In order to better working conditions for our employees as well as observing the LORD'S DAY, we have decided to close our store all day SUNDAY.

If you will think the matter over we feel sure that you will agree with us that you will agree with us that a day or two each week pays by increased efficiency during the six days. We wouldn't think of asking our dry goods and grocery merchants to remain open all day SUNDAY. Does not the drug clerk deserve the same consideration?

We will be glad to sell you needed medicine or fill prescriptions. Phone 302 or 285 for delivery.

Do You Buy Or Sell Hay At $40.00 Per Ton?

When paying 2 cents per pound for hay do you stop and think about those "little patches" of grass that you could have saved but which you DIDN'T SAVE?

Be a seller. It is more pleasant and profitable to sell hay at $40.00 than it is to buy at the same price.

We want to sell you a mower and rake. We'll make money when we sell and you'll make money when you buy.

Let's get together on this important matter. It's money to you, it's profit to us—but it's mighty hard on the fellow who has been selling you hay at 2 cents per pound.

Next spring will you be buying or selling hay? It's up to you.

Cason, Monk & Co.

A good second hand hay press, hay rake and gasoline engine for sale. We want to sell quick. Our prices will prove it.

a lad of twelve years, saw the automobile of Prince Regent Alexander

The prince asked the boy to come to the palace. The next morning after breakfast the boy stole away from the class in shoemaking and went to the royal offices. He demanded and was given an audience.

In the afternoon the minister of the court reported to the directress of the orphanage that the boy had gained the royal favor and would be sent to the officers' training school for instruction.

plants. The strike was precipitated by the return to work of five thou-

Ultimatum To Shop Strikers

(By Associated Press)
WASHINGTON, Aug. 8.—With the declaration of President Wilson that until the men return to work and again recognize the authority of their own organization, the whole matter of wage increases would remain at a standstill.

The next step of the strike situation, thus put squarely up to the employes themselves, is being awaited today. Few reports received today indicate the willingness of some striking shopmen to comply with this request, and it is believed that nearly all of the eighty thousand men idle yesterday will follow suit.

CALOMEL DYNAMITES A SLUGGISH LIVER

Crashes into sour bile, making you sick and you lose a day's work.

Calomel salivates! It's mercury. Calomel acts like dynamite on a sluggish liver. When calomel comes into contact with sour bile it crashes into it, causing cramping and nausea.
If you feel bilious, headachy, constipated and all knocked out, just go to your druggist and get a bottle of Dodson's Liver Tonic for a few cents which is a harmless vegetable substitute for dangerous calomel. Take a spoonful and if it doesn't start your liver and straighten you up better and quicker than nasty calomel and without making you sick, you just go back and get your money.
If you take calomel today you'll be sick and nauseated tomorrow; besides, it may salivate you, while if you take Dodson's Liver Tonic you will wake up feeling great, full of ambition and ready for work or play. It's harmless, pleasant and safe to give to children; they like it.

THE strong and vigorous man or woman is envied by less fortunate humanity afflicted with aches, pains, infirmities and ailments. The sufferer says to himself, "If I could only be well, how happy I would be," for health is more essential to the joy of living than is wealth.
The kidneys almost literally wash the blood and keep it clean and free from impurities. When the kidneys are out of order, they fail to filter out the waste and poisonous matter. It remains in the system to cause backache, rheumatic pains, sore muscles and stiff joints.

It's toasted

WEEKLY SENTINEL ANDREW CARNEGIE DIED THIS MORNING

HALTOM & GIBBS, PUBLISHERS

It is said that there are enough pigs in the United States for one for every man, woman and child in the country. Ours hasn't showed up yet.

It is said that the high cost of living problem is more serious in France than it is in the United States. Then no wonder the American doughboys are inclined to be glad they are out of that country.

Seems like they have started things right in Mexico at last. 15 plot leaders have faced the firing squad. If the fever spreads to Villa's camp we may yet take hope.

Nacogdoches county has three civil engineers are work designating the highways that are to be constructed in that county. If Shelby county had hired three engineers she wouldn't have had any money left with which to build good roads.—Timpson Times.

Mrs. Ida Cottingham returning from Houston, where she spent the past three weeks with relatives and friends, was a visitor here today, en route to her home in Nacogdoches.—Lufkin News.

In commenting on the falling in of the Angelina bridge, the Lufkin News says: "It is said that the premises in the vicinity of the vanquished bridge is practically under water, but as soon as practicable steps will be taken to repair the damage, so that travel may be resumed."

