Even Though We Had No Bank, we should still advocate Bank Accounts

Thriving bank accounts make a thriving people, so ours is not altogether a selfish purpose.

Since we are in the banking business, however, we offer to those who keep or want to keep a bank account what we think is the best place in the community to carry it.

What Doctors Think Laxative Habit

In all history no Indian was ever known to have constipation. Nor need YOU. He chewed the bark of a tree called cascara. Today, we have the candy cascaret.

Cascarizing the bowels never forms a laxative habit. If already formed, an occasional cascaret will usually break the habit. For cascara strengthens the muscular walls of the bowels, and their need of any aid at all grows constantly less. What other cathartic has this characteristic? The writer

CHILDREN SUFFER BURNS

Two small children of the Blevins family were rather badly ourned Monday when the car in which they were riding in some way caught on fire The family was moving from Quait to Windy Vailey, and the children were in the car with their mother. They were brought to Hedley for treatment. The burns were not erious, but it was very pathetic to see the little ones suffer such excruciating pain.

NEWS REVIEW OF CURRENT EVENTS

More Marines Sent to Nicaragua-Government's Policy Attacked.

By EDWARD W. PICKARD

THAT rebellion in Nicaragua whose head Uncle Sam cut off last year is still wriggling its tall vigorously enough to cause the United States government a lot of trouble. The tail consists of General Sandino and his band, who are holding out in Nueva Segovia, where the leader has set up a new "republic," A few days ago the American marines, in conjunction with the Nicaraguan constabulary. fought those rebels for several days and took the town of Quilali, but six marines were killed and many others wounded. Washington was aroused not only by this encounter but by adverse criticism of the administration's conduct of the Nicaraguan affair, and after the President had discussed it with the cabinet orders were issued for the immediate dispatch of 1,000 more marines to the scene of action. The reinforcements were gathered at Quantico, Paris island, San Diego and Panama. At the same time it was announced that Brig. Gen, Logan Feland had been ordered to proceed to Nicaragua and take over command of operations there. The additions bring the force of marines in Nicaragua up to 2.415 men.

Secretary Kellogg, following 8 luncheon conference with the President, issued a formal statement announcing the government's intention to "co-operate with the constabulary of Nicaragua effectively to establish order throughout that country and make possible the holding of a free and fair election which we have undertaken to supervise."

The secretary relterated that this government and Nicaragua consider the Sandino forces as bandits. "It will be recalled," Mr. Kellogg said, "that both sides agreed to lay down their arms and that they did so with the exception of a comparatively small body of men under Sandino, which has since been augmented by lawless elements."

When congress resumed its session on Wednesday the Democrats and some others at once opened their attack on the administration's Nicaraguan policy. Senator Heflin of Alabama offered a resolution in the senate denouncing that policy and requesting the President to withdraw the marines immediately. Senator Nye of North Dakota presented another, declaring against the protection by the American government of investments of American citizens in foreign countries; and next day Senator Wheeler of Montana introduced a resolution for the appointment of a Belize, British Honduras, and after a senate committee to investigate the American Nicaraguan policy.

In the house Bloom of New York offered a resolution calling on the secretary of state and the secretary of the navy to supply information concerning the recent bloody fight and the reasons why marines were sent to Nicaragua. Begg of Ohio defended the administration and engaged in a warm debate with Garrett, Huddleston Quilali was Sandino's base, and its loss was a severe blow to the bandit leader. He is said to be concentrating his forces at El Chipote, a mountain stronghold, and the marines and Nicaraguan troops probably will attack him there.

SECRETARY OF STATE KELLOGG has answered the French note suggesting that France and the United States sign a treaty forever outlawing war between the two nations with a counter-proposal that the United States and France join in an effort to obtain the adherence of all the principal powers to a declaration renouncing war as an instrument of national policy in favor of the pacific settlement of international disputes. Mr. Kellogg's note makes it clear that the United States cannot considthe Briand proposal if it is conance and America, and never to go to war under any circum-Foreign Minister Briand promptly replied, asking for clarification of certain details of the Kellogg proposal, especially as to what would happen if the United States senate refused to ratify an arbitration award. He did not make serious objection to the idea of including all other nations, but that plan did not arouse his enthusiasm. He pointed out that the treaty must leave France free to execute its obligations to the League of Nations. European press comment on Kellogg's proposal was generally unfavorable.

