ADDRESS DELIVERED BY W. C.
McDONALD AT WHITE OAKS,
DECORATION DAY, May 30, 1890.

This is an occasion which should find us in that mood when "pleasant thoughts bring sad thoughts to the mind"; pleasant thoughts of the privileges which are ours to enjoy if we will, and sad thoughts of days not so bright as this has been and of the terrible price paid for us; thoughts which should blend sunshine and shadow in a grand strain of exalted patriotic feeling.

In these annually recurring memorial exercises, we typify the beautiful ideas of a memory kept ever green in the minds, the blossoms of gratitude and hope blooming in the hearts of a great people. It is well for us to recall, in a proper spirit, deeds and events which, while they carried sorrow and sadness to loving hearts bereft and pleasant homes broken and desolated by the hand of the grim destroyer at the same time swept from our land the dangerous and pernicious doctrines of secession and nullification and the nationally degrading institution of slavery, making these United States one country of freemen all.

Conditions change—principles are enduring. The causes that brought on the struggle of the civil war, we may not fully understand. Far be it from me to detract one iota from the courageous conduct of any man, or to condone the guilty ambition, wherever it may have been that would wilfully have disrupted this Union. Mistaken doctrines under peculiar conditions, do not, however, necessarily make bad men. To contend for the right as it has been given to men to be seen, has never made cowards and hypocrites. What is from what has been we may understand with reasonable accuracy. What might be from what might have been is largely speculative, and belongs to that class of problems which will never be satisfactorily solved. It is now gladly conceded that the only safe enduring foundation principle, under all conditions, for our Republic, is and was that expressed in the closing words of the greatest speech of America's greatest orator, which is now, indeed, "dear to every true American heart," "Liberty and union, now and forever, one and inseparable."

From the dawn of history till today men have rendered grateful, admiring homage to the memory of those who had nobly laid down their lives for what they believed to be the honor and safety of their fellowmen. Alexander sought new worlds for conquest for himself. Caesar beat back the northern hordes from the gates of Rome to maintain more than Imperial grandeur; Napoleon made France a Republic that he might grasp at the Empire of the world. These were contests for despotic power. Our soldiers fought to maintain and advance the rights of humanity and individual sovereignty. If it could be truly said of old that it is sweet and becoming to die for one's country, how peaceful should be the rest of those who fell under the starry banner.

"Oh if there be on this earthly sphere
A boon, an offering heaven holds dear,
'Tis the last libation liberty draws
From the heart that bleeds and breaks
In her cause."

Time and circumstances have calmed all true hearts which at one time mayhap beat in anger and hatred. A quarter of a century has united the broken links of State and healed the wounds of individual misfortune. The political significance of Mason and Dixon's line is fast being obliterated by the hand of commerce and the better social and business understanding of all sections of our common country. There is no longer the North and South of even a few years ago. Anything that still tends to revive the bitterness of the past or perpetuate those feelings is beyond any conception of the qualities of patriotic modesty, or the demands of honest intelligent citizenship. There should be nothing; there is nothing; there can be nothing that shall ever again have power to reopen those wounds or sever again the bonds of brotherhood which have come from one of the most critical contests in the world's history. The record of that war has been written and re-written; told by men of widely differing views; by those well informed to speak but unreliable because not impartial; by those who would be just but who were not well informed, and by those combining both qualities to some extent. The wisdom of man is finite; his knowledge is limited. From the conflicting testimony each of us, aided by honest, discriminating judgment, has the right to make up a verdict for personal guidance. The defeats and victories, failures and triumphs will never be fully explained or comprehended. We know that the great and all important settlement came. The clouds broke and rolled back. Over the awful field of carnage shone once more the sun of peace. The fierce strain upon our experimental institutions was stopped. The wisdom of the fathers was vindicated and out of the heat of civil war has come to us an undisputed indivisible union of indestructible states, resting upon the old constitution, with the old flag floating over all.

