Facts From Jerusalem

Easter, the Great Festival of the Orient, Is Interestingly Celebrated

The name of Jerusalem is repeated on Easter day by millions and millions of followers of the Christian religion as well as the Jewish. If one stops to think how many times the word Jerusalem has been repeated during the 2,000 years that have passed since the appearance of the Nazarene on the platform of the world history, one must admit that there is no city in the world that can rival with Jerusalem in fame. The name of Jerusalem has become a familiar and sweet name to many a nation and many an

The fall of this tree has again fulfilled another prophecy stating that Jerusalem will be delivered from the ands of the Turk when one of these trees should fall.

The Easter season is by far the busiest and most interesting one of Jerusalem. The setting in of spring makes it possible as well as pleasant for tourists and visitors from all parts of the globe to gather in the Holy city and see with their eyes the place Those subject to frequent "colds in the head" will find that the use of HALL'S care whose name is world-famous and on CATARRH MEDICINE will build up the system, cleanse the Blood and render them less liable to colds. O NE of these places is the Garden of Gethsemane. As the Hebrew name indicates, Gethsemane was an olive garden, with an "oil press" on its grounds. The present garden is situated on the western slopes of the Mount of Olives, a little distance up from the Kidron valley. Although very much reduced in size, it still contains some of the old olive trees that stood there when the Galilean spent the night with his eleven followers before he was betrayed. The place has

Bal el Kalil is the center of traffic of the city. Here the vehicles stand in line ready to convey the natives, as well as the tourists, through the city and through the country. Camel caravans in their characteristic slow pace share the pavement with the modern motor-driven cars. A scene at the Jaffa gate during the Easter season has no equal in any cosmopolitan city in any part of the world, and impresses upon the observer the importance of the city and the fame which it owes to the occurrences of the Easter season 2,000 years ago.

CALVARY was a hill on which criminals were crucified. The crucifixion was an old Eastern habit. The historical hill of Calvary, on which the three crosses of that Good Friday stood, has disappeared. On its site the Church of the Holy Sepulchre has been built by Helena, the wife of Emperor Constantine of the Byzantine empire, in the Fourth century after the Christian era. On this place the celebration of the foot washing and the Holy Light takes place.

The foot washing is celebrated on Greek Thursday in the court of the Lambs at Six Months of Age Outweigh Dams and Yield More Than Twice as Much Wool.

Native ewes bred to purebred rams at the Mississippi coastal plain experiment station resulted in lambs which at the age of six months outweighed their dams and yielded more than twice as much wool. This result of the use of good purbred sires is announced by the United States Department of Agriculture, through the bureau of animal industry, in a report covering the last fiscal year.

GOOD FEED TO FATTEN HORSE

Linseed or Flaxseed May Be Used to Advantage for Supplementing Animal's Ration.

Linseed of flaxseed is very good feed for supplementing the fattening borse ration. If used with soft feed, it may be boiled to advantage. Otherwise it should be ground and fed in limited quantities up to half a pound after being accustomed to it. Oil-cake meal, which is the by-product without the oil, may be fed up to one pound per

PRINCIPAL CAUSES OF ILLS

Pigs Are Too Often Compelled to Work Over and Live Upon Same Soil Too Intensely.

Experience teaches us that the most serious diseases of swine are those of an infectious or contagious character, and the parasites that get onto or into the pig. Now most of this is caused primarily by the fact that the pigs are all too often forced to work over and live upon the same soil too intensely, without any intervening renovetion of that soil.

Better Roads

FILMS ON MAKING HIGHWAYS

Every Process Involved in Construction of Concrete Road Is Shown in "Movie" Pictures.

Many a woman more blessed with a sense of the ridiculous than she is with tact, has remarked to Friend Husband as he climbed from underneath the car stalled on a muddy country road after a struggle with recalcitrant machinery, "If only a movie photographer were around."

A Country Road Before and After Improvement.

Her wish would have been gratified last summer in many places in Delaware and New Jersey, for movie operators from the United States Department of Agriculture were there filming good roads with the assistance of engineers from the bureau of public roads. The resulting picture, "Modern Concrete Road Construction," is now ready for lending to interested persons who make application for its use at "Good Roads" meetings, schools, colleges, and meetings of engineers.

