Two Minutes With the Bible

Wonderful News

The newspapers are filled with exciting news these days, but the divine extension of this present age of grace is the most sensational news of all.

We are prone to take the blessings of our times too much for granted. We forget too easily that for more than 1900 years the world has been ripe for God's judgment—ever since His Son, the Lord Jesus Christ, was crucified and sent from this world as a royal Exile.

All through the Old Testament Psalms and prophets it is clear that the world's rejection of Christ was to be visited with awful judgment. The Second Psalm, describing the world's rejection of "the Lord and His anointed," goes on to say: "Then shall He (God) speak unto them in His wrath and vex them in His sore displeasure." In Psalm 110:1, too, we have the Father saying to His rejected Son: "Sit Thou at My right hand, until I make Thine enemies Thy footstool."

Yet, when all seemed ready for the divine judgment to fall, God interrupted the prophetic program and saved Saul of Tarsus, the "chief of sinners," and the leader of the world's rebellion against Christ. More: He appointed this Saul as the Apostle Paul to proclaim "the gospel of the grace of God" (Acts 20:24), the wonderful news that because Christ suffered, the Just for the unjust, at Calvary, any sinner may be saved by grace through faith, apart from religious or other works.

"The wages of sin is death, but the free gift of God is eternal life, through Jesus Christ our Lord" (Rom. 6:23). And therefore: "To him that worketh not, but believeth on Him that justifieth the ungodly, his faith is counted for righteousness" (Rom. 4:5. Judgment will indeed come, but thank God, He has in grace delayed it until now. "Behold, now is the accepted time; behold, now is the day of salvation" (II Cor. 6:2).

Several of the growers told Dr. Atkins their Caddo had higher test weight per bushel and that it rusted less than other varieties—two very important considerations when selecting a desirable variety of wheat for planting.

Caddo was developed by Dr. Atkins and Dr. Kenneth B. Porter, Texas Station agronomists in cooperation with the U. S. Department of Agriculture. The agronomists pointed out that before the seed of the new variety was released to growers, tests in Texas and over the Southern Great Plains area gave Caddo a rating of excellent on yield, test weight, quality and resistance to leaf rust. It is also widely adapted, including areas in Central Texas, they said.

Caddo Wheat Makes Strong Showing

Twenty Texas producers of certified seed wheat like the new variety Caddo. The 20 received foundation seed of the new variety in the fall of 1963 and have just reported on their 1964 harvests to Dr. J. M. Atkins, small grain section leader of the Texas Agricultural Experiment Station.

The reports came from every section of Texas, Dr. Atkins said, and practically all reported Caddo yields were equal to or better than those of other varieties grown on their farms. Yields ranged from less than 15 bushels per acre to a high of 84.3 bushels. The high yield was produced under irrigation near Spearman in the upper Panhandle and compared with a yield of 76.1 bushels per acre for Improved Triumph on the same farm.

On a Castro County farm near Dimmitt, Caddo produced 57 bushels per acre as against 42 bushels for Kaw. The 20 growers reported an overall average of 33 bushels for Caddo against a 29 bushel average for other varieties grown on the same farms.

The growers also told Dr. Atkins they liked the agronomic characteristics of the new wheat. Seven said it produced more forage for winter grazing, the same number said it had stronger straw than the other variety grown and six said it was more hail resistant. On one farm, Caddo was damaged only 8 per cent by hail compared with 17 per cent for Crockett.

TOWN BENEFACTOR Kenneth W. Pollock (right) of Fort Scott, Kan., emerges from the basement fallout shelter area of the city building where extra ventilating equipment (see vents in background) made it possible to protect about 1,000 persons—many more than could be accommodated otherwise. Using data on the best available local shelter areas in existing structures provided by the Defense Department's National Fallout Shelter Survey, Pollock has spent about $18,000 so far to improve shelters here. He will spend about $50,000 if necessary to improve fallout for 6,600, and will go to $50,000 if necessary to improve fallout for the town's 10,000 inhabitants. Money for the project shelters for the town's fund of Key Work Clothes, Inc., a local firm which Pollock heads. (Photo by Bill Sneed, Topeka Capital-Journal)

Walleyed Pike Test Result Due in Near Future

The intriguing story about experimental efforts to introduce the popular walleyed pike into Texas water may have a revealing chapter just as soon as the weather cools off, according to Marion Toole, coordinator of inland fisheries for the Parks and Wildlife Department.

