AGRICULTURAL CLUB PROGRAM FOR COUNTY MEET SATURDAY, MAY 14TH

INTERESTING EVENTS WILL BE PARTICIPATED IN BY SCHOOL CHILDREN FROM ALL OVER McCULLOCH—CLUB AND SCHOOL COLORS TO BE WORN.

One of the biggest events of the year has been planned for next Saturday, May 14th, by County Agent B. D. Black—a county-wide meeting of the Agricultural Clubs of the various schools. An all-day program has been arranged, in which songs, talks, yells and addresses will be interspersed, assuring a live meeting throughout the day. The chief speaker of the day will be B. V. Edworthy of Dallas, State Boys' Secretary of the Y. M. C. A.

Below is the program for the Club meeting, May 14th, as made by the program committee:

Program begins promptly at 10:00 a. m.

Invocation—Rev. P. R. Campbell.

Song—Battle Hymn of the Republic—led by Rev. S. C. Dunn.

Status of Club Work in County—B. D. Black, county agent.

Yells—led by Miss Zenda Aschbacher.

Address—R. W. Persons, state club leader. A. & M. college.

Yells.

Short Reports from Each School Club.

Yells.

Lunch—All are to bring lunches and spread together in tabernacle.

Games—Conducted by Misses Granger, Williams and Hynetz.

Pictures will be taken during lunch and games.

Song—Columbia, The Gem of the Ocean.

Yells.

Address—B. V. Edworthy, State Boys' Secretary, Y. M. C. A., Dallas.

Picture reel.

Organization of the County Club. Adjournment.

Colors—White and Gold. Every member will be expected to wear the white and gold ribbons on their arms. They may also wear their school colors, if they wish, and we hope they do. The school clubs are to group themselves as schools in the forenoon, but not afternoon.

A prize was to have been given the school club with best attendance, but that has been decided impracticable because all expect to have full attendance.

The presiding officers for this meeting will be: Lofton Penn, president; Sallie Jordan, secretary; J. B. Matlock, reporter.

Each club officer in each community should begin now to plan for that day. Some will not have conveyance. All should co-operate to get every member to this meeting. Do your very best. I know you will do that. This is to be a worth-while meeting for all of us. Bring your parents with you too. We want them to know more of what you are doing and how. This is to be strictly an open meeting and all are invited to attend.

I have invited the county agents from all the adjoining counties to come and bring as many of their club members as possible. They say they are coming. We must show them that we are doing things. Let's all make them feel at home too. I know you will though.

B. D. BLACK, County Agent.

BRADY TAKES TUESDAY'S BALL GAME FROM PEAR VALLEY—SCORE 14 TO 9

For heavy hitting, Tuesday afternoon's ball game at Dutton City park, between Pear Valley and Brady teams, gave complete satisfaction to all who like to see Babe Ruth stunts on the diamonds. Eden scored two runs in their half of the first, and Brady then proceeded to secure three tallies in their half. With two outs, and the bases full in the second, Jack Hampton, who was on the mound for Brady, was transferred to left field, and Fred Spiller was put in the pitcher's box. Daniels, heavy-hitting slugger on the Eden team, thereupon lined out a ball up against the park fence for a home run, running in four tallies. Bailey Jones, catcher for the locals, then retrieved the honors for Brady by knocking out a three-bagger in Brady's half of the second, and scoring the three men then on base. Jones himself scored later. In the fourth, Daniels again lined out a long drive, but found Woosley out in center garden waiting under it. The fourth inning ended with the score tied, 9 to 9.

The Brady team then got together and held the visitors scoreless for the remaining five innings of the game. Jones continued his good record, and out of five times at the bat, hung up a record of one three-bagger, two-bagger, a single, and one walk. The result showed in Brady adding five tallies in the remaining innings.

For this afternoon, the Brady team has a game matched with a picked nine from the Melvin section. A hot contest is assured.

HAIL AND WIND DOES CONSIDERABLE DAMAGE IN WALDRIP SECTION

The heavy rain, which fell Sunday night, was accompanied by hail and considerable wind, which is reported to have done considerable damage in the Waldrip and Rockwood communities. J. W. Hill of Waldrip reported that the hail storm extended from the Lohn section to Rockwood, beating up both cotton and corn crops in many places so badly that the farmers were obliged to plant over. On J. L. Hill's place in the Waldrip section, Mr. Hill not only lost his corn and cotton crops, but also a fine watermelon crop. He also had a splendid grape orchard which was all but destroyed.

Dr. B. B. Beakley of Melvin, who, with Mrs. Beakley, was visiting in the Rockwood section, says when the storm was coming up he had stopped to fix a puncture. Instead of changing tires, however, he pulled off the flat tire, threw it in the car and proceeded on the rim. He made it to shelter just a minute or two ahead of the storm. He says that great damage was done around Rockwood. Cotton was beaten into the ground, and nothing but stubs remained of splendid corn fields. One house was blown off its blocks, and other minor damage was done.

BRADY RODEO, ROUND-UP AND POLO EXHIBITION PROVES GRAND SUCCESS

OVER ONE THOUSAND IN ATTENDANCE AT AFTERNOON'S EVENTS—PROGRAM ATTRACTS VISITORS 100 MILES AROUND—INTERESTING PRIZE CONTESTS.

The Brady Rodeo, Round-Up and Polo Exhibition staged at the new Dutton City Park Thursday afternoon proved one of the biggest events ever staged in Brady, and was a grand success in every particular. Gate receipts showed over eleven hundred paid admissions, and the immense grand-stand was packed long before the opening contests, additional seats being provided on the east side of the grand stand to take care of the overflow. The various events afforded some classy exhibitions of West Texas skill with horse and lasso, and brought salvos of applause for those who individually distinguished themselves.

With the grandstand packed to overflowing, and with spectators, on foot and in automobiles, lined in semi-circle from the west side of the grand stand to more than mid-way along the west fence, the big celebration was opened yesterday with a polo contest between two picked teams. The contest was the first public exhibition of the revival of a popular sport in the early days of Brady history. E. H. Leach captain, with W. N. White, Les Galbreath and W. F. Dutton, formed one team and Lee Downs, captain, with Johnny White, W. C. Wegner and Ben Strickland formed the other. The game ended in a tie, the score being 4 to 4. Bill Wegner added spice to the exhibition by his headlong falls from the saddle in the excitement of the game, and this morning avers that the directors have agreed to pad the board fence to prevent his getting hurt in future matches.

Following the polo, cattle cutting gave opportunity for an exhibition of skill in the training and handling of cow ponies. "Cheyenne," rated as the best cow pony on the White ranch, and ridden by Jack Drago, was awarded the prize of $35.00. F. M. Richard, Alf Reeves and Chas. Bratton acted as judges and made the award upon the horse's show of training.

WELL DRILLING OPERATIONS IN McCULLOCH CO.

Operations in the McCulloch county oil fields continue steadily, with no notable reports for the week. Thad O. Day well No. 1 was started again Monday, at about 850 ft., and was reported at over 900 ft. Wednesday, drilling with a 12½-inch hole. While the well was originally drilled beyond the 850 ft. depth, the hole has been rimmed out from this depth on.

The Friday Oil Association, operating at the Douglas well, Wednesday had 37 ft. of hole yet to clean out, according to C. A. Colman, field manager. The 6-inch casing had been set to the 570 ft. depth, and it was anticipated that the hole would be cleaned and ready for a shot in the 660 ft. sand by the end of the week.