Every process involved in the construction of a concrete road is shown in the film, from the heavy grading to the completed road. The picture opens with a view of an automobile stuck in the mud of an unimproved country road. After the spectator has been shown all the steps in the construction of a modern concrete road, the picture closes with a thrilling race between a railroad train and a motortruck on a concrete highway-a feature calculated to show the possibilities of rapid transit of freight traffic on good roads, but not to encourage speeding.

SNOW ON COUNTRY HIGHWAYS

Removal Problem of Greatest Impor tance Because of Greater Use of Motortrucks.

The snow removal problem is of increasing importance because of the greater use of autos and motortrucks which find it very difficult to travel through drifts and deep snow. In most states it is the duty of the county or local road officials to remove obstructions on the highways and snow drifts certainly are obstructions, says Farm and Home. Excellent advice on this matter is given by the Iowa highway commission as follows:

Just how much money can be used for this class of road maintenance is entirely up to the individual road official to decide. He must also decide whether it is necessary to keep the road open at all times for automobiles on only for team traffic. In deciding just what to do about snow removal, the character of the road and the nature and importance of the traffic to the general public must be a determining factor.

Road officials should not be stampeded in the case of heavy snows by insistent and angry demands that all roads be immediately opened for traffic. Sometimes an attempt to open all roads for immediate use by automobiles after exceptional snow storms, might cripple the county or township road funds for the entire year. It costs money and lots of it to remove snow, so the road official must use the best judgment as to just how far he can go, always keeping in mind, however, that no road should be allowed to remain entirely closed to traffic for any undue length of time.

Should Build Stronger. Now that the motortruck has been developed it is nothing less than a crime for highway engineers to design and build and spend the state's money for anything other than a substantial road. Delaware, New Jersey, Pennsylvania, Connecticut and other progressive states are realizing this fact and are building more concrete

RUB OUT SORENESS

Sprains, Backache With Old St. Jacobs Oil.

Back hurt you? Can't straighten up without feeling sudden pains, sharp aches and twinges? Now, listen! That's lumbago, sciatica, or maybe from a strain, and you'll get blessed relief the moment you rub your back with soothing, penetrating "St. Jacobs Oil!" Nothing else takes out soreness, lameness and stiffness so quickly. You simply rub it on and out comes the pain. It is perfectly harmless and doesn't burn or discolor the skin. Limber up! Don't suffer! Get a small trial bottle from any drug store, and after using it just once you'll forget that you ever had backache, lumbago or sciatica, because your back will never hurt or cause any more misery. It never disappoints and has been recommended for 60 years. Stop drugging kidneys! They don't cause backache, because they have no nerves, therefore can not cause pain.-Adv.

THE FORD COUPE

The Ford Coupe is surely the Salesmen's car. Thousands of them are bought every year by firms employing traveling salesmen. Many firms buy fifty or one hundred at a time, because they know, from experience, that the Ford Coupe increases the efficiency of the salesmen at a minimum of expense.

Contractors, builders, collectors, solicitors, physicians all find the Ford Coupe the most convenient as well as the most economical among motor cars. Lowest in purchase price, lowest in operating costs, and backed by the Ford Service organization-coupled with the durability of the car itself- these furnish the reasons for the Ford popularity

Let us send you a copy of 'Ford-A Business Utility." It tells what other concerns have learned about the Ford in business service. But, better still, let us have your order today. The demand keeps growing. Orders are filled as received-and our allotment is limited a specified number each month.

In your boyhood you probably asked your parents "What is Steel?" "What is Engineering?"—"What is Municipal Government?" and a thuo-

And the answers doubtless were: "Steel is superheated iron"—"Engineering is a knowledge of the physical laws" or "Laying out the route for a railroad," or 'The construction or operating of engines"—"Municipal Government is the governing of towns and cities." These answers gave you a general idea, but not a definite knowledge. Now, if your father had referred you to a reliable down to date Encyclopaedia, you would have learned that there are five distince types of engineering, each having a distinct practical application; that there are twelve kinds of steel, all serving special, individual purposes of every-day use, and you would have been shown by a simple diagram just how the crude iron as it comes from the ground is converted into the steel from which our great buildings are constructed. You would have learned the difference between Town and Muncipal Government-in whom the powers of governing are vested, how the are controlled, not only throughout the United States and Canada, but in all other of Easter eggs? Of all the curious legends the centuries have gathered about the Easter season none are mere widely circulated than those having to do with the rabbit and the Easter eggs: Easter eggs are seen all over the Christian world on Easter Sunday, and wherever the eggs are there is the rabbit also.

