RE-ELECT HUGHES SCHOOL TRUSTEE

SCHOOL TRUSTEES NAME
HIM SUPERINTENDENT.

Service Is Declared So Satisfactory That Sixth Consecutive Term Is Given.

W. L. Hughes was re-elected superintendent of the Brady schools for the sixth consecutive term by the school board of trustees at their regular meeting held last Friday evening. The choice of the board rested unanimously upon Mr. Hughes, no other name having been presented or taken up for consideration.

The action of the board is in tribute to the great service rendered and being rendered the Brady schools by Mr. Hughes. Last year, by reason of his wise administration, the Brady high school was one of the very foremost of high schools in the state to be placed on the list of schools having affiliation with all southern universities. No better evidence that the high efficiency attained has been held could be had than in the fact that the Brady high school this year remains on the list of schools so affiliated.

Upon the advice of Superintendent Hughes, a course in Domestic Science was added to the curriculum at the beginning of the present term. So popular has this branch become that plans are now being made to greatly enlarge its scope and usefulness, and it is certain that many more will desire to join this class, and be enabled to do so, if the contemplated plans are carried out.

The Brady citizens may well congratulate themselves upon having again secured the services of Mr. Hughes, and it is to be hoped, if possible, that the next term of school may be even more successful than its predecessors.

ELECTION TO BE HELD IN BRADY APRIL 7TH.

Terms of Trustees—Lee McShan, Edd Broad, R. B. McClure, H. C. Samuel Expire

An election has been ordered held in Brady Independent School district on the first Saturday in April, being the 7th, for the purpose of electing four school trustees to fill the places then becoming vacant in the board of school trustees.

The trustees whose terms expire are the following: Messrs. Lee McShan, Edd Broad, R. B. McClure and H. C. Samuel. Mr. McClure is completing his first term as school trustee, while all the others have served two terms or more. Probably no body has served in a public office more efficiently, harmoniously and unselfishly than has the body composing the Brady school board. Serving without pay or hopes of reward, these gentlemen have faithfully looked after the welfare of the school and the school children, using their every effort to secure a highly efficient corps of instructors—and the result has been that the Brady schools are today recognized as among the very best in the state. No more fitting tribute could be paid them than to again elect them to serve in this same capacity for the next two years. It is to be hoped that each may be induced to allow his name to be placed on the official ballot.

The price is the least consideration at Mann Bros.—Quality is what counts.

WATER PROBLEM BEING SOLVED

In an effort to solve the Brady water problem, various plans are now being investigated, and it is hoped that a reasonable solution may soon be had. The Santa Fe railway has evinced great interest in the matter, in fact to the extent of sending one of its engineers here to investigate the situation and to assist the board of water commissioners in arriving at a decision. His plan was to find a location on Brady creek of sufficient depth and dimensions to assure an abundant supply of water, and at the same time avoid excessive waste or evaporation. With this idea in mind, he recommended Bowie hollow as being the most suitable place for a dam, and a committee composed of Mayor J. P. Sheridan and Messrs. W. P. Doty, and G. V. Gansel yesterday went to that place to make tests of the character of the soils, the probable length and storage capacity of the site and to secure other information that might prove of value.

MASON MURDERER ESCAPES

Ernest N. Kelley, sent up for life from Mason some two years ago, for the murder of his aged traveling companion, Hugh Chamberlain, has made his escape according to a dispatch from Houston. The crime of which Kelley was convicted is well remembered by McCulloch county folks, having occurred on the Mason-Brady road, the body of the murdered man having been hauled for a distance in his wagon and then dragged into the underbrush and hidden. Kelley was arrested in Brady a day or so following the crime, and confessed the deed, pleading clemency on account of ignorance and the fact that he had never had a chance in the world.

The dispatch from Houston is as follows:

Houston, Tex., March 18—Late Saturday afternoon four desperate convicts made their escape from No. 3 camp of the Imperial State Farm and are now at large in the western portion of Harris County well armed and mounted. Warning has been widely phoned.

The four are: Walter McCue, Harris County, seven years for burglary; League Lawler, Clay County, seven years for robbery, burglary and assault to murder; Doc Newton, Clay County, seven years for robbery, burglary and assault to murder; Ernest N. Kelley, Mason County, life term for murder.

Easter comes April 8th. Let us have that Suit order now. Mann Bros.