There are some here who have stood in the ranks of war. Who have done their duty from the picket line to the deadly charge. They have seen death on every hand and know from bitter experience what it has cost to bring us peacefully united to the closing years of the nineteenth century. And while we remember those who have gone we forget not those who still survive and would see them honored and rewarded according to their degree of merit. Those who dared to do and feared not to die, are passing rapidly away. In a few short years the great armies of men who were so full of life and hope and courage will be known no more this side the line that marks the boundary of man's short period. But the influence of those who have lived and died nobly goes on forever. Pericles once said, "the whole earth is the sepulchre of illustrious men," and Edward Everett has continued, "All time, he might have added, is the millennial of their glory." We honor the memory of the dead and the presence of the living, who were and are heroic in thought and action. Men who fought with high purpose were made great within themselves, by testing and developing their best qualities. Mercenary, ignoble conduct, inordinate longings after the "flesh-pots" of creation, loud vaunting and boasting of we, have never been characteristic of heroes. I have no false colors to paint the skies in honor of time servers moving in the shadows of nobler men and shining by the reflected light of the great achievements of others. The pure gold of truth and common sense should be the setting for the great and good who proved manhood by manly deeds. Indiscriminate praise—adulation—cannot change the facts. It is the substitute of the flatterer for plain speech and simple eulogy. Justice to the worthy demands fair and impartial judgment of all under all conditions.

Physical demonstration on the field of battle never brought out a hero unless there had been a preparatory work of mental and moral forces which studied the heart and nerved the arm to strike the blow in the name of right as it appeared from the higher ground of mature consideration, crystallized into principle. The most severe struggles that tried men's souls were in the silent watches of the night when the careless, the thoughtless and the reckless slept, and recked not of the uncertainty of the morrow. He who looked far away, north or south to a pleasant home and friends, saw children at play; saw wife, mother, sweetheart, who might look in vain for him who could heroically press back the tears from sleepless eyes, look beyond the vision of love, and say; "This is my duty, this sacrifice will I make if need be, not alone for my country but for man's honor." He was a hero.

A new generation has risen since the war and upon the wisdom of them and those who come after will depend the future harvests of the seed sown by their predecessors. By mutual concessions for general protection our government was formed, but to the individual is retained such rights and privileges as no where else are recognized; and in each factor is held the power, which, in its influence combined with others, must make what there is and is to be of good and evil, right and wrong in the government which they make, because it and the people are one and inseparable. Therefore it is the conduct of individuals and what relates to them as such that I shall chiefly consider for a few moments, leaving it with you to develop further anything that may appear to your minds worthy.

We say truly that this is an age of progress. We may say with equal truth that this is a world—a universe—of progress. Not continual change to new things under the same conditions, but the irresistible expansion and development of the unseen, unknown forces which lie deep in the heart of Nature, and which have done the great work from the dawn of creation through the countless ages to the present time. We may see in history what appears to have been decadence at times, but careful study will clearly show constant progress in fact, humanity in reality ever advancing, emerging from apparent disaster, stronger and nobler, higher in civilization, with greater resources and more completely equipped.

We are all developing in some direction, and according to our thought is that development. Each possesses an inborn force which is the basis of the individualism in him or her, and which, combined for a given purpose with the similar but vastly differing units around, constitutes the total of man's power in that direction, relating back and resting as surely upon the unit—the individual—as an arithmetical sum does upon its units. Nothing outside ourselves can make us or make us alike to any great extent, except the ascendancy of that superb vigor that we call superior will power, or the unperceived influences which come from those whose thoughts and development are in harmony with our own.

All the wealth expended or blood shed in man's history has never yet made a man or woman better, or greater except as the action has supplied the seed that has come to the individual, taken root as a motive thought, and developed into lofty principle. What is a Marathon or a Saratoga, a Waterloo or a Gettysburg only as it shows the then tendency of thought and feeling for each one of us to consider and take hold upon as an instance of the potency of resistance to wrong, embodied in the courage and manhood of those who marked the world's advance in them.

True courage, the courage of high character which leads to heroic action, must be preceded by and result from elevated thought, and this by intellect developed to the thought. When the mind, by reason, touched by kindly charity, has decided for itself, and impelled by moral force, determines to risk all for the right as it is perceived by that mind, the courage is there. In action we call it heroism. When it sacrifices for country it is patriotism. When it protects the weak and innocent from insult and injury it is the highest type of manliness. That kind of courage is not found only in a struggle of arms nor is it necessarily found there. The battles that make men and women truly great do not demand a bloody field of action.