Just where and how such a total abstainer from eggs, such a clearly mixed up in a nest of them the biog- | sink into insignificance raphers of neither the hen nor the Myths of the Easter egg are more easily accounted for. The Ancient Egyptians, Persians. Gauls, Greeks and Romans saw in the egg an emblem of immortality. In it life lay dormant. An insensate thing, a mere object, it had the power to become a living being.

To the early Christians the egg symbolized the resurrection. Because of this, and also because eggs were looked upon as meat, Roman Catholics of Italy, Spain and France were formerly forbidden to eat eggs during Lent. After the fasting was over, eggs were the first meat to be eaten. Every Easter table held eggs dyed red, to represent mids at various points of vantage along the table. Greek Catholics believe that eggs laid on Good Friday have within them their own blessing, and that he who eats them as his first food on Easter Sunday will be blessed throughout the year. They, too, hold that the egg is symbolical of the resurrection. But all of these eggs are the fruit

The rabbit, however, thinking it would be a good joke on the people of the earth, reversed this gospel: What he said to the people was: "Like as I die, and live no more, so shall ye all die and be no more alive." The people took this gospel very sorrow. fully, which amused the rabbit, and he went back to the moon god and boasted of what he had done. The god was so infuriated with his messenger that he threw a hatchet at him and split his lip wide open, and that, if you would like to know, is why the rabbit's lip is slit.

In certain parts of England, particularly at Hallaton, there was an old custom of celebrating Easter Monday with a "hare pie scramble" and "bottle kicking." This celebration began with a procession leading to the house of the rector of the parish and consisting of two men abreast, carrying sacks with cut-up pies inside; three men abreast, two carrying wooden bottles filled with beer, and the third a large dummy bottle that was to be kicked about; one man, carrying a pole on which was fastened a hare in a sitting posture, and, last of all, a band of music. The band was followed by all the people of the parish who could walk. The dummy bottle was kicked into the neighboring parish, where it was burned, or "drowned," after which bits of it were taken home as trophies by the people. The custom fell into disuse about 1767. But other customs in which the hare figured were continued to a much later date, one having to do with the hunting of a hare on Good Friday, to be eaten on Easter day, the alternative being that "he who does not eat a hare must eat a red her-

At least one mythologist has tried to account for the Easter rabbit in England by making him the creature of the Anglican goddess Eostre, whose name, according to Bede, was given to the month of April, which was called Estermonath. Grimm calls this goddess Ostara, "divinity of the radian" dawn, of upspringing light."

"I know it. Had a friend oncemarried. Every night after dinner he used to sit and stare into the fire and his wife used to ask him what he was thinking about. He would look up at her owlishly and tell her it was something he couldn't explain to her, because she'd never understand it-and that was all he would tell her, although right frequently, I dare say, he felt like telling her some things she could understand? She brooded over his secret until she couldn't stand it any more, and one day she packed her duds and flew home to mother. He let her stay there three months, and finally one day he sent her a blue print of what he'd been thinking about.

"What was it?" "An internal-combustion engine. You see, until she left him, he'd never been able to get set to figure out something in connection with the inlet

Of course, I haven't got the money just now, and this is what Billy calls a finger bet, but if I lose, I guarantee to pay. Are we betting even money? I think that is scarcely fair. Under the circumstances I should be entitled to odds. "Nothing doing! No odds on a bet of this nature to a seeress who has already jarred me from soul to vermiform appendix by making good! You know too blamed much already, and how you discovered it is a problem that may drive me crazy yet." After breakfast they repaired to the veranda to await the result of Webster's experiment with Don Juan Cafetero. Sure enough, the wreck had again returned, he was seated on the edge of the veranda waiting for them; as they approached, he held up a grimy, quivering hand, in the palm of which lay -a five-dollar gold piece.

"What?" Mr. Webster said, amazed. "Still unchanged!"

