

BY GILES M. HALTOM

A STEP BACKWARD

On Saturday the commissioners court of Nacogdoches county passed an order suspending all dipping activities in the county. It is understood a lack of funds for further prosecuting the work was the reason assigned for this action.

The work of tick eradication began with the first of April, the Sentinel is informed. Messrs. Tumlin and Baker, representatives of the livestock sanitary commission, have been very energetic in promoting the campaign which all must admit was the thing to do, the welfare of the cattle industry of the county hinging upon releasing the county from quarantine, which can only be done when the last tick has been eliminated. By the action of the commissioners all the money thus far expended bids fair to prove a total loss, as by the first of December it is estimated the county will be back fighting the ticks to where it was when the campaign was inaugurated on the first of April unless the battle were waged unceasingly to final complete victory.

Twelve men have been employed in the eradication work since the opening of the campaign. A large number of expensive vats have been constructed. Owners of cattle in large numbers have shouldered the trouble and expense of driving their herds to the vats for treatment. Before the end of the year the county would have been freed from the tick menace. In the face of these facts, why suspend the work? Several men have been tried and convicted on charges of refusal to dip as the law directs. On Saturday, however, a jury acquitted a violator of the dipping law. That, of course, was the jury's business. If they didn't believe the man was guilty, it was their duty to acquit him. We are not sure that this one failure to convict should have discouraged the commissioners to the point of abandoning the work entirely. It has been suggested that the fund might have been replenished in some way. It is the consensus of opinion that this would have been the better way.

Several of our leading business men are making an effort to arrange for a continuance of the work. It is proposed to call a mass meeting of those in interest some day this week to mature a plan which might promise success. It is hoped their efforts may bear fruit.

RAILROADS MUST OPERATE

Hardly a man could be found who would contend that the various transportation acts of congress were given by divine inspiration and infallible, but the creation of the United States railroad labor board was an attempt on the part of congress to erect a safeguard against a national peril. It is hard to conceive of a more terrible calamity than that which would be brought upon the country by a prolonged, general railroad tieup.

Much has been conceded to both parties in all labor disputes—the right of both employers and employees to organize, the right to bargain collectively, the right to strike, the right to accept or reject arbitration. But one right must supersede all other rights—the right of the people to live. Under modern conditions a strike of railroad employees which for a considerable time would seriously impair the use of the railroads, would be a denial of that fundamental right to millions of unoffending persons.

The government puts forth the United States railroad labor board as an instrument for the assertion of the rights of the people to protection. As established by the Esch-Cummings law, it is not a powerful and arbitrary instrument, but it unquestionably represents the desire of the people to have some legal way of deciding controversies between railroad management and employees without resorting to the foolish, costly and dangerous remedy of the strike.

That for the moment it appears to fail to solve the problem should not encourage these quarreling interests to defy the will of the people. If the means at hand prove inadequate, they must be strengthened. Somewhere, in some way must be found a method to prevent interference with railroad transportation. The arteries carrying the very life blood of the nation must not be tied up pending the settlement of the quarrels of private interests.

The British explain that the three-mile limit can not be stretched to capture rum smugglers—from British ports.

Democrats historically stand for tariff for revenue and the present republican congress seems to want one so high there won't be any revenue.

THE RETIREMENT OF CULBERSON

From the Houston Post.
There are many newspaper opinions in circulation outside of Texas touching the defeat of Senator Culbertson, and not one of them is vested with much truth or plausibility.

Naturally, some of them attribute the result to the Ku Klux Klan, against which he launched an unfriendly opinion. Others trace the cause back to the circumstance that he was one of the senators who stood with Wilson for the League of Nations. Such views are wholly untenable. Six years ago, when there was no Ku Klux Klan and before the nation had entered the war, Senator Culbertson ran almost 30,000 votes behind Colquitt in the primary election, and managed to get in the run-off by polling just a few more votes than Dr. S. P. Brooks. Once in the run-off, he had easy sailing, his majority exceeding 60,000.