Magnanimous thought and tender feeling are the invisible forces which can drive out selfishness and malice and jealousy and all the corrupting throng that contend in the daily struggle for supremacy over the individual, striving to mar and deface the beautiful structure that is possible from the Divine spark kindled at birth, which may be lit up and made gloriously radiant. Some one has said "To seek with all our strength the highest welfare of the world we live in, and the realization of its ideal greatness and nobleness and blessedness—this is being religious." The religion of each is his or her own, and is indicated by the degree of perfection of the character that reveals it.

No one who has ever considered at all has failed to see that life is a continual combat of opposing impulses and influences with ones self, and of conflicting interests in relation to others. The great battle is going on everywhere. Forces unknown yesterday are busy to-day and to-morrow will come others now dormant. It seems to me that this is a most important epoch, and that the contending elements of good and evil in man are engaged in such a warfare as never known before. And is the result doubtful, do you think? No, while science and thought have opened the secrets of the earth, they have ascended to higher realms. The mind's scope is still limited but it is being ever broadened and deepened in the power of its dominion, and fortified as well against dogmatic superstition as against chaotic darkness.

Great work has been done and its record endures in song and story, in the pages of history and in the revelations of scientific and philosophic research. Now in the year 1890, as we stand at the highest point ever attained, who is there who cannot say with Tennyson:

"Yet I doubt not thro' the ages one increasing purpose runs,
And the thoughts of men are widened with the process of the suns."

As time passes, the things of the past rapidly recede and become dim. The present alone is said to be real, while the future lies all along from the present to the vast unknown illimitable. What is the actual present? It is but the instant now and immediately we are pressing forward into the great beyond. What do we know of the present? What is its reality except as it comes by the knowledge of the people and things that have lived and been before, (though they now are), colored by the visions of the future. You may say: this is a practical age; we are not dreamers; we are living in the present; we do not imagine, we reason. It may be so, yet it may also be a good plan to try to find out what we are doing, and how we are doing it.

Have you ever thought of the secret currents of the heart and the hidden recesses of the mind? Stir those currents with the touch of inspiring force, and see how strange new pulsations will quicken, and throw a flood of new light into the mind and disperse the dark shadows. And with this new light—this inspiration—will come the revelation that will appear on every side in all things. Inspiration and revelation were not reserved to be held forever between the two lids of that great book we call the Bible. Are these dreams or are we just waking to a realization of what lies beyond the old horizon and the perception of the physical senses.

Life is what we make it in our strength or weakness, each one for him or herself. The one who gathers the tangled threads of the past, touches them with the bright colors of the future, and weaves a bright airy fabric which lasts for a day, is perhaps to be envied. It is a happy disposition. Such make the world more pleasant and agreeable for the time being. Those who by the perversion of nature in creation, or by developed vice, live in the shadow of their own baseness, and with the poisoned tongue and disgraceful manner of life expose the distorted mind and blackened heart, are to be pitied. Over those we can afford to cast the mantle of charity.

The lives that have been and are capable of true greatness, of courageous thought and heroic conduct, must have passed through struggles which no human eye has ever seen and none but they will ever understand. Out of the sight of the world and beyond the reach of corrupting forces—from the fountain head of man's immortal being—has come the might to triumph over sorrow and misfortune; to rise superior to environment that would have cast down and destroyed the better part of weaker souls. We see them but we never know them. They know what it is to "laugh with a sorrow at the heart," and send sunshine for the pleasure of others. The record of their greatest victories is written in the heart and will be—

"Gathered like a scroll within the tomb;

while the results manifested in character which has made better the world they lived in, go on to the end.

The past has had noble, illustrious manhood, and pure, splendid womanhood. This generation is higher in the scale of civilization, superior in developed forces to any of the past. We cannot see far into the future, yet we see there possibilities little dreamed of in the past—possibilities for the human race and for our country, for things high and glorious. Will the personality of the world be strong enough to grasp them? In the great plan it must be so. Greater exertion, nobler aims and higher aspirations will alone aid us to assist in the peaceful and happy solution of the problems of to-day, and those already foreshadowed as of the coming time.

From individual thought and individual action emanates the strength or weakness of every nation and every government. Upon the integrity of its units depends the sum of man.