The abolition of the office of county treasurer as a useless and unnecessary burden was favored by the County Judges and Commissioners Convention, in Galveston Tuesday. It is admitted that the financial condition of a great majority of the counties is not such that it would demand the full time and consideration of one man, but as George Bailey would say, look how many good Democrats that action would put out of a job.

Government ownership of rail roads will be the subject for debate in the Interscholastic League of Texas next year. In the meantime we suppose the Austin police force will be substantially increased.

The government's drive on the high cost of living was felt yesterday when anti-trust suits were brought against the five big packers, and a Pittsburg sugar dealer was put under arrest for wholesaling sugar at 14 cents a pound; other arrests are imminent, and it begins to look as if "something were going to happen." Glory be! Uncle Sam has never known defeat, and he has scored the first hit.

Andrew Carnegie, the greatest philanthropist the world has ever known, has passed away, as all of us are called upon to do. He has done more good in the world with his money than perhaps any other single man, and his name will be revered by many for years to come. A man's money will not go beyond the grave but his good works will live for a long time to come, which is really after all, about the only thing worth while.

It is said that shortly after the United States entered the war Uncle Sam had more than three hundred thousand secret service men in his employ in this country, and that no gathering in any community as of many as fifty people could be had without the government having a secret representative present. Now this same government has its secret service department to assist the forces now at work trying to uncover instances in which the public has been gouged by the profiteering class. One thing about these secret service fellows is that the guinea-fow never knows who they are until it is too late.—Lufkin News.

Again we are warned that the beginning of the end is in sight! that we are face to face with the millennium before the New Year. The Rev. H. W. Webbeploe, of St. Paul's Cathedral, London, who is eighty-two years old, astonished an evangelical meeting by declaring the end of time before the close of the year. His only advice was not to be frightened but ready. The reverend brother has just as much right to predict this unusual occurrence as any one else, and if he gets any satisfaction out of it, let him have it. Others have "immortalized" themselves by just such startling news in the past, and why not pass the honor on to others? The one thing not quite clear is how these folks get such "inside dope" when the Bible saw fit to relate that no man could handle the subject which some seem to toy with so easily.—Lufkin News.

ANDREW CARNEGIE DIED THIS MORNING

(By Associated Press.)
LENOX, Mass., Aug. 11.—Andrew Carnegie died today at his summer home here with bronchial pneumonia.

Carnegie is survived by his widow and daughter Margaret, who married Roswell Miller, of New York last April. Owing to ill health Carnegie led a secluded life, and his withdrawal from public activities gave rise to frequent statements concerning his health.

Gave Away $350,695,633
WASHINGTON, Aug. 11.—Andrew Carnegie gave away $350,695,633 up to June 1, 1918, it was announced today by the Carnegie endowment for international peace.

Andrew Carnegie began a race against time when, in 1901, at the age of sixty-five, he resolved to give away his enormous fortune. He held it "disgraceful" for a man to keep on gathering idle millions. In the comparatively few years which the actuary could allow him, he would embarrass himself of practically all he had. No man had ever launched a philanthropic campaign of such dimensions.

His was then a fortune of just about a quarter billion dollars, the largest ever acquired by a foreign-born American, second only to the John D. Rockefeller wealth as the largest individual accumulation in the United States, and, built, as it was, of five percent steel bonds, it would, without so much as turning over a leaf, have approached half a billion by the time Carnegie could call himself an octogenarian on November 25, 1915.

To give this stupendous sum away, in about half the time he had taken to gather it, was a purpose Carnegie had fairly well fulfilled when death overtook him today. He had distributed about $300,000,000. It was giving money away at the rate of over $20,000,000 a year, or more than $50,000 a day.

Before he sailed for Scotland in 1901 he left letters announcing gifts of $9,000,000. He kept it up as fast as he could with discrimination. On libraries alone he spent upwards of $53,000,000. He remembered Pittsburgh, the scene of his steel-making triumphs, by establishing there a great institute, including the largest of his libraries, a museum, a magnificent concert hall, and the Carnegie Technological schools, with a total endowment of $16,000,000. He built a great national institution in Washington, and placed in the hands of its trustees a total endowment of some $20,000,000. To his native Scotland his largest single gift was a fund of $10,000,000 to aid education in Scottish universities.

He carried out his pet idea of a Hero Commission, endowed it in 1905 with $5,000,000 by which hundreds of men, women and children have been rewarded with Carnegie medals or pensions for acts of heroism in the rescue of imperilled persons.