The Star State Oil Co., drilling a shallow well on the Douglas tract, had reached a depth of over 100 ft. Wednesday, and was about ready to set casing.

No report was had from the Mercury field, nor from the Casa Oil Co. well in the Lohn-Mfe section.

Mrs. A. B. Stobaugh was this week in receipt of a telegram advising that Miss Sidney Buford, who has been named as Red Cross Community Nurse for McCulloch county, would leave New Orleans Thursday enroute to Brady. The coming of Miss Buford is being eagerly anticipated, and marks the successful culmination of efforts upon the part of local Red Cross leaders to secure this important feature for McCulloch county citizens. As has been previously stated, the services of Miss Buford will be given freely to every part of McCulloch county, and it will be her purpose to assist the various communities, and individual citizens as well, in the promotion of health work, the prevention of diseases, and the promotion of all matters pertaining to public health, and welfare.

Miss Buford is most highly recommended by the citizens of Bolivar county, Mississippi, whom she has served heretofore as community nurse and her work in McCulloch county is certain to obtain the same splendid results for us. The co-operation of every citizen is urged, and every citizen is urged to show his appreciation by taking membership in the McCulloch county Red Cross, through which organization the services of Miss Buford was alone made possible.

Miss Buford will be featured in an address at the meeting of the Parent-Teachers association next Friday afternoon, and every parent, and, as well, every citizen is urged to be in attendance upon this meeting. Not

MOTHERS DAY SERVICE

At the Methodist church, next Sunday, May 8th, at 11:00 a. m.

Program:

1. Opening song, "Mother's Prayers"—No. 14.
2. Scripture Reading and Prayer.
3. Quartet: "My Mother"—Mrs. Duke Mann, Miss Mary Morris, Mr. J. T. Mann and Mr. L. B. Townsend.
4. Song, by Choir—No. 256.
5. Solo and Chorus—led by Miss Mary Morris.
6. Benediction, and everybody shake hands and be friendly.

N. B.—Now remember, Mother's Service is held only once a year, and if you love and respect the name and memory of your dear mother, we want you to come; we have a place for you in our church to worship with us. If you have not been to church in 5, 10, 15 or 20 years, break over and come along next Sunday morning—it will do you good now and perhaps in eternity.

Come one—come all! A big, hearty welcome awaits you. If you can't find room in the house, come around and sit in the pastor's study; crowd in any way to get in. Come early—good seats—the house will be packed.

only will this meeting give opportunity to meet Miss Buford, but also it will enable all to get an accurate insight into her work, and the plans she may have for work throughout the county.

The following recommendations given Miss Buford by citizens among whom she has worked in Mississippi, give her admirable introduction to the citizens of McCulloch:

"Cleveland, Miss., March 21, '21.

"To Whom It May Concern:

"I take pleasure in recommending the bearer hereof, Miss Sidney Buford, as a young woman of exemplary character, high attainments and sterling worth richly deserving the confidence and respect of the public.

"She has spent practically two scholastic years in Cleveland, Mississippi, as Public Health Nurse, proving herself eminently equipped for the responsible position, giving entire satisfaction to all concerned and winning the confidence and esteem of the whole community.

"Miss Buford is voluntarily severing her connection with the author-ties here with the view of going to Texas.

"Respectfully submitted,
"W. W. MITCHELL,
"Pastor M. E. Church South, Cleveland, Mississippi."

"To Whom It May Concern:

"We, the undersigned, hereby certify that we have known personally of the work done by Miss Sidney Buford as a County Nurse in Bolivar County, Mississippi. First of all, she has the technical training and the necessary physical vigor to do the work of a trained nurse; and more than this, she has the warmth of heart, breadth of vision, and social tact to successfully serve rich and poor alike.

"She has quite won all hearts of those with whom her work brought her into contact in this county and we greatly regret that she is leaving us for another field of work.

"Respectfully,
"REV. JOHN C. SLIGH,
"BIRDIE EDWARDS SLIGH."

Pear Valley Trounced In Ball Game—School Attends Church.

Lohn, Texas, May 6. Editor Brady Standard:

Sunday night about nine o'clock Lohn received the rain that we have been wanting to make the oats; but along with it was a severe wind and hail storm.

Dr. and Mrs. B. B. Beakley of Melvin passed through Lohn Monday evening on their way home from visiting friends and relatives at Santa Anna.

Miss Grace Barton spent Saturday and Sunday with homefolks in Lohn.

Rev. Coburn began a two weeks' meeting at the Methodist church Saturday night. Rev. G. A. Woods of Junction is doing the preaching.

Mr. and Mrs. Reed Steward and Cubbie Pynes were shopping in Brady Saturday.

Instead of going to church at four o'clock Monday evening as announced, we met at the school grounds and served the Lord by trouncing Pear Valley in a base ball game.

The school attended church in body Tuesday morning.

Miss Helen and Arthur McCoy and their families spent Sunday night with J. A. Blanton.

Heavy Fire Loss for Wallace Price—This Cake 'Takes the Cake.'

Rochelle, Texas, May 3. Editor Brady Standard:

Another good rain again last night was had which was badly needed on the grain and also on the gardens, especially on potato and tomato plants just transplanted, and everything lovely this morning, with a carpet of green dotted here and there with wild flowers that reminds one that Spring is surely here.

We have had such a hard spring on all garden and field plants and we are so glad to escape the frost that was due on April 28th, on account of thunder on February 28th; of course, just an old saying, that could come true, but we get along lots better with it out.

The farmers are busy now plowing corn, which is growing nicely and beginning to look like prosperity once more.

The maize and cane is most all up to a good stand and by the time the corn is cultivated will be ready for same.

Mr. Wallace Price had the misfortune to lose his home and most of the contents by fire on last Wednesday night.

His wife was away on a visit with her sister, Mrs. Myrick, of Brady and Mr. Price was also absent. The neighbors, as soon as they discovered the fire gathered in and saved a part of the household effects, which was highly appreciated by these good people.

This is the second burn like this he has had in the last four or five years, only before they saved nothing, it being on the farm and no neighbors close to help.

Constable Cole lost a fine milk cow last week, one that gave them four gallons of milk per day and was a very valuable asset to the family. She furnished them all the milk and butter needed. He and his neighbors worked with, and did all in their power to save her, but of no avail.

It is too bad to lose such a cow as that. Mrs. Mina Lloyd and son, Jules, were over from Eden last week to attend the commencement exercises of the school here, they being former residents of this community and the son a long-ago pupil here.

They naturally had a great desire to come back on a visit just at the right time to meet all the old friends and make some new ones. They came over in the car with Mr. Abernath's family, who visited his brother and family of this place.

Joe, Abe and Orville Cottle, accompanied by Paschal Waddell and little daughter, Billie Maxine, also J. P. Waddell and grandson, Herman Verlast, Sunday, April 24th, to visit old non Hardin, motored over near Halk uncle, Clabe Micker, an old time friend, and on their return in the afternoon, stopped in to see old Grandmother Campbell, better known as Aunt Kim who was taken quite seriously ill a few days before, but at that time knew all who came in and still continues to improve.

Mrs. W. A. Lyons visited at the home of John Rains and family from Friday till Monday.

Edgar Price and family visited at Mobern Sunday in the home of his sister, Mrs. Deley Dyer, and enjoyed a dinner of good old corn bread and cat fish, caught the previous night by Mr. Dech and Mr. Clark.