'Tis now many years since the song of battle softened, let us hope forever, to the sweet melodies of peace. From the purple field has sprung a new and more perfect union, cemented in the fraternal life-blood of America's children, gathered from the chilly northern clime and the sunny southern land, and embracing many tongues and nationalities. May it be ours to aid in eradicating every vestige of that lingering sectional prejudice, which should long ago have been forever put to rest with the tears shed and flowers strewn in memory of the brave dead.

We may read, study, observe, think—develop and enlarge the mind with the principles of right and justice and liberty, and the nobleness of man's station in the universe. The knowledge of the world is at our command to draw from. We have the past as a guide for our footsteps which reach out into the future.

The great sacrifice which we commemorate has not been in vain. Over the altars raised in turmoil and strife, consecrated at the cannon's mouth, on every battle-field in this broad land, all the way from Manassas to Appomattox; whereon was offered the priceless treasure of the hearts of the best and the bravest of our country, North and South, has risen the magnificent temple of peaceful permanent union, dedicated to the cause of mankind, living, speaking testimony to the strength and endurance of republican institutions. In that temple it is our privilege to worship.

Each of us has a constant never-ending battle within. We need all the energy and patience that the centuries have bestowed upon this age. May there be victories for each one such as belong to true men and women, and which united shall make strong the weak, lift up the dependent, and blot out of this fair land the tears and anguish of innocence and love.

"Enough, if something from our hands
have power,
To live, and work, and serve the future hour."

The following from the Las Vegas Optic, the leading republican paper in the Territory, has a vein of honesty seldom found among politicians. Its allusion to the New Mexican is every word the truth:

"Col. Max Frost has the fatuous luck of keeping himself in hot water during the larger part of his time. At present he is laboriously contemplating the propriety of calling out the editor of the Santa Fe Sun at twelve paces. If Max could ever get his consent to cease his silly, monotonous and tiresome editorial squeak about "boodle and boodlers" his page of the New Mexican would carry more influence than it does. The Optic is no enemy to Max but his faults in journalism are so glaring that we cannot well help noticing them. Your chirp about boodle is humbuggery, Max, and you know it very well; and you know furthermore that you are just about as sensitive to the seductive influence of boodle temptations as any man now living.

Geo. B. Barber and Frank Lesnet are the two members of the Republican Territorial Committee for Lincoln county. While such men are selected to look after affairs for the republican party in this county, democrats will be treated with a gentlemanly and decorous regard, and it behooves the democrats to be on their guard, as Barber and Lesnet are workers, of a character that is not on a par with the self constituted leaders of so called auxiliary schemes—they are in to win. The "patriots" are for the spoils and of late seem to have received them.

Governor Prince, in a now well known interview with a Chicago reporter, called our Mexican fellow citizen "greasers," and spoke of them in a most disparaging manner. His last outbreak was to go into the justice of the peace court at Santa Fe, and tell the justice of the peace, a Mexican gentleman, that he was a "d—d fool." As Governor Prince is the leader of the republican party in New Mexico, it is to be presumed that he speaks for his party when he thus wantonly insults our Mexican fellow citizens. It is only following up what another famous republican said about the people of New Mexico when he called them "a set of hooded whores and blanketed horse-thieves;" and is thoroughly in keeping with the infamous republican minority report against the admission of New Mexico which insulted our Mexican fellow citizens in the groosest and vilest manner. The Mexicans are notoriously a polite race, but their manly pride will assuredly make them resent in a most emphatic manner these continued and infamous insults of the republican party both in the nation at large and the Territory.—M. V. Democrat.

The defections from the republican ranks here have been so great that there has been a call for the "last reserve, forlorn hope—boys of eighteen years stand forward! your fathers refuse to wear the "Black Cap." What a commentary! Even the Valencia county sheep can't be counted on. Shades of Lincoln, Grant, Garfield! where, Oh where, is the "G. O. P.?"—M. V. Democrat.

Railroad Competition Again Bought Off.

It seems pretty well understood that the Santa Fe railway company has finally secured complete control of the Frisco and Atlantic & Pacific roads. This acquisition makes the A. T. & S. F. nearly double the largest railway system in the world, increasing it by over 1,400 miles. Those conservative Englanders begin to realize what greatness the future has in store for the southwest.—Raton Reporter.