He gave innumerable other gifts and endowments, report of which would cover much space. He was fond of telling the story of himself. Rapidly covered, it was this: His first penny he earned unexpectedly as a child when he astonished his schoolmaster in Dunfermline by reciting Burns' long poem, "Man Was Made to Mourn," without a break. Andrew was 12 when his father, a master weaver, was brought almost to destitution. The steam looms drove him out of business. The family numbered four, including "Andy" and his younger brother William. The parents decided to emigrate to America when some relative had preceded with success. They settled at Allegheny City, Pa., across the river from Pittsburgh, in 1848. The father and Andrew found work in a cotton factory, the son as bobbin boy. It was his first work and his salary $1.20 a week. In those dingy quarters, where he worked twelve hours a day, came the inspiration that later led to his library benefactions, he said. A Colonel Anderson, possessed of some 400 books, announced he would open his library every week-end and allow boys to borrow any books they pleased. Carnegie was one of the most eager readers.

At 14 Carnegie emerged from the engine cellar and became a telegraph messenger. Telegraphy then almost a new thing. Nobody ventured to read the dots and dashes by sound. They wear all impressed on taps. Carnegie is said to have been the third operator in the United States to accomplish the feat of reading messages by sound alone. He practiced mornings before the regular operators came around.

"One day a death message signal came," he related, "before the operators arrived. In those days death messages were most important messages we handled. I ventured to take this one." He did it correctly and delivered the telegram before the regular force was on duty at all. It won him promotion to the key and sounder.

Carnegie's first stock was $500 in Adams Express, invested by he and his mother by mortgaging their home. It brought dividends of one percent, monthly. His next was in the sleeping car, in which he realized $10,000. But iron was the magnet that attracted Carnegie. The railroads were experimenting with cast iron bridges. Carnegie foresaw the demand for a factory that could turn out the iron parts, and he formed the Keystone Bridge Works. The romance of his success was such that the immigrant boy of 1848 became some forty years later the world's leading producer of steel, a multi-millionaire by himself, and fast bringing a score of other men into the same category. Many square miles of his mills surrounded Pittsburgh.

"The secret and method of my success is simple," he said "I organized my business into departments. I put the best man I could find at the head of each department, held him responsible, and judged him by results."

have started more than fifty men on the road to millionaires."
In 1888 Carnegie married Louise Whitefield, of New York, by whom he had one child, a daughter, Margaret, born in 1897. His bride was twenty years his junior. To her and her daughter probably remains a large fortune, notwithstanding Carnegie's public gifts.

A TRIBUTE.

Lucy A. Hubbard, daughter of Dr. J. S. and Maria A. Hubbard, was born in Halifax county, Va., October 4, 1839.

She was married to Edwin B. Hamlett, October 28, 1856, at Maffin, Henderson county, Tennessee, and three years later moved to Texas, settling at Concord.

To this union five children were born, three of whom survive, Bruce Hamlett of Henderson, Ernest Hamlett of Timpson, and Mrs. Charles Perkins of Nacogdoches.

After Mr. Hamlett's death in 1885, she moved to Timpson where she lived until summoned by the death angel on July 8, 1919. All of her surviving children, together with her two beloved grand-sons, Paul and Edwin Perkins, were at the bedside when her sweet spirit took its flight. Just a few words of simple history these, that reveal naught but loving words and kindly deeds, of joys and triumphs, or of sorrow borne in patience; naught but the great mother heart that beat for all God's children. It is just a short record of faithful service, of small things well done.

It is as a beloved son of hers expressed it: "Words—any words—are inadequate to sum up all the beautiful things that might be said of her." Only those of us who knew her intimately could fathom the great love and yearning for all mankind that consumed her. With scarcely a thought for herself, her heart went out to the distressed and the helpless everywhere.

On one occasion, before our own country seemed to entertain a thought of entering the world war, before our own flesh and blood had lined up for the right, when we were all just looking on, scarcely realizing what was happening, my friend was lamenting the sad plight of the helpless victims of German ruthlessness in other lands. I thought, as others did, perhaps, that she was borrowing trouble, and I sought to deflect her mind from unhappy channels and bring it back to a consideration of her own cause for thankfulness. "I am not afraid that I will starve," was her reply—a tender rebuke to selfish me—"but my heart aches for those poor starving, suffering women and children, and I wish I could help them."

And so it was always—yearning to help—seeking to soothe and praying for the relief of the unfortunate.

Mrs. Hamlett had her share of sorrow, but she had learned to say that, as Miller expresses it, "the great problem of living is not to escape hard and painful experiences, but in such experience to keep the heart gentle, loving and sweet, and to know that work brings opportunity, Christian living begets happiness and love courage."

Idolizing her own and being idolized by them, it was a matter of course to her—albeit a joy supreme often acknowledged—that her home was a happy one; her thought and aim was to bring happiness into the homes where it was not; and to minister to the distressed everywhere.

