ALONG THE SANTA FE.

perity, thousands of Shorthorns should be imported from the "corn belt states" during the next five years. The land is yours; go down and possess it.

West of this second strip lies a long stretch of purely pastoral lands. With the exception of a few irrigated valleys, the wide domain of the agriculturist. It is usually broken and oftentimes mountainous. Fifteen years ago it was almost a waterless waste, but windmills, engines and pumps have settled the water question. Large pastures abound. Fifty thousand acres under individual ownership is ordinary. One hundred thousand acres is not unusual. At one time the state of Texas (the "Capital Syndicate") has nearly 3,000,000 acres of land, while at another a woman has 1,000,000 acres under fence.

This is the great cattle breeding section of the continent. I draw a distinction between cattle breeding and cattle growing, or between the production of cattle and their subsequent development. The former is the main industry that will in Texas be further apart in the future than they are now.

The steer should leave these pastures at furthest in his yearling form. He should emigrate to the land of twenty-cent corn and grow to beefhood amid more luxuriant grasses. The warm summer sun, the short grass, the independence of prickly pear will sustain cow life and perhaps increase maturity, but the steer should at an early date leave his native range for the feed farms of other sections.

Will the Shorthorn succeed here? The answer is that he has succeeded. The breadth of loins, the spread of ribs and the defiance of the scales in our younger cattle are witnesses of his presence. A cross of his blood may not paint the hair of his progeny, but a glance at the back and hips will always tell the story. He may sometimes grow thin on the scorched ranges, but that width of hip and back remains, and seen even in the hour of his adversity, suggests the glory that will come when he makes the acquaintance of corn and clover. Everywhere he is the standard. Men will sometimes say, cross the Shorthorn with this breed for rustling qualities, or with that for a harder animal, but he always improves the breed with which he is crossed, whether that breed be one whose blood lines adorn the paces of herd books or is simply "the cow with the crumpled horn that tossed the dog that worried the cat."

At the late Texas live-stock convention, a number of men read papers advocating the various beef breeds, but only one did the audience interrupt with cheers. The "grizzled knights of the Southwest ranges" are not prodigal with applause, but they responded with enthusiasm when, in reading his paper, a veteran in the ranks declared: "Breeds may come and breeds may go, but the Shorthorn goes on forever."

The largest land sale recently made culminated this week in the transfer of the U. T. Pasture, from V. Kohler to G. W. Hufstader for a consideration of $450 per acre. The tract transferred consists of 1241 acres situated several miles west of town on the Oakville road, and like all the land of Bee county, is suitable for both agriculture and grazing.—Beville Bee.

NERVOUS DISEASES

Can Be Endured but Can Also Be Cured.

You may have long suffered from various forms of nervous trouble; there are usually many complications whenever the nervous system has become deranged. Excitement almost prostrates you, your spirits are depressed, you have frequent nervous headaches, you suffer from sleeplessness or unrefreshing sleep, you have dizziness or palpitation of the heart, and at all times suffer from that restless, jittery feeling that marks nervous debility.

You can endure all these nervous troubles for years or escape them now and for good. You can choose one condition or the other. The difference is largely due to the presence or lack of iron in the system. A kind of iron you may never get unless you get it from Dr. Harter's Iron Tonic.

It promptly cures all forms of nervous debility or exhaustion. It increases the vigor of all your vital organs. It enriches your blood with just that form of iron needed to build up your nervous system and to give you nerve force and muscular energy.

You should know that Dr. Harter's Iron Tonic is not an experiment, not a new remedy, but one which has been constantly overcoming these conditions for forty-five years. You can believe in a remedy with a record like that. Made only by the Dr. Harter Medicine Co., Dayton, Ohio. Sold every where.

TEXAS BUYS HEREFORDS. The statement of Secretary Thomas, given elsewhere in the Journal of the transfers of registered Hereford cattle for the first five months of the present year places Texas at the head of the list as a buyer of registered cattle.

foreign capital are being invested but the possibilities are so vast that a long time must elapse and much earnest work must be done before the state is placed anywhere near the industrial level on which it should properly stand.

The next meeting of the Texas Farmers' Congress at College Station, July 23 to 26, discussed elsewhere in the Journal by President Council, will be a gathering of up-to-date, progressive, farmers, stockmen, dairymen and horticulturists and every man in the state who is interested in agriculture or livestock should make an earnest effort to be present for the three days' session.

The election of a representative to succeed the late Congressman Burke is a matter of particular interest not only to the people of the sixth congressional district but to the entire state on account of the work to be done toward securing an appropriation for the Trinity river.

Applications for space for livestock exhibits at the International Fair at San Antonio indicate that exhibitors will be on the grounds with sleek Herefords and Shorthorns from all the cattle growing sections of Texas and the Territories.

The twine plant in operation at the Kansas penitentiary, it is claimed, has saved $300,000 to the farmers of that state during the past year. In Texas convict labor by competition cuts down the amount of cash that goes into the pockets of the farmers.

