge. A warrant for her arrest, required in such cases, had been duly issued—but the forgetful officer had left it in a desk drawer. When the woman asked to see the warrant, he told her he didn't have to show it to her. At first she refused to "come along"—but yielded after some lively pulling and tugging. Later she sued for illegal arrest and assault and battery. The policeman argued that, as long as a warrant had been issued, it wasn't necessary to show it at the time of arrest. But the court held him liable. The judge said that, under the circumstances, the officer had exceeded his authority, failing to show the "proper regard for the personal liberty of the citizen."

MIRROR Of Your MIND

Bad Habit Of Evasion

By Lawrence Gould

Are there people who can't give you a straight answer?"

Answer: Yes. You will meet people who find it almost impossible to make a direct statement, even about the weather. It may be because as children they were criticized or punished so severely when they tried to do things on their own initiative that they dare not take a definite stand on anything whatever. Or they may be temperamentally "ambivalent" (facing both ways emotionally) and so obsessed by their inner contradictions that they cannot see one side of any question without being conscious that perhaps there is another.

Do deaf people feel more "isolated" than blind ones?

Answer: Yes, reports psychologist Helton McAndrew of Duke University in the Journal of Abnormal and Social Psychology. Tests showed that whereas blind children are aware of physical isolation, deaf ones feel mentally and socially isolated. In general, deaf children are less adaptable and less responsive, with a tendency to follow rigid patterns of behavior, presumably on the basis of the need a person who is unsure of himself has to "play safe." A comparison of deaf and blind adults might well show similar differences.

Is asthma primarily an "allergy"?

Answer: As a rule, No, write two members of the staff of New York Hospital in the Journal of Nervous and Mental Diseases. In but two of 51 cases of bronchial asthma was there any positive connection between the asthmatic symptoms and the patient's response to skin tests for allergic reactions, while in 32 cases the symptoms appeared after some sort of emotional disturbance, and in several others emotional factors were clearly involved. Even safely inhaled large quantities of "pollen sensitive patients could pollen if their minds were at rest.

KEEPING HEALTHY 'Cancer' Causes Mental Agony

By Dr. James W. Barton

A FEW YEARS ago, if a physician told a patient that the symptoms of which he complained were caused by heart disease, the patient believed himself doomed. Today, most of us know that even if we have heart disease, we can live for years if we follow our doctor's advice and "take it easy." Even in cases of high blood pressure and a vessel carrying blood to the heart muscle being clogged up or broken (coronary thrombosis), it is known that with care and rest, diet and exercise, further attacks may not occur and, that if they do occur they may not cause death. While the words "heart disease" and "coronary thrombosis" still may strike fear in our hearts, it is the word "cancer" that causes great fear and continuous worry, which really is chronic fear.

In the "American Journal of Psychiatry," Dr. J. B. Ficarra states that the word "cancer" stirs a tempest of mental agony. Because so many cases of cancer are not discovered until too late to save life, the family and relatives are told of the cancer, but in most cases the patient is not told although he may suspect the cause of his symptoms.

Strange as it seems, it is known that the young patient withstands the knowledge that he has cancer better than his family and relatives; he appears to be able to face his fate better than older patients. In elderly patients the sense of impending death is ever present. Old people fear it and are more nervous about it than young adults.

While some ailments cause nervous symptoms and the patient believes he has heart, kidney or other disease, the majority of patients who really have cancer do not "imagine" they have cancer. It is often the non-cancerous patient who believes he has cancer.

How It Started . . .

WORTH HIS SALT—To early man salt represented something imperishable and something that would keep other things from perishing. It was food and it had healing value. Roman soldiers were paid an allowance for salt which explains the saying that a "man is worth his salt." Each fighter's allowance was called his salarium, or allowance for salt; therefore we commemorate that practice in our use of the word "salary."

PAY THE PIPER . . . Of course, the complete phrase is "he who dances must pay the piper." The phrase stems from the legend of the Pied Piper of Hamelin, who, when he was not paid by the village officials for piping all the rats in the town to their doom, piped all the children, but two, to a cave in the mountain where they disappeared.

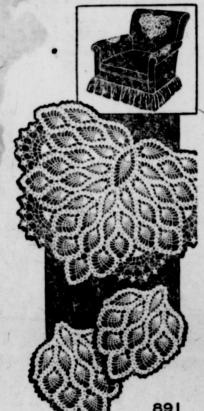

HOSTAGE—The connotation of this word today is a far cry from its old Latin meaning. It comes from the Latin "hostis," guest or host, through old French "Hostage" and "otage." Hostage is either the state of a person given or kept as a pledge pending the fulfillment of a demand or an agreement.

Cotton Sacks Make Smart Clothes for Family

COTTON sacks are doing double duty in these days of fabric shortages, the Home Editor of nationally-circulated Capper's Farmer points out. With a little ingenuity and various sizes of bags, one can make intriguing things for the home and smart pieces of clothing for the family.

"Appliqued cherries and red embroidered rickracks give accent to these chic mother-daughter outfits," this Capper's Farmer expert writes. "Rough-weave, bleached cotton sacks were used. When preparing the sacks for sewing, rip the stitching and remove any printing by soaking them overnight in thick soapuds. In the morning wash them in warm, soapy water, rubbing printed parts between the hands. If this does not remove all marks, boil for 10 minutes in soapy water. Rinse, well, dry and press. If you wish, dye plain material to a preferred color.

"Pajamas for this six-year-old boy were made from two 100-pound sacks. The facings are rick.

"Twin jumpers made from cotton sacks are another budget-saving costume for mothers and daughters. They can be dyed a bright blue and smartly decorated with red felt apples. Other basic spring and summer outfits may be made from thirty cotton sacks."

In addition to useful information on styles, wardrobe replenishment and sewing, women readers of Capper's Farmer regularly find interesting features in the magazine on cooking, child care, beauty, gardening and other topics.

Pressure Saucepan Saves Time and Fuel

IN A comparatively short time the pressure saucepan has won an assured place in farm kitchens, according to Laura Dalley, in an article in Capper's Farmer, one of the best known farm magazines.

It saves time and fuel. Many different foods may be prepared in a pressure saucepan. It is particularly good for those which need long cooking. "Pressure cooking," Miss

Dalley says, "preserves food value, color and flavor."

A few rules of operation are important:

- 1—Never fill the pan more than two-thirds full.
- 2—Be sure that steam flows steadily from vent before you close it.
- 3—Wait until weight or pressure control rattles or hisses or cooking indicator is at right position to your directions before you start counting time. Then reduce the heat and let cook for specified time.
- 4—Reduce the pressure as each recipe indicates.
- 5—After pressure is reduced, be certain to remove the weight, or lift the pressure control, before removing cover.

Some farm women are doing a limited amount of canning in their pressure saucepans, Miss Dalley points out.