Yearning, because there were sorrows; praying because there were souls to save; working to the very end, because there was work to be done; an almost divine blending of pleading and thankfulness, of restlessness and repose, of grief and gladness; such, in a few words, was the life of this dear mother, who let her light shine so that those coming after her may be guided by the rays to the very gates of the haven of rest and peace which she herself has entered.—Timpson Times.

Is it Possible to Legislate Life and Brains?

Swift & Company is primarily an organization of men, not a collection of brick, mortar, and machinery.

Packing Plants, their equipment and usefulness are only outward symbols of the intelligence, life-long experience, and right purpose of the men who compose the organization and of those who direct it.

Will not Government direction of the packing industry, now contemplated by Congress, take over the empty husk of physical property and equipment and sacrifice the initiative, experience and devotion of these men, which is the life itself of the industry?

What legislation, what political adroitness could replace such life and brains, once driven out?

LANSING PREPARES SEVERAL SPEECHES

WASHINGTON, Aug. 11.—Secretary Lansing had several carefully prepared statements ready to present to the foreign relations committee today at the second appearance before the committee to discuss the peace treaty, and related that the statements were replies to questions asked when Lansing appeared last week, but which he could not answer without consulting the state department files and concerned the government's negotiations with Japan during the war and the attitude of the American government toward China's entrance in the war on the Allied side.

President Wilson is expected to submit information bearing on the Versailles negotiations in response to a resolution.

AN OPPORTUNITY FOR DISCHARGED SAILORS AND SOLDIERS.

One of the great problems confronting the United States today, is to find satisfactory employment for discharged soldiers. This condition is true, largely because, prior to the war, very few young men realized the need of a thorough preparation in order to meet the conditions confront them under present circumstances. Peace time has entirely revolutionized and changed the order of things and we are earning today upon one of the greatest commercial activities the world has ever known.

The opening of national and international trade has created a wonderful demand for commercially trained help, and there is at present shortage of young men who possess the kind of training that is needed to carry on this commercial work.

The United States has found from experience in taking care of its wounded soldiers the lack of the necessary training which would place them upon a self-sustaining basis and it has very wisely worked out a plan to rehabilitate its soldier boys who were wounded, and the government statistics show that a great majority of them are electing to take business training.

Several hundred discharged sailors and soldiers are preparing for business in the Tyler Commercial College. These young men have done their bit toward winning the war, and are now adjusting themselves to a peace training and that is why they have enrolled in the largest business training school in America, to prepare themselves commercially to help in the great commercial reconstruction that is now going on. The Tyler Commercial College, realizing that it has an opportunity to do during peace times what it did during war times, that is, to prepare young people to fit in splendidly in the different commercial activities is now making a special effort, and a special appeal to the returning soldiers to cause them to realize the importance of training, such as we give.

We will be glad to have any discharged soldier write us for information about the opportunities that are open to them, and will do our best in every way to furnish the evidence that will convince them that they can succeed beyond their expectations. With our practical and thorough courses of bookkeeping-business training, shorthand, typewriting, business administration and finance, telegraphy and cotton sampling and marketing, we prepare you to take advantage of these opportunities in the shortest possible time and at the least expense. Neither Was So Rundown He Could Work—Gains 20 Pounds on Tanlac.

"I just thought I was doomed to suffer the rest of my days," continued Mr. Kettner, "and I guess that would have been the case if I had not gotten hold of this Tanlac. You see, I had been in bad health for about twelve years, and I failed completely to find anything that would do me any good. My stomach was in such bad condition that I would just suffer agonies every time I ate anything. My food would sour on my stomach and I would be all out of order all the time, too, and I would have the worst sort of pains in the small of my back. There rheumatism struck me, and from that time on I had all the suffering that was coming to me. Why, I got so bad off that I couldn't even help the boys do little jobs around the place."

I just went from bad to worse, and I finally made up my mind that I would just have to give up trying to run my farm.

"Well, I heard about this Tanlac then, and I bought a couple of bottles, and began taking it. Within the first two bottles didn't seem to do any good at all, and I was about ready to drop Tanlac, but I figured that my case was one of long standing, and that I hadn't given the medicine a good showing, so I bought one more bottle. That third bottle hit the spot, and in little or no time I was picking up right along, and from that time on I improved as fast as any man you ever saw, and I was as hale and hearty as I ever was in my life. I never have a sign of rheumatism now, and my kidneys seem to be in first-class condition. I don't believe I ever had a better appetite, and I get away with three square meals every day, and I have never bothered with indigestion or any other kind of stomach trouble now. I can now get out in the fields and do as much work in a day as any man on my farm. Yes, sir, Tanlac was a Godsend to me, and I feel like I want the whole world to know about this wonderful medicine."

