Doell-Sloane.

The marriage of Mr. Oscar T. Doell and Mrs. Alice Sloane was solemnized at 7:00 o'clock Sunday evening at the home of the bride's sister, Mrs. Jas. T. Mann. Rev. J. T. Forester officiated at the wedding, the ring service being used. The wedding was a very quiet affair, Mr. and Mrs. Jas. T. Mann being the only attendants. Following the ceremony a wedding supper was served at the Mann home.

The happy marriage is the culmination of a romance of several years, and the many friends of the high contracting parties rejoice with them in their newfound happiness and extend congratulations and every wish for a long, prosperous and joyful married life.

Mr. Doell is a young man of energy and ability and has achieved a great degree of success in his chosen profession of watchmaker and jeweler. Of pleasant and agreeable manner, he has proven himself of highest character and strictest integrity. No happier choice could have been made by him than in the lady he has chosen for his life companion. Mrs. Doell has a charm of manner and a sweet graciousness that endears her to all. She is a young lady of exceptional talents and during her several years' residence in Brady has won herself an acknowledged place in social and religious circles.

Mr. and Mrs. Doell are now at home to their friends in his cottage south of the Central school, which the groom had finished and in readiness for the homecoming of his bride.

Our Error.

The Standard was in error in quoting the chapter of the Bible used by Rev. T. P. Grant at Scripture reading at the memorial services held for Mrs. F. W. Henderson. Instead of the 24th Psalm as quoted, the text was the familiar 23rd Psalm, reading, "The Lord is My Shepherd," etc.

CHOOSING CONSCRIPTS.

Method of Calling Men for Service Made Public.

The following is a brief outline of the system to be used in conscripting men for military service, so far as has been learned.

There are 5,000 districts in the U. S., and in each of these districts an exemption board has been named, whose duty it was the past week to number all the registration cards in duplicate, sending one set of the cards to Washington. Numbers corresponding to the highest number of registrations in any district will then be thoroughly shuffled and drawn out one at a time. Suppose the first number drawn is 8. Each man in the 5,000 districts, whose registration card was numbered 8, will then be notified to appear before the exemption board. A physical examination will be given him by the surgeon-member of the board, and if not exempted for physical reasons, he may then be exempted for other good and sufficient reasons by the board.

This method of drawing will be continued until the number of men required is secured.

The list of registrations, with the number placed against each name, will be posted in a public place for the information of the men registered.

Unofficially it was indicated today that 687,000 is the number of men to be selected for the first war army from the millions registered June 5.

Probably twice that number of names will be drawn, as the number of exemptions to be allowed is estimated at 50 per cent. Next Saturday is understood to have been tentatively fixed upon as the date for the drawing, although no announcement has been made by the provost marshal general's office.

A deal was closed today whereby R. A. King disposes of his Sonora ranch to Wesley Bryson. The King ranch lies 28 miles east of Sonora and comprises 8,320 acres. Included in the deal was the transfer to Mr. Bryson of 200 head of cattle and 3,000 head of sheep, the cows bringing $65; the calves $25, and the sheep $8.00 per head. The land brought $7.50 per acre.

Mr. and Mrs. Bryson are here today getting the final papers transferred, and Mr. Bryson expects to take possession of the ranch on the 20th of this month.

Shore-Lawrence.

Mr. George Shore and Miss Maggie Lawrence surprised their many friends by quietly marrying on last Saturday night. The nuptial rite was performed by Rev. J. G. Forester, pastor of the Methodist church, at the parsonage at 8:30 o'clock.

Mr. and Mrs. Shore are popular young folks of Brady, Mr. Shore being a young man of industrious and commendable habits, and being at present in the employ of the Wells Fargo Co., Express. His bride is a young lady of refinement and charm, a member of the Methodist church and as teacher of the kindergarten class at the Sunday school has endeared herself to young folks and old folks alike. The newly-weds are making their home with the groom's mother, Mrs. Dee Gibbs.

In their new-found happiness they have the best wishes of all their friends.

Capture Big Timber Wolf.

What is thought to be the worst outlaw of recent years, met its fate last Thursday night when Chas. Salter caught in a trap a big timber wolf. If all the damage that is blamed onto this wolf, is correctly placed, it is safe to say that he had been the cause of somewhere between $500 and $700 worth of destruction. Innumerable sheep and goats have been killed, and eaten or mangled; and the number of turkeys and chickens that fell prey to his blood-thirsty jaws is beyond estimation. Chief among the losers have been Jordan & Snearly, Marion Williamson, W. R. Rice, W. E. Simpson and many others in the community west of town.