The Americans have won pretty nearly everything from the Britishers but it is generally admitted that in a military sprinting match Uncle Sam's only hope to win over Tommy Atkins would be to enter Aguinaldo.

Wise county has been shipping chickens to the New York market. The whole country is rapidly learning that whenever anything good is wanted Texas is the place to look for it.

Hon. Elijah Dowie of Chicago has decided to annihilate the trusts. It is presumed that he will give them the absent treatment.

Her Last Word. BY HESTER GREY.

Queries intended for this department should be addressed to HESTER GREY, care of the Journal.

UP-TO-DATE. Minister: "Will thou now take this fine stone from me?" This carriage, these diamonds, to be the husband of thy choice, fast locked in the bond of Hymen?

WINNIE, Hamilton, Tex.—It is not necessary to remove your gloves when shaking hands if it is necessary to be perpetually shaking hands.

ROSE, Richmond, Tex.—Admiral Dewey's first wife was Miss Susie Goodwin, a daughter of the war governor of New Hampshire. Mrs. Dewey died five years after her marriage, leaving one son, George.

MOSQUITO, Plano, Tex.—There are numerous lotions prepared for keeping off mosquitoes and for counteracting the effect of their bites. Such mixtures you can get at any drug store.

JET, Cameron, Tex.—A year is the given length of time for wearing mourning for a brother or sister; two years for a parent. A widower sometimes wears mourning for three years, unless it happens to displease the second choice of his heart.

DEACONESS, Smithville, Tex.—So many different kinds of church socials and church entertainments have been held that it is difficult to suggest anything new in that line.

THE LADIES' AID is in need of cash. But we desire to do nothing rash. So a shoe social will be held. Our plan for this we now unfold; Just take the number of your shoe And simply multiply by two; If you wear a shoe that's number four, Eight cents will let you through the door.

A GAME OF PROVERBS. "If a person be passionate and give you ill-language, rather ply him than be moved to anger, for pity is due to weakness—mental, moral and physical."

"Teach me to love and to forgive; not passionate love, but love strong, sure and helpful, and forgiveness full and free."

"Let us each make the best use of our natural abilities, but do not rest here; cultivate industriously those which are not natural."

"Live and die is all we have to do." Therefore, live to the advantage of your fellow mortals, for pity is due to your own advantage.

"I've well 'twere done quickly. When you've decided that it's time to go, 'sit not upon the order of my going,' but go—and don't prolong the operation."

"Don't wait until after you've gotten to your feet to knit up the loose ends of the conversation and give the finishing touches. You are subjecting your hostess to an undesired ordeal. Standing and waiting are a strain even to the most robust."

"The shot-out-of-a-cannon mode of exit is also an phenomenon of diffidence. It has a 'do or die' effect that savors of the burlesque."

"But if the caller will direct her tact and judgment towards this end, she can taper off her visit in such a way that her adieux may be easily both short and graceful, and the hostess be made glad one once, and that not when the front door closes on the guest."

THE HOUSEHOLD

THE DAY THAT DEACON SMITH WAS ADMITTED TO THE BAR.

We ain't had no such throbbin' of municipal delight since th' day that Joneses bulldozed lost its fust Skilkeny fight; why, by gum, th' deacon's blamed country's heard the news from near an' far 'th' circumstance admittin' Deacon Smithers to th' bar.

Deacon Smithers an' th' widdler of our late lamented Brown— (Him that's got a namesake livin' in most everybody's town). He's been courtin' th' quiet, she's been courtin' th' noise, says Smithers— An' they ain't no one in Rhodestown ever knowed th' reason why.

Wall, th' deacon 'lowed he'd call on her last Sunday afternoon An' enjoy a small sliesta an' perhaps a righteous tumb.

With th' widdler at th' organ, an' th' angels in th' air, An' a deacon's aspiratin' pervadin' ozone everywhere.

So th' deacon called and found her with a Bible in her hand, Huntin' up th' cut-rate figures to th' dim put Promised Land.

"Howdy, Mrs. Brown," says Smithers— "Howdy, deacon," she replies, An' a sort o' queer flirtation sparkles in th' widdler's eyes.

"Purty day," remarks th' deacon; "Reckon so," says Mrs. Brown; "Like to see you in th' mornin', Bingses folks'll come t' town—"

"Like as not," agrees th' widdler; but they ain't no hope in th' air.

It's a map whose palpitatin' heart's de-generatin' fast.

So th' deacon kinder fiddles an' th' widdler kinder hums, An' they both sets there an' twiddles with their right hands thum.

When th' deacon somehow clears his throat an' manages t' say, How he sets a heap o' store by her, an' would she name th' day?

Well, by jumptin' spruce! They say th' widdler blushed from her chair. Like spontaneous combustion had been huntin' fr' fair.

An' she swore by th' holy that th' deacon had said sh'.

An' she sassed him till he doubled in a parabolic curve.