He said, when the summer heat ends, a pond at the Possum Kingdom fish hatchery will be drained in an effort to determine the fate of walleye fry placed there last year and known to have reached a length of ten inches.

Toole said because of previous losses experienced by draining ponds in extreme temperatures, studies of the 1963-model walleyes had been delayed until cooler weather in September or later.

Just recently the hatchery technicians netted a walleye, planted last spring along with other fry obtained from the Iowa State Conservation Department, that already had grown to six and one-quarter inches in length.

Earlier efforts to import the fighting walleyes into Texas waters were not successful, but Toole said more elaborate plans are being taken in connection with the latest experiment. Besides the pike placed in the hatchery ponds at Possum Kingdom, 100,000 were planted last spring in Possum Kingdom Lake. The result of that project will be more difficult to chart, however. Toole said recent reports that a fisherman had caught six small walleyes has not been conclusively proven.

The Texas fisheries scientists are eager to determine, among other things, whether the opaqueeyed walleyes will survive long enough to spawn in their new abode. One thing they already have determined is that the popular game fish are voracious fish eaters. Of 50,000 redear sunfish placed in the Possum Kingdom hatchery tank last year with ten walleyes, only 5,000 redears survived along with four of the walleyes. This pointed up the fact that walleyes also are cannibalistic.

Toole said the predacious walleyes, which are particularly adaptable to the larger lakes or reservoirs, also are highly competitive with black bass but that the conflict has not been forbidding.

He said studies in the Tennessee Valley Authority lakes show that walleyes have a higher growth rate in the southern areas than in the north. Walleyes up to 25 pounds have been caught in southern waters, almost double the size of the larger ones snagged in the north where the sporty fish runs up to 12 pounds.

"We are very eager to establish walleyes in Texas waters," said Toole. "They are a great sport fish and especially good eating." He emphasized that experiments have not yet reached the stage where stocking plans can be made.

Other possible introductions of walleyes to likely parts of Texas, distant from Possum Kingdom, could occur in the Panhandle and the newly created Canyon Reservoir, said Toole. He said walleyes have been stocked in Lake Conchas in New Mexico which is linked by the Canadian River to the new Lake Meredith in Potter, Moore and Hutchinson Counties.

RURAL ELECTRICS PAY TAXES

Your local electric cooperative, along with almost 1,000 other rural electric systems, joins with other local businesses in paying its share of taxes each year.

Local tax payments such as these, represent typical additional contributions by almost 1,000 rural electric systems organized to bring electric service to people who could get electricity in no other way.

Despite the difficulties involved in serving sparsely settled rural areas, America's Rural Electric Systems have already paid over $1 billion in principal and interest on their $3 1/2 billion loan.

Like other locally owned and operated rural electric systems, we are proud to fulfill our local, state and federal obligations while we help build a better community and a stronger America.

Quality Peaches Are Available

This year's peach crop of an estimated 3 million bushels is reported to be the best in years, quality-wise.

Pick a peach, but please don't pinch or poke, says Mrs. Gwen Clyatt, Extension Service consumer marketing specialist. Ripeness is your clue. Peaches must look good to be good.

Quality peaches are firm, mature, well-formed and free from decay and injury. Peaches have yellow skins and flesh, so look for creamy-to-gold color under the red blush. Red blush alone is not a sign of ripeness, for the amount of blush varies according to peach variety. Avoid hard peaches with green background color, for they are immature, lack flavor and will never ripen properly.

Keep full-ripe peaches in the refrigerator, the specialist suggests. Consumers will recall that a pound of peaches—or three medium size peaches—yield about 2 cups sliced peaches. For an eight-or-nine-inch pie, 2 pounds of fresh peaches are required.

Homemakers who plan to can or freeze peaches will note that 2½-pounds of peaches will yield about 2 pints canned or frozen, depending on the quality and size, whether the peaches are halved or sliced, and how closely they are packed.

Utilities Company Announces Lower Electric Rates

A company-wide $1,100,000 annual reduction in electric rates was announced this week by West Texas Utilities Company. All of the 166 towns and communities served by the utilities company will benefit from the rate reduction.

The revised schedule of electric rates was filed with the City by C. R. Seale, WTU local manager. The new rates will be effective with meter readings made after August 31, 1964.

