With the harvest termed about 95 per cent over Monday, Foard County's production will miss the one million bushel mark by considerably less than was anticipated started in April before the rains started and when a freeze hit the area followed by several days of 100-degree plus temperature readings.

A check with the county's three elevators Monday showed that a total of 965,308 bushels of new wheat had been delivered up to that time. This does not include the many thousands of bushels which farmers store in their own bins and grainaries.

After missing a crop last year, Foard County was expected to come back with a bumper crop this year, especially after the wet fall which saw the county get a "perfect stand" of wheat. However, hoped-for spring rains did not come quite soon enough to bring the bumper crop hoped for, but they did come in time to help fill out the grain and make almost a 20-bushel-per-acre average for the county. It is estimated that in the neighborhood of 50,000 acres of wheat were harvested this year.

The elevators reported a small amount of barley was brought in and no oats. If any oats were harvested, they were stored on the farms.

An abundance of combines was on hand for the harvest, and when the grain got ready, there were plenty of combines around to cut it. Nearly all of the combines have already moved on north.

STATE CAPITAL
Highlights
AND Sidelights
- by Bill Boykin
TEXAS PRESS ASSOCIATION

Austin, Tex.—The long-awaited special finance session of the Texas Legislature has been called for 10 a. m., June 14.

Gov. Preston Smith issued the official proclamation last week, stating repeatedly he plans to present a 1973 budget which will require no new taxes. The governor, who has implied he would veto a tax bill, said he does not think lawmakers can pass one without his placing the subject of revenue on the special session agenda.

Under the proclamation, Smith will allow legislators to consider

"such other subjects as the governor may submit from time to time."

However, he made clear he does not plan to open the call to any other business until the 1973 budget—financing state operations from Sept. 1, 1972—August 31, 1973—is finally passed.

Smith vetoed all 1973 fiscal year appropriations adopted by the legislature during the 1971 regular session. In anticipation of more federal aid (that never was received) the Legislature did not enact a 1973 welfare budget—which made a special session inevitable even without the governor's veto.

A proposed state officials' code of ethics and a recommendation for repeal of a controversial new trailer brake law are among items to be offered the special session for action after passage of the appropriations act.

There is some speculation Smith may try to avoid the need for new taxes by proposing a welfare program finance act covering less than a full fiscal year. This would leave the balance of 1973 welfare appropriations as emergency business for the regular session next year.

AG OPINIONS — A $1 special fee is applicable to all delinquent tax receipts and certificates issued by county tax assessor-collectors for special districts and should be included in a 'state cost' item on forms furnished by the comptroller, Atty. Gen. Crawford Martin has held.

In other recent opinions, Martin concluded:

* A requirement that portions of tuition fees be placed in a scholarship fund applies to charges for vocational-technical courses at public junior colleges. Up to 10 per cent of the fund may be paid to out-of-state students.

APPOINTMENT — Governor Smith appointed H. Deskins Wells, Wellington newspaper publisher, Interstate Compact Commissioner for the Red River, succeeding William R. Elliott of Sherman.

LEGISLATORS HIT — A former state legislator received a four-year prison sentence for using state stamps to buy a second-hand pickup truck, and four other present or former lawmakers were indicted.

Ex-Rep. Walter Knapp of Amarillo drew the prison sentence. Former Sen. David Ratliff of Stamford and Rep. John Allen of Longview were indicted in a scheme to hire each other's children as legislative aides without requiring them to work. Rep. Tom Holmes of Granbury faced indictment for allegedly using House of Representatives-issued postage stamps to pay most of the price of a pickup truck. Former Rep. Hudson Moyer of Amarillo faces accusation of using House postage stamps to pay off a $6,000 bank loan.

Travis County District Attorney Robert O. Smith, who prosecuted former House Speaker Gus Mutscher, handled all the investigations and vowed to crack down on any legislator who gets out of

Two Minutes With the Bible

Paul's Three "I Ams"

Three times in Rom. 1:14-16, the Apostle Paul uses the phrase "I am," and each one carries an important message for every true believer in Christ.

First, he says in verse 14: "I am debtor"—debtor to all men to tell them about the saving work of Christ. But why was he indebted to people he had never even seen? For several reasons:

First, he had in his hand what they needed to be saved from the penalty and power of sin. If I see a drunkard lying across the railroad track and I do nothing about it, am I not a murderer if he is killed? If I see a man drowning and I have a life buoy in my hand but do not throw it to him, am I not a murderer if he goes down for the last time? If I see millions of lost souls about me and, knowing the message of salvation, do not tell them, am I not guilty if they die without Christ?