FRIDAY NIGHTS FEATURE PLAY

"Sorrow's of Love" in which Bessie Barriscale is leading lady supported by William Desmond, is the feature for next Friday night at the Lyric. It is a remarkable story of love and war and religion, and runs the gamut of emotion. In the trying part of the nun who, for the first time, comes in contact with the ways and wickedness of the world, Miss Barriscale shows the great artist in her and adds to her fame and popularity by her portrayal of this difficult character.

Other great features for which contracts have already been signed, and which will be presented in the near future are "Where Are My Children?" "The Spoilers," "Idle Wives," and "Twenty Thousand Leagues Under Sea."

Ask the driver to bring you an ice book

Ice books are time savers. They save yours by always being handy to the ice man and you do not have to stop your work and make change which is sometimes hard to do.

They save the ice man's time by being handy where he can get the amount for the ice he delivers and go on and maybe make another delivery while he would be waiting for change. Then they get your ice to you more promptly. Take your own case for example. It is not one time out of a dozen that you do not want your ice before noon. Nearly everybody in Brady perhaps want their ice before noon too. If it takes each driver twice as long to make a delivery as it should, somebody will likely be late getting ice in spite of everything we can do.

Ask the driver to bring you an ice book

A CHILD'S TONGUE SHOWS IF LIVER OR BOWELS ARE ACTIVE

If Cross, Feverish, Sick, Bilious, Give Fruit Laxative at Once.

Every mother realizes, after giving her children "California Syrup of Figs," that this is their ideal laxative, because they love its pleasant taste and it thoroughly cleanses the tender little stomach, liver and bowels without griping.

When cross, irritable, feverish or breath is bad, stomach sour, look at the tongue. Mother! If coated, give a teaspoonful of this harmless "fruit laxative" and in a few hours all the foul, constipated, waste, sour bile and undigested food passes out of the bowels, and you have a well, playful child again. When its little system is full of cold, throat sore, has stomach ache, diarrhoea, indigestion, colic—remember, a good "inside cleansing" should always be the first treatment given.

Millions of mothers keep "California Syrup of Figs" handy; they know a teaspoonful today saves a sick child tomorrow. Ask your druggist for a 50-cent bottle of "California Syrup of Figs," which has directions for babies, children of all ages and grown-ups printed on the bottle. Beware of cheap imitations sold here, so don't be fooled. Get the genuine, made by "California Fig Syrup Co."

CHAPTER V. School.

NEXT morning, when he had once more resumed the dreadful burden of education, it seemed infinitely duller. And yet what pleasanter sight is there than a schoolroom well filled with children of those sprouting years just before the teens? The casual visitor, gazing from the teacher's platform upon these busy little heads, needs only a blunted memory to experience the most agreeable and exhilarating sensations. Still, for the greater part the children are unconscious of the happiness of their condition, for nothing is more pathetically true than that we "never know when we are well off." The boys in a public school are less aware of their happy state than are the girls, and of all the boys in his room probably Penrod himself had the least appreciation of his felicity.

He sat staring at an open page of a textbook, but not studying, not even reading, not even thinking. Nor was he lost in a reverie. His mind's eye was shut, as his physical eye might well have been, for the optic nerve, faced with ennui, conveyed nothing whatever of the printed page upon which the orb of vision was partially focused. Penrod was doing something very unusual and rare, something almost never accomplished except by colored people or by a boy in school on a spring day—he was doing really nothing at all. He was merely a state of being.

From the street a sound stole in through the open window, and abhorring nature began to fill the vacuum called Penrod Schofield, for the sound was the spring song of a month organ coming down the sidewalk. The windows were intentionally above the level of the eyes of the seated pupils, but the picture of the musician was plain to Penrod, painted for him by a quality in the runs and trills partaking of the oboe, of the calloso and of cuts in anguish—an excruciating sweetness obtained only by the wailing, walloping yellow-pink pain of a hand whose back was kinked black and shiny. The music came down the street and passed beneath the window, accompanied by the care free shuffling of a pair of old shoes scuffling synoptically on the cement sidewalk. It passed into the distance; became faint and blurred; was gone. Emotion stirred in Penrod a great and poignant desire, but (perhaps fortunately) no fairy godmother made her appearance. Otherwise Penrod would have gone down the street in a black skin, playing the mouth organ, and an unprepared colored youth would have found himself enjoying educational advantages for which he had no ambition whatever.