One cause of the senator's retirement was a widespread conviction among the people of Texas that his poor health had disqualified him physically for rendering efficient service, such as he rendered in his golden years. No doubt the poor state of his health has been much exaggerated, but the fact that he has been unable to visit the state and appear before his constituents at any point for nearly ten years did much to convince tens of thousands of new voters of both sexes that the rumors of his failing health were true.

A second cause of his retirement was the circumstance that time, affliction and his inability to visit Texas had made him more or less a stranger to the great majority of his electorate. The "old guard" of his following is now a minority. The new voters were not in touch with him, whereas they see and know personally his opponents, all of whom are now in the prime of their strength.

The senator's opponents, for the most part, have been prominent in recent political contests—some of them very much so. They have been winning followers by the attraction of personal contact. The senator being absent has not been adding to his supporters of the great campaigns he led in 1894 and 1896. On the contrary, the quarter of a century which has elapsed since he canvassed the state has taken tens of thousands of his old followers out of the land of the living and a new generation of leaders has appeared to divide among them the new voters.

All this is apathetic—indeed, tragic—instance of the vice which some one has described as the ingratitude of republicans, but there is nothing remarkable about it, for such things have happened in scores of instances in our country, even in Texas. Witness, the deposing of Houston from the office of governor in 1861.

But it is a brilliant chapter Culbertson has contributed to Texas political history. None of his predecessors boasted so lengthy a tenure in the service of the state. Four years as attorney general, four years as governor, and twenty-four years in the senate, make up a career seldom equaled in this country, and when it is added that in each of these exalted stations he was always efficient, always brilliant, always resourceful, and never failing to reflect the highest credit upon the state, all must agree that his is one of the most illustrious names in the roster of Texas statesmen.

Culbertson alone of his contemporaries of 1890, the year he entered public life, remains in official station. Allison Mayfield, chairman of the railway commission, who became Culbertson's secretary of state in 1895, and was subsequently advanced by his chief to the commission, is probably the dean of Texas officialdom after Culbertson. Many are dead, others are engaged in private pursuits, some are in the helpless retirement of feeble old age.

Contemplating all that Culbertson has done and all that he has meant to Texas and the country, no reverse at this time of his life can obscure the lustre of his fame or the solid worth of his remarkable career. It will be well for Texas in the strenuous years looming ahead if she shall have the good fortune to command the devotion and genius of great sons like Culbertson to pilot her through the crises are the inexorable lot of every state, which are the inexorable lot of every state.

"Doc" Lively of the Lufkin News also "knows beans." He recently guessed within six of the number contained in a jar exhibited by one of the mercantile firms of his city, thereby acquiring sole interest in a $25 cash reward offered for the best guess. If "Doc" really has as much "gumption" as his newspaper work indicates he will make an excursion to Nacogdoches and "blow" his health in a real live town.

WHAT IS GOOD FOR ALL

Does society ever become of age? A significant beginning towards an effort to help society grow up is to be seen in a certain tendency which is now showing itself in education. From the University of Edinburg comes word of the founding of a new department of research and knowledge—the study of the interconnection between the various activities of human society. In this country we have recently begun to lay some stress on this phase of education. We have come to realize that if it is to remain contented and unified, the social group must take thought, must look before and after just as the individual does in planning his future.

To this end we have begun systematic and enlightened investigation of the general laws underlying social progress. The causes and effects of strikes, the bearing of the housing shortage on the behavior and happiness of the population, the relationship between employer and employee, what social activities, endeavors and ideals are worth while, and which must be put aside as harmful—these are the questions with which the new education deals. But of most importance is it that we are today more than ever approaching these problems from the point of view of what is good for all society.

In this lies the hope that society may some day become of age.

The only manner in which some men rise is in an elevator.