Tanlac is sold in Nacogdoches by Stripling, Haselwood & Swift and Smith.

GOVERNMENT INVESTIGATION.

Labor is going through a period of reconstruction, which is proving dangerous. It is restless, transitory and discontented, and in many places is inclined to be bolshevistic in tendency. The government, realizing that condition will never become settled until the high cost of living is reduced, has set about in an effort to bring this reduction about.

All effort will be made to bring the profiteers to the bar of justice, and quench some of the extra inflation of prices. Money is cheaper than it has been in many years, and a position that a man would have thought forever beyond his pale a few years ago is considered insignificant by him now. It is easy to get a job, and the majority of the laboring class have come to the point where they don't care for their job enough to work, not only to hold it, but in the interest of his employer, and his own future advancement. This is the first stage in the development of bolshevism, and unless it is quenched, as the government is making a wholesome effort to do, serious consequences will be the result.

It was to be expected that some hard experiences would be suffered in the reconstruction period, but the strikes have been entirely too numerous, the demands too startling, and the normal life of the country has been upset in a vast manner. How soon we may expect to hope for some alleviations can not be calculated, but if the demands and strikes continue to be made on such an enormous scale as some of the present ones, it can only be delayed indefinitely.

ENGINEERS BUSY ON STONE FORT HIGHWAY

The Mt. Enterprise Progress of last week carries the announcement that the engineers have been in Mt. Enterprise the past week for the purpose of working out a route through that city for the Stone Fort Highway. This highway comes through Nacogdoches through Tyler, Henderson, Mt. Enterprise and around by Mahl. It will be remembered that an effort was made to secure the highway through Garrison a few weeks ago, which movement was not successful, the road coming by Mahl, according to the previous survey. It is presumed that the engineers will be in Nacogdoches soon in the interest of the route through here.

THE PREVENTION OF WAR.

Unlike most of those who have preceded him in discussing the covenant of the league of nations, if not unlike all of them, indeed, Senator Thomas of Colorado has no conviction concerning either the feasibility of the league of nations or the practicability of the covenant as a scheme for the accomplishment of the league's purpose. His only conviction seems to be that "we can not return to the old conditions and expect to avoid the old consequences." But while convinced that wars are inevitable in the future if we relapse into a reliance on the preventive measures of the past, and while convinced also that we shall become involved in such wars, as we were in the last one, Senator Thomas is not convinced that the prevention of them is possible, or that, if they are, the league of nations covenant offers a practicable measure of preventing them. Concerning those questions he has only opinions, and that even they are diluted with doubts he himself frankly admits.

The admission will not enlarge Senator Thomas' reputation as a statesman. To admit a doubt is, in the estimation of most men at least, to acknowledge oneself incapable of performing the duties and tasks of a statesman. Here is a question that has a right to an answer from him, and he publicly admits that he doesn't know the answer. And yet, although that admission is pretty certain to lower popular estimation of Senator Thomas' capabilities as a statesman, the more judicious are equally certain to see in that admission an evidence of his ability, is not to answer this question, at least to approach it with that integrity and humility of mind which warrants the sincerity of any opinions which he may express. Whatever his conclusions they are such as he has been brought to by the processes of reason, and have not been imposed on him by prejudice or by a desire to conform to the attitude of any individual or party. And the fact probably is that Senator Thomas differs from those who have spoken so dogmatically on both sides, less in point of ability to explore the question than in point of candor. The doubts and misgivings which he declares are probably no more numerous nor grave than others feel.

Senator Thomas' doubt as to the possibility of preventing wars is one which everyone must feel who approaches the question is a spirit of candor. But has anyone given that guarantee for the league of nations? If it were offered to us as a bit of machinery that needed only to be wound up to assure the automatic prevention of wars, we should be justified in rejecting it out of hand and in a manner which would express our contempt of those who thus urged its adoption. The case for the league of nations does not rest upon any such pretense as that. It rests upon the fact that all the methods which have been tried in the past for the prevention of war are demonstrated failures. Senator Thomas admits so much, and advances to the further and equally inevitable conclusion that to fall back on a reliance on methods which have proved worthless would be to decree further wars in the future as numerous as those of the past, and perhaps infinitely more devastating. This is equivalent to conceding that some new method designed to prevent wars ought to be tried, and must be, if civilization is to escape the doom which this war has made visible.

