Through the work of the Thomas Jefferson Memorial foundation Monticello is being gradualy restored to its original condition and visitors there find it easy to believe that they are living in the past of more than a century ago One aid especially in establishing that atmosphere is the large number of Jefferson relics which have been presented to the foundation within the last few months and which will be on exhibition at Monticello henceforth. The foundation recently made this ar nouncement:

The following items were donated by the late Jane Randolph Harrison Randall, a descendant of Thomas Jefferson,

NEW national holiday will | and the wife of Alexander B. Randal of Waterburg, Conn., who, with his son Burton H. R. Randall, carried out the wishes expressed by the donor in her

> The Chippendale dining room table originally presented to Jefferson by George Wythe, the famous chancellor of Virginia and the first law professor in America and signer of the Declara-tion of Independence.

> Three Heppelwhite dining room chairs purchased by Jefferson while minister to France, and brought by him to Monticello, where the chairs re-mained until a few years after his death.

The orginal mahogany bedside, candle-table used for many years at Mon-cicello and which originally belonged to Jane Randolph Jefferson, mother of Thomas Jefferson.

Thomas Jefferson's original writing and drafting desk used by him for many years at Monticello. This desk has a double top with a sliding board on the side and discloses a number of the ingenious features used by Thomas Jefferson in his design for the little desk on which he wrote the draft for the Declaration of Independence.

The following articles were donated by Miss Fanny M. Burke, of Alexan-dria, a descendant of Thomas Jefferson:

Thomas Jefferson's paint box, used by him at Monticello, particularly for his architectural drawings. Many of these drawings are still preserved, as he is the father of American architecture.

Thomas Jefferson's ivory memoran-dum leaflet pads, a locket with Jefferson's hair, a number of personal trin-kets, buttons, buckles, etc., and three pillows from Jefferson's bed, two of which were under his head when he

Mrs. Victor Kauffman, wife of the editor of the Washington Star, has donated three dining room chairs which formerly belonged to Jefferson, and she has delegated Mrs. Rose Gouverneur Hoes, of Washington, chairman of the Jefferson committee in that city and a descendant of James Monroe, to present the chairs in her behalf to Monticello. In addition the foundation acknow! edges presentation of a very unusual and interesting colored drawing of Monticello, made many years ago in France from the recollection of a visiting Frenchman. This drawing was purchased by and presented to the foundation by Mrs. Martin W. Littleton of New York city.

The foundation also acknowledges presentation of a handsome silk Virginia flag, presented to Monticello by the women's committee who had charge of the replica of the Jefferson house on High ctreet at the Sesquicen-tennial exposition in Philadelphia, of which committee Miss Caroline Sinkler was chairman, and which committee was represented by Miss Agnes Mort-son and a delegation which formally delivered the flag to Monticello.

Of interest, too, to all Americans was the recent announcement by President Nicholas Murray Butler of Columbia university upon his return from Italy that he was bringing with him as a gift to the Columbia library a hitherto unpublished letter of Jefferson's. This letter, ordering a packet of books for Jefferson's private library, dated Monticello, April 19, 1821, and addressed to Messrs. De Bures Freres, Rue Serpente, Paris, g'ves an interesting and instructive view of the wide and varied range of Jefferson's intellectual activities and interests. The letter follows:

Doctor Butler's announcement led to the revelation by John Url Lloyd, president of the Lloyd library in Cincinnati, that his library also had a hitherto unpublished Jefferson letter. The discovery of this letter came about in a dramatic manner. Several years ago the Lloyd library purchased in Paris the first volume of "North American Sylva" by F. Andre Michaux, a noted French traveler and botanist. When Miss Edith Wycoff, present curator of the library, was cataloguing the book, she discovered securely pasted in it a letter written by Jefferson to M. Michaux. This letter written eight years earlier than the Columbia letter as a token of esteem to the President's friend, in France, also reveals in a manner fully as interesting as the other communication one of the interests of the many-sided Jefferson, viz. his keen appreciation of any contribution to the existing scientific knowledge of the time. The text of the letter fol-

Scores Killed and Hundreds Injured by a Tornado at St. Louis, Mo.