There is a bright side to everything. Hot weather is excellent material for a paragrapher.

At last a use has been found for Cal Coolidge's silk hat—he can wear it driving the administration hears.

Senate fixes 25 cents as tariff on raw wool. Pulling the wool over the consumers' eyes.

Canada wants the tariff on cattle removed. Hot time for stabbers to indulge in a bum steer or in dullheadedness.

Every time a tired paragrapher shuts his eyes he sees a laden apple tree shading the verdant sward beside the rippling brook.

THE COLORED CHURCH AND THE PROBLEM OF DIVORCE

The instability of the modern colored family is indicated by the prevalence of divorce, which is a complex term representing a variety of abnormal conditions, each working to the destruction of the home. The causes of divorce reveal a serious situation deserving the most careful treatment, and it is of vital importance that we understand thoroughly the causes which underlie the appearance of divorce. It is wholly useless to denounce the evil without correcting the conditions which produce it, for if the conditions are allowed to continue, divorce will be the most logical and inevitable consequence.

Why is there so much desertion by husbands and wives of the home which they have undertaken to build, so much cruelty, unfaithfulness, drunkenness, failure of the material support which the heads of the families are expected to provide, so much tragic trifling with holy things on the part of the negro home builders? Are we producing a race of degenerates, so that the most sacred institution of our civilization is in danger of complete destruction? Let us inspect the causes which lie back of the complaint.

The first condition which leads to the destruction of the negro family is the simple fact of hard-hearted, sinful humanity. Cruelty, desertion, unfaithfulness, drunkenness, negligence are not to be passed over as mere indications of frivolity and light-hearted conduct. They are sins and nothing can be done to correct them until their fearful nature and consequence are recognized. The remedy must be sought in a change of heart, in a clear cut and distinct recognition of human responsibility and a definite regard for the dignity of human life. Upon this point the negro church has no uncertain mission.

Again, unwise choice of life companionship, hasty and ill-timed marriages are not able to endure the distress and strain of every-day life. Discontent follows the discovery of un-congenial temperaments; and the absence of mutual sympathy and co-operation, combined with lack of guiding principles of moral conduct, makes a downfall almost inevitable. The duty of the negro church upon this subject is unmistakable and unceasing and unless the spirit of Jesus Christ is brought to the solution of the problem of divorce no adequate solution will ever be found.

NACOGDOCHES TRADITIONS

The following letter is in line with the designs of my "Traditions". The three names used in it refer to men who lived in the old mother county three score years of old times:

Brownwood, Texas, July 27, 1922.
Dr. J. E. Mayfield, San Antonio, Tex.

Dear Old Timer—Will Crouch was here last night and informed me you were quite ill. I regret very much to hear this, as I have enjoyed greatly your writing in the Nacogdoches Sentinel. Crouch and I talked far into the night, of other days at Nacogdoches, and your name was mentioned many times. We are all growing old, and on our heads has fallen the snow that never melts. It seems to me but yesterday since I was a young man in old Nacogdoches, buoyant with hope and ambitious to write my name just an inch or two higher than the names of others in that locality had written. Now here I am still hoping, still laboring, and yet, alas, far away from the goal of my youthful ambitions—the rainbow still hovering just beyond the meadows that lie in the shadows of the evening sun, and summer showers. I often wonder, if after all, we shall at last cross the mystic river, and enter into the land of the evening sunset, to live on and on as the centuries roll, free from moid and turmoil, and secure from the wasting and fading and decay that belongs to earthly things.

I often think of you and wish you well—many more years of happiness and service. I must close now in the trust that you may yet be spared to your friends who know and love you. Now and always your friend, Henry G. Fuller.

City Editor Brownwood Bulletin.
In reply, I hardly can be considered a really sick man, for I am up and able to go and come in a feeble way. But while I am a badly disabled man from age and from long continued ailments, and can not see how to read ordinary print or dim writing, nor am I able to enter or leave a car with ease, yet I am able to get by by being careful. So, I may hang on a long time yet.

