Throws Away Diamond; Was Tired of Seeing It

Omaha, Neb.—Tired of looking at her mother's $1,500 diamond ring, four-year-old Myrtle Ann Van Roy threw it away. While her mother was in Washington she took two other rings and hid them in a sand pile, where they were found. No trace of the diamond was discovered in a long search.

The above illustration is from the current issue of the M.K.T. Employee Magazine showing how the Katy's income decreased over a five-year period while its tax burden increased. The sketch also indicates how the Katy's total payroll decreased $634,251 in five years, largely, it is claimed, as a result of highway competition, and points out that of the Katy's total 1931 revenue $4 per cent was paid out in taxes and wages.

Fire Threatens Business House

Carbon came near having a disastrous fire Sunday afternoon when the peanut hull's outside the peanut factory caught fire from some unknown cause. Local help was spontaneous and heroically done but the wind being high it was necessary to call the Eastland and Rarger fire trucks which responded promptly and laid one thousand feet of hose to the gin tank and quickly had all danger over.

Two little boys, six and four, were looking at a map and wondering why the bodies of the younger by putting his own interpretation on the various pictures. Finally they came to the colored maps and the other one was somewhat stumped, but said: "That is a map." "What's it for?" came the query. "Why, that shows the way up to heaven," was the brother's reply.

Take Time to Think

You hear a lot about people who can think quickly. They think like a flash when there is an emergency. It's great to be able to do that, providing you always think the right thing. But if there is any doubt about it, take your time to think. It's better to take a little more time than to do some imitation quick-thinking which doesn't get you anywhere.—Grit.

Fallings

It is usually the small souled and narrow minded man who can decry faults and fallings with an eagle eye, but upon whom all the finer and greater qualities of humanity are lost. It him who ever walks with head bent and eyes on the ground the whole unverse appears to be made of dust; but he who goes with head erect and eyes uplifted breathes the pure air and greets the rising sun, and forgets the dust that may be under his feet.

Infantile Paralysis

"Byron, who had club feet possibly resulting from infantile paralysis, or poliomyelitis as the doctors call it, was fond of athletics and found that his handicap did not apply when he was in the water. From constant exercise in water he became so strong that he eventually was able to swim the Hellespont, just as did Leander in the golden days of Greece." Dr. John Ruhrah told Readers of Hygeia Magazine in his article entitled, "Folio."

Two-Purpose Wool

The alpaca, native of the table lands of Peru, is an important source of wool for the Peruvians and at the same time serves as a beast of burden. The wool when clipped every year, attains a length of about eight inches, although it will grow much longer if left uncut. It appears to be related to the camels of the Old world, although the resemblance is not so pronounced until the alpaca has been shorn.