Mrs. Deena, pastor of the M. E. church at Brady, came over to Rochelle and delivered a fine sermon at 7 p. m. Sunday, to a crowded house.

He intended to preach at night, but the cloud came up and interfered.

An letter from Mrs. H. F. Hartman, of Fort Worth to her mother, Mrs. J. P. Waddell, she had of a large cake made by the baker for Mommie's birthday goods store. Here is the description: 3 lb. square of lozings; 18 inches at top and 8 lb. tall—and contained 3500 eggs and all other ingredients in proportion; weight 700 lb.; cost to this company, $700.00; was to be served with punch during the day to all who entered the store, this being their 32nd anniversary day in business in Fort Worth. Now who can beat this for a cake? But if there is anyone that can, please come on with it, but until you do, I claim the honor of reporting the champion cake—if the report does come from Fort Worth.

Nights I was so I couldn't get any rest and I was annoyed by the irregular action of my kidneys. One of our new customers handed me a grocery list his wife had given him:

"As I was putting a can of Gold Plume Coffee in his basket, he said: 'That's mighty good coffee—d'ever tell you how we got to using it?'"

Chuckling he said, "Well, it all started by me gettin' a good joke on her."

"She was trying to write a letter on a bran new tablet, and she was fustin, about how hard it was for her to write, and how she couldn't use a pen any more, and all such talk."

"I just happened to look over her shoulder and there if she wasn't trying to write on that blotter that's in the front of all them tablets."

"I says to her—'Well, try it on some real paper—can't nobody write on a blotter. So she took a sheet of the good paper and wrote, alright.'"

"Well, we hadn't been satisfied with our coffee since we visited our daughter. She had awful good coffee."

"The Missus said she believed she was losing her knack of making coffee. But I said to her—I believe it's in the coffee. You can't make good coffee out of a poor brand, any more than you can write a good letter on a blotter."

"So she says, well less try a new brand—I've heard this Gold Plume Coffee spoken of pretty highly—get a can next time."

"So I did."

"And I can tell you there ain't been no more complainin' about the coffee at our house since I got that first can."

Last Sunday morning, May 1st, our little settlement was in a gloom of sadness when the sad news was spread that our old friend and neighbor, Mr. C. A. Johnson had passed away after a lingering illness of several months. Mr. Johnson died Sunday morning at about 10:30 at the age of 75 years. Death was caused by cancer of the stomach, with which Mr. Johnson had suffered for several months and was hastened by his advanced age. Mr. Johnson was one of the old timers, coming here over 30 years ago. Mr. Johnson was a man of pleasant and good nature and always had a friendly and jolly word for you, and was liked by all who knew him. He leaves a wife and four children, two sons and two daughters, who are Paul Johnson of Viejo, Texas and Thomas of Brady, and Mrs. Will Dutton and Mrs. Will Gabway of Brady. Mr. Johnson was laid to rest Monday afternoon at 4:00 o'clock at the East Sweden cemetery amid a large crowd of sorrowing relatives and friends, who had come far and near to pay their last respects. Revs. Woods, Jones and Martinson preached the funeral sermon.

Prof. Swenson and wife and H. C. Johanson and family were pleasant visitors at the J. A. Eklund home Sunday.

I will ring off.

Mixed Letters

By HAROLD SINCLARE

(©, 1921, Western Newspaper Union.)

"If the firm doesn't raise my salary on October 19," said Arthur Grant, as he tried the new wedding ring on his fiancée's finger, "I shall do something desperate."

"But why October 19, Arthur?" inquired pretty Celia Hunter, patting his hand affectionately. "Why not wait till the New Year?"

"Because," replied Arthur firmly, "everybody asks for a raise at the beginning of the year, whereas I am the only member of the staff who entered the firm's employment on October 19. Just think, next week I shall have been there five years. And to get a beggarly thirty-two-fifty a week! Why, we can't begin to live on less than thirty-five."

"But Arthur, dear, you aren't going to do anything rash for the sake of two dollars and a half," said his fiancée, "sooner or later they will do you justice, I am sure."

"You don't know old Carson," replied Arthur moodily. "No, it amounts to this, dearest. Unless he raises me to thirty-five our marriage must be postponed."

"Postponed?" exclaimed Celia in consternation.

"That's what I said. I'm not going to start life in a cheap flat with installment system furniture and—why, what's the matter, dearest?"

"If you think here of your old flat than you do of me," sobbed Celia, "you may take your old ring and leave me forever." And, flinging the ring upon the table she hurried toward the door.

Arthur came to the conclusion that it would be best to settle his difficulty with his employer before attempting reconciliation with his fiancée. Accordingly, the next morning he requested an interview with Mr. Carson, the head of the corporation in which he occupied the post of assistant cashier.

"Mr. Carson," he began, "I wish to apply for an increase in salary, to take effect immediately. I am to be married shortly, and I find thirty-two dollars and fifty cents a week insufficient to support a wife."

Mr. Carson spun round in his chair, his eyebrows lifted.

"How much did you say you received?" he asked.

"Thirty-two fifty," faltered Arthur. "Weekly or monthly, Mr. Grant?"

"Weekly, sir," replied the other, allowing a diplomatic smile to hover over his features.

"I did not know that, Mr. Grant," replied Mr. Carson. "I thought your salary was twenty-five dollars. I should, perhaps, have been willing to increase it to thirty, but—no, Mr. Grant, what you ask is impossible. Good morning, sir." And he returned to his papers, while Arthur, too discomposed to utter the words which he had prepared for just such a contingency, retired to his work.

That evening, seated at the table in his little room, he wrote two letters. One was to Mr. Carson, apologizing for his action. "I very much regret that we failed to reach a satisfactory understanding this afternoon," he wrote. "I hope you will forgive the unpardonable nature of my request and disregard the incident." The other was to Celia. In this he passionately announced at once his love and his determination, with the secret, unwritten reservation that he would some day return to claim her.

Then he went moodily to bed.

He knew Celia's stubbornness and pride. He knew that she would never be the first to make advances to him again. The dawn broke, and he rose, after a sleepless night, ready for the new life to which he had pledged himself—a life of renunciation and labor.

"Mr. Carson wishes to see you in his office at once, Mr. Grant," announced the office boy, as soon as he had taken his seat.

Grant arose and went in to the interview. He cared little what the message portended. To his astonishment, however, Mr. Carson was mild, almost apologetic.

"Er—Mr. Grant," he began, "we have been looking up your record and I wish to say that—with regard to your letter, we have decided that we can afford to increase your salary rather than let you go."

"My letter, sir?" exclaimed Arthur, dazedly.

"This is your letter, sir, I believe," said Carson, laying a missive before him. "And let me say, Mr. Grant, that you have pleaded better with your pen than you did yesterday in person. A vacancy is to occur in the auditing department on the first of the month. It is worth thirty-five dollars a week, and—"

But Arthur only heard dimly, for, stretched out before him, he read the words of his own letter:

"Mr. Carson,
Reserve Corporation,
"My Dear Mr. Carson:
"I must leave you at once. You will not see me again. Think kindly of me, for I gave you all my devotion, and my entire life and hopes were centered in you. Yours, broken heartedly,
"ARTHUR GRANT."

Half a minute later Arthur was at the telephone. Just forty-five seconds afterward he heard Celia at the other end.