Active steps were taken some time ago to rid the neighborhood of this destructive beast, and Chas. Salter gave assurance if he could once find the wolf's trail, he would capture him. His prediction proved true when the animal was found fast in a trap just across the creek west from the Jordan summer house.

Some months ago Ev Simpson caught sight of the beast and fired four shots at him. He states that it seemed like the wolf turned inside out, so quickly did he wheel in his tracks and disappear. Ev was of the opinion that he had missed his aim, but a close examination of the carcass showed where the hide had been split in one place—evidently by the grazing of the bullet fired by Simpson.

We want to buy your cattle and hogs. Hanson & Strickland.

CHASTISING THE EDITOR.

No doubt the editor of one of Brownwood's newspapers feels thoroughly subdued. A learned professor of that city has seen fit to administer a "slap on the wrist" because the editor in a recent editorial used the expression "Kicked Out." The learned doctor in a three-quarter column dissertation (cash value $5.00) deprecates the inelegance of the aforesaid editor, expresses his horrorification, gives a deep discussion on the literal and also the figurative meaning of the expression and ends up by opining that the editor probably meant to employ the phrase "sever the relationship."

We are looking for immediate and noticeable improvement in the editor's diction, and trust he will, in future, express himself in language pure and chaste as the driven snow; that he will avoid egregious blunders such as that of which he has been proven guilty. Such blunders are costly—especially when the editor has to stand the cost and at the same time the humiliation of being publicly reprimanded.

Of course, the paper may not be noticeable in future for any degree of "pep," but we should worry—er, ah, pardon us—that is a matter about the which we shall not concern ourselves in the most trifling degree. What we want and must have, is English, not as she is spoke—but English according to Hoyle.

DISHONORING PATRIOTISM.

The Standard has not been called upon, nor has even an intimation reached it, but solely upon his own responsibility the editor wishes to deplore the attitude of some of the officers in training camps. There is no question but what strict discipline is necessary, but even that can be overdone. Take, for instance, the dismissing from service in the officers training camp of three men because, due to auto trouble, they were three minutes late in returning on a furlough. To reprimand the men, or to give them demerits, might be considered just—but to dismiss them from service seems to the civilian mind as too autocratic to be tolerated. Another instance: A boy in the aviation corps, becoming hard up, asked when they would have pay day. Without further ado, the officer told him his pay day had come right that minute, and he was discharged at once. In spite of his question, we dare say that boy was just as patriotic at the time as the day he enlisted. To send him home in disgrace, because of a foolish question, is to put a blot upon his patriotism, and to deter other patriotic citizens from seeking enlistment.

If there is a higher tribunal, those discharged should appeal to it, and thereby blot out these little acts of depotism.

ADVERTISE SCHOOLS.

They'll have to take their hats off to our neighbor, San Saba. Not only is the town alive in all respects, but they even consider the welfare of the schools and the children of scholastic age to the extent of advertising their schools. Last week's San Saba News contained a neat advertisement for the school, announcing the fact that the San Saba school had seventeen units affiliation with all colleges and universities of the State of Texas, and inviting patronage from other counties and from all the districts of the county.

The San Saba school board is taking a wise course. If you have a good thing there is no use concealing it—let the folks know about it and receive the full benefits to which you are entitled.

PENROD

By BOOTH TARKINGTON

Copyright, 1914, by Doubleday, Page & Company

SYNOPSIS.

Penrod, fearing the ordeal of playing the part of the Child Sir Lancelot, seeks forgetfulness in the composition of a dime novel.

Penrod's mother and sister dress him in his costume for the "Children's Pageant of the Round Table." Penrod is ashamed to wear it.

He breaks up the whole pageant by putting on a pair of the janitor's overalls over his costume.

A visit to a moving picture show gives him an idea and he loafs away his time in school, dreaming dreams.

The teacher reproves him. He seeks to distract attention from himself by alleging loss of sleep because of a drunken uncle.

The teacher sympathizes with Penrod's aunt because of her wayward husband, and it then develops that Penrod has been lying.

Penrod, Sam Williams and two colored boys, Herman and Verman, get up a big show to entertain the town.

Verman makes a decided hit, but Roderick Magworth Bitts, Jr., says the show is a failure. Penrod asks him if he is a relation of Rena Magworth, a murderer.