Probably the utmost that might reasonably be asserted in advocacy of the league of nations scheme is that it gives a better promise of accomplishing its purpose than any other that has been presented for consideration. Whatever its defects, it stands as the best suggestion that earnest men who have given a profound study to the problem have been able to make. All these circumstances entitle it to a tolerant, and even indulgent consideration, even by those who are skeptical of the practicability both of the project and the scheme offered for its accomplishment. After all the league of nations will only be an instrument, and like all instruments, the results of its use will be determined more by the will and disposition of those who use it than by the particular shape and fashion of the instrument. At least it must be conceded that the league of nations would afford a better means for the exercise of the popular will than most people have heretofore had. It would be much less easy, if indeed it would be possible, for a few men acting in secret to precipitate war or to create conditions that make war inevitable. They would be more under the scrutiny and stay of popular will than they have ever been in the past, so that the danger of war would be lessened by so much as the people of most countries are more disinclined than a few men of authority and privileged position have been to make war. So long as they desire to pre-

And to say the crowd had fun is expressing it mildly. This evening of pleasure was closed with a dainty course of refreshments.

FIFTEEN LEADERS DEFINITELY UNITE

WASHINGTON, Aug. 9.—Leaders of fifteen organizations of railroad employes united today in definite association. They have no desire to impress upon the public by violence of threat their proposal that the railroads be nationalized under tripartite control, declaring that the living cost reduction or the wage increase are unrelated to the future disposition of the railroad problem. Labor leaders said that if the president and congress are unable to meet their request, the men would have to try to find another solution.

BRAKEMAN CRUSHED TRAIN LAST NIGHT

Sam Braley, age about 22 years, brakeman on the T. & N. O. railroad, was crushed by a freight train, on which he was serving, in this city about 8:08 o'clock last night.

Braley was found at 8:25, with his watch stopped at 8:08, which would indicate that his watch stopped when he was hit, and that he was found about twenty minutes after the accident occurred. He was separated from the rest of the crew, and was run over by the train about half way between the scales and the ice factory crossing, while the crew were up about the scales.

The wheels of the train passed over his body, crushing the top of his head, cutting off one arm, breaking the right leg, crushing the left foot, and inflicting other bruises and injuries, and it is presumed that he died instantly.

The body was prepared by Cason, Monk & Co., undertakers, and the train waited over until this was done, carrying him on to his home in Jacksonville about one o'clock this morning. Judge F. D. Huston held an inquest over the body, and pronounced the cause of his death as having been run over by a train.

Mr. Braley had no family, and is survived by his father and mother. This is the second sad accident to occur on the railroad yards in this city in the past month, and the news was a shock to all. How the young man got caught can never be known, as none of the train crew saw him, nor knew the train had struck him until he was accidentally found twenty minutes after the accident.

SOUTH THREATENED BY BIG COAL SHORTAGE

DES MOINES, Iowa, Aug. 7.—The Midwest and Southwest are threatened by the most serious coal shortage in years, primarily because the miners now are working at only about half speed because of the failure of the people to "shop early" in laying in next winter's supply of fuel. This is indicated by production figures made available to local mine operators and labor officials by the United States Geological survey.

According to these figures the 22 mines in Iowa, Arkansas, Kansas, Missouri, Oklahoma and Texas now are working an average of only 3.4 days a week, and producing 267,845 less tons per week than their normal output. Of this decrease, 151,419 tons is due to the fact that there is no market, while only 26,585 tons can be mined on strikes and labor shortage. Coal shortage and mine disability is responsible for the remainder of the decrease.

SUITS BROUGHT AT DIRECTION WILSON

WASHINGTON, Aug. 7.—The government's new anti-trust suits against five great meat packing concerns are being brought at the direction of President Wilson as the first result of his study in the cost of living problem, it became known today.

The president reached the decision after a careful study of the Federal Trade Commission investigation and hearings before congressional committees considering the bills of control of industry.

The government's case against the five big packers will be placed before a federal grand jury in Chicago in three weeks, which means criminal prosecution will be instituted, Charles Cline, federal district attorney of Chicago said today, besides asking for indictment under the criminal section of the Sherman law of civil suits will be brought, and the packers prosecuted under the food control act for hoarding.

SAYS LOOTING BEING DONE SYSTEMATIC

WASHINGTON, Aug. 7.—Glenn E. Plumb, of Chicago, told the congressional inquiry committee that he had information leading directly from Wall Street and the banking houses controlled by the Morgan and Rockefeller groups that shows systematic plundering on virtually all public transportation highways of the United States.