Roused from perfect apathy, the boy cast about the schoolroom an eye wearied to nausea by the perpetual vision of the neat teacher upon the platform, the backs of the heads of the pupils in front of him and the monotonous stretches of blackboard threateningly defaced by arithmetical formula and other insignia of torture. Above the blackboard the walls of the high room were of white plaster—white with the qualified whiteness of old snow in a soft coal town. This dismal expanse was broken by four lithographic portraits, votive offerings of a thoughtful publisher. The portraits were of good and great men, kind men, men who loved children. Their faces were noble and benevolent. But the lithographs offered the only rest for the eyes of children fatigued by the everlasting sameness of the schoolroom. Long day after long day, interminable week in and interminable week out, vast month on vast month, the pupils sat with those four portraits beaming kindness down upon them. The faces became permanent in the consciousness of the children; they became an obsession. In and out of school the children were never free of them. The four faces haunted the minds of children falling asleep. They hung upon the minds of children waking at night; they rose forebodingly in the minds of children waking in the morning; they became monotonously alive in the minds of children lying sick of fever. Never while the children of that schoolroom lived would they be able to forget one detail of the four lithographs. The hand of Longfellow was fixed for them forever in his beard. And by a simple and unconscious association of ideas Penrod Schofield was accumulating an antipathy for the gentle Longfellow, and for James Russell Lowell, and for Oliver Wendell Holmes, and for John Greenleaf Whittier, which would never permit him to peruse a work of one of those great New Englanders without a feeling of personal resentment.

His eyes fell slowly and immediately from the brow of Whittier to the braid of reddish hair belonging to Victorine Riordan, the little octoroon girl who sat directly in front of him. Victorine's back was as familiar to Penrod as the necktie of Oliver Wendell Holmes. So was her gayly colored plaid waist. He hated the waist as he hated Victorine herself without knowing why. Enforced companionship in large quantities and on an equal basis between the sexes appears to sterilize the affections, and schoolroom romances are few.

Victorine's hair was thick and the brickish glints in it were beautiful, but Penrod was very tired of it. A tiny knot of green ribbon flushed off the braid and kept it from unraveling, and beneath the ribbon there was a final wisp of hair which was just long enough to repose upon Penrod's desk when Victorine leaned back in her seat. It was there now. Thoughtfully he took the braid between thumb and forefinger and, without disturbing Victorine, dipped the end of it and the green ribbon into the inkwell of his desk. He brought hair and ribbon forth dripping purple ink and partially dried them on a blotter, though, a moment later, when Victorine leaned forward, they were still able to add a few picturesque touches to the plaid waist.

Rudolph Krause, across the aisle from Penrod, watched the operation with protuberant eyes, fascinated. Inspired to imitation, he took a piece of chalk from his pocket and wrote "Rats" across the shoulder blades of the boy in front of him, then looked across appealingly to Penrod for tokens of congratulation. Penrod yawned.

Half the members of the class passed out to a recitation room, the emperied Victorine among them, and Miss Spence started the remaining half through the ordeal of trial by mathematics. Several boys and girls were sent to the blackboard, and Penrod, spared for the moment, followed their operations a little while with his eyes, but not with his mind; then, sinking deeper in his seat, limply abandoned the effort. His eyes remained open, but saw nothing. The routine of the arithmetic lesson reached his ears in familiar, meaningless sounds, but he heard nothing, and yet, this time, he was profoundly occupied. He had drifted away from the painful land of facts, and floated now in a new sea of fancy which he had just discovered. Maturity forgets the marvelous realism of a boy's day dreams, how colorful they glow, rosy and living, and how opaque the curtain closing down between the dreamer and the actual world. That curtain is almost sound proof, too, and causes more throat trouble among parents than is suspected.

The nervous monotony of the schoolroom inspires a sometimes unbearable longing for something astonishing to happen, and as every boy's fundamental desire is to do something astonishing himself, so as to be the center of all human interest and awe, it was natural that Penrod should discover in fancy the delightful secret of self levitation. He found, in this curious series of imaginings, during the lesson in arithmetic, that the atmosphere may be navigated as by a swimmer under water, but with infinitely greater ease and with perfect comfort in breathing. In his mind he extended his arms gracefully, at a level with his shoulders, and delicately paddled the air with his hands, which at once caused him to be drawn up out of his seat and elevated gently to a position about midway between the floor and the ceiling, where he came to an equilibrium and floated; a sensation not the less exquisite because of the screams of his fellow pupils, appalled by the miracle. Miss Spence herself was amazed and frightened, but she only smiled down carelessly upon her when she commanded him to return to earth, and then, when she climbed upon a desk to pull him down, he quietly paddled himself a little higher, leaving his toes just out of her reach. Next he swam through a few slow somersaults to show his mastery of the new art, and, with the shouting of the dumfounded scholars ringing in his ears, turned on his side and floated swiftly out of the window, immediately rising above the housetops, while people in the street below him shrieked, and a trolley car stopped dead in wonder.

