OXYGEN DRAWN BY ALUMINUM

One Never Sees the Metal in Air Ex cept Through Veil of Superficial _ Oxide, It Is Said.

Aluminum is in many ways a wonderful substance, albeit in the natural world most of it is oxidized and turned to clay. Its avidity for oxygen is one of its most salient characteristics. It is said that one never sees the metal, directly, in air, but always and only through a veil of superficial oxide which forms on its free surface with marvelous rapidity. It is stated that if a fresh surface of aluminum be prepared by scraping with a knife the oxygen of the air runs in as fast as the scale is peeled off and keeps close behind the knifeblade.

If it were not for this superficial cale of oxide, which acts as a barrier to further action, the metal would burn up, or deflagrate, in air. The large amount of heat developed by thermit, a mixture of powdered aluminum with oxygen-giving substances, bears witness to the activity of the oxidizing process when completed.

Delmar Connally's Letter Smacks of Salt Sea Breezes.

Here's a letter that almost arries the reader to where the salt sea breezes blow. It was written by Delmar Connally to home folks, but there is so much of general interest in it that we give it publication for the benefit of our readers:

"I will write you a few lines to let you know I am well and hope you all are the same. I have gotten out of the mess tent. I have just been over to see Ben Reed while he had a rest out of the mess hall. You know between meals he gets to rest for he says he is very tired after each meal, being on his feet so much.