Further, Paul felt himself a debtor to others, because the Christ who had died for his sins had also died for the sins of others. As he says in II Cor. 5:14,15: "Christ died for all, that they which live should not henceforth live unto themselves but unto Him who died for them and rose again."

Finally, the Christ who had died for Paul's sins, had commissioned him to tell others of His saving grace. Thus he says in I Cor. 9:16,17:

"Woe is me if I preach not the gospel! For... a dispensation of the gospel is committed unto me."

Paul could say further what every true believer should be able to say: Not "But," but "So, as much as in me is I am ready," (Rom. 1:15). He was ready to discharge his debt because he had that with which to discharge it—the wonderful "gospel of the grace of God." And he did indeed make this message known to others with all that was in him.

And now the third "I am." "I am debtor." 2. "So... I am ready." 3. "For I am not ashamed of the gospel of Christ, for it is the power of God unto salvation to every one that believeth... (ver. 16). Paul was always proud to own Christ as the mighty Savior from sin. Do you know Christ as your Savior? Are you telling others about Him?

Some men give up their designs when they have almost reached the goal; while others, on the contrary, obtain a victory by exerting, at the last moment, more vigorous efforts than before.—Polybius.

'Wilderness' Meaning Changing

"The term 'wilderness' has always been applied to those areas of the world that are virtually untouched, areas where great stands of forest cover the landscape, where animals and birds can thrive in relative safety from man. Now, however, the term is rapidly taking on a new meaning in its application to the decaying cities that seem to present us with insurmountable problems. Wilderness, where no creature can feel safe, where lurks danger in every shadow. What irony, that where once could be found culture, refinement—all the 'good things' of life is now found decay, violence and despair. No one seems to have an answer."—Pulaski, N. Y., Democrat.

THE INFORMED CONSUMER

BY CRAWFORD C. MARTIN
Attorney General of Texas

Recreational land promotions always increase during the spring as companies selling lake lots, wilderness lots, and speculative land investments begin to advertise. Direct mail promotions for local developments encourage personal visits by the whole family by offering "discounts" off the "regular" price of the lots. Some companies conduct contests while others speak of the investment potential inherent in land—particularly their land.

If you are considering the purchase of a lake lot or a small tract of land as an investment, then you should be cautious. The following guidelines are worth reading before you sign the contract:

1. Make a personal visit to the property to see for yourself the overall condition of the land, access roads, improvements and the specific plot you will be purchasing. Every year thousands of people purchase land they have never seen and are often disappointed when they later visit the land development.

2. Ask the salesman for a copy of the property report which many land developers are required to file with the Office of Interstate Land Sales Registration, U. S. Department of Housing and Urban Development, Washington, D. C. 20411. This report will furnish information regarding the existence of liens on the property, availability of recreational facilities, availability of water service and utilities, the type of title the buyer will receive and the distances to nearby communities over paved or unpaved roads.

3. Determine a fair price for the land on the basis of land near the development rather than accepting at face value the salesman's claims of rapid appreciation of land values in the area. Don't fall for the "free lot" sales pitch or its companion the "discount check." These pitches are merely designed to encourage people to purchase a lot on their first visit to the development. Land developers are going to make a profit on the sale of their lots. If the development advertises a country club, golf course, boat water district or other improvements which would enhance the value of the land, check the status of these items to determine whether or not they are at the "planning stage."

In summary, the most important first step you should take before purchasing land would be to make a personal visit to the property to see for yourself what you are buying. But just as important would be to ask the right questions regarding the availability of the items necessary to insure enjoyment of the property. Good quality drinking water available at an economical price, electric power cannot be obtained at a reasonable cost, the progress of the development be very slow. Think about problems before signing up for a lot in Rainbow City.

SCABIES PROGRAM SAID "HERE TO STAY"

U. S. Department of Agriculture and Texas Animal Health Commission representatives outlined for West Texas ranchers what could be expected in the cattle scabies eradication program at a meeting held Friday, May 19, in Amarillo.