Fr' you see, she'd read as how th' proper way t' court a man is t' be as unconcerned about th' matter as you can.

An' she worked the unconcernedness into th' deacon's view.

That he'd swap his aspiratin' for a dark an' gloomy shroud!

But he didn't. He jest wandered down t' Perkins's drinkin' place.

An' began t' elevate th' drinkin' traffic t' his face.

An' he drank th' pizen straight an' passed his glass an' called fr' more.

Till he could no longer navigate th' distance to th' door.

You can talk about your earthquakes, your eclipses an' th' like, An' th' paralyzin' viruses o' th' auto-cy-clo-bike.

But of all them swell occasions, th' occasion is th' star—

Th' day that Deacon Smithers was admitted to th' bar. —Exchange.

new stationery, consists of an old English E. In the top portion of the E the crown is worked in, and in the lower part are the Roman figures VII. The E is silver in color, with a black line outside, and both the crown and the figure VII are in black. "Windsor Castle" is stamped in black at the head of the paper. King Edward's favorite paper was hand-made azure laid, post size, with a slight black border. Queen Alexandra, up to the present, has not selected her official monogram. The late queen's choice in note paper, by the way, was silver gray.

PAUL REVERE AN INVENTOR.
Paul Revere, the Revolutionary hero, was an inventor, though not many people are aware of the fact. He was the first man to refine and roll copper. In 1801 he founded the Revere Copper company and the concern is still running, under the same name, in Canton, Mass.

LOST A GOOD LAKE.
Inhabitants of the Tyrol have lost a lake. The village watchman is positive that when he passed the banks of the lake the night before the remarkable discovery it was in its usual condition. The fact, however, remains that in the morning nothing but the bed of the lake was left to show that it ever existed.

ANIMALS THAT BLOOM.
Anemones, sponges, the sea-cucumber and certain other growths which bloom and apparently behave in all respects like plants in the water for a month or more. The petals of the anemone, resembling those of a chrysanthemum, are really tentacles to catch food and put into the hollow tube which forms the stomach, where it is digested. The sea-cucumber has a flattened body. It occasionally moves at a snail's pace over the mud or sand, digging its petals, or arms, into the sand for food, to obtain which it swallows a fair proportion of mud. It has power to sting and so keep away its enemies.

BLUSHES WHEN RAIN FALLS.
The blushing tree is one of the strange things found in the swamps of Florida. It is found only in the densest thickets of these interminable marshes, whose luxuriant vegetation always proves a revelation to explorers. It is called the blushing tree by those who know it, because it actually blushes or turns a pink color when rain falls upon it. It is a graceful tree, with broad, banana-like leaves. Wide-spreading branches hang down slightly waving in the warm breeze, and it has emerald-hued foliage. It rises to a height of 20 feet, and its thick, substantial trunk indicates many years of existence.

EDWARD'S MONOGRAM.
King Edward has a pretty taste in note paper. The monogram, which appears in the left hand corner of the way to pink. I went up to its trunk under its spread branches to obtain a closer look, and found it to be true, and the tree was blushing from the effects of the rain. In a few minutes the green had faded from sight, except in a few half-hidden spots where the rain had failed to penetrate. After the shower had passed over the spectator watched with equal interest this remarkable tree again gradually assume its familiar green color.

SAFE CHLOROFORM BURGLARS
"Have you ever heard of an anaesthetic safe?" asked a safe and lock expert. "It was invented many years ago, and I came across one in an old house the other day. The idea of the thing was that any cutting or drilling through the outer casing would release certain chemicals which would promptly stupefy everybody in range of their fumes. In the morning the owner would find his valuables there and could simply call a policeman, and back off the unconscious burglars to jail."

OATHS THAT ARE USED BY DIFFERENT NATIONS
An investigation caused by the trouble over the King Edward's oath of accession has developed that in only two other countries does the royal oath of office make any reference to religion. The King of Portugal swears to maintain the Catholic religion and the King of Greece to support the Greek church. The whole subject of oaths is interesting. They presuppose that any man is liable to break his mere words—kings and emperors as well as anybody else. Whether an oath makes the average man more truthful or not is a question. The general opinion seems to be, and always has been, that it does. In Germany, however, oaths have been abolished altogether, and in America, England and Australia anyone objecting to being sworn in court on religious grounds is allowed to affirm. In France no oath is required of members of the national legislature, and it cannot be held that German witnesses, quakers and members of the French chamber of deputies are more unreliable in court than others. A philosopher once said that when the oath ceased to be binding no country could exist for a year.

A MONTH IN A BATH.
At Kawanaka, a tiny spring near Ito, in the province of Joshi, Japan, bathers stay in the water for a month on end, with a stone on their lap to prevent them from floating in their sleep, and the caretaker of this establishment, who is a hale old man of 80, is in the habit of remaining in the bath during the whole winter. Elsewhere, also, indulgence in this natural luxury is carried to almost incredible extremes. Some of the people at one of the Japanese springs, excusing themselves to visitors for being dirty on the score of only having leaviness to bathe twice a day, informed them that it was their custom to bathe four or five times a day in the winter, adding: "The children get into the bath whenever they feel cold."