"I thried to change it at half a dozen cantinas," Don Juan wheezed, "but divil a bit av systim did any av thim have. Wan offered this in spiggoty money an' the other offered that, an' sure if I'd taken the best that was offered me in exchange, ye might have t'ought I'd tuk more nor wan dhrink."

"Bravo! Three long, loud, raucous cheers for Don Juan Cafetero!" Dolores cried. "Was it a terrible task to come back without a drink, Don Juan?" He shivered. "A shky-blue kangaroo wit' a pink tail an' green ears chased me into this patio, ma'am." "You're very wave, Cafferty. How does it feel to win back your selfrespect?" Webster asked him. "Beggin' the young leddy's pardon

So Webster went into the hotel bar and returned presently with a bottle of brandy and a glass, which he filled I let him have it for a nickel and held out toward Don Juan. "One are. I imagine he still has it. is a nail in your coffin." Webster, accompanied by his proderful game, isn't it—this tege, strolled uptown on a shopping tour. Here he outfitted Don Juan taking chances! Now that I am neatly but not gaudily and added to prosperous again, the only thing his own personal effects two highthat really matters is the un-

tiful supply of ammunition-after which he returned to the hotel, first having conducted Don Juan to a barber shop and given him instructions to report for orders and his mid-day drink the instant he should have acquired the outward evidences of respectability. At the hotel Webster found two messages awaiting him. One was from Billy Geary, up at San Miguel de Padua, advising him that everything was in readiness for a trip to the mine; the other was a note from Ricardo Ruey, but signed with his alias of Andrew Bowers. Webster read:

"Dear Friend: "A certain higher-up has been convinced that it would be extremely inadvisable to eliminate you now. It has been pointed out to this person that you are a prom. cit. up in your neck of the woods and dangerous to monkey with-personally and because such monkeying may lead to unpleasant complications with your paternal government. A far more artistic and effective way of raising hell with you has been suggested to this higher-up individual, and he has accepted it. Indeed, the plan pleased him so much that he laughed quite heartily. Really, it is quite diabolical, but remember, he who laughs last laughs best-and I'm the villain in this sketch. "Barring accidents, my dear Webster, you are good for at least six weeks of existence. Beyond that I dare not guarantee you.

"Thine, "ANDREW BOWERS."

"That makes it nice," the recipient of this comforting communication soliloquized. He went up to his room, packed a duffle bag with such belongings as he would find necessary during a prolonged stay in the mountains, and at luncheon was fortunate enough to find Dolores in the dining room when he entered.

"I'm going up to San Miguel de Padua this afternoon." he announced as he took his seat. A look of extreme anxiety clouded her lovely face, and he noticed it. "Oh, there's no risk," he hastened to assure her. "That scamp of a brother of yours, through his friends in high places, has managed to get me a reprieve." He handed her Ricardo's letter.

She looked up, much relieved, from her perusal. "And how long do you expect to be gone, Caliph?"

"Ouite a while. I'll be busy around that dratted concession for a couple of weeks, surveying and assaying and what-all; then, while waiting for our machinery and supplies to arrive from the United States, I shall devote my spare time to hunting and fishing and reforming Don Juan Cafetero. The cool hills for mine."

"What a selfish, unsociable program!" she reflected. "I wonder if it will occur to him to come down here once in a while and take me for a drive on the Malecon and talk to me to keep me from dying of ennui before I meet Ricardo, I'll wait and see if he suggests it."

However, for reasons best known to himself and the reader, Mr. Webster made no such interesting suggestion; so she decided that while he was tremendously nice, he was, nevertheless, a very queer man and thoroughly exasperating.

Just before the train pulled out John Stuart Webster took Dolores' hand. "Good-by, Seeress," he said very soberly. "The trail forks here for the first time-possibly the last, although I'll try to be on hand to make good on my promise to present you to your brother the day he occupies the palace. However, if I shouldn't be in town that day, just go up and introduce yourself to him. It's been wonderful to have met you and known you, even for such a brief period. I shall never forget you and the remarkable 24 hours just passed."