According to the Amarillo Globe News farm and ranch editor, Fred Wortham, Jr., "regardless of the inconvenience and the monetary losses suffered by the cattle industry of the Texas Panhandle, a cattle scabies eradication program is here to stay—at least in the foreseeable future."

Inspectors over the West Texas area are due to go to Amarillo this month to take a short course in dipping and the chemicals to be used. Mike Rasberry, local inspector, is scheduled to be among the group to attend the school.

Following is the article that appeared in the Amarillo paper:

"Both an Undersecretary of Agriculture from Washington and a Texas Animal Health Commission representative told a gathering of farmers and ranchers here Friday morning that no letup—even a tighter regulation—is expected by late June or early July.

"Dr. B. L. Young, a veterinarian with the TAHC, told more than 100 agriculture representatives at a meeting here that the state will stiffen its regulations on cattle scabies shipments to include dipping prior to shipment, except in cases now excluded in an inspection quarantine.

"After the new regulation goes into effect, an inspection certificate will not be sufficient for removal permit, except in certain cases, he said.

The exceptions almost conform to exceptions provided in the current quarantine requiring inspection of all cattle set for movement.

"J. Phil Campbell, Jr., the undersecretary, told the assembled farmers, ranchers, veterinarians, and representatives of a large number of farmer-rancher organizations that the federal government is involved in the anti-scabies program at present only through provision of financial assistance and personnel.

"We are concerned in that the regulations are set and the states are responsible for carrying out the regulations and enforcing them. If the states don't, then I feel sure the government will step in," Campbell said.

"U. S. Rep. Bob Price of Pampa, who accompanied the undersecretary on the visit to Price's home district, asked for a request of that nature in writing in time for the USDA official to carry it back to Washington when he returns."

Four Cases of Screwworms
Reported in Area

(Editor's note: Since the recent outbreak of screwworm cases in this part of the Texas has created much concern for stockmen, the News is reprinting an article by Joe Brown which appeared in the Friday, May 26, issue of the Wichita Falls Times.)

Four cases of screwworms have been reported in North Texas this week, according to Dr. James Novy, USDA veterinarian in charge of field services for the Screwworm Eradication Program at Mission, Texas.

Screwworms were confirmed in baby calves in Wilbarger, Young and Jack Counties and in a cancer-eyed cow in Knox County.

Texas cattlemen have been bothered by this pest for nearly the past decade here in North Texas, but the screwworm fly appears to be on the comeback trail. Last week, 780 cases were reported in Texas, and this week's confirmed cases has already passed that number, said Novy.

The outbreak of screwworm fly is attributed to nature. The moisture conditions in the Southwest and Mexico have been conducive to rapid reproduction of the fly. And the torrential South Texas rains have prevented planes from dropping sterile male screwworm flies into infested areas.

Normally, when a case of screwworms is found in a county, the Screwworm Eradication center will fly in hundreds of thousands of sterile male flies to drop on the area around the outbreak.

Since the female screwworm fly mates only once in her lifetime, the chain is broken if it is with a sterile male.

But due to the large number of cases now in Texas, Dr. Novy said it would probably be Tuesday before a plane could be sent to North Texas. Once here, it will drop about 200,000 to 300,000 male flies on each of the outbreak areas in Wilbarger, Young, Jack and Knox Counties.

But some ranchers and agriculture officials think it is already too late. "We are just going to have to live with them until the winter freezes them back down into Mexico," said one official.

Then let's hope they will cooperate with Mexico and push the barrier zone they have been flying deep down into that country and try and prevent this ever happening again.

Agricultural officials have speculated that by the year's end, there could be more screwworm cases than ever before since the eradication program began in 1962 to rid farmers and ranchers of the pest which is deadly to young animals.

State Rep. Dan Kubiak of Rockdale, a member of the House Agriculture Committee, has asked the Texas Congressional delegation to secure additional federal funds for sterile fly production at the Mission, Texas, facilities.

Farmers Union president Jay Naman of Waco blamed the complacency caused by the success in the screwworm eradication program, saying, "The cutback in sterile fly production at the Mission facilities due to reduced appropriations is a classic example."

Naman and others have predicted that the situation of increased screwworm infestations will not improve from now until freezing weather.

Experience is the name everyone gives to his mistakes.

This Is "Equality of Sacrifice?"

The preferential treatment that Congress accorded a minute number of wage earners—at the demands of organized labor—could seriously jeopardize efforts to stabilize the economy, the Chamber of Commerce of the United States asserts.