MAHOMETANS ARE MUCH OPPOSED TO SWEARING. When they do swear it is a solemn ceremony, and is performed by holding the Koran in the right hand, placing the left hand on the forehead and bringing the head down to the book. A Mahometan seldom commits perjury. In India their prejudices against swearing is so strong that the government allows them to affirm.

THE BUDDHIST SWEARS "IN THE PRESENCE OF BUDDHA," and says "If I speak false, or if by coloring the truth others are led astray, then may the three holy existences, Buddha, Dhamma and Pro Sangha, together with the Devotees of the Twenty-two Firmaments, punish me and also my migratory soul." The Hindoo law says "Let the Judge swear by the tip of the finger by his horse or weapons, the merchant by his cattle, grain, gold or other possessions, and the servile man by imprecating curses upon his own head." When the Gentoo of India swears he touches the foot of a Brahmin, and when a Brahmin swears he touches the hand of another of his caste.

IN MEXICO MANY PEOPLE STILL ADHERE TO AN ANCIENT FORM OF OATH. They touch the earth with the tip of the finger and then place the finger on the tongue, which signifies: "If my tongue speaks false, then may I be turned to dust." Until comparatively recently a priest in France simply affirmed "on the word of a priest." The Chinese have a great variety of oaths, many of them curious in form. One is by taking a saucer and breaking it while the clerk says: "You shall tell the truth and the whole truth. The saucer is cracked, and if you do not tell the truth your soul shall be cracked like the saucer." This is a binding oath for the Chinaman believes that his soul can be smashed into fragments. Chinese in this country and England are sometimes sworn by the broken saucer. More effective, however, in the eyes of the Celestials is the joss stick. The joss stick is set alight, and while it burns the Chinese swearer wishes that his soul may be burned like the stick if he gives false evidence. The Chinese swear in many other ways. A solemn oath is made by writing certain sacred characters on a paper and burning it, praying at the same time that he may be burned if he does not speak the truth. Sometimes he swears by burning a piece of straw. But nothing is so terrible as drawing the truth from a Chinaman is getting him to cut off a cock's head. This like the breaking of the saucer, has a religious foundation. The Chinese believe that if their bodies are mutilated on earth their souls will be similarly mutilated in heaven.

THE FANTASIA APPASSIONNATI.
Wilbertine Worden.

She was tall and slender, with an abundance of light brown hair that insisted on curling out around her face in a wavy, yellowish mesh. Her face was delicate, her chin round and pretty and her gray eyes managed to look out somehow with the same expression of childlike wonder and wistfulness that had been their chief charm in the years before she had known New York from the side of a student who, to study, had to give up all that the traditions of her Southern home had given her.

She lived in the third story back bedroom of the usual tall, narrow old brown stone front house that stretches over so many miles of New York. The room was not objectionable in itself. It was quite large enough for her few small possessions, if she would put her tiny gas stove on one end of her trunk and her tea things on the other— for her landlady had kindly allowed her to make tea in her room, and "tea," stretched a little bit meant toast and cocoa and eggs.

She had two broad windows that commanded a fine view of neighboring roofs and tall apartment houses near, and when it rained the swish and trickle of the water dashing down on the tin and glass of roof and skylight were quite cheerful. The room was convenient, too, for practicing her violin without much fear of disturbing anybody. She played, people said, very well. And it seemed to her, when she heard their judgment, that it was such a little way to sum up so great a thing as long years of study and long years of getting along just any way—long years of every kind of denial, in which she had bartered all material delights for this cold, elusive ideal—the Soul of the Wood. Then she would sit down on the edge of her narrow bed and think awhile. At such times Pauline Wharton, tired and discouraged and overwhelmed with a sense of the fullness of it all, had some terrible moments in which it seemed to her that perhaps, after all, she had made a mistake. Because, away back in a city in the South, Pauline Wharton, beautiful, petted, shielded and simply playing the violin because she loved it, had thrown away lightly the opportunity to make a brilliant marriage. And the strange thing was that she had never yet been able to decide whether she loved the man or not. There was something in her that had always wanted to give up to him. The sweetness of it sent her into a golden tangle of dreams, but when he came to her she refused him. And how she did it, or why, she never understood. Thousands of times she went over that last hour between them.

It was the late afternoon of a May day. She was sitting on the piazza when he drove up the old-fashioned, heart-shaped drive that led to the house, and it seemed to her, when he took both her hands in his, with the privilege of an old family friend, that he could see through her in some way, and know that her heart, by some mysterious nature, had turned over within her. He disturbed her. His clear, keen eyes seemed to fathom her fully. In his presence she always felt as if she were a child, holding up its last toy to him. They had sat on the piazza laughing and talking with her mother, and then he said:

"Pauline, you are going to play me my Fantasia. Come." And Pauline rose obediently and entered the house with him. The windows were pleasantly open, and a breeze was blowing the curtains out into the air, and the white strands. The air was sweet with the fragrance of the honeysuckle which grew over one of the windows.

