DISTRICT COURT TAKES UP HARKEY 'POISONING' CASE

District court, which was to have been reconvened here Monday afternoon at 1:30 o'clock, was delayed for an hour and a half on account of the muddy roads which all but prevented Judge J. O. Woodward's return here from Coleman where he had gone home over Sunday. Court was opened at about 3:00 o'clock, and no time was lost in taking up the criminal docket, the case of Audie M. Harkey, charged with "mingling poison with food," being the first on the docket.

Good progress was made with the case, and by 5:00 o'clock selection of a full jury had been completed. J. N. Coalsen, former father-in-law of Harkey, and the man against whom the crime was alleged to have been committed, was the first witness on the stand, and progressed in his testimony as far as a confession purported to have been made to him by Harkey. Objections on the part of attorneys for the defense resulted in the jury being excluded from the court room while the attorneys argued over the admission of the alleged confession. At 6:00 p. m. Monday, court recessed with the point at law still undecided. This morning the court ruled that the "confession," should be admitted in evidence.

The following compose the jury trying the case:

T. T. Turner.
Ben Smith.
W. B. Watkins.
C. O. Bingham.
O. L. Neve.
D. S. Pumphrey.
Roy Holliday.
J. F. Weldon.

W. R. Harris.
J. J. Kirkpatrick.
J. F. Johnson.
O. F. Bates.

In the indictment, it is alleged that Harkey wilfully mixed strychnine with coffee which was to have been consumed by his then father-in-law, J. N. Coalsen. Coalsen, it appears, did not partake of the coffee, but, becoming suspicious, sent samples of the coffee grounds to Galveston, where chemical analysis is said to have showed strychnine in the contents. Dr. W. C. Rose of Galveston, who made the analysis, is one of the witnesses in the case.

The incident occurred in the south part of McCulloch county, about 3 miles south of Voeca on or about November 15, 1918. Harkey was indicted by the grand jury on September 19, 1919.

Assisting District Walter U. Early in the prosecution is Joe A. Adkins, while J. E. Shropshire, Jas. Flack and Sam McCollum represent the defense.

Continuances from one term of court to another have delayed trial. Great interest is being manifested in the trial, the court room being filled with interested spectators. Something like thirty witnesses have been summoned in the case.

SAFE CRACKERS WRECK UNION DEPOT SAFE SUN. NIGHT—MAKE LIGHT HAUL

CHECKING OF RECEIPTS DISCLOSES LOSS OF APPROXIMATELY $214.00—THE BURGLARS MAKE CLEAN GET-AWAY, LEAVING NO CLUE—APPARENTLY ON FOOT.

Safe crackers at about 2:15 Monday morning blew the safe at the Union passenger depot, and made a clean get-away with practically all the money contained in the safe, representing ticket sales for Saturday afternoon and night, and all day Sunday. A checking of the receipts shows the loss to be approximately $214. The robbers left $27.97 scattered over the floor among the debris of the safe, the sum being represented by a $5.00 bill found under the battered safe door, and the balance in silver and pennies which the force of the explosion had thrown out of the safe. Entrance to the ticket office was gained through the ticket window, the glass in the upper sash being broken to permit unlocking, following which the upper sash was lowered and the burglar crawled in over the iron grating covering the lower sash.

The noise of the explosion awakened most of the occupants of the Morrow hotel, located about 100 yards due north of the depot, and Chas. Glober, the proprietor, and Chas. Tupman, a boarder, arose in time to see a dark shadow running up and down the depot platform, apparently on the lookout for his confederates. A dim light was also apparently to be seen in the ticket office, probably from the dark lantern of the party or parties robbing the safe. Neither Mr. Glober nor Mr. Tupman had a gun at hand, and so were obliged to content themselves with phoning the news to the officers. Unable to reach Sheriff Wall over the phone, they got in touch with Deputy Sheriff J. W. Hibdon at the county jail. In the meantime, however, the robbers had gathered their loot and made their get-away. No sound was heard, aside from the explosion, and occupants of the Morrow hotel are certain that no auto left the depot grounds, but that the robbers made their escape on foot.