Congress, in extending authority to continue wage-price controls until 1973, directed the President to issue wage guidelines and standards which "shall be generally fair and equitable."

At the same time, the lawmakers looped the requirement by legislating that retroactive wages be paid to certain union members and government workers whose scheduled increases were stopped during the 90-day freeze.

Such special favors follow the Pay Board's action by announcing wage guidelines one day and then granting pay boosts to union members that far exceed the stated guidelines, the national Chamber points out.

There is little wonder that economic controls are being viewed as applicable only to nonunion workers in the private sector, who constitute by far the greatest number of the work force. These unorganized workers are being asked to comply with a limit on any wage increases they might receive, while organized labor demands—and gets—another set of rules and guidelines with far more liberal terms.

The federal government, in acquiescing to labor's demands, can destroy public belief that our national leaders are serious in their intent to bring inflation under control.

It's time that the future of all workers—indeed, the public's faith in the fairness of our system of government—take precedence over the wishes of organized labor, the National Chamber declares.

Folklore of Texas in Velox Ward Collection at Amon Carter Museum

(Editor's note: The following article appeared in the Sunday, May 28, issue of The Dallas Morning News. The subject of the story is a former Foard County resident and is a brother of Joe Ward of Winfield, Texas, another long-time Crowell resident. The article, written by Janet Kutner, art critic, was handed to the News by George Self of Crowell.)

Fort Worth—The Velox Ward exhibition at the Amon Carter Museum of Western Art here—a show of 75 naive paintings by the 71-year-old Texan—presents a form of folk art relevant to a phase of Texas history and reality that is passing away.

The first appeal of this retrospective is on the level of nostalgia, but the more lasting effects come from a meticulous craftsmanship in painting, a special sense of what to select (from memory and from every day surroundings), how to arrange it for the best compositional effects and, best of all, a talent for directly confronting both the sophisticated and the inexperienced viewer simultaneously with a set of images that challenges yet at the same time comforts him.

Ward's painting accomplish strange perspectives, combinations of assorted human and animal figures, and startlingly real aspects of life, yet in no way do they become disturbing. The warmth of East Texas country life is at the heart of this work and it shines through in conventional and unexpected ways as we view the work over the last decade, the only period during which Ward has painted.

One can enjoy Ward's paintings from a distance but at close range the intricacy of his approach to meadows and hills of grass, the weathered siding of country houses, the feathers of chickens, the patchwork of old quilts seen through open windows, the foot tracks across the snow during a meat smoking scene, the bricks and brightly colored patches of flowers, all are more significant. The stiffly erect, often frontal, posture of his figures, the patient treatment of all aspects of even large paintings in small scale detail, are also important.

Ward's love for the Texas country environment is obvious in these paintings, as if the care he takes with each one. A clean, crisp quality characterizes each work, lending a tidiness to the paintings which demands that we stand back and regard them with objectivity even while becoming involved in the warmth of emotional overtures.

The Carter Museum show begins with Ward's 1961 paintings and proceeds to the present. The intellectual approach would like to distinguish at great length between relatively unsophisticated and more determined approaches. Yet whether he works from cut-outs (a number are included in the show and illustrate his mock-up approach to organization) or sketches or purely from memory onto canvas, Ward's work is relatively unchanged over the years.

Having worked at everything from plumber, farmer, preacher, wrestler, to shoe and furniture repairman prior to beginning his paintings, Ward continues to explore his oil media and his subjects at length but somehow retains the same split freshness that gives character and charm to his work.

Now and then, a hint of a surrealistic overtone (Ward's "Home-stead") creeps in but in general the work is of the simplest and most direct in style and image. Subjects at random suggest the breadth within narrow sociological limits: "Wash Day," "Ginning," "Dinner on the Ground," "New Girl in Town," "How High Is Aunt Fanny's Porch," "The Few Faithful" and, most recently, "The Ice House."

If any single quality characterizes Ward's art beyond the naive style and the meticulous technical execution, it would be his stiffly formal approach to the casual aspects of life. Beyond that, the undercurrent of humor (the "Reading Room" painting with the Sears Roebuck catalogue hanging at the out-house door) is one of the strongest elements. In the 1967 "Just Married" painting of a young couple with hard ageless faces, Ward catches, as he often does, through austere quality the Texas land has given to these people. The solitude and the lonely posture of figures, whether in groups or not, are other aspects portrayed with great consistency. The closeness of spirit between human and animal are underlying subtleties in his work. By reducing all to small scale, he renders them relatively equal.