But our names will sooner or later be entitled to be added to the following list of "has-beens" names, not now present: Whitaker, Ruak, Ocheltree, Walker, Clark, Griffith, Edwards, Thorn, Sterne, Moore, Durst, Hotchkiss, Ingraham, Arnold, Crain, Raguet, Foy, Starr, Voight, and others that might be added now or hereafter.

GENERAL SHERWOOD AGAIN

The retirement of "Uncle Joe" Cannon attracts attention to the fact that Gen. Isaac R. Sherwood of Toledo, who retired from congress in 1871, the year Cannon entered it, is again a candidate. When the general was elected again in 1906, 34 years after that retirement, his seven rivals tried to make it a point that at 71 he had one foot in the grave. He is able to remark today that five of them are since dead, while he, in his eighty-seventh year, is once more the democratic nominee.

He was overwhelmed in the republican tidal wave of 1920, but not discouraged. The fact that he had won in that normally republican district seven times, not counting his long-ago experience, was not likely to dash his confidence. He is now contesting the republican who defeated him two years ago.

LISTENING-IN PARTY

Mr. Murray Roberts gathered a party consisting of Messrs Ben T. Wilson, Arch McKnight, George Weapsala and Luther Swift Thursday night and proceeded to the home of Dr. C. C. Pierce, where they found a number of others had preceded them, to listen to the disappointments and exhilarations of radio concerts, of which there were many, and in the course of the evening they were entertained by St. Louis a dedication recital by a lady in New Orleans, two most excellent piano solos and concluding with songs, "A Perfect Day" and "You Made Me What I Am," by the Memphis, Tenn. station, and also broke in on other entertainments which they were unable to locate.

"What's the News?"

WHEN Columbus and his caravels returned from the New World, the first question shouted from the shore was, "What's the news?"

That's always the question of paramount importance. Years ago folks ask it of the post rider, the soldier returned from the wars, the man who had been down to the settlements, or the neighbor back from the general store.

Today, you find the answer in your newspaper. Through the newspaper the news of the world and of the community quickly becomes public knowledge. And remember this—it takes two kinds of news to make a modern paper complete.

The first tells of happenings near and far—of fires, sports, elections, accidents, marriages, deaths, great men, great events.

The second tells of things you eat, wear, and use—things you buy, things being sold to your friends and neighbors. This news is advertising.

It's just as important to keep up-to-date on the advertising in this paper as it is to read about what's doing in the world of events.

Advertising is an essential news service. It is distinctly to your advantage to be guided by it.

THE VICTORY BIBLE CLASS

From the Lufkin News, 7th. Yesterday was a red letter day for the Young Men's Victory Bible Class. Several weeks ago the young men's class from Nacogdoches came down on a friendly visit, and greatly delighted the members of our class who were present, and made our boys very anxious to pay the visit back, with interest, which we did yesterday. Two hundred and sixty-seven men made the trip, and when we got there we found two hundred and nineteen men ready to make us feel at home. The president of the class, Mr. Monk, handed the situation without a bobble. Their own regular program was carried out in full. Mr. Moore, the contractor for the new normal building, made a strong speech, and urged the young men to attend not only Sunday-school, but church as well. Mr. Monk, the father of the president of the Nacogdoches class, and also the teacher, made a fine speech, which was greatly appreciated, and Mr. Renfro of Lufkin caught the crowd with one of the best talks I have heard in a long time. A Nacogdoches young lady, whose name I did not learn, sang a solo that was also appreciated. Prof. Brill and the orchestra, and also the double quartette, were at their best, and did not disappoint us. Quite a number who made the trip with us were not regular members of our class, but we appreciate their going and are glad that they enjoyed the trip. Every man who went with us, went because they wanted to go, and in no sense did they mean to be disloyal to their own church or Sunday-school. Many men came into the class after we got there, but the boys made them feel at home and they all seemed to be glad that they came. In all it was one of the greatest days that the young men of Lufkin have ever had. It was a friendly, neighborly visit to a neighboring town and Sunday-school. It will have a great influence for years to come, in developing a friendly spirit between the two towns. It beats the old way mighty bad, when they used to meet on "half way" ground, and drink red liquor and cuss all night.