She placed Vieuxtemps Fantasia Appassionata on the music rack and took up her violin, conscious that his eyes were upon her.

"Lord and master, with your permission," she said, and drew her bow across the strings.

"No, I did not mean to command you," he replied, quietly. "I love to hear you play that one thing. It is woven into all my memories of you. Do you know, Pauline, you are rebellious, in spite of your gentleness."

"Well, we will not quarrel," she replied.

She began the long, sweet opening chords with a firm hand, although she felt the blood surge up into her cheeks. The rich notes poured out, on, on—the pleading of the moderate. They were crying, crying for something they could not have. She played through half of the variations, almost like a whisper, and then something happened—the violin was taken out of her hands and she felt his arms about her.

"That is the way I love you," he said. Pauline's memories of what happened were never very clear. She believed she must have cried, because she had a confused recollection of wet cheeks, though she was not sure, after all, that they were hers. She remembered that she told him that she did not love him and never could love him, and that she wished that he had not told her she cared for her. And then suddenly something looked out of his eyes into hers that was hurt.

"I am sorry if that is the way you feel," he said slowly.

Then a strange, stiff silence fell between them, unlike any of the silences that had ever come when they were friends.

"Where is your mother?" he asked finally. "I must go and say good-bye to her."

"Because I am going away," he replied. "You do not suppose I am going to stay where I can see you every day, do you?"

The child feeling came over Pauline again. "I do not know," she faltered, lamely.

"You are very foolish," he said with a touch of bitterness. Then Pauline arose and stood as straight and tall as she could.

"You are very dictatorial," she said, and walked out of the room. There was a little quietness in her mother's manner—a little sadness—for weeks after that hurt and irritated Pauline.

"Why did you want me to marry him?" she asked one day.

"Because I think you would have been happy with him," was the reply.

"It would have been best in a great many ways," she answered.

"Very well, dear," said her mother, gently.

Ah, well, that was five year ago! He had gone abroad immediately after, and then had come the change in Pauline's life. Her mother died, and before the shock of her death had worn away, it was discovered that foolish investments made just before her death had robbed the girl of the little income she had counted on for her maintenance. As she stood before the audience, retracing her violin, something familiar, some place in the sea of faces—a glance, a gesture—she knew not what, shot up to her, and quivered within her. Ah, it was in her heart. She knew it. Some place in that nebula before had been a trick of personality so like that she had loved so long ago, it had power now to rob her of her peace, to leave her all astray. The old room in the south came back to her; the cool, gray walls, the long, floating curtains, the heavy sweetness of the honeysuckle, the hot sun outside, and a man's voice in her ears, a man's arm around her. She drew in a gasp of her peace, to leave her dead as a long breath, and struck the opening chords sharply. "It is I, I," she repeated to herself. "I, Pauline Wharton, crying for my own. I—I—the way through." How plaintive the air was; so sweet, so sweet—and then the variation, so fine, so delicate. She shifted her violin a little, and looked down into the front rows of the audience. There, a few feet away from her, looking straight into her eyes, sat the man who held life's meaning for her. The "Fantasia Appassionata" came to a sudden close. The fair violinist, Miss Wharton, played no farther than the variation. People were heard to regret it, for she played it so exquisitely. In a little ante room, alone, a girl sat, white and trembling. She made no effort to move when she saw him coming through the doorway. She could only look at him, and in her eyes he read with the inspiration of a love that a man knows once and for all in his life, all that had happened within her since they last met, and that it was the end, and that she was his—and he drew her gently to him.

"That is the way I love you, dear," he said, after a pause. And Pauline then cried again.

again, from the applause that greeted her when she finished. It seemed very loud to her as she walked off the stage, and it lasted a long time. She was aware after awhile that it was still continuing, more demanding, more insistent.

"You really must play something more, Miss Wharton," some one said to her, hurriedly.

Well, it did not make much difference to her.

"The Vieuxtemps Fantasia," she said to her accompanist, and went on to the stage. As she stood before the audience, retracing her violin, something familiar, some place in the sea of faces—a glance, a gesture—she knew not what, shot up to her, and quivered within her. Ah, it was in her heart. She knew it. Some place in that nebula before had been a trick of personality so like that she had loved so long ago, it had power now to rob her of her peace, to leave her all astray. The old room in the south came back to her; the cool, gray walls, the long, floating curtains, the heavy sweetness of the honeysuckle, the hot sun outside, and a man's voice in her ears, a man's arm around her. She drew in a gasp of her peace, to leave her dead as a long breath, and struck the opening chords sharply. "It is I, I," she repeated to herself. "I, Pauline Wharton, crying for my own. I—I—the way through." How plaintive the air was; so sweet, so sweet—and then the variation, so fine, so delicate. She shifted her violin a little, and looked down into the front rows of the audience. There, a few feet away from her, looking straight into her eyes, sat the man who held life's meaning for her. The "Fantasia Appassionata" came to a sudden close. The fair violinist, Miss Wharton, played no farther than the variation. People were heard to regret it, for she played it so exquisitely. In a little ante room, alone, a girl sat, white and trembling. She made no effort to move when she saw him coming through the doorway. She could only look at him, and in her eyes he read with the inspiration of a love that a man knows once and for all in his life, all that had happened within her since they last met, and that it was the end, and that she was his—and he drew her gently to him.