PRESIDENT COOLIDGE transmitted to congress a letter from Secretary of the Navy Wilbur, which he indorsed, asking the appointment of a commission of experts to investigate the disaster that befell the submarine S-4 and to make recommendations looking to the avoidance of similar accidents in the future. Identical joint resolutions carrying out the administration's recommendation were introduced by Senator Hale, chairman of the senate committee on naval affairs, and Representative Butler, chairman of the house com-It was provided that the commission should consist of three civilians and two retired naval officers. Representative La Guardia of New York spent 36 hours on a submarine last week, and then announced that his experience had convinced him the navy had done everything possible in the S4 disaster and that he would rise to the navy's defense in congress if the need arose.

Divers are beginning to recover the bodies of the victims of the S-4, although their operations are hampered by the extreme cold. Wednesday the first three bodies were brought to the surface and taken to the naval hospital at Chelsea, Mass. They were identified as those of Lieut. Commander R. K. Jones, Lieut, Joseph McGinley and Chief Machinist's Mate Aaron A. Hodges. At the Charlestown navy yard the naval court of inquiry was hearing testimony concerning the sinking of the submarine and the efforts to rescue the victims.

A LL doubt concerning the authenticity of the Mexican documents published by the Hearst papers was removed when handwriting experts employed by Hearst himself told the senate committee that the papers were undoubtedly spurious. They were sure the alleged signatures of President Calles were forged. Former Ambassador Sheffield testified that the embassy had not purchased or considered purchasing the documents offered it, and Miguel Avila, the halfbreed, who procured the parts for Hearst, gave conflicting testimony.

COLONEL LINDBERGH'S air tour of Central America continued with great success and eclat. He made a wonderful landing on a tiny field at day there flew on to San Salvador. Two days there, and thence to Tegucigalpa, Honduras. On Thursday he hopped off for Managua, Nicaragua, avoiding so far as possible flying over the zone where the marines and the rebels are fighting. His route then was to Costa Rica and Panama, his arrival at the latter city being expected on Monday. Everywhere he was, as usual, welcomed by officials and enthusiastic populations and his collection of decorations was largely increased. An extraordinary honor was the issuance of a million special Lindbergh stamps by the Panama gov-

While Mr. MacNider gave, as his reason for quitting, the need of looking after his personal business affairs, some of his friends in Iowa think he may seek the Republican vice presidential nomination this year or try for the United States senate in 1930.

> WHEN Gov. Al. Smith delivered his annual message to the New York legislature-a long document declared by him to be his last-he took the opportunity to set forth his position on prohibition and law enforcement for the benefit of those of his fellow countrymen who are considering his possibility as a Presidential candidate. Ostensibly confining himself to New York state affairs, he discussed also water power, budget reform, agriculture and structural governmental changes. As for prohibition, he insisted it was the "sacred duty" of the state to sustain the eighteenth amendment and the Volstead act and reasserted that, so far as it was within his power, he would remove from office any public officer guilty of laxity in enforcement of the law. He said the failure of the Republican legislature of 1919 to submit to a popular reterendum the question of ratifying the eighteenth amendment was "the direct cause of the unrest, uneasiness and dissatisfaction apparent in large portions of the state. It has gone further and been the prime cause of creating disrespect for the law among citizens who give the limit of obedience to every other regulatory statute ever enacted in the state or nation."

ORDERS entered by the United the lake states, which seek to enjoin the diversion of Lake Michigan water at Chicago, 13 days in which to prepare and file briefs supporting their exceptions to the findings of Charles Evans Hughes, the court's special master in the lake level controversy. As a result, it is pracically certain that three menths will elapse before the court hears oral arguments in the THREE noted figures of the amuse-ment world passed away last week. First of these was Loie Fuller, the famous dancer and friend of Queen Marie of Rumania. She died in Paris after an illness of two months. The others were Miss Emily Stevens, an actress, who had played leading roles in many plays, and Miss Dorothy Donnelly, actress and playwright. Charles M. Kittle, president of Sears, Roebuck & Co. and former vice president of the Illinois Central railroad, died in Chicago following an emergency operation. He was only forty-seven years old and had had extraordinary success in business.

PLANS just announced by the governing board of the Pan-American union contemplate the erection in Santo Domingo of the largest lighthouse in the world as a memorial to Christopher Columbus. It is to cost $4,000,000 and architects of all nations are invited to compete for the honor of designing it. Prizes totaling $50,000 will be distributed among the architects. Albert Kelsey of Philadelphia has been authorized to go to Santo Domingo to select the site and plan the competition. The Dominican government already has subscribed $300,000 to the fund, and other governments have indicated their willingness to participate.

TOUCH OF GENIUS ON FELT HATS; NAVY BLUE ONCE AGAIN POPULAR

Some Pretty Felt Hats.