"I shall not soon forget them myself, Caliph-nor you," she added. "Haven't you been a busy little cup of tea, Caliph! Within 24 hours after landing, you have changed your mind three times, lost the best job in the world, had your fortune told, been marked for slaughter, acquired a newfound friend and commenced actively and with extraordinarily good results the work of reforming him, soused a gentleman in the fountain, spurned another with the tip of your boot, rode with me around the Malecon and listened to the band concert, bundled poor Billy off to San Miguel de Padua, discovered my brother presumed to be dead, and received a reprieve from your enemies, while they perfect new plans for destroying you.

Really, you are quite a caliph." "Oh, there's a dash of speed in the old horse yet, Miss Ruey," he assured her laughingly. "Now listen; don't tell anybody about your brother, and don't tell Billy about my adventures since he left for San Miguel de Padua."

"But I'm not Hable to see Billy-"Yes, you are-extremely liable. I'm going to send him back to you as soon as I can spare him, because I know you'll be lonesome and bored to death in this lonesome town, and Bill is bully good company. And I don't want you to tell him about the mess I'm in, because it would only worry him; he can't aid me, and the knowledge | The ledge stood straight up and down, fancied, would be sufficient to cause him to rebel against my plans for his honeym-for his vacation. He'd insist on sticking around to protect me.' He looked down at her little hand where it rested in his, so big and brown and hard; with his free hand he patted her hand paternally, "Goodby, Seeress," he said again; and turning to the steps, he leaped aboard just as the train started to move out of the station.

"Goo-good-by-Caliph," she called mournfully. Then to herself: "Bless his heart, he did remember I'd be terribly lonely, after all. He isn't a bit queer, but oh, dear, he is so exasperating. I could bump his kind old head against a wall!" She turned her back on the train, fearful that from where he clung on the steps he could, even at that distance, see the sudden rush of tears that blinded her. However, Don Juan Cafetero, with his rubicund nose to the window of the last coach, did see them-saw her grope toward the carriage waiting to take her back to the hotel.

"Why, shure, the poor darlint's cryin'," he reflected. "Be the Great Gun an Athlone! Shure I t'ought all along 'twas Billy Geary she had her eye on -God love him! An' be the same token, didn't she tell me I was to shtay sober an' take care av Mishter Webster. Hah-hah-a-a! Well! I'll say nothin' an' I'll be neuthral, but-

From which it may be inferred that romance was not yet burned out of Don Juan's Gaelic soul. He would be "neuthral," but - but - but - he reserved the right to butt in!

CHAPTER XII

Arrived at San Miguel de Padua about midnight, Webster found the climate temperate, in fact, decidedly cool. Billy was waiting for them and was properly amazed, but not scandalized when Don Juan Cafetero, abusing the station hands in a horrible hodgepodge of English and Spanish, superintended the landing of the baggage on the platform.

"I had to bring him with me," Webster explained. "I'm going to wean him, and after that baby quits crying for his bottle, believe me, Bill, we'll have the prince of a foreman for our mine. Quite a character, is Don Juan, when you dig down into him." "Dig far enough into that ruin and you'll find fire crackers," Billy admitted. "However, John, I'm afraid he won't explode. The powder's damp. How did you leave Dolores?"

"Fit as a fiddle, Bill." "How does she stack up on better acquaintance. Johnny?" "She's a skookum lass, She sent her love and I promised to send you back to her P. D. Q. So don't bother me with talk about her. You'll see her again in a week or ten days, I hope.' "No? Is that so, Johnny? Bully for you, you old wampus cat. Tell Don Juan to steer you over to the Globo de Oro. He knows the place. I've got to go and hire a mule or some other quadruped for Don Juan if we're to avoid a late start in the morning. Good night, old fellow." They were up at daybreak, and with three heavily laden pack mules in charge of two semi-naked mozos, while the cook jogged comfortably along on his big splay feet in the rear.

they set out for Billy's concession. For 30 miles they followed the highway, and then debouched to the southwest along a neglected road just wide enough to accommodate the clumsy ox carts of the peons. The country was sparsely settled and evidently giv-

Darkness had descended on the valley by the time they had pitched camp at the claim. They were up at dawn the following morning, however, and immediately after breakfast Jack Webster went to his duffle bag and brought forth a dozen little canvas sacks and a prospector's hammer. "Now then, William, my son," he announced, "light the lantern and we'll see if you've forgotten all I taught you about mining."

en over to stock raising.