By EDWARD W. PICKARD

B ETWEEN seventy and one hundred persons were killed and about six hundred injured by a terrific tornado that swept through St. Louis, Mo., Thursday. An area of six square well as numerous business buildings. The storm's path was northeast, across the Mississippi river, and in the Illinois towns of Granite City, Venice and Madison several persons were killed and much damage done.

Governor Baker of Missouri ordered out the National Guard to patrol the sterm area in St. Louis, and the lecal Red Cross as well as hundreds of members of the American Legion turned out for relief work. Mayor Victor Miller issued an appeal for cash contributions to aid the thousands who had been rendered homeless. and a citizens' committee was organized to co-operate with the Red Cross FINANCIERS and many other persons are still immensely interested in the recent action of the federal reserve board reducing its rediscount rate, and it seems certain that the affair will be the subject of a congres sional investigation. Members of the board, it is said, expect such an inquiry and are prepared to defend their course. It is charged that the rate was reduced at the behest of the governors of the British, French and German central banks, and at least one Federal Reserve bank governor. George W. Norris of Philadelphia, frankly admits that the action was taken for the purpose of aiding European finances, and thus benefiting the United States. He explains this as follows:

"Great Britain has just recently gone back to the gold standard. Germany, Austria and Hungary are stabilized. Poland is about to be stabilized, while France and Italy are not. The United States, with half the gold in the world, is vitally interested in the preservation of the gold standard among nations.

"The situation in Europe is such that several of the great banks in England and on the continent saw that they would have to raise their discount rates unless the rates over here were lowered. If they had been compelled to advance their rates, it would have thrown a chill on business throughout the continent and in England. This in turn, would seriously affect our export business with those nations just at the time when volume shipments of cotton, wheat and other commodities are beginning."

It is said the visit in the summer of Sir Montagu Norman, governor of the Bank of England, who was accompanied by Schacht and Rist of the German and French banks, respectively, was for the express purpose of inducing the federal reserve board to reduce the rediscount rate and thus bring about the flow of money to Europe, where higher rates were maintained. Norman succeeded in this and the immediate result was what he aimed at. With the American rate 1 per cent below that of London funds began to flow back to the British market and sterling exchange began to advance, being now at par, an unprecedented situation at a time of year when there is heavy British buying of American cotton, grain and ether products.

A MERICAN Legionnaires, who are traveling about Europe after the close of their convention, are being received everywhere with great enthuslasm. So far the only unpleasantness was the attempt to bomb the train on which Commander Savage and his party were going to Italy. This was laid to the Communists and fortunately was frustrated by the fact that the train was running behind time. King Victor Emmanuel received the party in the royal palace at Pisa in most democratic fashion, and in Rome the Legionnaires were greeted by the city officials and immense throngs of cheering citizens. They marched to the grave of the Unknown Soldier and laid a wreath upon it, then changed to evening dress and were received in andience by the pope. Meanwhile another group of the Legionnaires was having a fine time in London and elaborate plans were made by the English for festivities and a reception by King George this week, when the party with Mr. Savage were due there.

GREAT BRITAIN won the Schneider trophy in the seaplane race at Venice when Flight Lient, S. N. Webster in a Napier supermarine plane whirled over the course of 314 miles at an average speed of 281,488 miles an hour or about 4.7 miles a minute. This broke all existing speed records. and on the straightaways Webster flew at a rate of five miles a minute. His average time for the closed course was five miles an hour faster than the average of Maj. Mario de Bernardi in a land plane over the open course two years ago, when the Italian estab lished a world's speed record. Motor trouble forced all the Italian entries to quit before completing the course. The United States did not participate in the race this year because its only entrant, Lieut. Alford J. Williams, crack navy flyer, dld not have time to complete preparatory tests in his specially constructed seaplane.

LAVISHLY FURRED CLOTH COATS; FRINGE IS NOW IN HIGH REGARD

fur mode, the season's handsomely befurred cloth coats become a theme of fascinating interest. As to the relative style prestige of novelty flat pelts versus showy long-haired furs for trimming, the mode casts a fiftyfifty vote.