With almost no exertion he paddled himself, many yards at a stroke, to the girls' private school where Marjorie Jones was a pupil—Marjorie Jones of the amber curls and the golden voice! Long before the "Pageant of the Table Round" she had offered Penrod a hundred proofs that she considered him "wholesome, dependable and intelligible." At the Friday afternoon dancing class she consistently flattered and led the laughter at him whenever

Professor Bartet singled him out for admonition in matters of feet and decorum. And but yesterday she had chided him for his slavish lack of memory in daring to offer her greeting on the way to Sunday school. "Well, I expect you must forget I told you never to speak to me again! If I was a boy I'd be too proud to come hanging around people that don't speak to me, even if I was the worst boy in town!" So she flouted him. But now as he floated in through the window of her classroom and swam gently along the ceiling like an escaped toy balloon she fell upon her knees beside her little desk and, lifting up her arms toward him, cried with love and admiration:

"Oh, Penrod!"
He negligently kicked a globe from the high chandelier and, smiling coldly, floated out through the hall to the front steps of the school, while Marjorie followed, imploring him to grant her one kind look.

In the street an enormous crowd had gathered, headed by Miss Spence and a brass band, and a cheer from a hundred thousand throats shook the very ground as Penrod swam overhead. Marjorie knelt upon the steps and watched adoringly while Penrod took the drum major's baton and, performing sinuous evolutions above the crowd, led the band. Then he threw the baton so high that it disappeared from sight. But he went swiftly after it, a double delight, for he had not only the delicious sensation of rocketing safely up and up into the blue sky, but also that of standing in the crowd below, watching and admiring himself as he dwindled to a speck, disappeared and then, emerging from a cloud, came speeding down, with the baton in his hand, to the level of the treetops, where he beat time for the band and the vast throng and Marjorie Jones, who all united in the "Star Spangled Banner" in honor of his aerial achievements. It was a great moment.

It was a great moment, but something seemed to threaten it. The face of Miss Spence looking up from the crowd grew too vivid—unpleasantly vivid. She was beckoning him and shouting: "Come down, Penrod Schofield! Penrod Schofield, come down here!" He could hear her above the band and the singing of the multitude. She seemed intent on spoiling everything. Marjorie Jones was weeping to show how sorry she was that she had formerly slighted him and throwing kisses to prove that she loved him, but Miss Spence kept jumping between him and Marjorie, incessantly calling his name.

He grew more and more irritated with her. He was the most important person in the world and was engaged in proving it to Marjorie Jones and the whole city, and yet Miss Spence seemed to feel she still had the right to order him about as she did in the old days when he was an ordinary school-boy. He was furious. He was sure she wanted him to do something disagreeable. It seemed to him that she had screamed "Penrod Schofield!" thousands of times.

From the beginning of his aerial experiments in his own schoolroom he had not opened his lips, knowing somehow that one of the requirements for air floating is perfect silence on the part of the floater; but, finally, irritated beyond measure by Miss Spence's clamorous insistence, he was unable to restrain an indignant rebuke and immediately came to earth with a frightful bump.

Miss Spence—in the flesh—had directed toward the physical body of the absent Penrod an inquiry as to the fractional consequences of dividing seventeen apples fairly among three boys, and she was surprised and displeased to receive no answer, although to the best of her knowledge and belief he was looking fixedly at her. She repeated her question crisply without visible effect; then summoned him by name with increasing asperity. Twice she called him, while all his fellow pupils turned to stare at the gazing boy. She advanced a step from the platform.

"Penrod Schofield!"
"Oh, my goodness!" he shouted suddenly. "Can't you keep still a minute?"

Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin Relieved Her Baby When Nothing Else Would.

Little Max Pendergrast is now four years old, and a fine healthy boy. When but a tiny baby, in fact almost from birth, he suffered a great deal from constipation. His mother, Mrs. Carl W. Pendergrast, Red Key, Ind., heard of Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin, obtained a bottle of it from the drug store and with it was able to quickly correct this condition.