The night was well-chosen for the robbery, being almost pitch dark, and with a steady downpour of rain to cover up all tracks. Also, since the banks closed at 4:00 o'clock Saturday afternoon, the depot safe held practically two days' ticket sales. Only the fact that ticket sales on the two days chanced to be exceedingly light, prevented a big haul from being made.

A significant circumstance in connection with the robbery was the fact that the robbers also secured the receipts of Sunday night's ticket sales. M. P. Wegner the regular ticket agent, was confined to his bed with tonsillitis, and Sunday night Walter Townsend sold tickets in his stead. Not knowing the combination of the safe, which was already locked, Townsend placed his receipts in the cabinet with his unsold tickets. It is

3-POUND MIDGET IS ATTRACTING MUCH ATTENTION

A tiny 3-pound midget, who first discovered this beautiful world on Monday, February 21st, is attracting much attention in Brady. The tiny newcomer is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Robert Hughes, who live just south of the Jordan rooming house, and despite the fact that he barely tipped the scales at three pounds, he is a healthy and vigorous little fellow, with every indication that he will grow up into a useful citizen. Although his body and limbs are tiny and wrinkled, his features are well-formed and he may safely be called a "good-looking" youngster. He has a heavy thatch of coal-black hair. The father weighs 200 lbs., but at birth he only tipped the beam at 1½ lbs. according to the grandmother, Mrs. C. A. Bacon. The mother who is of average size, and weighs about 100 lbs., herself weighed but three pounds at birth. Many interested citizens have called at the Hughes home to see the little midget.

5-REEL DRAMA

If you are an admirer of the artistry of William S. Hart, the Paramount star, you should be glad to learn that he will appear in his latest picture, "The Cradle of Courage" at the Lyric Friday, March 4th. We think this sterling photoplay will please you immensely. Why? Because the theme is quite different from the usual run of Mr. Hart's screen dramas. You have seen him as a Westerner in most of his plays—but in "The Cradle of Courage" he is seen as a crook who is reformed through his long service in France, and who, on his return home, becomes a policeman, charged with the duty of bringing his former pals to justice. Of course, there a girl enters into his life and provides him with a double motive to go straight. This is a fascinating picture and every scene has its distinct Hart punch. Ann Little plays opposite Mr. Hart. You should by all means see this splendid photoplay. Two shows given on this night to handle crowd. First show starts at 7:15 p. m. Come early and get good seats.

This is a dramatic story of the reconstruction of a life-long cheater of the law, in the vast melting pot, "The Cradle of Courage." William S. Hart attains the highest of his acting powers in the role of Square Kelly, the crook, who is brave enough to become a cop. The unwritten law says "once a crook, always a crook; once a bull, always a bull." "The Cradle of Courage" will prove that this seemingly impossible transformation can be accomplished, in real life, with logic and plausibility. HONEST INJUN.

Whoever dreamed that the Brown-wood visitors could instill such "city class" into Brady? Sunday afternoon, a real, first-class band; Sunday night, a real, high-class job of safe blowing.

PRESIDENT WILSON'S HEALTH.

President Wilson, according to those immediately about him, has uttered his last statement to Congress or the people as Chief Executive of the Nation. His prime interest now is in his fight to recover his health.

He will make no statements and do no writing for some months, at least. To the repeated urging of his friends during the last few days that he give some indication of his mental reflection on his administration and a word as to the political and economic outlook for the next few years, he is quoted as having consistently replied: "I have said my final word. What has been done or said must stand as it is."

Only those who, in the past, have had continuous opportunity to watch the President actively at work, his rugged appearance and strong and rapid walk about his office and home, can appreciate to what a pitiful extent his illness has marked him. Four years ago he would conclude a conference with his Cabinet or Senators by rising suddenly from his chair, saying: "Well, gentlemen I guess that is all today," and stride rapidly out of the room.