"I shall be home tonight, Arthur," she said sweetly. "Forgive me? Yes, of course I forgive you, dear. But you will have to explain just why you wrote me such a dreadful formal apology."

ORDER FOR ELECTION.

The State of Texas—County of McCulloch.

On this the 26th day of April A. D. 1921, the Board of Trustees of the Brady Independent School District, in the County of McCulloch, State of Texas, being in called session, came to be considered the petition of Joe A. Adkins and more than twenty other persons all being resident tax-paying voters of the Brady Independent School District, praying this Board of Trustees to order an election to be held in the Brady Independent School District to determine whether or not that an annual ad valorem tax of one dollar ($1.00) on the one hundred ($100.00) dollar assessed values of taxable property within the Brady Independent School District shall be annually assessed and collected for the maintenance of the schools of the Brady Independent School District.

And it appearing to the Board of Trustees that said petition is signed by more than twenty of the resident property tax-paying voters of said Brady Independent School District and the said tax will not exceed the maximum allowed by the Constitution and the Laws of the State of Texas for such purposes.

It is therefore considered and ordered by this Board of Trustees that an election be held in the Brady Independent School District, on the 28th day of May A. D. 1921, which is not less than thirty days from the date of this order, to determine whether or not an annual ad valorem tax of one dollar, ($1.00) on the one hundred ($100.00) dollars of assessed values of the taxable property within the Brady Independent School District shall be annually assessed and collected for the maintenance of the schools of the said Brady Independent School District.

Notice of said election shall be given by posting a copy of this order at three public places in the Brady Independent School District for not less than three weeks prior to the date for said election. And by publication of such notice in a newspaper published in Brady, McCulloch County, Texas, for not less than three weeks prior to the date of such election.

Said election shall be held at the McCulloch County Court House, in the town of Brady, in the room on first floor located in the northwest corner of the building and known as the Justice Court Room. L. Ballou is hereby appointed judge of said election and W. W. Jones and W. P. Yearly are hereby appointed as clerks of said election.

Said election shall be held under the provisions of the law and only qualified voters, who are property tax-payers of the Brady Independent School District shall be allowed to vote, and all voters desiring to support the proposition shall have written or printed on their ballots the words:

ten or printed on their ballots the words:

"For Maintenance Tax."
And those opposed shall have written or printed on their ballots: "Against Maintenance Tax."

The manner of holding said election shall be governed by the laws governing general elections of this State.

A copy of this order signed by the Secretary of the Board of Trustees of the Brady Independent School District shall serve as the proper notice of said election, and the Secretary of the Board of Trustees is directed to post such notices in three public places in said School District for three weeks prior to said election.

E. L. JONES,
President Board of Trustees, Brady Independent District.
MRS. EDD BRYSON,
Secretary Board of Trustees, Brady Independent District.

Born to Command.

In front of Gen. Winfield Scott's house in Elizabeth, New Jersey, were several shade trees in which certain song birds had made their nests. One day when the general was at work in his garden trimming a quince tree with a large hooked pruning knife he suddenly started with huge strides toward the street in front. There on the corner was a boy with a shotgun, gazing up into a tree.

The youngster did not observe the general's approach until the veteran had arrived within twenty paces of him.

"Young man," Scott then called out in a voice that might have been heard by a whole division of soldiers, "are you going to shoot my birds?"

The boy for a moment lost the power of motion; but he quickly recovered and took to his heels, running as if chased by a mad bull.—Youth's Com-

A BRADY BAND.

The proposition of organizing a Brady band so far has failed to materialize. No one has appeared to desire to take the lead in the matter, although it appears the universal verdict such an organization would be both beneficial and a distinct credit to Brady, not to mention the excellent training derived by the members themselves.

However, this much has been accomplished—the organizing of a jazz orchestra, which may easily become the nucleus of a band.

There is nothing so soothing—nothing so moving—as good music. It is The Standard's idea that a good band would smooth the way for many civic improvements and advancements; it would also prove an inspiration to more liberal ideas and might be the means of moving those mountains that now are but stumbling blocks.

Let's all work and boost for a Brady band, for the future benefit and glory of town and country.

BRADY'S DEBT.

Brady owes a debt of gratitude to the fireboys for their volunteer services during times of need. Let's not forget this, but give concrete evidence of the appreciation we feel by packing the opera house upon the occasion of the next benefit show given by the fire boys. Only through such visible means can Brady citizens redeem themselves from the stigma their past indifference and neglect has brought upon them.

LOCAL BRIEFS

Tom Mitchell of the Fife community was in Brady Wednesday. He reported a better rain at Fife than was had at Brady, but says the hail tore up crops considerably.

G. A. Rudolph of Lohn Wednesday reported an abundance of stock water put out in the Lohn neighborhood, and the rain Sunday night as having been most beneficial.

A party composed of Misses Pinkie Jones, Hilma Jordan, Mary Campbell and Mrs. P. A. Campbell left Sunday night for Dallas, where they were in attendance upon the Music Teachers' State association, returning Wednesday morning. A most enjoyable trip was reported by them.

W. J. Willis yesterday reported a good rain all the way from Brady to Voca, although it was lighter in some places than others. An abundance of stockwater was put out in the Voca section. Considerable hail fell, but no damage of importance resulted. The rain, itself, was most beneficial.

Mr. and Mrs. S. J. Striegler and son, Cecil, will leave tomorrow for Fredericksburg, where they will be in attendance upon the anniversary celebration to be staged there next Monday and Tuesday—the occasion being the 75th anniversary of the founding of the town of Fredericksburg. A great celebration has been planned, and a most enjoyable time is anticipated.

The Standard enjoyed a visit from W. E. Lohn, the first of the week. Mr. Lohn says the rain Sunday night missed his place, a couple miles west of the town of Lohn, entirely. In fact, it covered only half of the place of J. M. Carroll adjoining that of Mr. Lohn. There is no cause for pessimism, however, according to Mr. Lohn, as he is confident abundant rains will be had in ample time for the needs.

It was The Standard editor's pleasure to be favored yesterday evening with a call from J. P. Waddell, one of the old and highly esteemed citizens of the Rochelle community. While Mr. Waddell does not in the least look the part, he admitted to having past the allotted three score years and ten. He ascribes his youthful appearance and vigor to the fact that for 35 years he slept on a saddle blanket, and he still harks back to the old life in the summer time, when he and his good wife take long jaunts across the plains. Seven times in his life did Mr. Waddell hit the trail to Kansas, and his list of life experiences includes fights with the Indians. He says that whenever he hears anyone belittle the dangers of an encounter with the Redskins, he always feels sure that party has hair growing on his hands. Mr. Waddell saw the time when he could buy vast tracts of Texas lands for a mere song, but at that time it looked like money thrown away, since they had a free range. Even though he passed by the chance to make untold riches, Mr. Waddell has no regrets, but is living and enjoying life to the fullest extent, and expects to continue to do so.

Ben Moffatt has quite a curiosity on display at the Moffatt Bros. & Jones grocery, being twin turkey chicks, still encased in the egg. The egg, which was just about the normal size, was set under a hen, which proceeded to leave the nest about the time the little turkeys pipped the egg. Although fully developed the little twins failed to survive this neglect. Just recently The Standard was presented with a curiosity in the shape of a double-headed chick, which was found in a hatch-off by Mrs. Curtis Benson. When placed in warm water, the chick showed signs of life, but evidently decided not to grow up into a hydra-headed freak.