One thing that Paris modistes are present intricacy under the guise of simplicity. At first glance, the 1928 models suggest the thought "so simple"-which is not the case at all. When it comes to funtastic cuts and folds, new wrinkles and queer twists the new felts are breathtaking. It is apparent, in the "just arrived" models that the majority of French modistes are still plying the scissors most vigorously, making of felt a plaything when it comes to cutting it in fantastic designs. Also, brims are asserting themselves, which is real news. Some of the new brims are evidently possessed of a "wanderlust." They cut loose at the crown headline and wander up on the crown, forming a trimming as they go or perhaps develop into a tiara flare. Many of these brims have a trick of dropping at the back, fitting into the nape of the neck. and then suddenly developing a ten dency to form tabs which entirely con ceal the ears.

From close-fitting cap to cloche of medium brim, runs the course of the "first hats" in the new year. The illustration portrays several interesting States Supreme court allowed felts, very smart for immediate wear. Special attention is called to the cloche shown in the lower right cor ner of this picture for it indicates the trend of the vogue toward curious new brim outlines. Grosgrain ribbon shows through the slashes in the crown and the same ribbon ties about the head

Prepare to hear the good news, navy blue registers for a spring debut. When the pendulum swings to navy blue-well, there is simply no stopping it on its onward course.

In vesteryear it was navy blue serge that ruled in the realm of daytime fashions, today all indications are that navy jersey will do the honors both for frocks and for charming ensembles which emphasize three-quarter coats with plaited skirts.

Navy Jersey with a metal touch achieved in gold buttons, perhaps a gilded belt and like as not a gold bracelet is a promise of spring.

Have Kidneys Examined By Your Doctor

Take Salts to Wash Kidneys i Back Pains You or Bladder Bothers

Flush your kidneys by drinking a quart of water each day, also take salts occasionally, says a noted authority, who tells us that too much rich food forms acids which almost paralyze the kidneys in their efforts to expel it from the blood. They become sluggish and weaken; then you may suffer with a dull misery in the kidney region, sharp pains in the back or sick headache, dizziness, your stomach sours, tongue is coated, and when the weather is bad you have rheumatic twinges. The urine gets cloudy, full of sediment, the channels often get sore and irritated, obliging you to seek relief two or three times during the night.

To help neutralize these irritating acids, to help cleanse the kidneys and flush off the body's urinous waste, get four ounces of Jad Salts from any pharmacy here; take a tablespoonful in a glass of water before breakfast for a few days, and your kidneys may then act fine. This famous salts is made from the acid of grapes and lemon juice, combined with lithia, and has been used for years to help flush and stimulate sluggish kidneys: also to neutralize the acids in the system so they no longer frritate, thus often relieving bladder weakness.

Jad Salts is inexpensive, cannot infure and makes a delightful effervescent lithia-water drink.

It is easy to see through the system of some literary critics. They only seek to be "different."

That's the beauty of Castoria; its gentle influence seems just what is needed. It does all that castor oil might accomplish, without shock to the system. Without the evil taste It's delicious! Being purely vegetaable, you can give it as often as there's a sign of colic; constipation; diarrhea; or need to aid sound, natural sleep.

SALES 21/2 TIMES THOSE OF ANY OTHER BRANT

0000 JIPS ON SALESMANSHIP By O. T. FRASH

Romance of a Spool of Thread A CLERK in a little Indiana country store coce saw a traveling salesman explain to the merchant the difference between a good thread and another of Inferior quality. That traveling salesman untwisted both samples and pulled them apart, holding the ends up to the light, and calling attention to the long fibers of cotton in the good thread as contrasted with the short fibers in the poor one. Then he heard the salesman talk about the cotton as it grew in the field, passed to ginner and spinner. and at last emerged as a finished product on the spool. As a result of that entertaining demonstration, the merchant threw out a line of inferior thread and substituted one of real merit.

The salesman accomplished this by knowing his goods, and by telling what he knew in an entertaining way. The retail clerk took this lesson to heart, and when the new thread ar rived, he repeated the demonstration to customers whenever he had time. In every case they listened with in terest and he sold thread. Of course, thread sales would amount to little. but the clerk carried his theory further and he made it a part of his business to learn entertaining facts about nearly every article in his stock, many of which facts he gleaned from an encyclopedia. He told them entertainingly and he sold goods.

Moreover, this clerk quickly gained the reputation of knowing his goods and he thereby built for himself a following of customers who placed great weight upon his advice and who insisted on buying their goods from him. He has a store of his own now-a big one-but he drew a stiff salary for many years as a salesman, and he learned the basic secret of success, from the romance in that spool of thread.