Today he lifts himself slowly and carefully from a seating posture, his face drawn with the lines of suffering and worry, and, supported by his cane, walks slowly, almost uncertainly, from the room. The once erect figure, which made him appear even taller than he was, is now noticeably stooped. When he walks, he puts one foot slowly ahead of the other, taking short, careful steps. An attendant follows him and it is necessary to support him when he mounts any steps, however low.

He frets at the restrictions his health has placed upon him, and he worries, but he tries to maintain at most times a resigned attitude of cheerfulness.

"Tragic," is the comment most frequently heard now among those of all political faiths, friends or foes, of the President, who have observed him recently at the theatre. — Coleman Democrat-Voice.

"Chinese eggs, produced from the filth of Chinese farm premises, can be bought for 4c or 5c per dozen and shipped so cheaply by water to the United States that American growers with American standards of living can not possibly compete with them." That is the statement of a prominent Californian, who says that American poultry producers must be protected by a tariff to enable them to compete on equal terms with Chinese eggs. — Coleman Democrat-Voice.

BROWNWOOD BAND DELIGHTS LARGE AUDIENCE SUNDAY

A real band is the Brownwood Concert band—that is the unanimous verdict of the several thousand citizens who heard the band play in Brady last Sunday afternoon. Many had heard the boys play before, but on last Sunday they excelled—in fact they unqualifiedly placed themselves in class with the best bands of the South. Their program was not only well-rendered, but it was well-received and each number was heartily encored.

In their natty uniforms, the Brownwood band presents some class, but in the music they prove their title to the class. Needless to say, the visit of the band here was an appreciated event and served to attract citizens from far and near. Some thirty or more members appeared in the band, and they were accompanied to Brady by quite a large delegation of Brownwood citizens.

The program rendered was as follows:

- No. 1. March, "The Chicago Tribune" Chambers
- No. 2. Selection from the Opera "Faust" Gounod
- No. 3. Novelty, "First Heart Throbs" Eddingburg
- No. 4. Grand Sacred selection, "Joy of the World" Barnhouse
- No. 5. Overture, "Morning, Noon and Night in Vienna" Suppe
- No. 6. March, "Host of Freedom" Karl King

The personnel of the band is as follows:

CONTINUED SUCCESS GREETS EFFORTS OF RABBIT HUNTERS—MORE GOOD DRIVES HAD

Good success is attending the rabbit hunters and several thousand more of the pests have been added to the total slaughtered. In East Sweden community on Thursday of last week, 385 rabbits were slaughtered, about 22 men taking part in the drive which covered the Eric Nelin place. Mr. and Mrs. Nelin furnished a splendid dinner for those taking part. On Thursday of this week, the East Sweden folks will meet at the J. E. Carlson place at 1:00 o'clock p. m., for another drive.

The "Johnson Avenue" folks met last Friday at J. B. Cottrell's on the Brownwood road, and drove along the north side of the road as far as A. J. Johnson's, where they stopped at 2:00 o'clock for the splendid lunch prepared for them by Mr. and Mrs. Johnson. In the evening they drove along the south side of the road back to their starting point. With between 35 and 40 in the drive, the day's work netted 1102 rabbits. J. B. Cottrell reports that Saturday morning he and three others undertook a little drive of their own, and in two hours had killed 114 rabbits, which would indicate that there are still a few of them left.

SAFE CRACKERS WRECK DEPOT SAFE SUN. NIGHT—MAKE LIGHT HAUL

evident that the robbers were on the watch and noted his disposition of the ticket money.