It therefore resolves itself into a matter of individual preference as to tinguished with clever touches of nate with tiers of narrow silver fringe

Now that unique flat pelts have entered so conspicuously into the together with the showiness of the fur itself is emphasized throughout cloak styling.

Fringe flourishes in the realm of smart mode. It contributes its grace to both daytime and evening modes. always in ways most unique.

A testimony to the high regard with which fashionables view fringe was recently cited in that the wedding gown whether the new coat shall be dis- of a most distinguished bride was or-

The models in this fllustration present the subject of the fur-trimmed coat from two distinctly different angles. A very swagger type is defined by the mode to the left. For its development the stylist chooses an exquisitely fine beige duvetyn. Which brings to mind the fact of the preminence of "classy" suede finished weaves throughout the list of fashionable cloakings.

The collar is of pale brown calfskin spotted with white, with a pocket of the same. This pocket is doubly unique in that it is equipped with a "locktite" attachment.

The other model stresses the lavishly befurred coat type. It is said The new beaded frocks, too, stress sparkling rows of crystal fringe. However, it is the wide colorful silken fringes which count most of all.

Illustrative of the novel treatment accorded fringe is this charming daytime gown to the right in the picture This unusual model was designed for that favorite of favored film stars. Gertrude Olmstead. The wide ombre fringe, which shades from cocoa to chestnut brown, blends to the beige tone of the silk crepe which it trims. Note that the fringe is caught in at the hemline and the wrists, which of course confirms the striking originality displayed in its styling.

As for evening frocks, many of them are a matter of one row of fringe upon another. If not in straight rows, then fringe travels along devious diagonal paths as it does on this lovely white crepe frock in the picture, which is

EASY LESSONS IN AUCTION BRIDGE

Article Five.

The Original Bid Now we are ready to give the definite requirements for an original bid of one of a suit. A bid of one contracts to take seven tricks-one odd, or one over the book of six. If dealer has four tricks in his hand and the remaining nine are evenly distributed between the other three players, his partner would hold three of them, and together they could take the one odd. Therefore, the general requirement for a bid of one is four sure tricks.

When dealer is considering a bid he knows absolutely nothing regarding the other hands, and so has a right to assume that the winning eards which he does not hold are evenly divided among the other three players. If dealer passes, second hand finds himself in practically the same situation. The only added information which he has is that one of his opponents, the dealer, does not hold four sure tricks. Therefore, the requirements for a bid by dealer or by second hand after dealer has passed are just the same and are as follows:

An Original Bid of a Suit

To bid one of a suit, that suit should be of four or more cards with three sure tricks, and the hand as a whole should contain two quick tricks (four probable tricks).

This rule is very simple and only needs a few illustrations to fix it in the mind of anyone learning the game. The A K Q and one small card is the only four-card combination, and the A K and three small cards, A Q J and two small ones, and K Q J and two small ones are the only fivecard combinations which contain two quick tricks, and as they will also take four sure tricks they may be bid without any outside strength.

Any other five-card combination headed by the Ace or the King, Queen -that is by one quick trick-may be bid if the hand also contains one quick trick in a side suit. Any fivecard suit headed by the Queen, Jack, Ten, requires two outside quick tricks because the trump suit contains none.

If a suit which is to be bid lacks a part of the specific requirements a bid may still be made provided the hand contains enough extra strength to compensate for this lack. For instance, a four-card suit such as A K and two small ones, or A Q J and one small one, or K Q J and one small one, or a six-card suit which contains only one-half a quick trick like K and five small ones, or Q J 10 and three small ones, may be bid with one outside quick trick.

An Original Bid of One No Trump

The simple requirements for a bid of one no trump by dealer or second an answered question in Liberty. hand are: (1) Two quick tricks with three sults protected or (2) Four quick tricks in two suits.

The following examples will illus-

(1) S-A, x x x; H-K, x x x; D-K, x x; C-x x;-2 quick tricks. (2) S-A, x x x; H-K, Q, x; D-Q. J. x; C-x x x;-21/2 quick tricks. (3) S-A, K, x; H-x x x; D-A. K. x x: C-x x x:-4 quick tricks. (4) S-A, K; H-x x x; D-A, K, Q. x x; C-x x x;-11/2 quick tricks.