Roderick, seeking fame, says she is his aunt. Roderick's mother finds him posing as a nephew of the murderer and stops the circus.

Penrod gets very musical and buys an accordion, with which he makes a great hit with beautiful Marjorie Jones.

At the pig and pony show Penrod cuts so many different varieties of indigestible things that he is taken violently ill.

Rupe Collins, a very tough boy, bullies Penrod and at once becomes a great hero in Penrod's eyes.

Penrod tries to be a tough boy himself, but arouses fear in the hearts of Sam Williams, Herman and Verman by describing Rupe's bullying tactics.

Rupe tries to intimidate Herman and Verman, and the two little colored boys speedily drive him off the place.

Mitchy-Mitch, Marjorie's little brother, infuriates Penrod by calling him "little gentleman," and a great rat fight starts.

Penrod is punished. The Rev. Mr. Kinoshing calls and unwisely refers to Penrod several times as "little gentleman."

Penrod fills Kinoshing's hat with tar and the minister departs, never to return. George Basset says that he is going to be a minister.

George tries to prove his qualifications by imitating a colored revivalist, whose pole climbing is described by Herman.

CHAPTER XXII.

Fanchon.

PENROD hastily dropped the small hand and, exclaiming, with simple honesty, "Why, I don't want it!" followed Fanchon out into the sunshiny yard, where they came to a halt and surveyed each other.

Penrod stared awkwardly at Fanchon, no other occupation suggesting itself to him, while Fanchon, with the utmost coolness, made a very thorough visual examination of Penrod, favoring him with an estimating scrutiny which lasted until he literally wiggled. Finally she spoke.

"Where do you buy your ties?" she asked.

"What?"

"Where do you buy your neckties? Papa gets his at Skoone's. You ought to get yours there. I'm sure the one you're wearing isn't from Skoone's."

"Skoone's?" Penrod repeated.

"Skoone's?"

"On Fifth avenue," said Fanchon.

"It's a very smart shop, the men say."

"Men?" echoed Penrod in a hazy whisper. "Men?"

"Where do your people go in summer?" inquired the lady. "We go to Long Shore, but so many middle class people have begun coming there mamma thinks of leaving. The middle classes are simply awful, don't you think?"

"What?"

"They're so poorjaw. You speak French, of course?"

"Me?"

"We ran over to Paris last year. It's lovely, don't you think? Don't you love the Rue de la Paix?"

Penrod wandered in a labyrinth. This girl seemed to be talking, but her words were dumfounding, and of course there was no way for him to know that he was really listening to her mother. It was his first meeting with one of those grownup little girls, wonderful product of the winter apartment and summer hotel, and Fanchon, an only child, was a star of the brand. He began to feel resentful.

"I suppose," she went on, "I'll find everything here fearfully western. Some nice people called yesterday, though. Do you know the Magworth Bittses? Auntie says they're charming. Will Roddy be at your party?"

"I guess he will," returned Penrod, finding this intelligible. "The mott!"

"Really?" Fanchon exclaimed airily. "Aren't you great pals with him?"

"What's pals?"

"Good heavens! Don't you know what it means to say you're 'great pals' with any one? You are an odd child!"

It was too much.

"Oh, bugs!" said Penrod.

This bit of rufianism had a curious effect. Fanchon looked upon him with sudden favor.

"I like you, Penrod," she said in an odd way, and whatever else there may have been in her manner there certainly was no shyness.

"Oh, bugs!" This repetition may have lacked gallantry, but it was uttered in no very decided tone. Penrod was shaken.

"Yes, I do!" She stepped closer to him, smiling. "Your hair is ever so pretty."

Sailors' parrots swear like mariners, they say, and gay mothers ought to realize that all children are tentative, for as the precocious Fanchon leaned toward Penrod in the manner in which she looked into his eyes might have made a thoughtful observer wonder where she had learned her pretty ways.

Penrod was even more confused than he had been by her previous mysteries, but his confusion was of a distinctly pleasant and alluring nature. He wanted more of it. Looking intentionally into another person's eyes is an act unknown to childhood, and Penrod's discovery that it could be done was sensational. He had never thought of looking into the eyes of Marjorie Jones.

Despite all anguish, contumely, tar and Maurice Levy, he still secretly thought of Marjorie, with pathetic constancy, as his "bean," though that is not how he would have spelled it. Marjorie was beautiful; her curls were long and the color of amber; her nose was straight, and her freckles were honest; she was much prettier than this accomplished visitor. But beauty is not all.