Store Teamwork That Pays

T WO sisters in a big Chicago de partment store "put one over on the boss" that brought a grin to his face and more money in their pay envelopes. The floor manager had noted a sudden increase in their sales, and sought the reason by lingering unobtrusively near one of the girls who was employed in the suit department. Presently he heard her say:

"Did you notice the bargains in cotton blankets that are being offered on the third floor? The buyer of those blankets certainly must have found some manufacturer who needed cash mighty badiy, or he couldn't be making such prices on the beautiful blankets he's selling this week " After this remark, Mr. Floor Manager saw a great light. He followed the customer as she left his floor and she led him straight to the blanket department where the other sister was just then telling a woman about the wonderful values being offered in the suit department. Those two sisters were doing some team work that made sales. And while each was benefited by the co-operation of the ther, the store was in the position of the colored person's bear trap-"It ketched em comin' and gwine.'

The remarkable feature of this true story is, not that it happened in that Chicago store that day, but that it doesn't happen in every store every day. Think of the results that would follow if every clerk in a certain store adopted that plan.

Stone Age Dwellings Owned by Profiteers

Southern California had apartment profiteers away back, according to a scientific correspondent whose investigation of the Stone age dwellings. hewn out of solid rock, has convinced him that keeping up an apartment nev- play the way he wishes to, or, if not. er was a snap. At the entrance to one six-apartment cavern he found hieroglyphics, which he has deciphered to mean the rates for apartments as follows: One abalone, one sun. Two abalones, two suns.

Three abalones, three suns. Twelve abalones, one moon.

Our correspondent figures that the home hunters among the Pimugna Indians had to pay at the rate of one abalone a sleep, or day, or 12 abalones per lunar month. The cave was the largest on the island and comprised the apartment house de luxe of that period. A short distance below the entrance to the stone apartment house the professor found a huge pile of empty abalone shells, proving that the landlord did a more or less rushing business.

EASY LESSONS IN AUCTION BRIDGE

By PAUL H. SEYMOUR of "Highlights on Auction Bridge (Copyright, by Hoyle, Jr.)

F SENIOR'S first lead is low in his own suit, junior should play his highest card and if he wins the trick return his next highest at once. If senior's lead is high in his own suit, junior must think at once about unblocking. Unblocking in your partner's suit is playing in such a way that you will not win the trick upon which you play your last card of that suit. For instance: Suppose that senior opens with a King. follows with the Ace, and then leads the Jack; and that junior holds the Queen and two small ones. The natural way for junior to play would be his two small ones on his partner's Ace and King. But if he does this he will win the third trick and be unable to lead back. Thus senior will be left holding some good cards which he cannot make unless he happens to get the lead in another suit. The proper way to unblock is to hold the lowest card of that suit until the last.

In the case given above-if junfor holds the Queen, seven and three he should play the seven on senior's King, the Queen on the Ace and then his last card, the three, would fall on senior's Jack, leaving the lead with senior to make the remaining cards of that suit. If senior leads the Queen and junior holds King and one small one he should play the King on the Queen, and if it wins lead back his small one. If the opening lead at no trump is an Ace it calls upon partner to play his highest card-thus to unblock quickly and vigorously.

If senior's first lead is low in junfor's suit it indicates length or an honor, and if junior wins the trick he should lead back low hoping that senior's honor may catch declarer's stopper for that suit. If senior leads high in junior's suit and junior can place the other high cards in such a way as to know that declarer holds one higher one which cannot be caught, he should play low, because he wishes to get declarer's high card out as soon as possible while senior still holds one of that suit.

Suppose, for instance, that senior leads the ten and that junior holds the Ace, King, Jack, eight and five and dummy exposes the nine, seven and two. Junior can feel very certain that declarer has the Queen and two small ones, and that if he (junior) wins the first trick with the Ace and then continues the suit with the King and Jack, declarer will win the third trick with his Oueen and then senior will have none of the suit left to lead in case he gets in the lead again. In this case funior would have two good cards which he could not make unless he had a re-entry in another suit. However, if he plays low on senior's lead of the ten, declarer will have to play his Queen on the first trick and then four tricks are set up in this suit, which may be taken whenever senior or junior gets the lead.

Declarer's Play of a Declared Trump

After senior has led to the first trick and dummy's cards have been spread on the table, declarer should stop to look over the two hands and estimate their probable value. By taking two or three minutes at that time to lay out a campaign for the play of the entire hand, he will save much more time than this as the play proceeds. Moreover, such a preliminary survey often enables him to avoid mistakes which might cost him the game.