No. (1) is absolutely the minimum strength upon which a no trump may be bid. This type of hand may cause the beginner some trouble because having only one Ace and two Kings it may be difficult to see how it can produce four tricks which are the requisites for any bid. It is a wellknown fact in other games as well as in Auction that the cards held by the one playing the hand-in Auction. the declarer-are of greater value than the same ones would be when held by the opponents or, in other words, the offensive strength of cards is greater than their defensive strength; thus the quick trick values as already given, which have been worked out for the defensive, may be doubled to obtain the probable tricks offensively held. Therefore, two quick tricks are valued as four probable tricks offensively played.

No. (2) requires no explanation. Having 21/2 quick tricks it can be counted for five probable offensive tricks, making a good no trump bid. No. (3) is entirely too strong to pass as it contains four quick tricks; one no trump would make a better bid than one diamond. The same is true of No. (4) although the diamond suit is still stronger.

If this four or five-card suit were a major it should be bid in preference to a no trump; but no trump should be bid rather than a minor in all such hands.

Bird's Sharp Eyes

After experiments by scientists in Great Britain several conclusions were reached about the ability of birds to see, says Nature Magazine. fringe generously trims many a black Among these are: A thrush sees a worm writhing in grass 100 yards off. A sparrow 50 yards away sees a dropped crumb or pea and immediately darts to it. The swallow, skimming along 40 miles an hour, marks down gnats 100 yards ahead. A hawk, poised 300 feet above a tangled brake. detects a mouse through heavy growth. Eagles and vultures possess supertelescopic sight and their vision ts even keener.

Chicago Boasting of Record Loud Speaker

When the embattled farmers of Massachusetts fired the shot that was heard round the world, they were revolutionary pioneers in more than one respect. They did the first piece of educational broadcasting, on a worldwide wave length, but there was this criticism: It took too long for the message to travel.

Recently there has come to the fore a desire on the part of merchants not only to get current news from great distances with which to attract the passersby, but also to extend the hear ng range either throughout a store department or up and down the avenues approaching the store. To meet this need, loud speakers of various powers have been developed, with Chicago now boasting of one that will carry six miles. It weighs 180 pounds and has an air column of ten feet.

MEN MAROONED

CHAPTER X-Continued -16-

"Miss Quarrier, you know my If you choose to disregard wishes.

"Mr. Guthrie is an educated gentleman," broke in Joan, "not a cave man. I will be home by ten o'clock. Good night!" And crowding past the discomfited Swan, Joan Quarrier closed the door of the mission in his

"It is not difficult to tell who's commending here," chuckled Guthrie. "I don't like to humiliate the little man. He means well enough but if they will send weak men to work in this country, and the Oblates strong ones, like your friend, Pere Rousseau, the Indians will flock to the French." "But Cameron tells me you've done wonders with the orphan Crees." "Oh, yes! I've been useful to them -that's why he doesn't dare exert the authority which my honorable brother bestowed upon him. Imagine, nursing three years in France, and having Mr. Swan to guide my faltering feet!" She laughed merrily, as they swung through the stinging air of the clear-

The man beside her was hardly aware of his moceasins touching the brittle snow, so lifted in spirits was he with the pearness of the girl whose strange decision to winter at Albany defied analysis.

"You didn't tell me this afternoon why you deceived me as to your whereabouts in your Christmas letter," be bazarded.

"If I had told you, would you have come to see me?" she asked, turning ber bood and meeting his eyes with frank, impersonal gaze.

"Yes!" "That is the reason."

"You mean you didn't want to see

"I mean that you had your work to do-It would have interfered."

He walked for a space in silence, then turned to her. "You are that kind of a woman-you understand." "I hope so."

He was thrilled by the thought that Joan Quarrier's friendship was like that. But why had she stayed? Could it be that after the photographs she had seen at Elkwan with their inscriptions, she had stayed nevertheless at Albany because-because what? He could tell her now that he was free, since his reply to Ethel's letter which went out that afternoon to Moose. But what had his freedom to do with the girl whose overshoes crunched the snow beside him?