The charge that forced the safe was evidently a heavy charge of nitroglycerin, which had evidently been poured into the crack of the safe door. Not only was the safe door blown off and crumpled like a piece of tin, but the bottom of the safe was blown out and both sides at the bottom front of the safe were bulged out, indicating that a large quantity of the nitroglycerin had run down to the bottom of the door before the explosion came. One hunk of cement filler was blown out of the side of the safe with such force as to break the door panel of the cupboard beneath the ticket sales window. Aside from shattering several window panes in the ticket office, however, no material damage was done to the interior.

The noise of the explosion was heard in the north part of town, M. P. Wegner, who resides over two blocks away from the depot, and who chanced to be awake at the moment, hearing it distinctly and at once divining that it must have been caused by the blowing of some safe. On the other hand, the noise did not carry south against the south wind for any distance, and was unheard by those living this side of the depot.

Probably the best clue the local officers have to work on is that when Townsend left for home, after the departure of the night Frisco, three men were observed standing on the depot platform, and one of them was heard to remark something in effect, "Well, it's all over for tonight; they're going home."

Among the debris of the safe was found a battered stillson wrench, which was recognized as belonging to railroad employes. The window of the freight depot was also found to be forced, the robbers probably having had designs on the freight depot safe, or else having desired to gain entrance into the warehouse. Nothing was missing from the warehouse apparently, although a crowbar was gone from the freight depot platform.

Officer Chases Prowler.

Whether the incident had any significance in connection with the safe robbery, is merely a matter of surmise, but at about 2:30 o'clock, while Deputy Sheriff Hibdon was enroute to Sheriff Wall's home, following getting word over the phone of the robbery, he (Hibdon) saw a man emerge from the Hardin & Jones lumber yard, and cross Blackburn street walking rapidly towards Mrs. Sayle's residence. He called upon the man to halt, but the party instead broke into a run. Hibdon fired three shots from his .38 Colts without effect, and the prowler after dashing into the back gate at S. A. Benham's residence, ran full tilt into a seven-foot chicken fence, which he broke down in two places in his efforts to escape. Then he vaulted a fence into W. O. Kirchner's yard, where a clothes line caught him under the chin and threw him back on his hands. Meantime, both Mr. Benham and Mr. Kirchner were aroused by the shots and the commands of Mr. Hibdon, and Mr. Kirchner got out of his house in time to see the prowler disentangling himself from the chicken fencing, and also regain his feet after his encounter with the clothes wire. Being in his night clothes and unarmed, Mr. Kirchner was unable to give pursuit. The man passed within fifteen feet of him, but the night was too dark for Kirchner to obtain a description, other than that the man was either a negro, or had a considerable growth of beard on his face. The prowler continued in his flight back towards town and made good his escape.

TO TRACTOR OWNERS

Fort Worth, Nov. 10, 1920.

Have you seriously considered the advantage our company has placed in your hands by marketing only Eupion the highest grade kerosene oil? It should be a matter of pride with each of us that we are handling a product that reflects all the skill and experience in manufacturing kerosene.

EUPION has well merited its well-known name—"The family safety oil." Special care and expense in the manufacture of Eupion has produced an oil that can be introduced into the home with absolute safety.

Another great field for the sale of Eupion lies with the tractor trade. Many dealers selling tractors use as a sales argument the fact that their tractors can be operated on low-grade distillate and off quality kerosene. While this may be true, the fact remains, that low grade fuel will result in inefficient operation of the tractor. It pays to get the best—USE EUPION.

When gasoline vapor is ignited in a cylinder the explosion is sudden and violent, comparable to a sharp, quick blow on the piston. When Eupion is used as a fuel in a tractor, the explosion is slower, following up the piston with great driving force. The above explains why Eupion develops such great power when used in tractors.

Low grade distillates and off color kerosene contain certain unsaturated sulphur compounds, which are oxidized into sulphuric acid when exploded in an engine. The accumulation of this acid will cause disastrous results in the engine cylinders. Eupion is treated in the Refinery to remove all sulphur compounds. All manufacturers of internal combustion engines warn purchasers of their engines to use only a fuel as near free from sulphur compounds as possible. Eupion fulfills this requirement.