One of the high points of this exhibition, organized by the Carter Museum with the cooperation of Donald and Margaret Vogel of Valley House Gallery in Dallas, is Margaret Vogel's catalogue text describing Ward's life and art. Her sensitivity to Ward is considerable, from her understanding of his humor to her appreciation for his inventions of mechanical devices "to make his painting hours more comfortable and to 'speed up' the painting process."

Her documentation of his East Texas farming background ends with mention of his search for a way to decrease the time it takes him to complete a painting (from around three weeks to three months) "so that he can unfold more of his happy memories in each year's span."

In sum, the Ward show is easily enjoyable at all levels, and does present us with a segment of the folk art of our region as it creates its recall of a country life that may soon exist only in such documentation.

Armadillo Improving Its Public Image

The humble armadillo has made great strides toward public acceptance in the past few years.

Adopted by various cults as a sort of hard-shelled mascot, the nine-banded armadillo seems to embody a "back to the earth" philosophy championed by many Americans — particularly the young.

Armadillos are quiet, docile, clean and ecologically non-destructive. That is, unless the ecology of your garden or flowerbed attracts the armadillo in his nocturnal foraging.

—Page 4— Foard County News Crowell, Texas, June 1, 1972

However, Texas Parks and Wildlife Department officials say that even in this age of armadillo awareness some quail hunters still shoot armadillos on sight because they believe they eat quail eggs.

This is not so, say biologists who have examined the contents of hundreds of armadillo stomachs. The 'dillos live almost entirely on insects.

Advertising . . .

"Advertising reduces selling time in any type of store. The potential buyer of an advertised product is always sold when he enters a store; he knows what he wants and where he can get it. In fact, when man-hours saved are converted to dollars, newspaper advertising is practically free as compared to the cost of personal selling. No wonder the consumer expects to find the best prices in stores that advertise. The stores which cut costs through advertising are able to pass the savings from modern selling methods on to their customers."—Three Forks, Mont., Herald.

Miss Kathy Gibson Becomes Bride of Kinne Mike Callaway

Marriage vows were exchanged by Miss Kathy Gibson and Kinne Mike Callaway, both of Amarillo, at 8 p. m. Saturday, May 20, at the Trinity Baptist Church Chapel in Amarillo. Rev. John Staat of Hidden Falls Ranch, Wayside, Texas, officiated for the double ring ceremony.

The bride is the daughter of Mrs. Warren Gibson of Amarillo and the late Mr. Gibson. The groom's parents are Mr. and Mrs. Dan Callaway of Snyder, former residents of Crowell. The groom is a native of Crowell and a grandson of Claude Callaway of this place.

The nuptial scene was decorated with candelabra holding white tapers and greenery, bouquets of white gladioli and mums, and aisle candles with greenery.

The musical program consisted of Twelfth of Never, Wedding Benediction and Wedding Prayer. Organist was Mrs. Roger Davis and soloist was Mrs. John Gibson, sister-in-law of the bride.

Given in marriage by her nephew, Gary Florence, the bride was attired in an empire style, long white wedding dress with the bodice and full sleeves overlaid in beaded lace, and the skirt edged in matching lace. The dress was made of miramist and satin. The chapel length veil of illusion was also edged with lace, and attached to a headband of flowers. The bride's dress was made by her mother.

She carried a nosegay of white daisies and baby's breath.

Miss Karen Florence, niece of the bride, of Amarillo was maid of honor. She was attired in an empire, full length dress of apple green miramist. Her matching headpiece was of daisies and she carried a nosegay of yellow daisies and baby's breath.

Flower girl was Miss Jana Callaway of Amarillo and she wore a dress identical to that of the maid of honor.

Bridesmaid was Miss Jana Wheeler of Amarillo and bridesmatron was Mrs. Gary Mooring, also of Amarillo. Their dresses matched that of the maid of honor.

or. Candle lighter was Miss Deanne Callaway of Amarillo.

Best man was Duncan Gibbs of Austin and ushers and groomsmen were Kyle Sunderman of Canyon, Gary Mooring, Jerry Vaclav and Kirby Callaway of Amarillo.