There are one or two remarks that I want to make. First, it was a good get-together meeting for the men of Lufkin. It teaches the lesson that an organized Bible class can pull off a great thing when they go at it with the spirit to win.

The second remark is that it creates a spirit of fellowship among our own men. Christian fellowship is a thing that thousands of men know nothing about.

The third thing is that we know the men of Nacogdoches better, and a better set of fellows I have never seen. They are worth knowing. They have built up in a few months one of the best organized classes in Texas, and it is no small job to put anything by on that bunch. They are wide awake.

The last remark is that I am willing to go to any amount of trouble, and put in motion any scheme, "that is not dishonest" and "unworthy of a disciple" to get 500 men together, where I can spend a few minutes in preaching the gospel of Christ to them. Just before our services closed something like twenty-five men stood, who were not Christians, and in this way manifested their interest in the religion of Christ. Many men were there who had not been to church or Sunday-school in a long time, and I am far from believing that the day was thrown away. I here and now, as I write these words, give my life, body and soul to the men of Lufkin, and if I can lead one of them to accept Christ, that far my life will not be a failure. I shall never ask one of them to do a little thing, but I want them to be saved.

I again thank all the young men, whether regular members of our class or not, and those who belong to the other classes, who went with us, for the interest they took in making the day a great success. The blessings of God upon the men of Lufkin. I am for the women, but just at this writing, I am thinking about the men.

J. R. Nutt, Pastor.

STATE FAIR TO OPEN ON OCT. 6

Thrill Ticket Sale in Advance Affords Saving and Convenience

IS MEANS OF FINANCING BIG NEW FAIR BUILDING

Oct. 6 will see the formal opening of the thirty-sixth annual State Fair of Texas at Dallas, and early indications are for an expedition in full keeping with the development and advancement the state has seen during the last year. The 1923 Fair will continue through Oct. 15 inclusive.

As a means of financing the new Manufacturers' and Automobile building, the latest addition to the permanent improvements at the Fair, an advance sale of tickets has been announced. Denominated "Thrill Tickets" they may be purchased in advance at a discount of 20 per cent under the usual admission charges at the Fair.

Each Thrill Ticket will be good for one fifty-cent admission at either the main gates, vehicle gates, grand stand or coliseum. The tickets are offered in books containing five tickets, for $2; twenty-five tickets for $10, or fifty tickets for $20. The tickets are fully transferable and may be used by whoever presents them at the gates. One or two or in fact as many as may be desired, can be removed from the books and used singly or in numbers.

Remittances to the State Fair of Texas, at Dallas, will be promptly cashed for and the proper amount of tickets sent to the purchaser.

FINE MEXICAN BAND IS SECURED FOR STATE FAIR

The Mexican Artillery Band, said to be the finest musical organization in the Republic, has been secured for the State Fair of Texas, Oct. 6-15 at Dallas.

Permission for the band to come to the United States was granted by President Obregon, following a visit to him by State Fair officials. This band will be the principal musical attraction for this year's Fair, and will appear in the Coliseum.

COOKE COUNTY LIBRARY TO SHOW AT STATE FAIR

A demonstration of the methods of the Cooke County community library will be made at the State Fair Oct. 6-15. Space has been allotted, and Miss Lillian Gunter of Gainesville, will be in charge. Cooke county is now supplying its rural districts with a free book service, as well as to the ninety-two rural schools of the county.