Some of the points to be decided at this time are: Shall he extract trumps at once; which suit shall he play first; what finesses shall he take: from which hand shall be lead each suit; has he enough entry cards in each hand to can he create one or more by playing his cards in a certain order. If senior opens with a small card of a suit in which he has bid, declarer knows that he has three higher cards of that suit and probably one lower one. He should try to determine just what cards senior holds. Applying the rule of eleven will tell him how many junfor holds above the one led, and this, together with seeing dummy and his own hand, should help him to place quite accurately all of the high cards Many who have never tried to play auction in this way may think it a tremendously difficult task, but they will be surprised after playing a few games and holding these things in their minds how much they can figure out, and how greatly they will be benefited by knowledge gained in these

Rumpless

The Rumpless fowls are very ancient. Tailless fowls are mentioned by Temminck in his earliest writings. They are also mentioned as the Rumpless or Persian cocks of Latham. Nearly 300 years ago this variety was known to Aldrovandi, who called them Persjan fowls. Sononi and Temminck state that this fowl is a native of the Ceylon forests and is called by the natives Wallikikilli or Cock of the Woods, E. L. Layard, writing from Ceylon in 1850, says that the Rumpless fowl is a rare, tame introduction from Cochin. Rumpless fowls are bred in several varieties and colors; they are usually quite like the Brown-Red and the Duckwing Game fowls in color.

STORY FROM THE START

Defying all efforts to capture him, after a long series of mur-ders and robseries, a super-crook known to the police only as "The Bat" has brought about a veritable reign of terror. At his wits' end, and at the man's own request, the chief of police assigns his best operative, Anderson, to get on the trail of the Bat. With her niece, Dale Ogden, Miss Cornetts Van Gorder is living in the country home of the late Courtleign Fleming, who will his recent death had been until his recent death had been president of the Union bank, wrecked because of the theft of a large sum of currency. Miss Var Gorder receives a note warning her to vacate the place at once on pain of death. Dale returns from the city, where she Dale had been to hire a gardener Miss Cornelia tells Lizzie Allen, her faithful Irish maid, who is decidedly nervous, that a detective is coming that night. The gardener arrives, giving his name as Brooks.

"I could not verify your references, as the Brays are in Canada-" she proceeded. The 'young man took an eager step forward. "I am sure if Mrs. Bray were here-" he began, then flushed and stopped, twisting his cap. "Were here?" said Miss Cornelia in a curious voice. "Are you a professional gardener?" "Yes." The young man's manner had grown a trifle defiant; but Miss Cornelia's next question followed remorselessly. "Know anything about hardy perenmials?" she said in a soothing voice, while Lizzie regarded the interview with wondering eyes. "Oh yes," but the young man seemed curiously lacking in confidence.

"They-they're the ones that keep their leaves during the winter, aren't they?" "Come over here-closer-" said Miss Cornelia, imperiously. Once more she scrutinized him and this time there was no doubt of his discomfort under her stare. "Have you had any experience with rubeola?" she queried finally.

"Oh, yes-yes-yes, indeed," the gardener stammered. "Yes." "And alopecia?" pursued Miss Cornelia.

The young man seemed to fumble in his mind for the characteristics of such a flower or shrub.

"The dry weather is very hard on alopecia," he asserted, finally, and was evidently relieved to see Miss Cornelia receive the statement with a pleasant smile. She leaned forward -her next question was obviously to be a weighty one.

"What do you think is the best treatment for urticaria?" she propounded with a highly professional

It appeared to be a catch-question, young man knotted his br Finally a gleam of light seemed to

"Urticaria frequently needs-erthinning," he announced decisively.

"Needs scratching, you mean!" Miss Cornelia rose, with a snort of disdain, and faced him, "Young man, urticaria is hives-rubeola is measles-and alopecia is baldness!" she thundered. She waited a moment for his defense -none came.

"Why did you tell me you were a professional gardener?" she went on, accusingly. "Why have you come here at this hour of night, pretending to be something you're not?"

By all standards of drama, the young man should have wilted before her wrath. Instead he suddenly smiled at her, beyishly, and threw up his hands in a gesture of defeat. "I know I shouldn't have done it!" he confessed with appealing frankness. "You'd have found me out anyhow! I don't know anything about gardening. The truth is," his tone grew somber, "I was desperate. I had to have work!"

The candor of his smile would have disarmed a stenier-hearted person than Miss Cornelia. But her suspicions were still awake. "That's all, is it?"