Mrs. Pendergrast says Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin has saved them from calling the doctor many times, and that she will never be without a bottle of it in her house to use when needed. She found it equally effective as a laxative for herself and other members of the family.

Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin is a combination of simple laxative herbs with pepsin, pleasant to the taste, mild in action and positive in effect. It does not gripe or strain, and contains no opiate or narcotic drug. It is the ideal family laxative, mild and pleasant for baby, yet acting quickly on the strongest constitution.

To avoid imitations and ineffective substitutes be sure to ask for Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin. See that a facsimile of Dr. Caldwell's signature and his portrait appear on the yellow carton in which the bottle is packed. A trial bottle, free of charge, can be obtained by writing to Dr. W. B. Caldwell, 455 Washington St., Monticello, Illinois.

START WORK OF IMPROVING NEW BUSINESS STAND

Broad Mercantile Co. have begun the work of improving the business stand on the corner of South Blackburn and South First street, recently purchased by them from John Deere Plow Co. Workmen are at present engaged in removing the partitions in the building, and following this will tear up the flooring to enable the lowering of the floor to the street level. The cement walk fronting the building will also be torn away and replaced by one level with the street, thereby enabling passersby to have a full view of the store. A modern heavy plate glass front will be put in, with two recessed entrances, one leading to the south half of the building and the other to the north half. The front will be further improved by the placing of a modern awning, above which will be placed window lights of prism glass which will diffuse the bright sunlight and cause the softened rays to penetrate well towards the interior. On the north side of the building there will be cut doorways enabling the running in of implements and vehicles and the like with comparative ease. The changes and improvements will not only give the Broad Mercantile Co. most commodious quarters with a high and well-ventilated ceiling, but the new front will make their new quarters one of the best show rooms in the city and enable them to give a splendid display of their many lines of wares.

Among the new lines which this firm contemplates adding is that of a filling and auto supply station for which their new location will be especially well adapted.

They will continue to occupy their present quarters on the square, using the new building as a supplemental ware and display room. The changes will be made as rapidly as workmen and material can be secured in order that they may be enabled to use the much-needed floor space at the earliest possible moment.

MASON CITIZEN SHOOTS ANOTHER

Isaac Turner was shot and painfully, though not thought to be dangerously wounded by Joe Eaton, Jr., Wednesday afternoon at about 4 o'clock. The shooting occurred on the Wm. Behrens place about five miles out from town on the Fredonia road. Turner was hit in the right side about the 7th rib, the ball going through the fleshy part of the right side and lodging in the back. Turner and Eaton were brothers-in-law and had minor difficulties before. On yesterday afternoon Turner went to the field where Eaton was at work armed with a Winchester and the shooting occurred. Eaton used a 22 caliber target rifle, firing four shots, one of which struck and killed Turner's horse and one struck Turner. Turner did not fire his gun. Dr. Baze was called out to dress Turner's wound, and Sheriff Willis arrested Mr. Eaton and lodged a complaint in Justice Thorne's Court, charging assault with intent to murder. Eaton later waived an examining trial and was bound over to await the next Grand Jury in the sum of $750. —Mason News.

BROWNWOOD LAD SHOOT'S HIMSELF

Mark Tongate, fourteen-year old son of W. B. Tongate, living about ten miles east of Brownwood, was instantly killed Saturday morning at about 10 o'clock when a gun with which he was hunting was accidentally discharged, the shot striking him in the breast. The accident occurred about a mile from the family home.

Young Tongate and his little brother, Charlie, five years old, were riding in a cart at the time of the accident. The smaller boy is unable to describe the accident but from the position in which the body was found it is supposed that Mark, while riding in the cart, attempted to raise his gun to shoot a rabbit or bird and that he dropped the gun or it was discharged accidentally as he was attempting to raise it into firing position. Only one shell was discharged. The little boy carried news of the tragedy to the home of the family.

Burial will be made Sunday afternoon at about 2 o'clock, in the Salt Creek cemetery.—Brownwood Bulletin.

WONDERFUL STUFF! LIFT OUT YOUR CORNS.

Apply a Few Drops Then Lift Corns or Calluses Out With Fingers—No Pain.

No humbug. Any corn, whether hard, soft or between the toes, will loosen right up and lift out, without a particle of pain or soreness.