It does seem as though the railroad monopolies—which includes the Rock Island, the U. P. and Santa Fe lines have all conspired together to euchre northern New Mexico and the Panhandle of Texas out of an east and west line of railroad. What we now need is some live, wide awake railroad organizer to take hold and get out a charter for a line of railroad from Liberal, Kansas, to Albuquerque New Mexico, via White Oaks. New Mexico will never become rapidly prosperous until we can properly get an east and west outlet. As it is now the Santa Fe has the Territory completely muzzled, besides having run a successful bluff on the Rock Island and stopped her short at Liberal, Kansas—just as the latter was about to enter the territory and save us from the clutches of the S. F. Octopus. The U. P. or the D. & Ft. W. and the Santa Fe are in a queer predicament—one company is "afraid and the other is not." If the Rock Island and U. P., which companies are working together, undertake to push their Liberal branch down into eastern New Mexico and on through to White Oaks and Albuquerque, then the Santa Fe will bob up and declare competition by opening up the Frisco and Atlantic Pacific lines and by this means the Santa Fe keeps standing a monumental bluff on the aforesaid roads. In the meantime eastern New Mexico with its vast coal and iron fields and millions of acres of fine farming land lies undeveloped and unknown. Here lies a rich stretch of fine, "free," government land, 195 miles long and 85 miles wide, comparatively unknown and undeveloped, and all because we accidentally happened to be the victimized grounds of a railroad bluffing scheme.

The people can console themselves on one point, however, and that is the formation of the Neutral Strip or No Man's Land into a territorial form of government, which fact will be the forerunner of an immense immigration to our sister territory, and we hope that some company will see the immense benefit and traffic to be secured by building a cut off line from White Oaks, New Mexico, to Liberal, Kansas.—Clayton Enterprise.

DECORATION DAY.

Last Friday, the G. A. R. and the W. R. C., with a large number of the citizens of White Oaks, assembled at the Congregational Church at 3 o'clock, p. m., from whence they proceeded to the Cemetery, and with flowers and evergreens decorated the graves of departed soldiers and friends. In the evening Comrade Lane called to order a large assemblage of the citizens at the Church, which was handsomely decorated with flags, wreaths and floral offerings. Rev. S. W. Thomas offered an earnest and touching prayer. The singing, by the quartette, of memorial hymns was rendered with good effect. Hon. John Y. Hewitt made an address, instructive, dispassionate and in a strong argumentive manner—dwelt upon the pension question especially. His address demonstrated the position maintained by the best thinkers in the G. A. R., that they were not seeking or asking for pensions for the unworthy; or do they ask such as alms, or as paupers. He counseled moderation and a conservative course; to avoid the extremes, and above all, gratitude to the Country for the munificence which the government was, and is, treating the old soldier. Mr. Hewitt was listened to with marked attention and considering the indisposition of the speaker, he being afflicted with a throat trouble, the address was exceedingly good.

The surprise of the evening was the masterly oration of our fellow-townsmen, W. C. McDonald, whose address will be found in this issue, which after much persuasion we are enabled to give to our readers, and we are proud of it and the orator, and the audience by their enthusiastic approval bear us out in assenting that, a more scholarly and well delivered address was not listened to in the Territory. It is worded with pathos, eloquence and dignified sentiment. The committee who had charge of the arrangements, deserve the thanks of all for the very successful observance of the day, and above all the tact displayed in the selection of speakers. By some the G. A. R. people have been accused of being inclined to partisanship, but their actions on this occasion dispel, to a great extent, the accusation. Rev. Lane, at the close, delivered a few short and pleasant remarks, when the services of the day closed with singing America, and a benediction.

Official Changes.

W. B. Bunker, clerk of the district court, retires to-day, and M. A. Otero, jr., appointed as his successor by Chief Justice O'Brien, will qualify on Monday, having already filed his bond. Mr. Bunker has made hosts of friends among the legal fraternity and litigants as well, by his gentlemanly deportment and affable demeanor in discharging the functions of his office. Mr. Otero, the new clerk, is too well known to need any mention; suffice it to say that his honor could not have made a better selection, the appointee certainly possessing all the requirements necessary to make a competent, faithful and popular official. He will retain his office of probate clerk until a new board of county commissioners shall be elected next fall.—Optic.

The continued drouth is beginning to cause stockmen in this vicinity much uneasiness, not to say expense. Messrs. Young & Taliaferro will drive their stock in from the Galinas to the Jones well in the Jicarillas. In the lower country, cattle are dying rapidly, the Carrizozo Co. being the heaviest sufferer. The streams from the White mountains are nearly all dry. Rain is the prayer of everyone this week.