"That is the way I love you, dear," he said, after a pause. And Pauline then cried again.

The Human Machine

The human body is like a delicately adjusted machine. When a part is worn out, or through abuse becomes rusty, it affects the whole system. The kidneys and liver are among the most important of all the organs in the body. When they get out of order the entire system suffers. Keep them running smoothly and good health follows.

McLean's Liver and Kidney Balm will regulate these organs and keep them in perfect health. Years of use in thousands of families have proved its value in all troubles affecting the liver and kidneys.

If your back aches; if your head aches; if you lack ambition; if you are easily tired and worn out; if your kidneys are out of order. Buy a bottle to-day at your druggist's. It may save you useless suffering.

Only Success Can Convince

Nothing testifies so strongly of the reliability of Dr. Terrill as his invariable success for the past twenty-five years in the treatment of Catarrh, diseases of the Blood, Skin, Sores, Spots, Pimples, Tetter, Eczema, Scrofula, Physical Debility, the result of violating the laws of health and the thorough eradication from the system of lingering and chronic disease.

Those suffering from the above ailments would realize the dangers of delay could they read some of the letters received and see the pitiful wrecks of manhood and womanhood that daily come up before us.

The Physical, Mental and Moral Debility

Is a terrible warning not to neglect the laws of health. Whatever may be the cause of physical decline, it is constantly sapping the body's strength and exhausting the system and a day may mean an epoch in checking the steady progress of such self-destructing afflictions.

Dr. Terrill's Treatment is a Cure

To the doubtful we have only to show Dr. Terrill's record, which is self-evident and convincing. Indorsed by men of high standing and repute—doctors, lawyers, clubs, bankers, Mayors, by the Governor of his State. Send to-day for his book and literature and be convinced. Consultation free and invited. Call or write. Book on chronic diseases sent free on application.

bound to feed because he raises them himself, should be charged to the cow at just what they are worth in the local market...

It also is true, much of the time, that a dairy farmer might better exchange a portion of his corn or oats for a feed costing double the money because the purchased feed contains in large proportion just what the cows need to balance up their daily ration...

Let us consider a moment the relative value of the different feeds from the protein standpoint. We can then see whether the farmer is making money by constantly feeding an unbalanced ration of corn and oats...

A ton of oatmeal is worth $18 and contains 150 pounds of protein. When we feed the protein of oats, therefore, we pay 10 cents a pound for it.

A ton of gluten feed is worth $24. It contains 600 pounds of protein. When we feed the protein of gluten we pay 6 cents a pound for it.

It is protein we are after, whether we raise it or buy it. Now we ask that farmer really smart and awake to his own interest who will feed oat or cornmeal protein at 10 and 11 cents a pound when he can sell a part of these feeds at that price and buy brain protein at 6.4 cents, gluten feed protein at 6 cents, cottonseed protein at 3.7 cents a pound, or oilmeal protein at 4.6 cents a pound?

Right here is where the value of study and intelligence comes in. The man who will not read and figure must pay for his ignorance of the arithmetic of his business more than double what the better posted man's intelligence costs.

THE TWIN TERRITORIES

A large amount of wheat has been threshed in Oklahoma. A Guthrie report says the average in that section has been 25 bushels to the acre.

Dr. J. H. Miller of Paris, Tex., has closed a deal with Wesley Durant and Tom Hale of Durant, I. T., for what is known as the W. E. T. ranch, located near the mouth of McGee creek, in Jacks Fork county, Choctaw nation. The purchase includes large pasturage interests and 750 1 and 2-year-old steers.

R. C. Adams, representing the Delaware Indians who are citizens of the Cherokee nation, filed with the secretary of the interior a protest against the grant of the leases to the Cherokee Oil and Gas company, or any other mining company that will interfere with or infringe on the premises, rents or properties of the Delaware Indians. It is understood that the department will take up the matter of leasing the territory shortly.

A Washington dispatch says: It is understood here that the secretary of the interior has recommended to the president that no agreement be made with the Cherokee nation, and this recommendation formed the basis of the president's veto of the act of the Cherokee council providing for the appointment of another commission to treat with the Dawes commission. The Cherokee have had two agreements submitted to them since the passage of the Curtis act and have refused to ratify either of them. The interior department is convinced that the Cherokees are being swayed by influences and interests inside and outside the tribe that are not altogether proper.