POTTER CO. GETS NAME IN PAPER ABOUT FAIR

Potter county seems to have been the first to get its name in the papers in connection with the State Fair this year. Under an Amarillo date line, announcement comes that Potter county is already at work on its exhibit.

Who said chickens? The poultry show at the State Fair will have some.

The dog show at the State Fair will be held Oct. 12, 13, 14 and 15 this year.

"Pli-verboob" is the name for the careless automobile driver. State Fair officials say they will be taken care of during the Fair—by "copper-boobs."

THE BILL OF RIGHTS

From the Houston Chronicle.

When a resolution was offered before the recent Harris county democratic convention pledging allegiance to that part of the constitution which declares that no religious test shall ever be required as a qualification to any office it was rejected.

What organization, if any, was responsible for such action may be left to the public judgment, but following, as it did, certain meetings and resolutions, the character and purpose of which were evident, the rejection of the resolution was most significant.

Liberal allowance must reasonably be made for the partisanship and excitement ordinarily attendant upon such a convention, but when this is done, the fact remains that a convention composed of men and women professing to be democrats rejected a resolution which was practically identical with section 4 of the Bill of Rights, which reads as follows:

"No religious test shall ever be required as a qualification to any office or public trust in this state, nor shall anyone be excluded from holding office on account of his religious sentiments—provided he acknowledged the existence of a Supreme Being."

The language just quoted does not express a legislative opinion and purpose which may change as a day comes and goes, but it is part of the unamendable and unrepalable Bill of Rights, no paragraph, line or word of which the legislature can change.

It is a solemn and imperative declaration of that religious freedom to obtain which has cost suffering, sacrifice and many a noble life.

It was a part of the constitution of Texas before nine men out of ten in that convention were born, and it will be a part of the present constitution, and of any which may be framed in years to come, and when the admonition it gives and the command it carries ease to be heeded and obeyed, liberty as our forebears understand the term will be no more.

That freedom of conscience and belief and worship which are the very essentials of constitutional liberty and which are prerequisites to political and social peace, will disappear when it is disregarded and strife and bitterness and persecution will take their place.

If those who voted to reject the resolution knew what they were doing, and it must be presumed they did, then their action reveals the existence of a sentiment which, if given expression in action, will preclude the banishment of freedom in its highest and truest sense from Texas.

Differences of opinion regarding men and measures are to be expected, because they are the invariable concomitants of politics—indeed, without them there would be no politics, and what men or what politics prevail is rarely a question of enduring concern, but it is a matter of profound concern and one full of menace when even such a deliberative body as a county convention rejects a resolution which embodies in its terms the very essential principles of liberty and constitutional government.

Such action is capable of but one construction, and that is that the majority favors a religious test as a qualification for office.

Such a policy would be "the direful spring of woes unnumbered."

TACKY PARTY

Mrs. J. A. Moore delightfully entertained her Sunday-school class with a Tacky Party Monday night. At 7:30 the children began to arrive, and games were started. The enjoyable game of pinning the tongue on the boy was the first thing on the program. Miss Helen Monk being the lucky girl to get the prize. Then punch was served. Several other games were indulged in by all and after the children were all tired ice cream and cake was served, which delighted all. After this all the children were lined up to see which was the tackiest. The prize was bestowed upon Miss Lorine Blount. It is needless to say that she was tacky. Because she was hideous to look at. The prize was a red handkerchief.

The party broke immediately following this and each and every one went home, having enjoyed a very delightful evening, and thanking Mrs. Moore for her kindness to them.

TRACED TO GAME OF TENNIS

Origin of Common Phrase, "From Pillar to Post," Believed to Have Been Solved.

To tennis we owe the phrase "to drive from pillar to post," though its exact meaning has not been traced. Ernest Weekly writes in the Cornhill Magazine, London. The allusion is to the driving of the tennis ball, and the earlier order, found in Lydgate, was "from post to pillar." This was inverted to facilitate the stock rhyme with "tossed." In the old play "Liberality and Prodigality" (1602), a character is described as—

Every minute tost, Like a tennis ball, from pillar to post.