"I would like to ask you a question," he said at length.

Her laugh rippled on the frosty air. "This sounds interesting, Mr. Exile, but to avoid anti-climax you should wait for our walk back-the moon will be up then."

"The question won't wait," he repiled. "Has your brother written you of my engagement?" "Yes."

"Thank you! I wanted to tell you that it has been broken-by her-in this Christmas mail."

In silence the girl walked, stiffly, Garth thought, watching her with head turned to the river. He looked but could not see her face, buried in the fur hood.

"The reason given was-Ninda." She turned fiercely questioning eyes as she demanded: "He told your family that story?" "Evidently," said Garth grimly. If there was capacity for feeling in this girl, he thought, she'll show it now. "My brother has done with me, you see. I've disgraced the family." "No, I don't see," she said, hoarsely, gazing straight ahead. "My brother has told that story in Montreal-injured you beyond reparation-my brother !"

"I'm sorry I told you," he replied, shocked at the depth of her emotion. "But I wanted you to know that my shackles are off-I'm a free man. I wanted you to know-

In the tide of emotion which stirred him, Guthrie faltered, stopped. The shoulders of the girl lifted in a sob. as she turned to conceal her distress.

He touched her, thrilling at the contact. "Please-I'm so sorry" he low!" he heard her say. Then she got herself in hand-straightened, and said: "I will write at once to your brother."

"You'll do no such thing. Do you suppose I'd allow you to soil yourself with this family row? Your brother has unintentionally done me a service, for which I thank him."

Joan's dark brows contracted, as she gravely searched his face. "You -are not joking-you mean it?"

"I mean every syllable of it. Now let's forget it all and get on to the Camerons' before you freeze out here! it's growing sharp," he said, but what he meant was: If you stand thereanother second looking at me like that, Joan Quarrier, I'll kiss you.

The talk of the factor's was not allowed by that jubilant fur trader to stray far from the mad raid on Akimiski by Garth and Etienne, and the medicine-making of old Saul. From the mouth of Cameron, Joan Quarrier learned the details of the desperate effort to save the trade and its uitimate success.

"Aren't you proud of yourself, Mr. Exile?" she said as Cameron finished, and her patent joy in his success was like wine to his blood, "And Shot, too, he earned his citation-but how gruesome it was-awful!"

As he walked beside her under the frosted stars to the mission, Guthrie strove to shift the conversation to the personal-to recapture the note struck with such poignancy when she learned the aftermath of her brother's story in Montreal, but the armor of her reserve defied him. Baffled by her mood, but respecting it, he asked if he might come to say goodby the following morning, and left her at the mission door.

To the man whose love had been on his lips when his hand touched her shoulder, the new mood of the girl defled analysis. He had left the Camerons' full of what Joan Quarrier had come to mean to him-hungry to tell her there above the white Albany what he had first sensed that September night, caught in the magic of her nearness. Here, on the rim of the world, with only the glittering stars to see, he would have offered the scarred face and the love of Garth Guthrie, black sheep; but she had known his purpose and closed his lips. Yet why, unless the exile up the coast had meant more than a passing friendship, had she stayed on to the drudgery-the unspeakable monotony of the mission?

CHAPTER XI

She was waiting to the clearing when Shot loped up, sniffed, looked at her curiously, then pawed her joyfully with fore feet.

"Shot, you know re?" And she rubbed the ears of the wriggling aire-knew you no longer." And the factor of Elkwan reveled in the slow color that touched her temples-the swift flickering of heavy-lashed lids.

"His master had reason to remem ber the guests who insulted him in his own house."

"One of his guests," countered Guthrie, "was an angel of mercy. We seldom forget the visitation of angels, "And the other-an ungrateful scan-along the shore," she parried, and led the way, Shot circling her, begging for a frolic.