"That's enough, when you're down and out." His words had an unmistakable accent of finality. She couldn't help wanting to believe him -and yet-he wasn't what he had pretended to be-and this night of all nights was no time to take people on trust! "How do I know you won't steal the spoons?" she queried, her voice still gruff.

"Are they nice spoons?" he asked with absurd seriousness.

She couldn't help smiling at his tone. "Beautiful spoons."

Again that engaging, boylsh manner of his touched something in her heart.

"Speons are a great temptation to me, Miss Van Gorder-but if you'll take me, I'll promise to leave them alone."

"That's extremely kind of you," she answered with grim humor-knowing herself beaten. She went over to ring for Billy. Lizzie took the opportunity to gain her ear.

"I don't trust him. Miss Nelly! He's too smooth!" she whispered, warningly. Miss Cornella stiffened. haven't asked for your opinion, Lizzie," she said.

But Lizzie was not to be put off by the Van Gorder manner

"Oh," she whispered, "you're just as bad as the rest of 'em. A good looking man comes in the door and your brains fly out the window!" Miss Cornelia quelled her with a gesture and turned back to the young man. He was standing just where she had left him, his cap in his handsbut, while her back had been turned, his eyes had made a stealthy survey of the living room-a survey that would have made it plain to Miss Cornelia, if she had seen him, that his interest in the Fleming establishment was not merely the casual interest of a servant in his new place of abode. But she had not seen-and she could have told nothing from his present expression. "Have you had anything to eat lately?" she asked, in a kindly voice. He looked down at his cap. "Not since this morning," he admitted, as Billy answered the bell. Miss Cornelia turned to the Impassive Japanese. "Billy, give this man something to eat and then show him where he is

She hesitated. The gardener's house was some distance from the main building, and with the night and the approaching storm she felt her own courage weakening. Into the bargain, whether this stranger had lied about his gardening or not, she was curiously attracted to him. "I think," she said slowly, "that I'll have you sleep in the house here, at least for tonight. Tomorrow we canthe housemaid's room, Billy," she told the butler. And before their departure she held out a candle and matches.

"Better take these with you, Brooks," she said. "The local light company crawls under its bed every time there is a thunder storm. Good night, Brooks.'

"Good night, ma'am," said the young man, smiling. Following Billy to the door, he paused. "You're being mighty good to me," he said, diffidently, smiled again, and disappeared after Billy.

As the door closed behind them, Miss Cornelia found herself smiling, too. "That's a pleasant young fellow -no matter what he is," she said to herself, decidedly, and not even Lizzie's feverish "Haven't you any sense taking strange men into the house? How do you know he isn't the Bat?" could draw a reply from her.

Again the thunder rolled as she staightened the papers and maga: a es on the table and Lizzie gingerly -ok up the ouija-board to replace it on the beokease with the prayer-book firmly on top of it. And this time, with the roll of the thunder, the lights in the living room blinked uncertainly for an instant, before they recovered their normal brilliance.

"There go the lights!" grumbled Lizzie, her fingers still touching the prayer-book, as if for protection, Miss Cornelia did not answer her directly.

"We'll put the detective in the blue om when he comes," she said. "You'd better go up and see if it's all

Lizzie started to obey, going toward the alcove to ascend to the secend floor by the alcove stairs. But

Miss Cornelia stopped her. "Lizzie-you know that stair rall's just been varnished-Miss Dale got a stain on her sleeve there this afternoon-and Lizzie-"

"No one is to know that he is a detective. Not even Billy." Miss Cornelia was very firm.

"Well, what'll I say he is?"

"It's nobody's business." "A detective," moaned Lizzle, opening the hall door to go by the main staircase. "Tiptoeing around with his eye to all the keyholes. A body won't be safe in the bathtub." She shut the door with a little slap and disappeared. Miss Cornelia sat down-she had many things to think over-"if I ever get time really to think of anything again," she thought, "because with gardeners coming who aren't gardeners-and Lizzie hearing yells in the grounds and-"

She started slightly. The frent-door bell was ringing-a long trill, uncannily loud in the quiet house.

She sat rigid in her chair, waiting. Billy came in.

"Front-door key, please?" he asked urbanely. She gave him the key. "Find out who it is before you unlock the door," she said. He nodded. She heard him at the door-then a murmur of voices-Dale's voice and another's-"Won't you come in for a few minutes? Oh, thank you." She relaxed.

The door opened-it was Dale. "How lovely she looks in that evening wrap!" thought Miss Cornelia. "But how tired, too. I wish I knew what was worrying her."

She smiled. "Aren't you back early Dale?