In John Marston's comedy "What You Will," the phrase is used of battledore and shuttlecock, the context suggesting that the "pillar" and "post" were names given to the two ends of the court. The following explanation has occurred to me as possible. It is known that modern games have developed from simple beginnings; for example, fives was originally played against any convenient wall, and the "pepper box" of a modern fives court imitates one of the buttresses of Eton college chapel. Tennis is supposed to have sprung from a rudimentary ball game played with simple apparatus in the courtyards and mansions and castles. The entrance gate and the front door would naturally be adopted as the two ends of the court, the pillars of the one and the posts of the other serving as boundaries.

FROM AUDLEY HARRIS

To those good friends of mine who gave me their vote of confidence at the polls on July 22d, I offer my heart's deepest gratitude.

While I have been repudiated by the people, yet in the face of it all I dare to point with pride to the record I have made while acting as county attorney during the past eighteen months, and I challenge those who condemned me to show a better record than mine or to point out one act committed by me as an officer or a man wherein my honor can be assailed.

With malice toward none, and with deepest gratitude for those who gave me their expression of confidence, I shall press on to the future with a clean conscience, comforted by the satisfaction that I have been faithful and true to the trust I held.

As soon as I have completed some important matters begun my me, I shall tender my resignation and return my commission spotless and clean to those who gave it to me.

WILL YOU FOLLOW THE CROWD AND GET WHAT IS LET, OR WILL YOU LEAD THE CROWD AND GET WHAT YOU DESIRE?

You will never get to the front by following the crowd. You have a tendency to wait and see what the other fellow is going to do. You will never be a leader as long as you do this.
Success requires ACTION.

If you knew where you could go and dig up a can of gold, wouldn't you grab a spade? You can get something better at the Tyler Commercial College—a cash-producing education. It is more essential than gold, for you cannot lose it. It will equip you to draw a good salary as soon as you graduate, with a sure chance for advancement. A business training is a life-time insurance policy against poverty. Its value cannot be overestimated.

Remember, it takes ACTION. Look ahead! The field of business is wide for you if you are prepared to grasp the opportunities. A thorough course of Shorthand, Bookkeeping, Cotton Classing, Telegraphy, Business Administration and Finance or Radio will start you on the straight road to success. Fill in and mail coupon for mation about what we have done for thousands of others and can do for you. We also teach by correspondence.

CALOMEL GOOD BUT AWFUL TREACHEROUS

Next Dose May Salivate, Shock Liver or Attack Your Bones.

You know what calomel is. It's mercury, quicksilver. Calomel is dangerous. It crashes into your bile like dynamite, cramping and sickening you.
Calomel attacks your bones and should never be put into your system.
If you feel bilious, headachy, constipated and all knocked out, just go to your druggist and get a bottle of Dodson's Liver Tone for a few cents which is a harmless vegetable substitute for dangerous calomel. Take a spoonful and if it doesn't start your liver and straighten you up better and quicker than nasty calomel and without making you sick, you just go back and get your money.

Don't take calomel. It makes you sick the next day. It loses you a day's work. Dodson's Liver Tone straightens you right up and you feel great. No salts necessary. Give it to the children because it is perfectly harmless and can not salivate.

RADIOPHONE INSTALLED

The E. M. Roberts Electric Company yesterday installed a radiophone for Dr. C. C. Pierce and last night several interesting concerts were enjoyed. Dr. Pierce heard Shreveport, Austin, St. Louis, Birmingham, Ala., and was quite surprised at the excellent results obtained under the first test.

Mr. Roberts says in regard to the radio business that he will in a short time install in his store a set equipped with a high-power amplifier and will give daily concerts. The radio business is just beginning and he intends to show the people what a really wonderful thing it is.

Dr. Pierce's is the third set the Roberts Company has installed in the city.