Plumb, who appeared to support his plan for reorganization of the railroads said that the information ended to show that the wrecking and looting of the New Haven Chicago, Alton Rock Island and Frisco lines was not sporadic examples of highway robbery, to which the country had been subjected.

REPUBLICAN FAVORS LEAGUE COVENANT

VON LACKEN-WAIKENITZ MAY HAVE TO FACE TRIAL

BRUSSELS, July 12.—(Correspondence of the Associated Press)—If Baron von der Lacken-Waikentz, civil governor, and regarded by many as the real ruler of Belgium during the German occupation, is brought to trial at the Old Bailey in London, there will be present an accuser whom Lacken tried to send to the firing squad at the Tir National. That man is Gaston de Leval, a Belgian attorney, legal counsellor of the American legation and special aid to the American Ambassador, Brand Whitlock, and Hugh Gibson, secretary of the American legation, during those dark days of the German occupation in Belgium.

There is bitter hatred between Baron Lacken and the Belgian attorney, who risked his life in his attempt to save Miss Edith Cavell, the British nurse, from execution. Had it not been for the intervention of Ambassador Whitlock and Mr. Gibson a firing squad might have entertained de Leval on the morning of October 21, 1915.

De Leval accompanied Mr. Gibson when, on October 11 the American secretary went to protest to von der Lacken against execution of the death sentence upon Miss Cavell. While the Spanish Minister, the Marquis of Villalobar, was urging with von der Lacken who refused to intervene, the German caught sight of de Leval and exclaimed: "There is an enemy subject, what is he doing here?" Marquis Villalobar and Mr. Gibson immediately recognized that Lacken was attempting to create a diversion and requested de Leval to withdraw. The latter refused, saying, "I shall live to prosecute you at your trial." Lacken asked Gibson to dismiss de Leval from the service of the American legation. Gibson refused.

A few days later Lacken came raging to the American legation bearing a copy of an English paper with the story of the execution of Miss Cavell, including Mr. Whitlock's report to the State Department, Gibson's narrative of the event and de Leval's legal conclusions.

"This man de Leval will have to be removed from the American legation," said Lacken. "Under military law he should be tried by court-martial. I would recommend that the most severe penalty be visited upon him."

On October 21, 1915, Lacken returned to the legation and demanded that de Leval be given up. Mr. Whitlock refused. De Leval went to London and he remained throughout the war.

Lacken's parting salley to de Leval was: "We shall meet again." De Leval retorted: "I am sure the pleasure will be all mine." And now they may meet at the Old Bailey.

"The Rexal Store"

THE BOYS COMING HOME.

Husk County News.

Ten thousand people stood near the station on that bright June morning.

What a glorious scene it was. Women, aged by age, men bent of body, children of all ages—every emotion of human life, every emotion known to man was there. Mothers and fathers trembled with impatience.

Young women heard the beat of their hearts as never before and boys and girls gazed longingly down the track and asked: "When will they be here?"

"Husk, I hear the engine's whistle now," miriads of voices exclaimed. Little children began to jump up and down in wild ecstasy, and the great throng moved and surged forward with irresistible force.

Smiles, like a swift moving cloud, appeared above the horizon, another thrill of joy and the great ponderous engine hove in sight. It was only one of several others just behind. A hundred policemen were charging to and fro, yelling at the top of their voices to the surging mass to "stand back."

God Almighty alone could read the emotions there concealed.

Two long years of anxiety, prayer and hope were about to reach a climax, second only to that glorious meeting of the saints and the long departed loved ones as they join each other in eternal glory.

Coming home! Back from the field across the seas where fame and honor crown deeds too high for one to tell, where valor and courage reached their noblest heights, and manhood's greatest powers were made known in the majesty and the glory, and the chivalry of America's sons.

Coming home! The most excellent of all God's creatures is the name they bear—loyalty to honor. Princes and kingdoms whom destiny had already numbered they finished, and they that had exalted themselves above their fellows they humbled. By their swords the terrible of the nations they caused to fall, and their pomp and power destroyed.

Coming back to their homes, the citizens of free-born men, where God alone is worshipped and all men are born with equal rights; where titles dare not enter; where genius reigns, and merit untrammelled finds its worth; where freedom from the mountain heights defies and mocks the lie that might makes right; where chivalrous men and fair women set the standard of righteousness, and "searcheth out all perfection."

Coming back to the land where the sword was never drawn save in defense of liberty, and whose flag never passed to a foe.

Coming back to a home of plenty, where raiment and food "satisfieth the soul," and want and hunger hath no place in all the commonwealth.

Coming back to altars dedicated to the true and living God, to love, to religion, to justice, to law.