The Republican "Auxiliary" Club, held a large and enthusiastic meeting last Saturday evening. The attendance all counted was five, two of these, young men under 18 years of age.

The two soldiers who deserted from Fort Stanton this week, reached the R. R. and took the train at Carthage—they cut the wire at the Fort Craig crossing, and in two other places. With the four mule outfit they succeeded in their escape leaving the mules at Carthage. They went along in style, and now the several detachments in search can go home and report.

Mr. White, of Seven Rivers, and J. B. Matthews, of Lower Penasco, report that on last Wednesday and Thursday there was the heaviest rainfall that has been known for years in their section of the country. Cattlemen say that in a short time grass will be abundant there, and there will be no more reports of cattle dying.—M. V. Democrat.

This morning we received a letter from our old townsman, John P. Eakers. He is located at Rico, Colorado, and says that times are good there—Carpenters wages are $4 per day. He wants the INTERPRETER, which he shall surely have.

The contract for carrying the Mail from San Antonio to White Oaks, has been sublet to Wm. Lane & Co., of this place, who will on July 1st, commence business with a complete outfit. They are daily expecting some new Concord coaches which will be placed on the line at once.

The Las Vegas Optic asks all concerned to hold up their hands and swear that the job to build the Agricultural Colleg was let square. A good hint has gone out that the whole letting of the contract was a gigantic fraud. If this is the case, it is a good time now to call a halt.

One of the greatest mistakes by the city of El Paso was its failure to secure the building of the White Oaks railroad. As it now stands the Pecos Valley road, which will be built to Eddy within the next year, will cut off a large trade that might have been directed in channels that would have brought in to El Paso for all time to come.—Las Cruces Republican.

An occasional steer trade is being made. M. E. Richardson writes that he has sold the El Capitan Company's steers. Clark M. Carr writes that he has sold the steers of the Cebolla company. There are still some good bargains to be had by those coming into the territory after them.—Stock Grower.

Nepotism at the Pen.

An act of the 28th Legislative Assembly practically stripped the Warden or Supt. of the New Mexico penitentiary of authority, making him a mere figure-head, and clothed the board of managers consisting of the auditor, treasurer and solicitor general of the territory, with almost autocratic control of the institution. At least, two of these managers, Auditor Alarid and Treasurer Antonio Ortiz y Salazar, both of whom have held office for nearly a quarter of a century, seem to be making the most of the extraordinary power vested in them. Not satisfied with transforming the institution into a corrupt political machine, they appear to be making it a kind of a hoose of refuge for their numerous impecunious relatives. Witness the following carefully prepared list of relatives of the two distinguished gentlemen who now hold subordinate positions in the penitentiary:

‡The Sun has been unable to ascertain the exact amount of profits derived by the Alarid family from their milk and wood contracts with the penitentiary, but presume they are not suffering therefrom.

For Simon-pure, unadulterated, monumental nepotism surely the New Mexico penitentiary beats the world.—Santa Fe Sun.

In addition to the above, serious charges have been preferred against the management, implicating the "Alarid and Ortiz" people in a scandal now being investigated by Managers. No one doubts that the report will be a complete whitewash.

The World Enriched.

The facilities of the present day for the production of everything that will conduce to the material welfare and comfort of mankind are almost unlimited and when Syrup of Figs was first produced the world was enriched with the only perfect laxative known, as it is the only remedy which is truly pleasing and refreshing to the taste and prompt and effectual to cleanse the system gently in the Spring time or, in fact, at any time and the better it is known the more popular it becomes.

The census enumerator will ask some unpleasant questions from each and every one, but they must be answered. For instance, he will ask you how much money you owe, why you don't pay your debts, whether you can read or write, whether you are divorced, a criminal or an idiot, how many relatives you have in the penitentiary, and similar unpleasant questions, and you are expected to smile like a cherub, and give him clear and full answers instead of a beating.—M. V. Democrat.