Eupion will vaporize readily when used in an internal combustion engine and when the explosion occurs it is with a correctly distributed driving force so powerful as not to expend itself until the piston has traveled the length of the cylinder.

Push this ideal fuel oil for internal combustion engines—when an engineer buys Eupion he is buying engine insurance. He is insuring himself against shutdowns, unnecessary repairs and abnormal wear and tear on his engine. IT PAYS TO BUY THE BEST.

Yours very truly,

He knows your confusion, your doubts and your worry at the trend of present-day affairs. And in this tale he shows the clash of the new, corroding, materialistic aims with the old, sturdy, strengthening American ideals that bend and quiver but still hold us steadfast to the good. It is not a story of adventure or mystery and its thrills are not of the breath-taking sort; but they grip you nevertheless and leave you with that pleasurable glow which comes from faith renewed and optimism reestablished. It is a page from the red tablets of

SIX TRUE BILLS
 BY GRAND JURY
 3 FELONY CASES

The Grand Jury, convened in session on Monday afternoon of last week by Judge J. O. Woodward, completed its investigations last Friday, and returned six true bills into court —three for felonies, and three for misdemeanors. Acting upon the instruction of Judge Woodward in his charge, the grand jury gave much time and attention to anonymous threats made against negroes and Mexicans recently, and while some good evidence as to the perpetrators was uncovered, it was deemed best that the matter be turned over to Federal authorities for action.

The three felony cases are as follows:

State vs. Dave Booker (col), Unlawfully Selling Whisky.

State vs. George and Charley Moore, Burglary.

State vs. Oscar Galloway, Running Gaming House.

The following is the report of the Grand Jury:

To the Honorable J. O. Woodward,
 Judge of the District Court:

We, your Grand Jury, impaneled for this term of your court, beg to submit the following as our report:

We have been in session five days and have turned in to you six bills, three of which are felonies and three misdemeanors.

We have made diligent inquiry as to all violations of the law that have been brought to our attention and have given special attention to the matters of which we are charged.

Complying with the court's instructions, we have given the matter of anonymous letters that have been circulated in our town threatening Mexicans and negroes a pretty thorough investigation. We are satisfied in our own minds as to certain parties taking part in this violation, but acting upon the advice of our district attorney, we feel that it is better to turn this matter over to the U. S. government.

We have made inspection of the jail and find it to be in a creditable condition. We would recommend that a fence be built around the jail.
 We also note that the material is on the grounds for repairing the court house, and commend the commissioners for having begun this much needed repair.

 ary term, February 25, 1921.

The barberry bush seems doomed.
 Almost 5,000,000 bushes have been their products declined 4.7 per cent

CLAUD MACKEY, BETTER KNOWN AS "SIX-DEUCE," FLEES—SAYS NEVER AGAIN

Nexer again will Claud Mackey, had negro, and better known as "Six Deuce," attempt to make a get-away from an officer, who goes armed.
 Mackey got to acting real bad last Saturday night down in "The Flat," the negro section north of the public square, and after firing one shot through the floor underneath the stove in a house where he happened to be when the bad spell hit him, he decided to do the Wild West stunt out in open air. Outside the house he delivered one parting shot aiming a bullet through the house, and then he expended the rest of his ammunition at the inoffensive and defenseless stars. About that time, Deputy-Sheriff J. W. Hibdon took Claud in tow, and escorted him to the county lockup. As Hibdon turned to unlock the jail door, his prisoner made a break for liberty. Unlimbering his Colt's .38, the deputy took two shots at the sprinter, which laid him low, although no personal damage could be discovered. Instead, one of the bullets struck the sidewalk on the west side of Wulff's garage, ricocheted and broke out a large plate glass widow. The bullet was later found, flattened out, on the sidewalk.
 Mr. Six-Deuce says that sure was a close call for him. The negro has a record of three penitentiary terms behind him, and is evidently courting the opportunity to renew acquaintance with prison walls.

