Borers Threaten Area Peanut Crop

High populations of the destructive lesser cornstalk borer in Comanche and Eastland Counties are posing serious threats to peanut farmers, Agriculture Commissioner John C. White said this week.

A Texas Department of Agriculture survey team has counted as many as two borer larvae per peanut plant in the affected area, White said. The survey includes the Pioneer, Rising Star, Gorman, DeLeon, Comanche, Gustine and Proctor areas.

"This is a matter of grave concern to peanut growers, and quarantine officials alike," Commissioner White said. "Last year, in Comanche County alone, the cornstalk borer caused an estimated damage to peanuts in excess of one million dollars. We need to take all necessary steps to keep down such an infestation this year."

Commissioner White urged

farmers to immediately check for evidence of the borers in their peanut fields. The larvae is approximately two-thirds inch long, very active and is turquoise and black in color. The borer larvae lives in small silken tubes just under the ground surface. These silken tubes are attached to the roots and stems of the peanut plant.

Control measures can be found in the Extension Service Bulletin, L-704, "Texas Guide For Controlling Insects in Peanuts". The bulletins may be obtained by contacting young county agricultural agent.

"These control recommendations are effective when carefully followed," White pointed out. "If a grower suspects or confirms an infestation in his field, he should make every effort to get his control program underway as soon as possible."

Mrs. Arlin Bint of Cisco has

When appropriate, the project will refer individuals to existing health, welfare, employment, housing, legal aid, recreation or other services. FIND will also take responsibility for expediting such referrals and for facilitating the relationship between the older person and the agency providing the service.

Project FIND is a pilot program designed to serve seniors. The Project is composed of a 13 county area in central Texas which has a percentage of 20.3 percent of the population 62 years old or older.

This 13 county area roughly represents 22,673 or more, the majority of which are spinners or widows, many of whom are living alone. This area has the highest percentage of old people of any section in the State of Texas.