About sixty small ranchmen, sheepmen and farmers from Lower Penasco, Seven Rivers and the Pecos are in town. They are here on an injunction case wherein W. A. Miley is plaintiff, and James Gerald and others are defendants. Messrs. Rynerson & Wade, and Col. A. J. Fountain will appear for the plaintiff, and Messrs. Fall & Young for the defendants. The case will come up before Judge McFie on Thursday next at 10 o'clock. The case is one of the right of the defendants to go up the Penasco above the plaintiff and take water out of the stream in a ditch to the detriment of an older ditch built by plaintiff. This is the first of a long series of important water-right cases which will arise in New Mexico. Both parties seem to be confident of winning and at present we will make no comments.—M. V. Democrat.

Mrs. Winslow's Soothing Syrup, has been used by mothers for children teething for over fifty years with perfect success. It relieves the little sufferer at once, produces natural, quiet sleep by freeing the child from pain, and the little cherub awakes as "bright as a button." Notice is hereby given that the following-named settler has filed notice of his intention to make final proof in support of his claim, and that said proof will be made before Probate Clerk of Lincoln Co., at Lincoln, N. Any person who desires to protest the allowance of such proof, or who knows of any substantial reason, under the law and the regulations of the Interior Department, why such proof should not be allowed, will be given an opportunity at the above mentioned time and place to cross-examine the witnesses of said claimant, and to offer evidence, in rebuttal of that submitted by claimant.

Mr. LEX. "Why, Addie, you needn't cry about it! I only said Mrs. Allen was a very well-informed woman, and I wished you would follow her example."

Mrs. LEX. "Yes, and last week you said you wished I could manage to look as stylish as Mrs. Allen,—and she makes all her own clothes. But she has what I haven't."

Mr. LEX. "What is that?"

Mrs. LEX. "Well, she gets all of her information from the Magazine they take. I admit that she knows all that is going on, and is bright and entertaining in conversation; but I could do as well as she does if I had the same source of information. She lent me the last number of her Magazine lately, and I learned more in one hour's reading, about various social matters and the topics of the day, than I would pick up in a month by my occasional chats with friends. It certainly covers every topic of interest, from the news of the day down to the details of housekeeping; and everything is so beautifully illustrated, too. Every time Mamie goes over to the Allens' she comes back and teases me to get you to take Demorest's Family Magazine, as the stories are so good. Even the boys watch for it every month, as a place is found for them also in its pages; and Mr. Allen swears by it. It is really wonderful how it suits every member of the family!"

Mr. LEX. "Well, perhaps I had better send for a Specimen Copy; for, if it is anything like what you say it is, it will amuse and instruct the whole of us."

Mrs. LEX. "I see that W. Jennings Demorest, the publisher, is East 14th Street, New York, is offering to send a Specimen Copy for 10 cents, so we can't lose anything, as each number contains a 'Pattern Order' enabling the holder to any pattern she may choose, and in any size—which alone makes each copy worth 30 cents; and I just want a jacket pattern like Mrs. Allen's. The subscription price is only $2.00 a year; and I must say I can't see how they can publish so elegant a Magazine for so little money."

"If a woman is pretty,
To me 'tis no matter,
Be she blonde or brunette,
So she lets me look at her."

An unhealthy woman is rarely, if ever, beautiful. The peculiar diseases to which so many of the sex are subject, are prolific causes of pale sallow faces, blotched with unsightly pimples, dull, lustreless eyes and emaciated forms. Women so afflicted, can be permanently cured by using Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription; and with the restoration of health comes that beauty which, combined with good qualities of head and heart, makes women angels of loveliness.

"Favorite Prescription" is the only medicine for women, sold by druggists, under a positive guarantee from the manufacturers, that it will give satisfaction in every case, or money will be refunded. It is a positive specific for all those painful disorders, irregularities and weaknesses with which so many women are afflicted.

Ulcerated Sore Throat.

Two years ago I had Ulcerated Sore Throat, and was so weakened and reduced in flesh that my friends thought impossible for me to recover. I was attended by the very best physicians, but their endeavors to relieve me were futile. My mother seeing Swift's Specific (S. S. S.) so highly recommended, decided to give me a course of it, and after taking the first bottle I was greatly relieved, and after taking several bottles I was entirely cured. I have not had any signs of a return of the disease since.

I was finally advised to try Swift's Specific, and I can say, with great pleasure, that a few bottles of it has entirely cured me. I have no hesitancy in saying that S. S. S. is the grandest blood medicine I ever saw, and can cheerfully recommend it to any one suffering as I was."
