Freezing Cooked Foods Solves Homemaker's Problems

Mrs. H. F. Lathrop (left), Allen county, Indiana, homemaker, empties frozen soup into the cooker well of her electric range for a quick snack. Meals made up of frozen foods give her extra holidays from the kitchen. Mrs. L. A. Spencer (right), Van Buren county, Michigan, has just unwrapped one of her frozen pies from the reach-in freezer. The other is still in its heavy waxed-paper covering. When baked, these will be a tempting dessert.

FREEZING cooked foods solves many problems for busy farm homemakers, advises Dr. W. Miller, Rural Home expert of nationally circulated Cupper's Farmer. "The busiest hands spend Sunday dinners every month," she writes in the farm magazine. "If you're short of help in the kitchen, it's hard feeding them. When farm women hold a 3-day meeting you would like to go, but Dad and the youngsters can't cook for themselves. Every day you wish you could shorten the time spent preparing meals. Freezing cooked foods solves all these problems, according to representative farm homemakers."

Short-notice meals for extra help on the farm are easier to prepare with plenty of baked things in the home freezer, Miss Miller points out. Another big advantage is that home freezers make it possible to get the most out of food at the best stage.

Cooking large amounts of foods and freezing them at one time for future meals is a time and labor saver for many farm women. As one homemaker put it: "Cooking has to be done some time; with a home freezer, work can be distributed to make the farm woman's life a bit easier."

The approximate lengths of time farm women have kept cooked foods frozen are: red beans, 2 years; pastry shells and pies, 1 month; cookies, 6 months; bread 6 weeks; rolls, 3 months; cakes, 2 months; baked beans, 2 months; left-over meats, 9 months; baked ham, 3 or 4 months; tomato juice, 9 months; soupstock, 9 months; and wheat cereal, 2 months.