JOHN CORBETT, WEST TEXAS' MASTER TRAPPER, HAS MADE INTERESTING TRAP RECORD

A man, who has spent fifty-five years of his life trapping in almost all parts of North America, from the time when the western half of the continent was an almost unbroken wilderness, infested with savage tribes and untamed beasts, wandering from the tropical suns of the Mexican country to the bleak and blinding white of the frozen North, is now a permanent fixture of West Texas. Trained from boyhood in the art of ensnaring the wild beast, he still pursues this fascinating occupation and for several years has been of great aid to the stockmen of the West in ridding the ranges of the sheep-killing wolves.

This man is John Corbett, known as the West's most valuable trapper and reputed to have caught more wolves in the jaws of traps than any other one man in the state. The veteran trapper paid San Angelo the first visit in over three years the latter part of last week, remaining here but a few days.

Few of his friends were able to recognize him until he had alighted from his rig, for he was driving not the old rickety hack, drawn by two small burros, in which he made his trips to San Angelo for the last twenty-eight years, but a brand new shiny Ford touring car, which he recently purchased in Menard. He says that he still has the historic old hack and the self-same burros but that he merely keeps them around thru force of habit, for since he has learned to speed his new gas buggy he would not sell it for twice the amount he gave for it even though he bought it before Ford cars were reduced.

Camps On Gentry Creek.

For nearly four years Corbett has pitched his camp on the banks of the Gentry creek on Ed Meers' ranch in Kimble county. During his stay there, he says, he has trapped a total of seventy-seven wolves, receiving a bounty of $50 each on them during recent times.

After an absence of over three years Corbett is now contemplating returning to Tom Green county or in one of the near surrounding counties to continue to help the stockmen rid the range of the wolf menace. He says that he has been engaged during the last few weeks in trying to get his "home" ready for removal and when he has gathered all of his traps and his paraphernalia around him he will hit the road in his modern conveyance for the section where he spent the greater part of his Texas life.

John Corbett is perhaps one of the best known characters in West Texas, having spent twenty-six years trapping wolves in this section. He has always been a regular visitor to the San Angelo Fair and a permanent fixture in the annual "Old Settlers' Parade" which formerly featured the fair festivities. He is famous in this section as a wolf trapper but he says that he has trapped everything from a mocking bird to a grizzly bear, wandering from the sunny south of Texas to the snow capped peaks of Alaska.

Is 68 Years Old.

Corbett was born in the Blue Grass region of Grant county, Ky., sixty-eight years ago. Thirteen years later he left the fireside of his home, abandoning it for the alluring call of nature. A boy of thirteen years, he wandered to Terre Haute, Ind., and for several years trapped all along the Wabash river in that state. This amateur trapping of a mere lad of thirteen was the beginning of one of the most interesting careers in the United States today.

After a few years of trapping along the Wabash, Corbett felt that he had emerged from the amateur stage and was ready for big game. He veered further north and took up his activities along the Snake river, one of the biggest rivers in Idaho. During the several years he spent in this northern state he trapped all over Idaho and from one end of the Snake river to the other. In those days, he says, big game was plentiful in practically every state in the Union and especially in the northwestern state and he found a supply to his liking along the famous Snake.

Pushing always further north, Corbett pulled up the stakes along the Snake river and set out for the Canadian border. He finally landed high up among the towering snow covered mountains of Alaska, where he spent three years of his life trapping the fur animals of the bleak-North.

Lived With Eskimos.

During his three years of constant association with the Eskimos he learned their habits and customs and learned to talk their sign language. The Eskimo, he says, have no language but depend almost entirely upon signs for communication. He demonstrated with some of the signs which he still remembers, giving their interpretation. One custom of these queer peoples he describes is their method of making bread. A mixture of the brain of animals, the marrow of the bone and ginseng root was ground in a mortar of hollowed stone under a pestle. This mixture, he says, makes a very palatable food.