"You're trying again for the spring trade from the island?" she asked. "Oh, with Souci there, and the echo of his spirit voices in their ears, we shall hold the hunters who crossed the

"My brother!- How low, utterly | you are coupling me with ghostsdead memories; that you will not see -understand-" In his eagerness to clarify her vision of him-erase the memory of Ethel with whom, in spite of his denials, he still seemed hopelessly involved. Garth flounderedcame to a halt through sheer excess > of emotion. "Can't we continue the good friends we are, Mr. Exile? We need friendship-understanding, up here on this lonely coast. Can't we-like two good comrades-hold to what we have?"

Dazed, helpless in the face of her obsession-her evident conviction that her brother had been the cause of his ultimate break with Ethel Falconer, Guthrie walked on in silence.

"Can't we hold to our friendship," she repeated, facing him, and slipping off her mitten, extended her hand.

He took it. At the raw pain in his eyes Joan Quarrier's lips opened in an involuntary catch of the breath. Her eyes widened in a look of wonder, as if startled by what she saw

"You know you always will have my friendship," he said thickly. "I'm coming down the coast in Februaryto see my-friend. May 1?"

"Your friend will be very glad to see you."

At the door of the mission, she met his reluctant good-by with a smile so personal-so like a caress that the hand he gave her shook like a leaf in the wind.

"My friend," he repeated under his breath as he followed Shot back to Etienne and the waiting dog team, "my friend-my world."

Hour by hour, over the coast ice. the light sled reeled off the miles. So good was the going, so keen the five great huskies for the trail, that the men left their robes only to stretch their legs. The forty miles to the Big Willow river slid past by early afternoon, and the hungry men turned in to the river mouth to build a fire from driftwood and boil their kettle.

Twenty miles directly across the strait, the gray Akimiski hills parted to form Seal cove.

"I'd give a good deal to know how they took the news over there of the loss of the northern fur. Etienne." sald Guthrie, busy with his plate of beans and bacon. "Hello! There's a team coming in over the ice. Wonder who It is."

For a time Etienne studied the black object through the binoculars, but when the kettle and fry-pan had been stowed and the sled cover relashed, two rifles in their skin cases rode by the sides of the passengers. A mile from the noon camp at the river the sled, evidently headed for the mouth of the Kapiskau, drew inshore. "A hunter from de Kapiskau. We veel now hear how dey swear on de schooner dis Christmas.'

The dog-team slowed to a walk and shortly were within speaking distance. "Kequay!" called Savanne. "W'ere you go?"

Leaving his panting dogs, who straightway lay down on the ice, the stranger hurried to the sled from Elkwan. As he approached, it was evident to the two men that the Cree was laboring under strong excitement. His sled was heavily loaded and his hard breathing indicated that he had run much crossing the strait. Staggering up, he gasped: "De boat-ovair dere! All gone! McDonal' Ha! Ha! deadall dead"

"What?" cried Garth, "the schooner's crew-dead?" "You come from dere-you see dem?" demanded the astute Etienne. A sinewy hand shot out, and gripping the Cree's shoulder, shook him vio-

"You see dem? How many?" repeated the half-breed, searching the Indian's face in an attempt to probe the truth of his statement.

"I see one dead man. No answer when I yell," insisted the other, and seemingly at the memory of the ship of the dead, his small eyes filled with dread. "What happened? Was this man shot?" demanded Garth, exchanging glances with Savanne.

"He die of sickness-I look an' run. It was ver' bad down dere een dat boat," said the Indian with a shudder.

"W'ere the dogs there?" "I see no dog."

"W'ere you from?" snarled Savanne, thrusting a face fierce with suspicion, into the Cree's.

"From de Kapiskau. I go to de boat to trade some fox."

"You get dat flour from de boatsteal it!" hazarded Etienne, guessing at the nature of the bulky load on the Indian's sled.

The Cree nodded. "Dey not use it

The swart face of the head man at Elkwan hardened into creased leather as he turned to Garth, and whispered: "I don lak dis t'ing. He see one man. Mebbe de oders ambush us. What we do?"

"I'm going over to find out. It's my duty. Boucher will wait for days. They may not all be dead. I'm going." "Suppose eet ees a trick? Suppose de ones not dead wait for der revanche, w'en we come?"