The mother of the bride chose a blue knit dress with blue knit embroidered coat, blue accessories and she carried a white daisy mum corsage. The groom's mother was attired in a pink knit dress with white accessories and she also wore a white daisy mum corsage.

The fellowship hall of the church provided the setting for the reception. The serving table was laid with a white cloth and silver candelabra and silver punch bowl were used. Yellow daisies accented the reception table, where a 3-tiered white-topped cake decorated with live yellow daisies and green ferns was served by Mrs. Bax Callaway, sister-in-law of the groom, and Mrs. Ted Bork, his sister. Serving punch were Mrs. Gloria Florence and Miss Sandra Gibson, the bride's sister.

Miss Becky Gibbs presided at the register. For traveling, the bride chose a white knit empire dress with navy blue trim and white accessories. Following a wedding trip to Colorado, the newlyweds are at home at 919 Crockett, Amarillo. Mrs. Callaway is a 1972 honor graduate of West Texas State University and the groom is a student at Amarillo College. He will attend Texas Tech University at Lubbock in the fall.

Out of town guests present for the wedding were from Wayside, Canyon, Snyder and Plainview, Texas and Coos Bay, Oregon.

How About This Suggestion?

"Instead of taking the guns away from law-abiding citizens, we have a better suggestion to insure safety in the streets. Let Congress pass a law making it mandatory for every citizen to own and carry arms, wherever he goes. The armed criminal is bravest when he knows his victims are not armed; he is very cautious when he knows his victim will shoot back . . . or very likely shoot first."—Lakeview, Ore., Examiner.

Texas Wheat Hires Foods, Nutrition Consultant

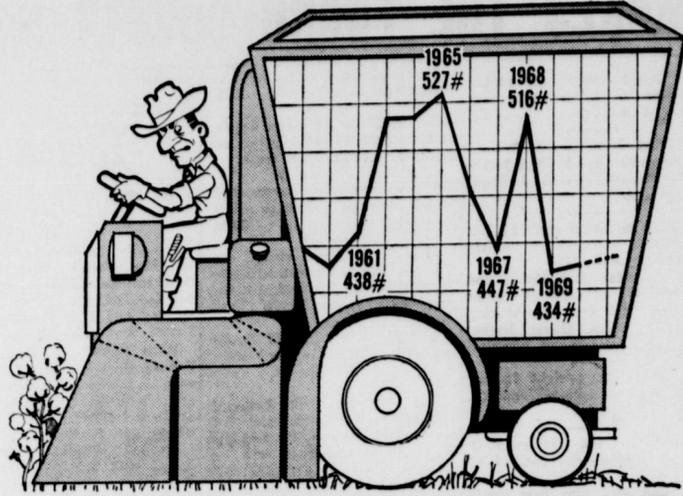

Miss Mary Ellen Dambold, past chief administrative dietitian and director of dietetic internship at the Baylor University Medical Center in Dallas, has been named staff-consultant in wheat foods and nutrition by the Texas Wheat Producers board, headquartered in Amarillo, according to Bill Nelson, executive vice president. Miss Dambold will immediately spend several days in Chicago in the offices and laboratories of the National Wheat Institute in order to become familiar with wheat foods education and promotion programs that are underway on a national scale and materials used in them, according to Nelson. NWI is the educational arm of the Millers National Federation and directs such programs as the "Day of Bread" and "National Sandwich Month," both designed to increase the awareness of and increased use of wheat foods in the diet.

In announcing the creation of the Wheat Foods and Nutrition staff-consultant a few weeks ago, Ken Kendrick, chairman of the Texas Wheat Board, pointed out that 518.5 million bushels of wheat were used for food in the United States during the past marketing year—more than twice that for any other purpose. He also said that wheat producers are concerned that the per capita consumption of wheat and wheat products are continuing to decline, resulting in market losses and lower prices to the producer. The aim of this new wheat foods and nutrition program in Texas is to slow down the rate of decline in per capita consumption of wheat, and to hopefully reverse the trend, resulting in increased markets and prices for the producers of wheat.

Nelson said that in addition to initiating the public-oriented programs such as the "Day of Bread" and "National Sandwich Month" in Texas, it is expected that Miss Dambold will establish liaison with organizations serving hospitals, restaurants, school lunch and other mass-feeding institutions where much of the recent decline in the use of wheat products has occurred.