This drug is called Freezone and is a compound of ether discovered by a Cincinnati man.

Ask at drug store for a small bottle of freezone, which will cost but a trifle, but is sufficient to rid one's feet of every corn or callus.

Put a few drops directly upon any tender, aching corn or callus. Instantly the soreness disappears and shortly the corn or callus will loosen and can be lifted off with the fingers.

This drug freezone doesn't eat out the corns or calluses but shrivels them without even irritating the surrounding skin.

Just think! No pain at all; no soreness or smarting when applying it or afterwards. If your druggist don't have freezone have him order it for you.

NEW MODEL 19 LINOTYPE INSTALLED

THE BRADY STANDARD ADDS MOST MODERN EQUIPMENT IN WEST TEXAS.

New Machine Is Latest Model Manufactured by Mergenthaler Linotype Co.—Seven Different Type Faces. Aids in Type Composing.

After much patient waiting, The Standard's new linotype machine has finally been installed and is now grinding out the type you are now reading as well as a major part of this paper, and some job work in addition. So great is the demand for this new machine that nearly three months were consumed before the factory in New York City could fill our order. Another two weeks was spent following receipt of the machine before the company's expert erector could get to us to set the machine up, and the feat was finally accomplished last Saturday.

THE MODEL 19 MERGENTHALER LINOTYPE

Just as an illustration of the wide range of work possible with this machine, we give herewith an example of its possibilities:

THE MODEL 19 SETS 24 POINT TYPE ALSO 14 POINT BLACK FACE IN CAPITALS and in 14 point black face in small letters as well; ALSO 14 POINT LIGHT FACE TYPE IN CAPS together with 14 point light face small letters; THEN, TOO, 10 POINT BLACK FACE CAPITALS MAY BE SET and 10 point black face small letters for regular headings; WHILE 10 PT. LIGHT FACE CAPITALS ARE CONVENIENT and 10 point light face is used in newspaper work almost entirely; LAST, BUT NOT LEAST, WE HAVE THE 8 POINT BLACK FACE and in fact the smallest letter we can set on the machine, which we use; TOGETHER WITH 8 POINT LIGHT FACE CAPITALS, and the 8 point light face small letters, all of which prove very useful in the print shop.

With this wide assortment of type faces, most of which may be set without the operator so much as leaving his chair, incalculable aid is rendered in ad setting, job work and in facilitating the regular run of work as well. Another advantage over the old hand-set method of type composition is that when the type has been printed and no longer in use, instead of requiring valuable time to lay away in the proper cases, all that is required to dispose of the matter is to dump it in the melting pot.

Just as when The Brady Standard six years ago installed the Model 1 linotype, we were the pioneer progressives among the newspaper folks in this section, so the installation of the new Model 19 places us in the van of any newspaper shop southwest of Fort Worth. To show how near a pioneer we were when we first installed a machine, our Model 1 is numbered 1069—meaning that of all the machines manufactured in the U. S. it was No. 1069. The new Model 19 is numbered 21,486, which would indicate that some progress has been made among newspaper folks since old 1069 was put on the market.

The old machine has done much work since it was first installed, but during the past year it has been the cause of delays and much distress through its failure to perform at vital moments. There were complicated adjustments, innumerable springs and various other things, (all of which have been eliminated in the new model) to cause trouble and worry to the operator. The old machine will be dismantled, packed and shipped to the factory, where it will, in all probability, be rebuilt and again placed in commission in some office somewhere whose requirements do not call for a newer and better machine.

In the meantime we invite our friends and readers to call and we will take pleasure in showing them how the new machine operates.

Co-incident with installing the new model linotype, The Standard has replaced its folder with the newest model Mergenthaler folder—one of the swiftest, most quiet and accurate folders on the market. These improvements bring our equipment up to the very highest order of character and efficiency and makes this office the peer of any in West Texas.

McDuff, Va.—"I suffered for several years," says Mrs. J. B. Whitaker, of this place, "with sick headache, and stomach trouble."

I keep Black-Draught on hand all the time now, and when my children feel a little bad, they ask me for a dose, and it does them more good than any medicine they ever tried.

We never have a long spell of sickness in our family, since we commenced using Black-Draught."

Theford's Black-Draught is purely vegetable, and has been found to regulate weak stomachs, aid digestion, relieve indigestion, colic, wind, nausea, headache, sick stomach, and similar symptoms.