"I do," breathed Fanchon softly.

She seemed to him a fairy creature from some rosier world than this. So humble is the human heart it glories and makes glamorous almost any poor thing that says to it, "I like you!"

Penrod was enslaved. He swallowed, coughed, scratched the back of his neck and said disjointedly:

"Well—I don't care—if you want to, I just as soon."

"We'll dance together," said Fanchon, "at your party."

"I guess so. I just as soon."

"Don't you want to, Penrod?"

"Well, I'm willing to."

"No. Say you want to!"

"Well—"

He used his toe as a gimlet, boring into the ground, his wide open eyes staring with intense vacancy at a button on his sleeve. His mother appeared on the porch in departure, calling farewells over her shoulder to Mrs. Gelbraith, who stood in the doorway.

"Say it!" whispered Fanchon.

"Well, I just as soon."

She seemed satisfied.

A dancing floor had been laid upon a platform in the yard when Mrs. Schofield and her son arrived at their own abode, and a white and scarlet striped canopy was in process of erection overhead to shelter the dancers from the sun. Workmen were busy everywhere under the direction of Margaret, and the smitten heart of Penrod began to beat rapidly. All this was for him. He was twelve!

After lunch he underwent an elaborate toilet and murmured not. For the first time in his life he knew the wish to be sandpapered, waxed, and polished to the highest possible degree. And when the operation was over he stood before the mirror in new bloom, feeling encouraged to hope that his resemblance to his father was not so strong as Aunt Sarah seemed to think.

The white gloves upon his hands had a pleasant smell, he found, and as he came down the stairs he had great content in the twinkling of his new dancing slippers. He stepped twice on each step the better to enjoy their effect, and at the same time he deeply inhaled the odor of the gloves. In spite of everything Penrod had his social capacities. Already it is to be perceived that there were in him the makings of a cotillion leader.

Then came from the yard a sound of tuning instruments, squeak of fiddle-croon of cello, a falling triangle ringing and tinkling to the floor, and he turned pale.

Chosen guests began to arrive, while Penrod, suffering from stage fright and perspiration, stood beside his mother in the "drawing room," to receive them. He greeted unfamiliar acquaintances and intimate fellow criminals with the same frigidity, murmuring "I'm glad to see you" to all alike, largely increasing the embarrassment which always prevails at the beginning of children's festivities. His unnatural pomp and circumstance had so thoroughly upset him, in truth, that Marjorie Jones received a distinct shock, now to be related. Dr. Thrope, the very kind old clergyman who had baptized Penrod, came in for a moment to congratulate the boy and had just moved away when it was Marjorie's turn, in the line of children, to speak to Penrod. She gave him what she considered a forgiving look and, because of the occasion, addressed him in a perfectly courteous manner.

"I wish you many happy returns of the day, Penrod."

"Thank you, sir!" he returned, following Dr. Thrope with a glassy stare in which there was absolutely no recognition of Marjorie. Then he greeted Maurice Levy, who was next to Marjorie, "I'm glad to see you."

Dumfounded, Marjorie turned aside and stood near observing Penrod with gravity. It was the first great surprise of her life. Customarily she had seemed to place his character somewhere between that of the professional rioter and that of the orang outang. Nevertheless her manner at times just hinted a consciousness that this Calliban was her property, wherefore she stared at him incredulously as his head bobbed up and down in the dancing school bow, greeting his guests. Then she heard an adult voice near her exclaim:

"What an exquisite child!"

Marjorie glanced up—a little consciously, though she was used to Roderately curious to ascertain who was speaking of her. It was Sam Williams' mother addressing Mrs. Bassett, both being present to help Mrs. Schofield make the festivities festive.

"Exquisite!"

Here was a second heavy surprise for Marjorie. They were not looking at her. They were looking with beaming approval at a girl she had never seen a dark and modish stranger of singularly composed and yet modest aspect. Her downcast eyes, becoming in one thus entering a crowded room, were all that produced the effect of modesty, counteracting something about her which might have seemed too assured. She was very slender, very dainty, and her apparel was disheartening to the other girls. It was of a knowing picturesqueness wholly unfamiliar to them. There was a delicate trace of powder upon the lobe of Fanchon's left ear, and the outlines of her eyelids, if very closely scrutinized, would have revealed successful experimentation with a burned match.