The Texas Wheat Producers Board is supported by individual wheat producers in Texas by a five-mile per bushel self-assessment on wheat producers and delivered into the commercial trade channels. Other board programs include feed wheat market development, transportation service, export market development, and wheat insect control demonstrations. These activities are entering their second year of operation in Texas.

COTTON YIELDS DECLINING—Cotton yields have been declining just when cotton is showing a resurgence in the market. This has prompted a Beltwide campaign, spearheaded by the U. S. Department of Agriculture, National Cotton Council, and state Extension services, to obtain "Better Yields of Quality Cotton for Profit and Market Growth." Crops have been below normal for four out of the past five seasons. Across the Cotton Belt, yield per acre averaged 438 pounds in 1961. It rose to a record 527 pounds in 1965 but by 1971 was back down to 438 pounds, the same as 1961.

West Side H. D. Club

The West Side Home Demonstration Club met May 23 in the home of Mrs. Oscar Gentry. President, Mrs. George Riethmayer, called the meeting to order and Mrs. Homer Ketchersid led the group in prayer.

Mrs. A. G. Pechacek gave a book review of "I've Only Got Two Hands, and I Am Busy Wringing Them," by Jane Goodsell. The good humor of the book was enjoyed by the listeners who found themselves relating to the situations described therein. Refreshments were served to the members and 3 visitors, Mmes. Pechacek, Melvin Westover and Peggy Meads. The club is dismissed for summer vacation and will meet again in September.

Speed Isn't Everything

"Speed isn't everything in an accident, but so many times speed is the difference between death and an injury, between a wrecked car and a banged fender, between a smash-up and a near miss. Speed multiplies everything bad about an accident . . . People have to want to slow down; or they won't. They have to want to live, and they have to want to let their fellow drivers live. They have to want this more than they want to be in a hurry. It's as simple, and as vastly complicated, as all that."—Anamosa, Iowa, Eureka.

The Screw Tightens

The index of prices received by farmers declined 5 points or 2 per cent to 265 of its 1910-14 average. It was also 19 points or 7 per cent below a year earlier. Meanwhile, the index of prices paid by farmers continued up, advancing one point to 396—a record high. It was 18 points or 5 per cent above a year ago, according to the USDA.

30 Years Ago—Midway Was the Turning Point in the Pacific War

This was Midway and there was no question about it—Bob Daniels of the doomed carrier Yorktown was going to drown. With his sheath knife, he had been cutting pieces off his kapok life preserver as it became waterlogged, and now there was almost none left. Suddenly he couldn't believe his eyes—floating directly toward him was a bright orange "Mae West" preserver, fully inflated. He grabbed it and put it on. It kept him afloat until he was picked up by a destroyer hours later. Today you may see this same oil-blackened Mae West at The Admiral Nimitz Center in Fredericksburg, where it is the "exhibit of the month."

The Battle of Midway, June 5-7, 1942, was only six months after Pearl Harbor. The Japanese had assembled the greatest naval force in their history to capture the tiny island and wipe out the remaining ships in the U. S. Fleet. Included in the 200 Japanese vessels were 11 battleships, 8 carriers, 22 cruisers, 65 destroyers, and more than 700 aircraft.

But the thing Admiral Yamamoto didn't know was that the Americans in several widely separated places were intercepting and decoding the Japanese radio messages. Admiral Chester Nimitz, Commander-in-Chief of the Pacific, and his staff weren't sure where the strike was to take place. In his bones, the Admiral felt it would be Midway, but others argued that the "AR" referred to in the messages could be Hawaii. To settle this important point, it was arranged for Midway to send a message "in the clear"—unencoded—saying that their evaporators had broken down and that a critical water shortage was developing. Not too many hours later, a Japanese message was picked up saying that "AR" was having a water problem—so Midway it would be!