Mr. and Mrs. Robert McCard arrived yesterday from El Paso for a stay of a few days with the lady's brother, F. R. Wulff, and family, having made the trip overland in their car, and being enroute to Fort Worth. Harry Wulff, who had been their guest the past three weeks, accompanied them upon his return to Brady. Mr. McCard is engaged in the mining business, with offices in El Paso and New York City. The mining properties, however, are located in Old Mexico. He is taking advantage of the opportunity to visit in this section, before making a trip down into Mexico to inspect his properties there.

ARE YOU READY FOR THE HARVEST?

CHAMPION BINDERS

While Champion Binders are machines of all 'round excellence, they possess several outstanding features that have made them first choice of discriminating farmers in every grain-growing region in the world. These features accomplish what every practical farmer seeks in a harvesting machine: The ability to handle grain in all conditions; to get the grain into the bundle without loss from shattering; automatic adjustment which keeps the machine in balance whether platform is set high or low, avoiding neck weight; light draft; freedom from complicated mechanism and consequent durability.

We have the two big items necessary to a successful harvest—the Right Binder—the Right Twine.

When you buy a Champion Binder, you are getting a machine perfected to the last degree as the result of years of experience and operation. There's a machine built for years' of hard service, with a minimum chance of delays from break-downs in the busy season.

Plymouth Twine

is another important item to the successful harvest. If you have ever tried it, you'll want no other. If you have never tried it, one trial will convince you of its superior qualities.

Good Twine

THE use of Plymouth Twine means money saved for the farmer, for it is guaranteed to run full length to the pound. With its full yardage it will securely bind more bundles of grain than inferior twine, and in this way the total amount of your twine bill is cut down.

Plymouth Twine

is everywhere recognized for its smoothness and evenness of spinning, freedom from knots and all-around good qualities. Let us supply you with this thoroughly satisfactory brand of twine for the coming harvest.

ARKANSAS FARMER IN FINE SHAPE

Bennett's Health Restored By Tanlac Two Years Ago, and He Continues Well and Strong.

"It was two years ago that Tanlac set me right and put me into shape where I gained thirty pounds in weight and I have been in the best of health and retained my weight to this good day," said Oliver P. Bennett, a well-known farmer of Union Township, R. F. D. No. 4, Little Rock, Ark.

"I have been a farmer all my life," he went on, "but two years ago I got so I wasn't able to work and was beginning to think my farming days might be over. My stomach was all out of order and my appetite was well nigh gone. My nerves broke down and I couldn't half sleep. My shoulders and chest hurt something awful, and I got so weak and all run-down I was beginning to wonder where it was all going to end. I had been under treatment for two years, but in spite of it all was growing worse and gradually losing in weight.

"Finally I took a notion that Tanlac might fit my case. Well, sir, I never will forget how I commenced to pick up. Why, I never saw the like. I took six bottles and actually gained thirty pounds, as I said, and felt so well and strong I could go out and work from sun up to sun-down. Ever since then I have been feeling fine and I have this good old Tanlac to thank for it all."

Tanlac is sold in Brady by Trigg Drug Co., in Mercury by J. T. Matlock, in Rochelle by C. W. Carr, and by leading druggists everywhere.

Death of Mrs. M. J. Moore.

In the death of Mrs. M. J. Moore, which occurred Tuesday evening, May 3rd, at 6:03 o'clock, Brady lost one of her most universally esteemed and beloved citizens. Death came suddenly, and without warning. Mrs. Moore had not been well for some time, but her condition was not regarded as serious, and last Sunday she prepared dinner as usual. Monday, however, the doctor gave up hope for her recovery, but just before death came, she appeared in better health and spirits than for some time, recognizing and speaking to relatives and friends gathered at her bedside. Then, suddenly, in the midst of the general rejoicing at her improvement, the Death Angel entered and bore her spirit to Realms Beyond.

While sorrowing at their loss, relatives and friends find consolation in the thought that Mrs. Moore was ready to go, and that eternity holds out to her the reward for the consecrated Christian life she led here.

Mrs. Moore was known far and wide over this section as "Aunt Jane" Moore, and was so lovingly called by young and old. For over thirty years she had been engaged in the millinery business in Brady, and her kindly, cheerful, helpful disposition made her store popular with all. In times of need or distress, "Aunt Jane" was always ready to help or advise, and in every move for the good of the town, she was to be found numbered among those who helped the matter along.

Born in Missouri December 27, 1845, Mrs. Moore had attained the venerable age of 75 years, 4 months and 6 days. In infancy, her folks moved to Tennessee, where she lived until she came to Texas in 1871. In 1877 she was married to T. A. Guthrie, who died the year following. Coming to Brady in 1888, she engaged in the mercantile business, and eventually established herself on the southwest corner of the square, where she continued in the millinery business until a couple years ago, when she decided to retire. Her marriage to W. J. Moore took place March 23, 1891.

Funeral services were conducted Wednesday afternoon at 4:00 p. m. at the Church of Christ by Elder Alsford, a great concourse of friends attending. All business houses were closed during the funeral hour as a mark of respect to the deceased. Interment was made in Brady cemetery.

Out-of-town relatives attending the funeral were B. W. Bigham of Ballinger, a brother; Mr. and Mrs. Lee Jones of Granbury and Beve Jones of Millersview, nephews; Mrs. Florence Baze of Merkel, Miss Mizzie Jones of Millersview, nieces; Mr. and Mrs. Johnnie Beasley and Mrs. Chas. Dawson of Dawson, Texas, daughters of Mr. Moore.

To Mr. Moore and the mournful relatives is extended heartfelt sympathy.

3-YEAR OLD LAD LOST IN NEW MEXICO FOUND AFTER 3-DAY SEARCH

Mills, N. M.—April 17.—In a little upstairs room of a doctor's office in this small ranch town of northern New Mexico, Edgar J., 3-year old son of Mr. and Mrs. R. C. Spencer, is fighting for his life and while he fights, hundreds of persons throughout this section of the state await with interest the result.

The little tot is suffering from starvation and exposure, the result of four days and nights spent alone in the depths of Red River Canyon, seven miles southeast of here. During that time he had neither food nor drink and only his natural robust condition kept him alive from noon of last Sunday until Thursday afternoon. Physicians say that the day before his disappearance from his parents, who were with a party of friends on a picnic, he weighed 40 pounds. Today he weighs less than 30. As he sleeps he cries for water. This is given him by a few spoonfuls every few hours so to give him more would result fatally, doctors say.

When he was discovered by one of 500 men forming a solid line extending from the flat of the open country back to the top rim rock down to the depths of the canyon, he was lying still on foot washouts and in his hand he clutched a little sandal. His feet and hands were filled with cactus stickers and his body was bruised by four days' contact with the sharp pointed rocks on the walls of the canyon. Clayton Kuykendall, a neighbor, was the first to reach him. Three shots were fired and the news spread like an electric current to nearly a thousand men and women who formed the searching party in what is said to have been the greatest hunt ever known in the state of New Mexico.

To Use Bloodhounds. Bloodhounds from the state penitentiary at Santa Fe had been dispatched to the scene by order of the governor. They were in the charge of a trusty convict who came unguarded and from Monday night at 11 o'clock until three days later when the child was found, he never rested, following all the while the dogs as they followed the trail.