Penetrating into unexplored dens inhabited by wild animals and wandering among the varmint infested woodland of the North, Corbett, thru the God-given animal instinct to grasp his surrounding and to apprehend the intentions of his enemies, learned the habits and haunts of the North's animal population and he learned also the beauties of God's great "air dome" which are unknown to the greater part of the present generation.

It was there that he first learned to look for the characteristics of any certain species of animals and he studied and learned the habits of all of Nature's children in that frozen region. He brought that ability to the south with him and today he can sit under the trees at night and listen to the lonesome howl of the wolf and tell just what that animal is saying to his kind. The wolf, he says, has a different sound for every meaning he wishes to convey, just like man has a different word for each idea, but to the unpracticed ear one howl sounds as lonely and hair-raising as the other.

Understands Wolf Language.

The wolf can convey four different ideas to the pack or to her pups, Corbett says. One howl means "come help devour the prey," another means "come help kill a meal," another says "come play" and still another says "turn back pups, there's danger here."

One blood-curdling story he tells of his experiences in the North is of the fate of a man named Yates, who, during the first few months of his life in the north, was his partner in trapping and hunting. He had cautioned Yates, he said, against carelessly shooting the big grizzly bears. A grizzly bear shot through the heart, he says, is just about as powerful as a sound one and he had reminded Yates of this fact several times. One day his partner left the cabin on a visit to one of his traps and when he did not return in a reasonable length of time Corbett went out in search of him, accompanied by several Eskimos.

After searching for several hours, he said, he came up on the spot where his partner had made his last stand. The man's bones, almost entirely cleaned of flesh by animals, were found scattered over the snow and the carcass of an immense grizzly, weighing perhaps 1,600 pounds, was found sunk four feet in the snow, a bullet wound through his heart. The bear had seized Yates' gun and had beaten it into small bits over a nearby tree.

Grizzly Almost Catches Him.

Another experience he recalls is when his own aim went wrong and he was forced to take to his heels in the deep snow to escape the clutches of an enraged and pained grizzly. He wounded the bear, and the animal, after stuffing the bullet hole full of leaves from a tree started out in pursuit of its intended slayer. Seeing that he had failed to place the grizzly beyond danger, Corbett started reloading his gun, which was of the old type of muzzle loader, but before he could have time to take a second shot at the oncoming animal, he felt that it was better policy to take to his heels, which he did but loading his weapon at the same time. On account of the high altitude of the northern country and the deep snow he ran with difficulty and blood was soon streaming from his mouth and nose. Every few paces, he said, he would turn and fire at the animal but each shot failed to reach a vital spot.

He finally reached the stage where he could no longer run but merely walk. But the bear came on as if it had never been shot. Finally, he said, when he felt that he could not move his feet another inch, the blood now gushing from his lungs, he feebly fired one more shot and the bear rolled over in the snow less than sixty feet behind him. That taught him, he said, to either make a sure shot just behind the ear or surrender the grizzly altogether.

Through his long experience in trapping wolves, Corbett has learned that that animal is charmed by music. He has a novel way in which he attracts the wolf to his traps, weird notes on a violin serving as bait for his prey. When the night is still and the wolf steals forth from his lair in search of food, Corbett takes his treasured old violin from its case and drawing the bow across the strings produces a sound which is attractive to the hungry wolf's ear and the handy traps claim their victims.

Used Pet As Lure.

A pet wolf which bore the name of Bettie once occupied an enviable position in Corbett's household until her untimely death during the trapper's sojourn in Kimble county. This domesticated wolf penetrated into the premises of a neighbor and met death at the hands of the victim of her encroachments, the neighbor not recognizing Bettie from the untamed of her kind.