Dale threw off her wrap and stood for a moment patting back into its smooth, smart bob, hair ruffled by the

"I was tired," she said, sinking into a chair. "Not worried about anything?" Miss Cornella's eyes were sharp. "No," said Dale, without conviction, "but I've come here to be company for you and I don't want to run away all the time." She picked up the evening paper and looked at it without apparently seeing it. Miss Cornella heard voices in the hall-a man's voice -affable-"How have you been, Billy?"-Billy's voice in answer, "Very "Who's out there, Dale?" she queried. Dale looked up from the paper. 'Doctor Wells, darling," she said in a listless voice. "He brought me over from the club-I asked him to come in for a few minutes. Billy's just taking his coat." She rose, threw the paper aside, came over and kissed Miss Cornelia suddenly and passionately-then, before Miss Cornella, a little startled, could return the kiss, went over and sat on the settee by the fireplace near the door of the billiard room. Miss Cornelia turned to her with a thousand questions on her tongue, but before she could ask any of them, Billy was ushering in Doctor Wells.

As she shook hands with the doctor, Miss Cornelia observed him with casual interest-wondering why such a good-looking man, in his early forties. apparently built for success, should be content with the comparative rustication of his local practice. That keen gray eyes, would have found itself more at home in a wider sphere of action, she thought-there was just that touch of ruthlessness about it which makes or mars a captain in the world's affairs. She found herself murmuring the usual conventionalities of greeting.

"Oh, I'm very well, doctor, thank you-Well, many people at the country club?"

The doctor sat down, "Not very many," he said, with a shake of his head. "This failure of the Union bank has knocked a good many of the club members sky high.

"Just how did it happen?" Miss Cornelia was making conversation.

"Oh, the usual thing." The doctor took out his cigarette case. "The cashier, a young chap named Bailey, looted the bank to the tune of over a million."

Dale turned sharply toward them from her seat by the fireplace.

"How do you know the cashier did it?" she said in a low voice. The doctor laughed. "Well-he's run away, for one thing. The bank examiners found the deficit, Bailey, the cashier, went out on an errand -and didn't come back. The method was simple enough-worthless bonds substituted for good ones-with a good bond on the top and bottom of each package, so the packages would pass a casual inspection. Probably been going on for some time."

The fingers of Dale's right hand drummed restlessly on the edge of her

"Couldn't somebody else have done it?" she queried tensely.

The doctor smiled, a trifle patrontzingly. "Of course the president of the bank had access to the vaults," he said. "But as you know, Mr. Courtleigh Fleming, the late president, was buried last Monday." Miss Cornella had seen her niece's face light up oddly at the beginning of the doctor's statement-to relapse into lassitude again at its conclusion.

turning the subject, "the only way to keep your money these days is to spend It."

"Or not have any-like myself!" the doctor agreed. "It seems strange," Miss Cornelia went on, "living in Courtleigh Fleming's house. A month ago, I'd never even heard of Mr. Fleming-though I suppose I should have-and nowwhy, I'm as interested in the failure of his bank as if I were a depositor!" The doctor regarded the end of his cigarette. "As a matter of fact," he said, pleasantly, "Dick Fleming had no right to rent you the property before the estate was settled. He must have done it the moment he received my telegram announcing his uncle's death." "Were you with him when he died?" "Yes-in Colorado. He had angina pectoris, and took me with him for that reason.' "I suppose," pursued Miss Cornella, watching Dale out of the corner of her eye, "that there is no suspicion that Courtleigh Fleming robbed his own bank?"

"Well, if he did," said the doctor amicably, "I can testify that he didn't have the loot with him." His tone grew more serious. "No! He had his faults-but not that."

"Miss Cornelia made up her mind. She had resolved before not to summon the doctor for ald in her difficulties-but now that chance had brought him here, the opportunity seemed too good a one to let slip.

"Doctor," she said, "I think I ought to tell you something. Last night and the night before, attempts were made to enter this house. Once an intruder actually got in and was frightened away by Lizzie at the top of the staircase." She indicated the alcove stairs. "And twice I have received anonymous communications threatening my life if I did not leave the house and go back to the city." Dale rose from her settee startled. "I didn't know that, auntie! How dreadful!" she gasped.

Instantly Miss Cornelia regretted her impulse of confidence. She tried to pass the matter off with tart humor. "Don't tell Lizzie," she said. "She'd yell like a siren. It's the only thing she does like a siren, but she does it superbly!" For a moment it seemed as if Miss Cornelia had succeeded. The doctor smiled-Dale sat down again, her expression altering from one of anxiety to one of amusement. Miss Cornella opened her lips to dilate further upon Lizzie's eccentricities. . .