The White Gloves Upon His Hands Had a Pleasant Smell.

Marjorie's lovely eyes dilated. She learned the meaning of hatred at first sight. Observing the stranger with instinctive suspicion, all at once she seemed, to herself, awkward. Poor Marjorie underwent that experience which hearty, healthy little girls and big girls undergo at one time or another—from heels to head she felt herself, somehow, too thick.

Fanchon leaned close to Penrod and whispered in his ear:

"Don't you forget?"

Penrod blushed.

Marjorie saw the blush. Her lovely eyes opened even wider, and in them there began to grow a light. It was the light of indignation—at least people whose eyes glow with that light always call it indignation.

Roderick Magworth Bitts, Jr., approached Fanchon when she had made her courtesy to Mrs. Schofield. Fanchon whispered in Roderick's ear also.

"Your hair is pretty, Roddy! Don't forget what you said yesterday!"

Roderick likewise blushed.

Maurice Levy, captivated by the newcomer's appearance, pressed close to Roderick.

"Give us an introduction, Roddy?"

Roddy being either reluctant or unable to perform the rite, Fanchon took matters into her own hands and was presently favorably impressed with Maurice, receiving the information that his tie had been brought to him by his papa from Skoone's, whereupon she privately informed him that she liked wavy hair and arranged to dance with him.

Fanchon also thought that sandy hair was attractive, Sam Williams discovered a few minutes later, and so catholic her taste that a ring of boys quite encircled her before the musicians in the yard struck up their thrilling march, and Mrs. Schofield brought Penrod to escort the lady from out of town to the dancing pavilion.

Headed by this pair, the children sought partners and paraded solemnly out of the front door and round a corner of the house. There they found the gay marquee, the small orchestra seated on the lawn at one side of it and a punch bowl of lemonade inviting attention under a tree. Decorously the small couples stepped upon the platform, one after another, and began to dance.

"It's not much like a children's party in our day," Mrs. Williams said to Penrod's mother. "We'd have been playing Quaker meeting, clap in, clap out or going to Jerusalem, I suppose."

"Yes, or postoffice and drop the handkerchief," said Mrs. Schofield. "Things change so quickly. Imagine asking little Fanchon Gelbraith to play London bridge! Penrod seems to be having a difficult time with her, poor boy. He wasn't a shining light in the dancing class."

However, Penrod's difficulty was not precisely of the kind his mother supposed.

Fanchon was soon showing him a new step, which she taught her next partner in turn, continuing instructions during the dancing. The children crowded the floor, and in the kaleidoscopic jumble of bobbing heads and intermingling figures her extremely distinguished style of motion was unobscured by the older people, who looked on-nodding time benevolently.

Fanchon fascinated girls as eagerly as boys. Many of the former eagerly sought her acquaintance and thronged about her between the dances, when, accepting the deference due a cosmopolitan and an oracle of the mode, she gave demonstrations of the new step to succeeding groups, professing astonishment to find it unknown. It had been "all the go," she explained, at the Long Shore Casino for fully two seasons.

She pronounced very "slow" a "fancy dance" executed during an intermission by Baby Rennsdale and George Bassett, giving it as her opinion that Miss Rennsdale and Mr. Bassett were "dead ones," and she expressed surprise that the punch bowl contained lemonade and not champagne.

The dancing continued, the new step gaining instantly in popularity, fresh couples adventuring with every number. The word "step" is somewhat misleading, nothing done with the feet being vital to the evolutions introduced by Fanchon. Fanchon's dance came from the orient by a roundabout way.

Pausing in old Spain, taking on a Gallic frankness in gallantry at the Bal Bullier in Paris, combining with a relative from the south seas encountered in San Francisco, favoring itself with a care free negro abandon in New Orleans and accumulating, too, something inexpressible from Mexico and South America, it kept throughout its travels to the underworld or to circles where nature is extremely frank and rank, until at last it reached the dives of New York, when it immediately broke out in what is called civilized society.

Thereafter it soon spread in variously modified forms—some of them disinfected—to watering places and thence, carried by hundreds of older male and female Fanchons over the country, being eagerly adopted everywhere and made wholly pure and respectable by the supreme moral axiom that anything is all right if enough people do it.

Everybody was doing it. Not quite everybody. It was perhaps some test of this dance that earth could furnish no more grotesque sight than that of children doing it.

Earth, assisted by Fanchon, was furnishing this sight at Penrod's party.

