

Summer is busy for office staff Obituary

The summer work continues at BISD! Over the years, folks have asked me about August 1 of the year, and how it feels to know that I will have to go back to work soon.

I have a dry sense of humor, but I don't use it on those occasions. I usually smile and say, "It will be difficult."

The truth is, the business office at BISD works a full 12 months each year.

The summer is a time for hiring staff, building projects, getting buildings and grounds ready for the next school year, and for updating handbooks and policies.

Truthfully, it is the busiest time of the year for the four employees of the Central Office (Superintendent's Office).

This summer is no different. We're recruiting the best staff that we can find to teach at Brackett ISD.

It takes an immense amount of time to advertise, check references, interview, and ponder over how folks fit BISD. It's the most important job that we do.

If these folks make it through the screenings that we put before them, they stand a good chance of success as teachers at BISD.

We have some good ones. We're looking for a few more good men and women. I believe that we will find them soon.

Construction Updates
The tennis court construction should be going full blast by the time this article is printed.

This will be an exciting new addition to BISD. It won't be everything that everyone would like to see, but it will be four quality tennis courts in a town that has great need for the courts.

On Monday, July 13, the School Board will review construction bids on the new academic wing.

This building is needed. It's close to the existing high school. I believe you will be proud of the addition.

Our board has been to leadership training in San Antonio. Board members strive to improve their knowledge of school governance. We have a good board that puts the kids first at BISD.

That's about all this week. I will return from Kentucky on the day that the paper is printed.

It's after 6 p.m. the day before my trip. You can probably tell that my mind is on seeing my grandson.

If you are on the Internet and want to see the little fellow, check out: www.uky.edu/~mstep1/taylor. You'll quickly see why I had to go see this young lad.

Have a great week!

Wild animals are best left in the wild

The season has arrived when young wild animals are coming out of the woods and out of their nests and being shown around by their mothers.

Many times the wildlife young stray from their parents or are left alone as the mother searches for food and water and appear to be abandoned. In most cases, however, the parents know where the youngsters are. Problems begin to occur when humans try to help.

Unusually hot, dry weather is another factor this year that is affecting juvenile and adult wild animals. As a result, wild creatures are on the move seeking water and food, moving into wetter areas along streams, creeks and rivers, and in some areas moving into and through people's yards.

Some species of wildlife are unusually active this year and are being seen more frequently, day and night.

Many people discover apparently lost or abandoned wildlife young and take them in, thinking they are doing the right thing. This almost always does more harm than good. People should leave young animals alone unless they are obviously injured.

A Little On The Wildlife Side
By Henry Lutz
Kinney County Game Warden

If the wild animal is obviously sick or injured, you should leave it alone, make note of the location, and contact your local game warden or Sheriff's Department so appropriate action can be taken.

If you have questions about wildlife, you can contact your local game warden or call the Texas Parks and Wildlife Department's wildlife information line, in Austin, at 512-389-4505 or 1-800-792-1112, Ext. 4505. The department has been receiving over 100 calls a week.

Some of the most common questions people ask are about whether fawns are actually abandoned and if baby birds can take care of themselves on the ground.

In most cases, the fawns' mothers are just out of sight and the baby birds are still being protected and fed by the parents.

This is the time of year when young birds are out of their nests even though they cannot fly.

Usually if the bird's eyes are open, it has a coat of feathers and is hopping around, it is OK. Grounded birds will usually be up and flying within a few days.

Many people are worried about how the unusual heat is affecting wildlife, young and old. Most animals will tolerate the heat very well. In most cases, they are better at adapting to the different weather conditions that we are.

If you really want to help the wildlife, the best thing you can do this time of year is to provide water for them.

The water should be put in a shallow container, such as a bird bath top or trash can lid. The water should be changed frequently to keep it fresh.

Wildlife is best enjoyed from a distance and should not be turned into backyard pets. Wild animals are just that -- wild, and are best left there.

Sportsmen unite opposing 'Deer Management Permit'

The Sportsmen Conservationists of Texas (SCOT) and many hunters are asking Texas Parks and Wildlife (TPW) commissioners to refuse to create the so-called "Deer Management Permits."

The Deer Management Permit (DMP) was authorized by bills passed late in the last legislative decision. A DMP would allow certain individuals to trap and "selectively breed" wild, publicly owned whitetails.

However, the bills are permissive -- they say the TPW commissioners "may" create the permit, but they don't have to. Some of the reasons SCOT opposes creation of a DMP include:

- This issue will give a black eye to the majority of the landowners in Texas who don't want a permit, and don't want to "selectively breed" wild deer. Still, they'll be lumped into this new landowner group.

- The permit would allow only those who can afford to pay $1,000 initially, and $500 a year thereafter, to obtain a permit.

- The permit would allow permit holders to trap, transport, pen, hold (for 10 months or several years with an approved plan), and breed wild deer.

- Quite a number of deer trapped will die, especially bucks. A 10 percent mortality is quite possible. In fact, TPWD biologists know deer will be killed and will actually stipulate how the dead deer must be disposed of.

- A pen can be smaller than 5 acres, but has to have 50,000 square feet of continuous vegetation. As many as 21 deer may be put in each pen. That's too small for that many deer. When TPWD wildlife biologists first proposed rules for the DMP, they said "no DMP pen should be less than 40 acres, and a pen holding more than eight deer shall include a minimum of 5 acres per deer." That staff proposal was trashed due to political pressure.

- When set free, after months or even years of captivity, a buck would no longer be "wild," and would be easy prey for an unscrupulous shooter willing to pay money to an unethical permit holder.

- The TPWD spends a lot of money every year warning Texans not to pick up fawns, but a permit holder could, making a mockery of the use of sportsmen's dollars to protect new-born deer.

- Permit holders will want to tame the deer, especially those holding deer for several years, for ease of handling. It's imaginable that fawns out of trophy bucks will actually be bottle-fed.

- Each deer held under a permit would be marked with a yellow stripe of paint three inches wide down its back.

- Some of the small group supporting the permit have said they'll allow youth hunts on their land if they can get a permit. Would you want your child, or any other, to begin a life of hunting by shooting such deer?

- They also say permit holders will produce valuable scientific data for future use, but it's very doubtful any data really useful to an entity such as the TPWD will be put on paper. The permit is not designed for that.

This permit would reduce our wild deer to the level of exotic wildlife, even domestic cows. It will degrade the public's current view of whitetails as majestic, untamed creatures of the wild.

To comment, call Robert Macdonald at (512) 389-4775 or toll-free at (800) 792-1112, write him at TPWD Division, 4200 Smith School Road, Austin, Texas, 78701, or e-mail at robert.macdonald@tpwd.state.tx.us.

County seeks proposals for detention center

"If you own it and at any time they fall out, then we're sitting there with a 500-bed prison and we may not have any prisoners."

Frerich said, "We don't have to do anything with it. It's just going to be there. They're going to be the one bankrupt. They're going to be the one losing money. They're going to be losers, we're not going to lose. We'll rent it to sombody else."

"That contract better be air tight," O'Rourke added.

The request for proposals also says, "The county shall have no liability or cost for the facility financing except to the extent of prisoner housing contract revenues actually generated by the facility."

"This is a county facility and the county is exempt from paying taxes to the school and city," Burgess said. "We could pay taxes if somebody bought that, but it's the county's money we're giving the city and the school."

"They will take out money for the salaries and for the note and then we get a cut. If we pay taxes, that's our cut it's coming out of. By law, the county doesn't have to pay taxes if it's a county facility."