But just then there was a splintering crash of glass from one of the spoil character. The training that produces docile obedience spoils the child's native aggressiveness and leaves him to be easily beaten in the later competitions of life by minds superior only in their inner preparation. The authority of a parent is a responsibility rather than a privilege. Another risk assumed by parents, which is not so commonly understood. is that of hurting their children by affection. No Wolf in Police Dog

German police dogs are German shepherd dogs police-trained. The history of the German shepherd dog breed dates far back into antiquity. In the opinion of Max von Stephenitz, a noted authority, it is a descendant of the Bronze age dog. This theory refutes the more or less popular present-day idea that the wolf has been largely instrumental in the development of the breed, and is in line with the beliefs of other authorities who consider it very doubtful that wolf outcresses were ever made with the German shepherd dog, and that if such were the case the relationship is remote and of minor importance.

A hair from a white woman's head is lighter in weight than a white man's hair.

"And threw in a stone!" "Wait a minute, I'll-" The doctor, all alert at once, darted up into the alcove and terked at the terrace door. "It's bolted at the top, too," called Miss Cornelia, He nodded, without wasting words on a reply, unbolted the door and dashed out into the darkness of the terrace. Miss Cornella saw him run past the French windows and disappear into blackness. Meanwhile Dale, her listlessness vanished before the shock of the strange occurrence, had gone to the broken window and picked up the stone. It was wrapped in paper-there seemed to be writing on the paper. She closed the terrace door and brought the stone to her

Miss Cornella unwrapped the paper and smoothed out the sheet.

Two lines of coarse, round handwriting sprawled across it: "Take warning! Leave this house at once! It is threatened with disaster which will involve you if you remain!" There was no signature

"Who do you think wrote it?" said Dale, breathlessly.

Miss Cornelia straightened up like a ramrod-indomitable.

"A fool-that's who! If anything was calculated to make me stay here forever, this sort of thing would do it!" She twitched the sheet of paper angrily.

"But something may happen, darling!" "I hope so! That's the reason I-.' She stopped. The doorbell was ringing again-thrilling, insistent. Her niece started at the sound. "Oh, don't let anybouy in," she besought Miss Cornella, as Billy came in from the hall with his usual air of walking on velvet. "Key, front door please-bell ring," he explained tersely, taking the key from the table. Miss Cornelia issued instructions. "See that the chain is on the door, Billy. Don't open it all the way. And get the visitor's name before you let him in."

She lowered her voice. "If he says he is Mr. Anderson, let him in and take him to the library." Billy nodded and disappeared. Date turned to her aunt, the color out of her cheeks.

"Anderson? Who is Mr .- " Miss Cornelia did not answer. She thought for a moment. Then she put her hand on Dale's shoulder in a gesture of protective affection.

"The man in the library is a detective from police headquarters," she She had expected Dale to show surprise-excitement-but the white mask of horror which the girl turned toward her appalled her. "Not-the police!" breathed Dale to tones of utter consternation, Miss Cornelia could not understand why the news had stirred her niece so deeply. But there was no time to ouzzle it out-she heard crunchin steps on the terrace-the doctor was returning. "Ssh!" she whispered. "It isn't neeessary to tell the doctor. I think he's a sort of perambulating bedside gossin -and once it's known the police are here we'll never catch the criminals !" When the doctor entered from the terrace, brushing drops of rain from his no longer immaculate evening clothes, Dale was back on her favorite settee and Miss Cornelia was poring over the mysterious missive that had been wrapped about the stone, "He got away in the shrubbery," said the doctor, disgustedly, taking out a handkerchief to fleck the spots of mud from his shoes. Miss Cornella gave him the letter of warning. "Read this," she said. The doctor adjusted a pair of pincenez-read the two crude sentences

"I think you ought to leave this house," he said bluntly. "Because of that letter? Humph!" His very seriousness, perversely enough, made her suddenly wish treat the whole matter as lightly as possible. "There is some deviltry afoot," he persisted. "You are not safe here Miss Van Gorder."

But If he was persistent in his attitude, so was she in hers. "I've been safe in all kinds of houses for sixty-odd years," she said lightly. "It's time I had a bit of change. Besides," she gestured to wards her defenses, "this house is a nearly impregnable as I can make it The window locks are sound enough -the doors are lecked and the keys are there," she pointed to the keys lying on the table. "As for the ter race door you just used," she went on, "I had Billy put an extra bolt on it today. By the way, did you bolk that door again?" She moved toward