By the time ice cream and cake arrived about half the guests had either been initiated into the mysticism by Fanchon or were learning by imitation, and the education of the other half was resumed with the dancing when the attendant ladies, unconscious of what was happening, withdrew into the house for tea and a bit of gossip.

"That orchestra's a dead one," Fanchon remarked to Penrod. "We ought to have them up a little."

She approached the musicians.

"Don't you know," she asked the leader, "the 'Shago Shago Slide'?"

The leader giggled, nodded, rapped with his bow upon his violin, and Penrod, following Fanchon back upon the dancing floor, blindly brushed with his elbow a solitary little figure standing aloof on the lawn at the edge of the platform.

It was Marjorie.

Both Learned Something.

During some recent territorial maneuvers, a raw recruit had been told off as orderly.

On reaching the marquee where the officer was, he poked his head in and bluntly inquired: "Have ye anything for me to do, mister?"

Disgustedly laying down his cigar, the officer exclaimed:

"Why the deuce don't you introduce yourself in a proper manner? Sit down," he added, "and I will show you how to report yourself."

The Terrier seated himself, and the officer proceeding to the entrance, walked briskly to the tent, saluted, and said:

"Orderly for the day, sir. Have you any orders for me?"

The recruit calmly picked up the discarded cigar from the table, and between puffs laconically replied:

"No; there's very little doing today. You can hook it."—Tit-Bits.

LOCAL BRIEFS.

W. H. Goodner is now making oil deliveries in a big Selden truck, purchased the past week from F. R. Wulff.

Mr. and Mrs. Jesse Burk of the Rochelle community are the proud parents of a fine boy born last Friday, July 6th.

W. G. Joyce was in yesterday and in the course of conversation remarked that he had had a letter from his son, Berry, who is with the Westinghouse Electric Co. in New York, in which Berry remarked that they had just received an order for $12,000,000 worth of shells, sixteen-22,500 h. p. motors for the navy, besides numerous other large orders for electrical goods—which leads to the opinion that the U. S. government is bringing things to pass in its preparations for the great war.

Our old tried and true friend, J. H. Drinkard, thinks so much of McCulloch county and his friends here, that he arrived Sunday from Fort Worth on his second visit to us within a few months. His first act was to advise us not to send his paper to Fort Worth during his stay in Brady, which would lead us to think he was up to something, a report on which he did not wish bruited about "up yander." However, his actions so far have been above suspicion. Possibly he will unburden himself to us when he sees how fully we are to be trusted.

H. C. Boyd, who removed from Brady to Palacios, several years ago, where he is following his profession of jeweler and optician, sends in his renewal to The Standard, showing that still he likes to keep up with the happenings here. Friends of the family will be interested to learn that his son, Erve, is now at Portsmouth, Va., having enlisted in the Navy training corps. Erve had an interesting letter in the Palacios Beacon recently describing his experiences and the sights and other matters of interest in connection with the training camp, and reports being well pleased with his surroundings and the branch of service in which he is enlisted.

Grover Young was in town yesterday morning and reported that he and his family had moved back from Lovington, N. M., where they went some eight or nine months ago. He reports that country very dry, with no rain, except a few light showers since last September. However, he reports an inexhaustible supply of water to be had at a depth of about 50 feet. In his opinion, the country is a splendid stock raising country, but not very much for farming. The man who went to Mexico four or five years ago, filed on a claim and had the money to stock his place he says, is doing well, but now land has risen in value and there is none to be had, except by purchase. His father, S. M. Young, is located at Knowles, N. M., about 14 miles from where Grover was located, where he is stock ranching and farming and is well pleased. Grover expects to again make his home in the Lohn community.

WONDERFUL STUFF! LIFT OUT YOUR CORNS

Apply a Few Drops Then Lift Corns or Calluses Off With Fingers—No Pain.

No humbug! Any corn, whether hard, soft or between the toes, will loosen right up and lift out without a particle of pain or soreness.

This drug is called freezone and is a compound of ether discovered by a Cincinnati man.

Ask any drug store for a small bottle of freezone, which will cost but a trifle, but is sufficient to rid one's feet of every corn or callus.

Put a few drops directly upon any tender, aching corn or callus. Instantly the soreness disappears and shortly the corn or callus will loosen and can be lifted off with the fingers.

This drug freezone doesn't eat out the corns or calluses but shrivels them without even irritating the surrounding skin.