These new rate schedules result from a reduction in the company's income taxes due to recent changes in the federal income tax rates and the increased usage of electricity by present customers, together with greater company operating efficiencies and economies.

"These rate reductions," Si Phillips, WTU President, said, "are evidence of our policy of reducing the cost of service to customers whenever we can. The $490,000 direct reduction in our federal income taxes, plus the improved operating efficiencies of new generating equipment we have recently put into service, as well as the new facilities now under construction, make it possible for us to pass on again real savings to our customers. Based on 1963 sales, the new rate schedules will represent a reduction of about 3½ percent company-wide."

Approximately $390,000 of the annual savings from the reduced rates will go to residential customers, Phillips said that with the new rates the average residential customer will get about one-third more electric service for his money than he did at the end of World War II.

In addition, the new rates will mean a saving of $274,000 for commercial lighting customers. The cost of service to combination general power and commercial service customers will be reduced another $221,000. Phillips said that churches, schools and smaller commercial customers will particularly benefit from this rate change.

Large light and power customers will have a saving of $140,000. "All customers," Phillips pointed out, "will share in the $75,000 saving resulting from lowering the fuel clause adjustment factor made possible by improved power plant efficiencies."

In addition to the general reduction which affects virtually all customers, the new rate schedules provide an extension of the residential and commercial electric space heating rate from four to six months. Presently WTU electric space heating customers buy electric heat at a base rate of 1c per KWH.

Parallel Terraces

by Soil Conservation Service

In this area, terraces are considered an important conservation practice. Both graded and level terraces have been used extensively in conventional type terrace systems. Such terraces sometimes have been found objectionable from the standpoint of uneven crop growth and maturity over the terrace interval and the complex farming operations involved.

Another type of terrace system—parallel terraces—have the same functions, but have fewer point rows and lesser concentration of run-off. This type of system results in cheaper and simpler farming operations and lessens the hazard of operational failures. In this system, a key terrace will be located so that terrace lines can be run parallel to it above and below. The horizontal distance between these lines are adjusted to permit an even number of rows for the equipment to be used. In many cases, it will be possible to parallel all terraces in a field from one key terrace. In those cases where all terraces will not fit one parallel pattern, terraces with irregular intervals will need to be used when excessive grades or other objectionable features make it necessary. There are several alternatives for utilizing these point row areas:

1. Plant the entire interval to a close-growing crop.
2. Lay out as many long rows as the space will permit and plant the remainder of the interval to close growing crops.
3. Lay out a row system in the same manner as for conventional terraces.

A parallel terrace system properly planned and integrated with the general farm plan becomes a valuable improvement. Sufficient topographic information should be obtained so that each terrace system can be properly planned.

Technical assistance for planning and installing these systems is available through the Soil Conservation Service cooperating with the Lower Pease River Soil Conservation District.

PATTERNS FOR PROGRESS

Community Development planning requires ANALYSIS of the Community Survey

Making a Community Survey of factors which influence community and economic development is the starting point for a soundly planned program.

What is done with and about such a survey is the next crucial step. We must assess and evaluate all the facts in microscopic detail, for results can come only from a thorough and realistic analysis.

We should ask ourselves . . . what are our advantages for economic and civic growth? How can we utilize them for community and economic development? Are there civic factors which need improvement to compete with our neighboring towns? How can we best make such improvements? And, is the entire citizenship cooperating with community organizations whose initiative and aggressive leadership can accomplish our objectives? . . .

Analysis of a Community Survey is another PATTERN FOR PROGRESS.

WTU's area development representatives will assist growth-conscious communities in planning a thorough analysis of its Community Survey for economic development. This service is available on request through your local WTU manager.

Official Dove Maps

Hunters readying for the north zone mourning dove season opener September 1 were invited by J. B. Phillips, law enforcement coordinator for the Parks and Wildlife Department, to observe the new official dove maps available at license distributors such as sporting goods stores and at regional and district departmental offices in their area.

"These maps spell out the hunting situation and provide a simplified approach to all phases of the upcoming harvest," said Phillips. "They are free. Important items to remember are that the daily legal shooting period is from 12 noon until sunset and that the daily limit is 12 and the possession limit 24 mourning doves."

He also said the "Hunting in Texas 1964-1965," a guide to fall harvest regulations, is now being distributed through field offices and licensed deputies.