The youngster walked from the camp to the rim back of the canyon. Here the trail stopped. The searchers, after peering over the precipice to the first semblance of a beach nearly 50 feet below doubted. The child at the moment of his recovery bled "I was looking for my daddy and fell," pointing at the same time to the ledge about half a mile up the canyon wall.

Father Was Despondent. The father, despondent of finding the little fellow alive, was in a deep cave caused by a recess in the almost perpendicular walls, searching at the time the shots were fired. He never heard them and it was only when he had been forced by the sounds of wild animals to leave the cave that he learned of the recovery. He collapsed from the strain and is not yet fully recovered. In a frenzy he had remained at the scene day and night and hoped to carry fuel to feed one of the many large fires built along the top rim rock and maintained all hours each night. This was done to keep wild animals from roaming from their dens. There was already the fear that the boy had been destroyed by some of the mountain lions or lean timber wolves which haunt that region.

Searchers Are Fed. From within a few hours after his disappearance Sunday, headquarters for the hundreds of searchers was maintained at a point nearly a mile from the edge of the canyon. Here at all hours of each succeeding day and night scores of women from the different towns and ranches prepared steaming hot coffee and victuals for the searchers. As each hour passed more people arrived. The cowboy came. The farmer, his wife and children left the stock uncared for and joined the party which had swelled in numbers to a thousand people. Forty square miles of the rough broken country of the canyon region were combed foot by foot. Business in the several towns and villages in northern New Mexico was suspended and hundreds of automobiles were pressed into service. At night in addition to the fires built along the rim rock on either side of the mile wide chasm a myriad of lanterns were hung on trees and set on rocks along the canyon walls several hundred feet below.

After being carried to the top of the abyss Thursday afternoon the child was placed in a car and rushed to this town. A few miles out, Dr. B. Moon met him. He was taken to an upstairs room that serves as an improvised hospital emergency ward and an examination was made throughout the afternoon and into the early part of the night. Hundreds that had composed the searching party calmly waited bulletins as to his condition. Then came the statement that he would probably recover and a wild demonstration was staged. A reward of $1,000 offered for the recovery of the child was refused by Kuykendall; debts for foodstuffs and gasoline and car repairs were cancelled by the various tradesmen and prayers of thanks were offered.

What is considered to be most remarkable, according to physicians, is the fact that two of the four nights which the 3-year old lad spent in the open without shelter were bitter cold and the temperature was below the freezing point. A shower fell Monday night but the temperature at that time was not freezing.

With the assurance of a favorable report as to the condition of the little wanderer today what is perhaps the last chapter of one of the most interesting occurrences and greatest hunts ever known in this section was written.

Find New Kind of Animal.

Captain Phillips, writing from British Ruanda, in the Tanganyika territory, states he has shot a specimen of an hitherto unidentified species of animal. The animal is about the size of a large goat, and is known as an eppe or empey by the natives, to whom it is in a way sacred as being the totem-beast of Musinga, the now reigning chief or mwami of the country of Ruanda, over the greater part of which a mandate was recently given to Belgium by the peace conference.

The eppe lives in the bamboo forests of Mount Sabino and other mountain forests, and seldom comes into open country. It often takes refuge in the low and broad forks of large trees. The creature has a stumpy tail, upright horns, and marsh hooves; in color it is a rufous black, and has a bright yellow stripe along about half of its backbone. In the case of the present specimen, which was, apparently, healthy, part of the back was nearly bald of hair.—London Times.

By Fair Means or Foul

By FRANK R. TUCKER

(Copyright.)

It was a perfect summer's evening. A soft breeze wafted ashore the melodious tinkle of innumerable ships' bells as they struck the hour. From the piazza of the Ledge Cove Yacht club issued the sound of laughter and the merry clink of glasses.

In the midst of a group, one hand fondling an empty stein, the other similarly engaged with a pedigreed Boston bull, his constant companion, sat a careless, nonchalant young fellow in yachting attire. The bronze of his complexion was unmistakably that of a lover of aquatic sports.

"Well, Hadley," said a youth who boasted of two tertus at Yale, "you've certainly enjoyed good luck today; a blue ribbon at the dog show this morning, and another handed on your yacht this afternoon. But then," he laughed, "I suppose it's that cur's blue ribbon that counts with you."

"Yes," returned Hadley. "I admit that it pleases me immensely. And," he added, gazing blandly at the friends grouped about him, "let me tell you I consider that brindle, stub-tailed Boston pup as worthy of affection and esteem as any of this company."

"It's strange," he went on, smiling, "that Gill persists in thinking, at a hundred dollars per think, that he has the faster boat."

A good-natured chuckle behind his chair caused him to turn. Gill had joined the group unnoticed.

"Yes, gentlemen, Jack is right; that tub of mine has caused me the loss of just three hundred plugs. But I still think I can win—if not by fair means, by foul."

"And thereby hangs a tale," suggested Hadley.

"No, merely a proposition." He perched himself on the piazza balustrade.

"What is it, a race for another hundred?"

"Exactly."

A burst of uncontrollable laughter followed.

"Gad, Gill, have another!" roared Hadley, rapping on the table for the steward.

The challenger quietly waited for silence.

"I admit, Jack, that you have the better boat," he finally went on. Hadley raised his eyebrows. "Nevertheless, I'll wager three hundred, the sum that I've lost, that I can make my boat win, provided you accept my proposition."

The usually immobile countenance of old Commodore Noing, who was seated at a short distance from the group, showed a slight degree of interest as he followed the conversation.

"Your conditions are fair enough so far," announced the son of Eli, grinning, "but isn't it customary to take in a reef when there's too much wind?"

Gill glanced at his tormentor, who, with a didn't-know-it-was-loaded expression, retired into his shell.

"My conditions," he said, lighting a cigarette, "are, that the boats be allowed to win by fair means or foul."

It was arranged that the race should take place the following morning.

The course selected was a short, triangular one of eighteen nautical miles.

After much friendly bantering, Hadley finally arose.

"I must be going home," said he, looking around for his little four-footed friend, "as a clear eye tomorrow seems to be one of the requisites for winning this peculiar competition. Why, where the devil is Cracker?" He suddenly asked in astonishment; "he was here at my side not two minutes ago!"

This was the signal for a general search.

Gill and many others joined in the search.

At a very late hour, a tired and disappointed party dispersed to their homes to court the sometimes elusive god of slumber.

But not so Gill. Returning by a circuitous route to the yacht club, he stepped into a boat which had evidently been in waiting and was rowed out to his yacht.

The captain stood at the rail, boat-hook in hand, as the sailor unshipped his oars; and Gill sprang on board.

"Well, Cap," said he, laughing, "I feel about as contemptible as a pick-pocket. Did you have much trouble?"

"None at all, sir," answered the captain. "We kidnaped him easy. He didn't make a peep. An' now he's sleepin' peaceful on one of the transoms."

"Good! Now, Cap, if you'll accompany me below, we'll discuss tides."

"Tides, sir?" exclaimed the skipper in bewilderment.

"Don't ask questions, Cap; everything will be explained to you in due time," Gill laughingly replied.

The following morning dawned bright and beautiful with a piping breeze from the northwest.

Promptly at the appointed hour, Hadley, accompanied by a number of fellow sportsmen, appeared at the clubhouse. A few minutes later, Gill, looking hollow-eyed and tired, was rowed ashore from his yacht.

"Well, Jack," he observed, entering the room, "you don't look very chipper this morning."