Just think! No pain at all; no soreness or smarting when applying it or afterwards. If your druggist don't have freezone have him order it for you.

Messrs. B. A. Hallum and Frank Matthews, accompanied by G. A. Arhelger of San Saba, journeyed to Dallas last week, and returned yesterday driving out two big Republic trucks—one of 1 1-2 ton capacity and the other of 2-ton. The latter was purchased by Mr. Matthews and will be used in his drayage business. It is undoubtedly the largest truck in Brady, having a 165-inch wheel base, with a frame 24 ft. in length. The weight of the chassis alone was 4300 pounds, and the truck sells for $1985 f. o. b. Dallas. Mr. Matthews is having a frame constructed for it and when completed will be in position to haul a man-sized load of anything—even feathers.

The 1 1-2 ton truck sells for $1650 f. o. b. Brady, complete with cab and staked body.

Visit Aviation Camp.

Messrs. and Mesdames W. D. Crothers and H. B. Ogden, accompanied by Misses Minnie J. Crothers and Lucile Benham, returned yesterday from a visit to the aviation camp at San Antonio, where they visited Messrs. Boy Crothers, Billie White and Bostie Roddie, and give a very interesting account of their visit.

They found all the boys looking somewhat thinner, although hard as nails and some had even gained in weight. All were in perfect health. They reported having been put through the most strenuous of physical exercises, but had about completed this course. Their mental studies include algebra, geometry, geography, etc., as well as a thorough training on gasoline engines, machine guns and various other subject matters. They expect to be ready for examination by Saturday of this week, or possibly Saturday of next week.

When a man enters the aviation corps, he begins at the bottom. A major in an army camp in the east resigned a $3600 a year position to join the aviation corps, and is now drawing his $30 per month the same as the other recruits. The only distinction is that he was given two weeks' credit on account of his previous training. Herbert Mason of Waco, former Brady boy, who left the army service to join the aviation corps was likewise given two weeks' credit, but dropped back in order to be with the Brady contingent.

Recruits are being received at the rate of 25 a week, and men are being graduated at the rate of about 12 a week, the difference in number being the result of the dropping of men for infractions of rules or for failure to pass examinations. The destination of those who complete the course is unknown, but as near as can be learned, they are sent to Dayton, Ohio, for two weeks' training, then returned to San Antonio for a couple more weeks' training after which they go to France to complete their training behind the lines.

The rules of the camp are very strict. The boys rise at 5:30 and are busy almost the entire day, from 8:30 p. m. until 9:30 p. m. being about their only leisure. Sundays they are at leisure from 7:30 a. m. until 9:30 p. m. A failure to obey orders strictly, whether intentional or unintentional, results in demerit marks. One of the boys had polished his shoes and puttees until they shone like a mirror. A passing companion chanced to kick some dust on them. The boy did not venture to raise his foot and brush the dust off, and the result was that the officer gave him two demerits. Yet, on the whole, they are well pleased with their work, and their greatest concern is the possibility of their failing to pass the examinations or to make good in every particular.

MAMMA! DON'T YOU SEE YOUR CHILD IS SICK, CONSTIPATED

Look at Tongue! Move Poisons from Liver and Bowels at Once.

Mother! Your child isn't naturally cross and peevish. See if tongue is coated; this is a sure sign its little stomach, liver and bowels need a cleansing at once.

When listless, pale, feverish, full of cold, breath bad, throat sore, doesn't eat, sleep or act naturally, has stomach-ache, diarrhoea, remember, a gentle liver and bowel cleansing should always be the first treatment given.

Nothing equals "California Syrup of Figs" for children's ills; give a teaspoonful, and in a few hours all the foul waste, sour bile and fermenting food which is clogged in the bowels passes out of the system, and you have a well and playful child again. All children love this harmful, delicious "fruit laxative," and it never fails to effect a good "inside" cleansing. Directions for babies, children of all ages and grown-ups are plainly on the bottle.

Keep it handy in your home. A little given today saves a sick child tomorrow, but get the genuine. Ask your druggist for a 50-cent bottle of "California Syrup of Figs," then look and see that it is made by the California Fig Syrup Co.

Allen Suggs Dead.

He resided with his family in the southern outskirts of Brady, and for some time had been a valued employe of the Texas oil company. His brother, Jim Suggs, of Walnut Springs was with him and attended him in his last illness.

Funeral services were held on the 3rd, and interment was made in Brady cemetery.