With most of his Pacific fleet in the mud of Pearl Harbor, Nimitz was hard-pressed. But he was able to send the carriers Yorktown, Enterprise and Hornet, and about a dozen cruisers and 30 destroyers to Midway. By superhuman effort, the workers at Pearl Harbor had patched the battle-damaged carrier Yorktown in three days and sent her on her way to the rendezvous point and subsequently her death. There were many tales of heroism at Midway, and some hard-to-lay-down books have been written about the battle. But none is brighter than the sacrifice made by the Navy airmen such as Texas' Ensign George Gay. His Torpedo Squadron 8, from the Enterprise, flew to their deaths in a low-level torpedo attack on the Japanese carriers. Their attack kept the carriers zig-zagging and unable to launch aircraft. The Japanese fighter planes were down at sea level trying to stop the torpedo bombers so the American dive bombers were almost unopposed as they made their screaming dives from high levels, sinking three large carriers in about a three minutes, and a fourth soon after and breaking the backbone of the Japanese fleet, a blow from which they never recovered. This was only six months after their attack on Pearl Harbor, and was the turning point in the war.

Modest Admiral Nimitz refused to write his own story because he said to do so, he'd have to brag and criticize the decisions of others, and he had no intention of doing either. But his memory will be kept alive at the Admiral Nimitz Center, a state museum now in the advanced planning stages in his birthplace, Fredericksburg. When it's finished, its unique exhibits will encourage today's children to learn of patriotism and sacrifice by walking a history trail which will take them "island hopping" across the Pacific, from Pearl Harbor to Midway to Japan. They'll be able to see relics from the beaches and battlefields, and hear the recorded voice of George Gay—the only man who survived Torpedo Squadron 8's last run. Douglass Hubbard, executive director of the center, has found one of five dive bombers left of the type used at Midway, and he hopes to find an angel who will purchase it for an exhibit at the center.

Although actual construction hasn't begun, the museum is open daily with no admission charge. A number of interesting things may be seen, including some big guns, a Japanese tank, the conning tower from the U. S. submarine which sank the largest Japanese merchantman in the Pacific; and Bob Daniel's Mae West.

SIX FLAGS BREATHTAKER—The Big Bend, added to the lineup of rides at SIX FLAGS Over Texas late last season, will be new to most 1972 visitors. The huge ride carries passengers over more than a half mile of curving, spiraling track at speeds up to 50 mph. The ride, introduced to this country by Six Flags, is the fastest entertainment ride in the nation.

A TOTAL "NEW LOOK" IN STORE FOR SIX FLAGS VISITORS IN '72

Arlington, Texas—Brilliant new color schemes, subtle design changes and exciting new situations have given SIX FLAGS Over Texas a new "face" for the 1972 season.

The changes are evident from the moment a guest walks into the Park's entrance mall. There, in the center of a circular pool, sits a new, $25,000 fountain.

In the popular SIX FLAGS Petting Zoo, major changes have been made. A rock-lined lagoon now borders the area where visitors can pet small animals. In the waters of the lagoon are dozens of Imperial Koi carp which will actually eat from the hands of guests.

And, nearby is a new ride, the Rugged Buggy, designed specially for younger visitors who can hop into their own beach buggy or swamp buggy for a gentle ride.

In the Texas section of the big theme park visitors will find the largest, detailed historical map ever made. The huge map of Texas stands more than fourteen feet tall. The SIX FLAGS Dolphin Show provides more fun than ever. A comical sea lion and a talented macaw have joined the two dolphins in the 1972 show.

In the Southern Palace Music Hall, a fast-moving production called, "Gotta Sing! Gotta Dance!" features a cast of sixteen entertainers from the nation's college campuses backed by a fourteen-piece pit orchestra.

And, in the Puppet Theatre, Sid and Marty Krofft are presenting "Folies," a colorful show new to the SIX FLAGS audiences.

In every corner of the family entertainment center there is a "new look" created during the winter months by Ted Friesen, an environmental artist.

Friesen, the designer of numerous settings for television productions, calls the SIX FLAGS layout "the biggest mural I've ever done."

Familiar buildings and rides have taken on a new appearance. The changes are particularly noticeable in the USA section where the ruler-straight lines of buildings have been erased by a facade of lattice-work and graceful arches.

The Lost Parents Caboose, where youngsters separated from their parents await a happy reunion, has been transformed from a dull, green railway car to a bright red and gold unit from a circus train.

The antique Carousel, once primarily white, has been embellished with glowing hues of red, orange and yellow.

Lines of green accent the Old-South architecture of the Southern Palace Music Hall. The color extends inside with richly-flocked wall covering and a new, green carpet.

In addition to the changes in color and design, many of the young hosts and hostesses who give SIX FLAGS its personality are sporting strikingly different costumes.

For 1972, the statement, "here's something new at SIX FLAGS," doesn't begin to tell the story.