For a reply, Hadley called his attention to a placard upon the wall which read: "Lost—A brownish-black Boston bull answering to the name of Cracker."

The Best Liked Paste

—Carter's Cico-Liquid Paste has won its way because it has every superior quality expected in an adhesive of any kind with a few additional ones of its own.

—Cico is always ready for instant use and remains ready as long as there is a drop in the jar. It never needs water.

—Cico cannot become hard or lumpy nor can it get stiff and crumbly; it is always of a smooth consistency that grips evenly and firmly.

—Cico is economical because the thinner you spread it the better it sticks—little goes far.

—There is so much watery ink around that when there is a chance to insure one's getting the good old pre-war BLUE by insisting on Carter's don't let anything else be seen on the desk or shelf.

—A good blue color with absolute permanence is demanded of an ink by the careful business man and these two elements, coupled with a delightful free-flowing quality and entire lack of sediment are best combined in Carter's Writing Fluid.

HOLIDAY SEASON IN ITALY

Dr. Grenfell of Labrador Fame Explains Christmas Observances in the Sunny Land.

Travelers visiting Rome while it was still the center of a land of peace, found Christmas there a day of joyousness; and the merry bells of many churches, ushering in the day, spoke the familiar language of home.

Just before the war, Dr. Grenfell, of Labrador fame, indulged in the unusual luxury of a brief holiday in Europe, after years of tireless service among the fishermen. His journey brought him to Mrs. Grenfell to Rome just as the many religious and civil observances of the Christmas season were about to take place. A great contrast these scenes were to the Christmas of icebound Labrador.

The decorations, the greetings, and the crowds flocking in and out of churches, emphasized the spirit of the season. "All the pieces of worship late which we peeped," he says, "were ablaze with lights, while processions of priests in glittering robes, with sonorous choruses and ascending incense, appealed to the various senses."

At one church they viewed the five boards believed to have formed a part of the cradle of our Lord.

The American Episcopal Church of St. Paul, where they worshipped on Christmas morning, was crowded with the Protestant population of the Holy City. A feature of the service was the dedicating of a beautiful new mosaic, covering one entire wall of the church and representing the nativity of Christ.

Of the Coliseum, says Dr. Grenfell, "we could think of no place better to suggest to our minds the communion of the saints; and as we walked round the tiers of seats we could see again the men of like passions with ourselves, giving their lives for the same Master we claim to serve."

When darkness had fallen the travelers were attracted by numbers of bright lights over by the Porta San Giovanni. These proved to announce "all the fun of a fair"—there in Italy just as one finds them in this country at a "county fair."

A workman in a Utah mining camp threw a bucket of water upon a sputtering electric wire. The electricity "played back" over the stream to the bucket in the man's hands, causing his instantaneous death.

HOUSE JOINT RESOLUTION No. 11.

Proposing an amendment to Section 51 of Article 3 of the Constitution of the State of Texas to provide that the Legislature may grant pensions to Confederate soldiers, sailors and their widows, who have been citizens of Texas since prior to January 1, 1910, providing that all soldiers, sailors and their widows eligible under the provisions hereof shall be entitled to be placed upon the rolls and participate in the pension fund created hereunder; levying a tax of seven ($.07) cents on the $100.00 valuation of property in this State for the payment of such pension, providing that the Legislature may reduce the rate of pension for such purpose, fixing a time for the election to be held on such amendment, and making an appropriation to pay the expenses thereof.

Be it resolved by the Legislature of the State of Texas: Section 1. Section 51 of Article 3 of the Constitution of the State of Texas shall be amended so as to hereafter read as follows:

Section 51: The Legislature shall have no power to make any grant or authorize the making of any grant of public money to any individual, association of individuals, municipal or other corporations whatsoever, provided, however, the Legislature may grant aid to indigent or disabled Confederate soldiers and sailors, who came to Texas prior to January 1, 1910, and to their widows, in indigent circumstances and who have been bona fide residents of this State since January 1, 1910, and who were married to such soldiers or sailors prior to January 1, 1910, and to indigent and disabled soldiers of the militia of the State of Texas during the war between the states served in organization for the protection of the frontier against Indian raiders or Mexican marauders and to indigent and disabled soldiers of the militia of the State of Texas who were in active service during the war between the states and to the widows of such soldiers who are in indigent circumstances and who were married to such soldiers prior to January 1, 1910, provided that the word "widow" in the preceding lines of this Section shall not apply to women born since the year 1861, and all soldiers and sailors or widows of soldiers and sailors eligible under the above conditions shall be entitled to be placed upon the pension rolls and participate in the distribution of the pension fund of this State under any existing law or laws hereafter passed by the Legislature, and also to grant aid for the establishment and maintenance of a home for said soldiers and sailors, their wives and widows and women such regulations and limitations as may be provided by law, provided the Legislature may provide for husband and wife to remain together in the home. There is hereby levied in addition to all other taxes heretofore permitted by the Constitution of Texas a State ad valorem tax on property of seven ($.07) cents on the $100 valuation for the purpose of creating a special fund for the payment of pensions for services in the Confederate army and navy, frontier organizations and the militia of the State of Texas, and for the widows of such soldiers serving in said armies, navies, organizations or militia; provided that the Legislature may reduce the tax rate herein levied, and provided further that the provisions of this Section shall not be construed so as to prevent the grant of aid in cases of public calamity.

Sec. 2. The foregoing Constitutional amendment shall be submitted to a vote of the qualified voters of this State at an election to be held on the fourth Saturday in July, 1921, at which all voters shall have printed or written on their ballots: "For amendment of Section 51 of Article 3 of the Constitution authorizing the Legislature to grant aid to Confederate soldiers, sailors and their widows who have been citizens of this State since January 1, 1910," and "Against amendment to Section 51 of Article 3 of the Constitution, authorizing the Legislature to grant aid to Confederate soldiers and their widows."

Sec. 3. The Governor is hereby directed to issue the necessary proclamation for said election and have the same published as required by the Constitution, and existing laws of the State.

Sec. 4. That the sum of Five Thousand ($5,000) Dollars, or so much thereof as may be necessary is hereby appropriated out of any funds in the Treasury of the State of Texas not otherwise appropriated to pay the expenses of such publication and election.

S. L. STAPLES, Secretary of State.

SENATE JOINT RESOLUTION No. 1.

Proposing an amendment to Section 2, Article 6 of the Constitution of the State of Texas by providing that only native born or naturalized citizens of the United States shall be qualified electors in this State, and permitting either the husband and or the wife to pay the poll tax of the other and receive the receipt therefor, and permitting the Legislature to authorize absentee voting.

Be it resolved by the Legislature of the State of Texas:

Section 1. That Section 2 or Article 6 of the Constitution of the State of Texas be so amended as hereafter to read as follows:

Section 2. Every person subject to none of the foregoing disqualifications, who shall have attained the age of twenty-one years and who shall be a citizen of the United States and who shall have resided in this State one year next preceding an election and the last six months within the district or county in which such person offers to vote, shall be deemed a qualified elector; provided, that electors living in any unorganized county may vote at any election precinct in the county to which such county is attached for judicial purposes; and provided further, that any voter who is subject to pay a poll tax under the laws of the State of Texas shall have paid said tax before offering to vote at any election in this State and hold a receipt showing that said poll tax was paid before the first day of February next preceding such election. Or if said voter shall have lost or misplaced said tax receipt, he or she, as the case may be, shall be entitled to vote upon making affidavit before any officer authorized to administer oaths that such tax receipt has been lost. Such affidavit shall be made in writing and left with the judge of the election. The husband may pay the poll tax of his wife and receive the receipt therefor. In like manner the wife may pay the poll tax of her husband and receive the receipt therefor. The Legislature may authorize absentee voting. And this provision of the Constitution shall be self-enacting without the necessity of further legislation.