"We'll stalk 'em and see." Dropping his mittens and deliberately reaching under his capote, Etienne drew his skinning knife. Coolly running a thumb over the edge, he thrust his face into that of the disturbed Indian while his slit-like eyes snapped as he bit off the words: "You

gray. "De spirit-I am scare to go the bill. back," he protested; but the inexorable Etienne ordered him to turn his dogs and lead the way back

It was hard on the hunter, if his story was straight, but bearding a walting McDonald in his lair was not to be lightly hazarded.

"I think the man is honest. Etjenne. He paturally hated to go again to the ship. But what could have happened -flu-smallpox?

Savanne shook his head. Only recently the bay had been swept by influenza, brought in by a whaler, im partially striking down Eskimos, Indians, and dogs, but he was still suspicious of a counterstroke by the schooner people, sore from their defeat, and confidently expected a confession from the dog driver ahead before the dusk caught them. Guthrie. on the contrary, believed that some epidemic, or possibly scurvy, had stricken the crew, and wondered if the great McDonald, in the pride of his strength, had found a grave in the Akimiski ice. The Indian had seen but one body and fled, so he said; but the schooner had been silent as a tomb. Queer that all had died, so soon. As he left, he had called repeatedly from the deck. without answer, except once, faintly, he had heard something-like the voice of a spirit. When the Cree had reluctantly cached his load of flour and they started to cross the twenty miles of ice, he begged them not to force him into that grave of white men. The ship was haunted by demons, an Indian from the north had said. They had brought the sickness-were displeased with McDonald Ha! Ha!-and would surely bewitch him if he again went to that ship of the dead. But Etienne insisted that the seeming fear of the Cree was only a ruse to lead them into the trap while he hung back and thus avoided a shot in the back for his treachery.

Opposition to Census Traced to the Bible government officials charged with this task, encountered strong and persistent opposition in certain peasant districts against the count. They explained to the authorities that counting the human beings and the horses would bring bad luck and that this was an ancient belief, which had many times been put to the test. This strange feeling of impending danger in the face of counting possessions is not restricted to Russia. Flemish peasants never count their sheep or geese nor any of their personal possessions,

During the census taking in Russia, | an end to a run of good luck. The origin of this curious belief, that seems so widespread, is to be found in the Bible. It will be recalled that David, the king of Israel, was severely punished by the Lord for his census of the people. The Lord counted it as evidence of pride and insufficient trust in the strength of the protector of Is rael.-Pierre Van Paassen, in the At lanta Constitution.

Witty Retort That

Put End to Heckling The late Rev. S. S. Henshaw, primitive Methodist minister, will long be remembered in Sheffield, says an English periodical. In earlier days he was an active radical, and did much to help the parliamentary candidates of his party. A little man, he had a cutting wit. On one occasion, at election time, his candidate was being badly heckted by a giant publican, who had come to smash the Liberals. The member found him a difficult customer. At last the little preacher plucked his sleeve and whispered: "Let me deal with him." Advancing to the front of the platform, he asked blandly: "Now, sir, what is it you want?" The burly publican, thumbs in the armholes of his waistcoat, eyed him scornfully for a few moments, and then growled: "Thee! Why, man, I could ate thee!" "I dare say you could," flashed back Mr. Henshaw. smiling; "but if you did, you would have more brains in your stomach than you have ever had in your head." There was no further trouble

The BABY

Why do so many, many babies of today escape all the little fretful spells and infantile ailments that used to worry mothers through the day, and keep them up half the night? If you don't know the answer, you haven't discovered pure, harmless Castoria. It is sweet to the taste, and sweet in the little stomach. And its gentle influence seems felt all through the tiny system. Not even a distasteful dose of castor oil does so much good. Fletcher's Castoria is purely vegetable, so you may give it freely, at first sign of colic; or constipation; or diarrhea. Or those many times when von just don't know what is the matter. For real sickness, call the doctor, always. At other times, a few drops of Fletcher's Castoria. The doctor often tells you to do just that; and always says Fletcher's. Other preparations may be just as pure, just as free from dangerous drugs, but why experiment?