This tamed beast, Corbett says, once served for the same purpose to which he now subjects his violin. Her lonesome howls at his bidding drew the wolves to what they thought a banquet of some unfortunate lamb, but to their surprise they walked upon, not a banquet, but the death grip of a trap. The pet wolf, Corbett said, would prop her feet on the back of one of the burros and at his bidding emit her howl which had all of the characteristics of the wild beast. At his call of "louder" the animal would press the loud pedal and there would be scalp bounties a plenty for the master trapper. — San Angelo Standard.

CAN YOU IMAGINE IT?—

Wm. S. HART IN CHARACTER OF A REFORMED CROOK

Can you imagine Wm. S. Hart in a role other than that of a Westerner? Pretty hard to do—therefore, you will have to see him at The Lyric on Friday night of this week in his new character—that of a crook reformed by his experiences while a soldier of the U. S. overseas. He stays reformed, too—but, while he is a member of the police force hunting down his former pals among the crooks, he allows a dainty little Miss to rob him—that is, rob him of his heart. Yes, indeed! Bill Hart falls in love. And maybe that helps him stay reformed—at least he appears to receive his life sentence most cheerfully.

"There are other good plays at the Lyric for the coming week—"

Buck Jones in "Just Pals" for tomorrow (Wednesday) night.

"Kentucky Colonel," a great Southern drama for Thursday night.

Dorothy Dalton in "Lady of Red Butte," a drama that has a strong appeal and which carries a strong cast of players. Saturday night.

Monday, Elaine Hammerstein in "Daughter Pays," the story of a girl who sacrificed herself upon the marriage altar for the sake of her mother and sister.

Next Tuesday, Blanche Sweet in "Help Wanted—Male," a story of how to ensnare the male sex—a riot of comedy and romance cleverly interwoven.

A Matter of Diet.

A negro employed at one of the movie studios in Los Angeles was drafted by a director to do a novel comedy scene with a lion.

"You get into this bed," ordered the director, "and we'll bring the lion in and put him in bed with you. It will be a scream."

"Put a lion in bed with me!" yelled the negro, "No, sah! Not a-tall! I quits right here and now."

"But," protested the director, "this lion won't hurt you. This lion was brought up on milk."

"So was I brung up on milk" wailed the negro, "but I eats meat now."

VALUABLE BUSINESS PROPERTY CHANGES HANDS

A business deal of considerable importance was consummated the past week in the sale to W. W. Jordan & Co. of the two business houses on North Bridge street now occupied by W. C. Wegner's Meat market and Will Goodner's grocery. The purchase was made from Messrs. W. D. Crothers and B. A. Hallum, who acquired the property something over a year ago.

The property in question has a frontage of 35 ft., and extends west for 95 ft. Located within half block of the public square and on the main street connecting the depot and the North Side with the business section, this property has been steadily increasing in value, and offers one of the most desirable business sites off the square. Jordan & Co. made the purchase as an investment.

Crothers & Hallum have also sold to J. C. Wall, a lot 35x45, and which lies west and adjoining Mr. Wall's business building on North Bridge street, now occupied by the American Railway Express Co. office. The new purchase gives Mr. Wall a regulation business lot 35x95 ft., and will enable the erection of a business house to conform with the other business houses of Brady, should Mr. Wall ever decide to replace his present building with a permanent structure of rock or brick.

The two foregoing make up three real estate deals consummated by Crothers & Hallum since the first of the year, they having some weeks ago sold their remaining rent house on Melton avenue to J. C. Gahagan, which would indicate that real estate business in Brady is brisk.

Keeping Sabbath Holy—in Arkansas.

An old squatter's young son appeared one Sunday morning whistling a tune.

"Stop that tha whistlin' Jed," commanded the boy's father. "This is Sunday."

"Wal, it's a hymn tune," replied the youngster.

"I don't give a damn if it is a hymn tune," roared the old man. "This is the Lord's day, and if I hear ye a-whistlin' that agin, I'll whale hell out o' you."