LONE WOLF DEFEATED.

Justice Bradley of the supreme court of the District of Columbia, last week handed down a decision in the case of Lone Wolf and other Kiowa Indians of Oklahoma against the secretary of the interior, wherein the Indians sought to enforce the execution of his provisions of the interior and his subordinate officers of the act of congress of June 6, 1900, providing for the allotment to the Indians of a portion of the Kiowa, Comanche and Apache reservation. It has been contended on behalf of the Indians that the agreement negotiated with them, which was ratified by the act of June 6, 1900, was obtained by false and fraudulent representations and interpretations of its provisions; that three-fourths of the adult male Indians of these tribes have not signed the agreement required by the treaty of Aug. 2, 1869, and that congress in ratifying the agreement made material changes and amendments therein without referring the same to the Indians for their assent or ratification.

The suit was brought by Lone Wolf and a few other individual Indians, who declared that they sued on behalf of themselves and of the other individual Indians.

The reservation in question was established by the treaty of 1863, which provided that the Indians should have in common the absolute and undisputed use and occupation thereof and that cession thereof should be of no validity unless signed by at least three-fourths of all the adult male Indians.

Justice Bradley holds that the right of the Indians to the reservation is a possessory one only; that this right exists in the tribe and not in the individual members; that the wrong, if any, threatened by the execution of the act of June 6, 1900, is a wrong to the tribe as a whole, and that no individual member will suffer any injury which is peculiar to him and not shared in common by other members. The decision declares that the suit can not be maintained by members of the tribe in their individual capacity. Justice Bradley, however, does not rest his decision upon this point, but holds that the Indians are the pupils, or wards, of the nation; that the duty of providing for the maintenance, civilization and education and of protecting and caring for them is one which rests upon the general government and is committed to its legislative or political branch. Quoting from the decision of Justice Miller, of the United States supreme court, in the case of United States vs. Kagama (181 U. S., 375), he says:

"They are communities dependent on the United States; dependent largely for their political rights; they owe no allegiance to the states and receive from no protection. Because of the local ill feeling of the people of the states where they are found are often their dearest enemies. From their very weakness and helplessness, so largely due to the course of dealing of the federal government with them and the treaties in which they have been promised, it arises the duty of protection, and with it the power. This has always been recognized by the executive and by congress and by this court whenever the question has arisen. The power of the general government over the remnants of a race once so powerful, now weak and diminished in numbers, is necessary to their protection as well as to their safety. It must exist in that government, because it never existed anywhere else; because the theater of its exercise is within the geographical limits of the United States, because it has never been denied and because it alone can enforce its laws on all the tribes."

He holds that the question whether three-fourths of the adult male Indians signed the agreement, and whether it was obtained from them by false and fraudulent representations and interpretations, was presented to congress and the Indian commission; that congress in ratifying the agreement is necessarily a finding that the agreement was assented to by the requisite number of Indians and that there was no false or fraudulent representation or interpretation, and that this decision by congress is conclusive upon the judicial tribunal.

He further holds that an act of congress and a treaty are, under the constitution of the United States, on an equal footing, that an act of congress will repeal a prior inconsistent treaty and that a treaty will repeal a prior inconsistent act of congress; that the making and enforcing of treaties is under our constitution committed to the political branch of government and that the judicial tribunals of the country are without authority to enforce treaty stipulations or to grant redress for wrongs inflicted by their breach.

Referring to the Cherokee tobacco case, 11 Wallace 616, he quotes that portion of the decision of the United States supreme court, which says:

"Treaties with Indian nations within the jurisdiction of the United States, whatever considerations of humanity and good faith may be involved and require their faithful observance can not be more obligatory than treaties with foreign nations. They have no higher sanctions; and no greater inviolability or immunity from legislative invasion can be claimed for them. The consequences in all such cases give rise to questions which must be met by the political department of the government. They are beyond the sphere of judicial cognizance. In the exercise of that prerogative the act of congress must prevail, as if the treaty were not an element to be considered. If a wrong has been done the power of redress is with congress, not with the judiciary, and that body upon being applied to, it is to be presumed, will promptly give the proper relief."

Notice of appeal of the case has been given.

NEW MEXICO

Pleuro-pneumonia, it is reported, has appeared in the fine Hereford herd of W. C. Irton near Roswell. This is said to be the first time the disease has been found in the Territory.

Thirty-one boys of the government Indian school left Santa Fe last week for the sugar beet fields in the Arkansas valley, Colorado, to work there for a few months. They go as an advance guard of a large delegation to report as to conditions. If these are agreeable a hundred or more boys from the Indian school will follow them. This teaches the boys practical work in the fields, and also enables them to save pocket money.