Coming back unstained by the cruel war, unshamed, with heads erect, bound to their comrades with ties of steel, with swords sheathed and eternal peace their prayer.

Coming back to a land of boundless fields of golden grain, a land where labor reaps its richest reward, where worthy aspirations of the humblest may lead to fame and fortune, where learning and culture are inspired by divine thought, and the noblest gifts of man are dedicated to God and humanity.

Coming back to consecrate their lives anew to native country, home and glorious service to a more glorious world.

Coming back where masters and classes, like titles and hereditary distinctions are known only from dusty books and age-old fables.

War was not their trade. Inured to peace and happy industry, they shuddered at the awful thought of carnage and the ruin and wreck of battle.

Death by any means than Nature's way was unknown to them. Gun wounds their eyes had never witnessed, and hospitals they only knew as places where the doctors sent their incurable patients to die. Cannon, shrapnel, bombs, gas and airships were all far-away war terms and the ocean a geographical horror. Ships they had read about in fairy stories, that were foundered in a storm and were lost. Foreign lands were associated with the terms of tyranny, oppression and despots. Of all the names of legend or lore the name of war aroused the darkest picture of the imagination and caused feelings of the direst forebodings. "If it be possible let this cup pass" was the Nation's prayer.

Coming home! What hallowed words! And as I stood and gazed at this scene of loved ones once more meeting, and sought to fathom the deep feelings of dear ones awaiting, and beheld many weeping, almost dying beneath mountains of grief, the reason for which I need not tell, another thought stirred my very soul.

The reflection ran back to the missing ones—those brave and dauntless lads whose bodies sleep in foreign lands, who died that the world might live.

They will not sleep always there. Their souls immortal are now at rest. The white horse upon which they rode to their death was but the decree of Almighty God to fashion this world for better things.

It will be they who shall wait at the station not made with mortal hands, and as the train approaches, bearing their loved ones, angels will stir every corner of the throne of God as they sing:

"These are they which came out of a great tribulation, and have washed their robes white in the blood of the Lamb. They shall hunger no more, neither thirst any more; neither shall the sun light on them, nor any heat, for the Lamb, which is in the midst of the throne, shall feed them, and shall lead them into living fountains of waters; and God shall wipe all the tears from their eyes."

CONFUSION.

Houston Chronicle.

Have you ever seen an ant stepped on? Something like that has happened to the word.

Have you ever seen death, but especially violent death, enter a home? There are, perhaps, ten million such homes in Europe.

Have you ever seen the supporting props knocked out from under a family, through lack of work, sickness or accident?

Have you ever seen invalid mothers worrying over the neglect of their children, or crippled fathers driven to distraction?

All these things are happening on the grandest scale ever before known.

Previous to 1914 we looked upon Germany, not only as one of the foremost civilized nations, but as morally and intellectually sound.

Having been tragically undeceived with regard to this, we find ourselves losing confidence in many things.

Humanity is looking into a warped mirror, judging everything from the standpoint of disaster and disillusionment.

These problems about which we are getting so excited, even mad, in many instances, are no greater, no more bewildering than they ever were. We merely think so, because we are approaching them in the shadow of calamity.

Mankind is a stunned household, rather hysterical, rather inclined to find consolation in unreasoning and unreasonableness.

You have seen the same thing happen many times, though on a smaller scale, have seen wives go into convulsions on the death of their husbands, have seen mothers ready to deny the existence of God himself in paroxysms of grief at the loss of their children, have seen business men completely lose their heads over business failure.

Here in America we have not suffered like some other peoples, but our disillusionment has, if anything, been greater. Our dreams of a warless world, of security for ourselves through isolation, of the impossibility of such a terrible conflict as has just occurred—dreams so firmly implanted as to amount to little less than convictions—have all been smashed.

Other people are dazed with misfortune, while we are stupefied with our own folly, but it all amounts to the same thing. There is doubt and lack of confidence on every hand. If we could be mistaken about so many things, are we sure of anything? This is the question lurking in the back-

LODGE DENOUNCES LEAGUE OF NATIONS

WASHINGTON, Aug. 12.—Describing the league of nations as a deformed experiment upon a noble purpose, Senator Lodge, chairman of the foreign relations committee, speaking in the senate today, declared that there are some features of the league covenant, which as an American, he never could accept. It was creating, not a league of peace, but an alliance, embracing many provisions for war. The covenant in its present form, he asserted, would kill the Monroe doctrine, nullify and possibility of withdrawal from membership, impede the sovereign power of deciding the nation's domestic questions, and plunge the United States into every controversy and conflict on the face of the globe.