They clambered up the dump to a point where two light steel rails projected over the edge. On top of the dump, lying beside the rails, were two small, rusty, steel ore cars; the rails led from the edge of the dump to the mouth of a tunnel in the hillside and disappeared therein.

Webster stood a moment, looking around him. "How did you happen to locate this ledge?" he demanded. "Was it grass root stuff, with an outcropping here at the foot of the hill? No, of course, it wasn't. You haven't enough ore on the dump. What the devil were you driving at?"

"Only a small portion of that dump is mine, Jack, and I didn't locate the ground originally. I came into this valley from the south, and as I worked up the range, I found a bald spot close to the top of the hill, and a gallows frame over an abandoned shaft. Naturally, I went down the shaft to see why it had been abandoned. To my surprise, I found a 12-foot vein of free-milling ore, on a contact between andesite and Silurian limestone.

which seemed to argue great depra-"Somebody had found an outcropping on top of that hill," Webster declared with conviction, "and sunk a shaft on the vein to open it up and determine its width and direction. And what did you do, Bill?"

"I got my transit and ran a line from the shaft on the hill, following the direction in wnich the ledge was running, and marked out the exact point toward the base of the hill where I would start my tunnel to cut the ledge. To my surprise, I discovered my predecessor had selected that identical spot. So I verified my calculations and then sat down to think it over. I remembered that frequent and violent earthquakes occur in this country, and it seemed to me a reasonable hypothesis to blame some ancient and particularly violent seismic disturbance, which had faulted the vein and set it over a considerable distance. According to my calculation, that other man should have cut the vein at 83 feet-yet he had gone on 102 before quitting. So I got half dozen peons and drove ahead 19 feet on the other fellow's tunnel; and by Heck, Johnny, I cut the vein!"

"Bully boy! And then?"

"I drifted ten feet on the vein, and the ore suddenly gave out. It stopped just like that, proving I'd come to the upper end of the vein where it had faulted; so I just worked up and around, stopeing and sinking a winze here and there, until just about the time my cash reserve was getting pretty low I picked up the true vein and opened it up for the full width. Come in, and I'll show you."

They entered the tunnel, to the signal dismay of dozens of large bats. When they reached the vein, Webster broke off samples of the ore every three or four feet, crawled after Billy up through the stope and back to the true vein, from the face of which he also took numerous samples; then he crawled out into the sunshine again, hot, dirty, and perspiring.

"Billy, you'll be a real miner yet; see if you won't," was all the praise

he tendered his youthful partner. standing beside him in anticipation of a compliment, as Webster got out his portable assay outfit. For three days Webster worked, determining the values of each sample, only to find that his assays confirmed Billy's. "You were right, son," he finally announced. "This mine is a humdinger and no mistake; if you and I live ten years we'll be worth $10,000,000 between us-maybe more.'

Billy's jaundiced eyes glowed hungrily. "We'll put in a hundred stamps---'

"Well, we'll try ten for a starter," Webster interrupted dryly, "and add more as the mine pays its way. It's the sweetest mining proposition on earth-only, like all high-class goods, it has one flaw when you examine it closely."

"You're crazy," Billy challenged. "Name the flaw!"

Derivation of Blackmail. Originally, blackmail was money paid, in troublous times, to protect householders and workers of the land against freebooters. The word "black did not mean wicked or wrongful, but had the sense of to cherish or protect. This was a customary tribute of money, corn, cattle or the like anciently paid in the northern counties of England or Scotland for protection against pillage, just as insurance is now paid to corporations formed to provide it for a consideration. In the course of time the word took on added meanings, just as almost every other word has, and today it represents an attempt to hold up and defraud by means of intimidation and threats.

Dig Fish From Mud.

In less civilized parts of the continent of Africa-on the Gambia river. for example-we find fish-spearing as well as mud-searching. The West African negroes are very fond of the "mud-eel," which, according to some naturalists, ought to be classed as a reptile, on account of its foot-like fins When the floods subside thousands of these are left high and dry, and promptly bury themselves in the mud. which soon becomes hard and earthy. and here they would remain till the next inundation if the negroes did not come along with wooden torks and dig them out.-Exchange