A report from Santa Fe says: A million and a half pounds of wool sheared in Rio Arriba and Taos counties are in transit over the Denver and Rio Grande railroad this month to this city, and are being transferred here to the Santa Fe railway for shipment to eastern points. On the other hand, between 500,000 and 600,000 pounds of wool sheared in Southern Santa Fe and northeastern Bernalillo counties are being transferred to the Denver and Rio Grande railroad for shipment north and east.

Solon Curtice, a druggist of Purcell, I. T., was here last Friday, after having taken a trip up the Pecos river some 80 miles, where he and other parties bought 100 acres of land from Charles D. Keyes, the sheepman, at a good figure. The place is to be stocked with several hundred of cattle and more purchased later, to swell the herd to 500 or 700. B. O. The great CLOUDCROFT LODGE has been completed, formally opened, and is now in full sway. It is a splendid hostelry, splendidly furnished and offering an incomparable cuisine, under the management of Mr. J. J. Fisher, Proprietor of the famous Hotel Sheldon of El Paso, Texas.

You want an enjoyable summer. You want to get away from the oppressiveness of the city and low altitudes. GO TO CLOUDCROFT, N. M., 4,000 feet elevation. On the summit of the loftiest peak of the Sacramento mountains, 110 miles northeast of El Paso. Wonderful scenery, tennis courts and golf links, dancing pavilion. In fact everything desired or expected in an up-to-date, healthful summer resort.

Cloudcroft is known as the "Breathing Spot of the Southwest." The great CLOUDCROFT LODGE has been completed, formally opened, and is now in full sway. It is a splendid hostelry, splendidly furnished and offering an incomparable cuisine, under the management of Mr. J. J. Fisher, Proprietor of the famous Hotel Sheldon of El Paso, Texas.

You want an enjoyable summer. You want to get away from the oppressiveness of the city and low altitudes. GO TO CLOUDCROFT, N. M., 4,000 feet elevation. On the summit of the loftiest peak of the Sacramento mountains, 110 miles northeast of El Paso. Wonderful scenery, tennis courts and golf links, dancing pavilion. In fact everything desired or expected in an up-to-date, healthful summer resort.

Cloudcroft is known as the "Breathing Spot of the Southwest." There is but one way to go comfortably and quickly, one way to avoid more than one change of cars; but one way to enjoy reclining chair-cars (seats free) and sleeping cars all the way through daily to El Paso. That way is via the Texas & Pacific railway.

Compress Burned.—The Inman cotton compress at Houston was burned last week. The fire is supposed to have started from a spark from a passing engine. The loss is placed at $45,000 to $50,000. Fortunately there was not a large amount of cotton at the press—it will not exceed 1,000 bales. All there was was destroyed, and runs up the loss to $20,000 to $25,000 more. A number of cars were destroyed.

Man Drowned.—A flood and following a cloudburst caused the death of 60 people along the Elkhorn on the Norfolk and Western road, in West Virginia, June 22. The damage is as great as that of the Johnstown flood. The property damage is placed at not less than two million dollars.

Government in Philippines.—Secretary of War Root last week issued the order of the President establishing civil government in the Philippines. Hon. Wm. H. Taft, president of the Philippine commission, is named as civil governor. The power to appoint military officers, heretofore vested in the Philippine commission or in the military governor, will be exercised by the civil governor, with the advice and consent of the commission.

Negroes Lynched.—Frank, better known as "Prophet" Smith, and F. D. McLand, held at Benton, La., for complicity in the murder of John G. Foster, were taken out one night last week and strung up to a tree. They were left dangling side by side. Both negroes made a statement before their death, denying that they had anything to do with the killing. Smith, who was the head of the Church of God movement in that section, and was deemed largely responsible for the sentiment against the whites which led to the death of Foster, died praying. McLand was silent and brave as he was strung up.

Young Hay Killed.—Adelbert Stone Hay, farmer Consul of the United States at Pretoria, South Africa, and eldest son of Secretary of State John Hay, fell from a window in the third story of a hotel in New Haven shortly before 2:30 Sunday morning and was instantly killed.

Chaffee's Report.—The report of Major Gen. Chaffee of the campaign in China is being prepared for publication at the war department. Among other matters it contains special reports made by the Russian, Japanese, French and British troops; also reports on equipment, supplies, etc., of foreign troops and reports on different expeditions. Gen. Chaffee at once point says: "It is safe to say that where one real Boxer has been killed since the capture of Pekin, twenty harmless-

CLOUDCROFT THE INCOMPARABLE.
Situated on the highest peak of the Sacramento mountains in New Mexico just north of El Paso, at an elevation of 4,000 feet, Cloudcroft is destined to become the Mecca, the veritable "breathing spot" of the southwest. Its pure and invigorating mountain air, laden with the healing aroma of the pine, will again tinge the faded cheek of the invalid with the rose of health, while to those seeking purpose from the monotony of a commercial occupation, it offers a complete rejuvenation of flagging energies and the sufferer returns once more to take his place in the rank of commercial activity, filled with new life and vigor.