Sec. 2. The foregoing constitutional amendment shall be submitted to a vote of the qualified electors of the State at any election to be held throughout the State on the fourth Saturday in July, 1921, at which all voters favoring said proposed amendment shall write or have printed on their ballots the words: "For the amendment to Section 2 of Article 6 of the Constitution of the State of Texas providing that only native born or naturalized citizens of the United States shall be qualified electors in this State, and providing that either the husband or wife may pay the poll tax of the other and receive the receipt therefor, and permitting the Legislature to authorize absentee voting." And all those opposed to said amendment shall write or have printed on their ballots, "Against the amendment to Section 2 of Article 6 of the Constitution of the State of Texas providing that only native born or naturalized citizens of the United States shall be qualified electors in this State, and providing that either the husband or wife may pay the poll tax of the other and receive the receipt therefor, and permitting the Legislature to authorize absentee voting."

Sec. 3. The Governor of the State is hereby directed to issue the necessary proclamation for said election and have the same published as required by the Constitution, and existing laws of the State.

Sec. 4. That the sum of Five Thousand ($5,000) Dollars, or so much thereof as may be necessary is hereby appropriated out of any funds in the Treasury of the State of Texas not otherwise appropriated to pay the expenses of such publication and election.

S. L. STAPLES, Secretary of State.

A Romance of Soaring Rents

By ELIZABETH WOODWARD

(Copyright, 1920, by McClure Newspaper Syndicate.)

Marjorie sat somewhat disconsolately on a packing box, awaiting the arrival of the moving man. She was disconsolate, first, because after three years in their pleasant apartment she and her brother, Jim, were obliged to move because of soaring rents. They had found a modest "walk-up" facing a small park, in an unfashionable part of town. Of course they would get used to it, but Marjorie was one who clung tenaciously to old surroundings, and readjustment was painful. They had had good times in the little apartment—she and Jim, fresh from the small Western town.

The moving from the apartment marked a new era, but even more did the fact that on Tom's horizon loomed a woman. If he was as serious as he appeared to be, Marjorie would have to look for a separate place to bestow her household goods.

Her melancholy reverie was interrupted by a sharp peal at the doorbell—the moving men. Wasting no time, they seized upon the larger pieces of furniture and were soon carrying them dexterously downstairs.

Marjorie had only noticed them as a group, calculating anxiously the size of the tip required for the quartet. She was, therefore, somewhat startled to see one of them gazing intently at a picture standing face upward against the wall.

"Excuse me, miss," he said, "but you know, that's rather out of the ordinary, that view of the Acropolis one usually sees—"

Marjorie's eyebrows went up unconsciously. "You are wondering," he said, answering her questioning look, "what I know about pictures, but—"

Here he was interrupted by a voice from behind. "Here you, Johnny; look alive. We are here for work."

With no further comment, the one called Johnny picked up a large armchair and proceeded down stairs. From then on he did not hesitate or stop, and Marjorie, absorbed in directing the removal of her household goods, forgot the incident of the picture.

A few weeks later one Sunday afternoon Marjorie sat in the park outside her new home. After all the new rooms were attractive, overlooking the park, with its ever-changing scenes of human interest. Then Jim seemed less interested in his love affair. Altogether, life was looking quite dry. Raising her eyes from her book, she was conscious of a young man, shabbily dressed, looking at her from the opposite bench.

"Pardon me," he said, moving over to her side of the walk. "Of course, you don't know me, but I am one of the men who moved you down from Fifty-fourth street. Somehow, I don't think you look too proud to speak to me."

"I am glad you spoke," she said. "What you said about my brother's picture of the Acropolis interested me. We were interrupted and I never learned—"

"You never learned why a moving man was interested in pictures," he interrupted. "You see, the thing is, my brother took that picture. And, you know, one usually sees just the front view of the building; this is an entirely different one, knowing that there are only two copies in existence. I just wondered how you had come by it."

"Billy Joudrey left it to my brother. He was killed at the front. Perhaps your brother told you," Marjorie answered.

"I'll admit," he said, "being a moving man isn't exactly what you would expect of the brother of a chap who does such light-work things as heading excavation parties to Greece. Moving pays mighty well, and especially the tips." If Marjorie had caught his eye, then she would have seen an amused expression flit over his face.

This was the first of many Sunday meetings between Marjorie and her "park beau," as Jim called him. The four of them, Jim and the girl of his heart, Marjorie and John, frequently had supper together in the little apartment. John remained a mystery, as there seemed no connecting link but Billy Joudrey. Jim could not remember who Billy had said had given him the picture of the Acropolis. So John came and went giving no hint as to his identity.

In the fall Marjorie went back to her studies. She was working hard, and while she and Jim continued in the absence of John, who suddenly disappeared from view, absorption in their work made Marjorie almost forget what now seemed almost like a summer dream. Jim, who was an electrical engineer, found himself more and more taken up with his work. His love affair was at a standstill, as Eleanor Johnson had gone South with an invalid mother.

"We are going pretty dull," he said one morning, as they hastily ate their breakfast. "I'll try for tickets for the opera if you say so."

"Oh, yes, do. We will dress up for a change," said Marjorie.

A little later, hurrying up the subway steps, her arms full of books, she saw a familiar pair of shoulders in front. "What on earth is John doing up here?" she wondered.

"Hello, John," she said as she caught up with him. "Are you off the moving job?"

"I'll come around and explain; it's too long a story now, when we are both late as it is," he replied.

"We are going to Faust tonight. You couldn't by any chance get a seat?" asked Marjorie.

"Oh, yes? season ticket," answered the surprising man. "I'll call you at dinner time, and find out where your seats are. No, I can't come to dinner; thank you—Good-by until tonight," and he was off.

Marjorie in her black evening dress, her glorious auburn hair coiled becomingly about her head, and her beautiful white neck with its single string of family pearls made a striking picture.

"Clothes do change one's whole point of view," she remarked to Jim. "Why don't we do this sort of thing oftener?"

Jim, going off to smoke between the acts, met John on his way to Marjorie. "Hello, old chap," he exclaimed. "We almost need an introduction."

"Taking Jim's vacant seat, John said, "I suppose you are wondering who and what I am. I will give you 'Who's Who.'"

"John Endicott, born in Cambridge, age thirty-five. Graduate of Harvard, class of 1900. Archaeologist. Winner of the Marathon races. Head of the archaeological expedition to Greece in 1912. In the summer of 1917 moving man for Brown Bros. Met Marjorie Blake. The rest to be written."

"But why the moving man?" asked Marjorie.

"It was a wager that a friend put up to me. He said I was too luxury loving, and it would do me good to take a good stiff job with no romance such as Greek sunsets attached. And I wasn't to let any one know who and what I was. But I found the romance even there, Marjorie. And it's up to you to complete the 'Who's Who.'"

Late that evening, as they sat by the fire, Jim having tactfully retired, John laughed and said: "Do you know what I did with my tips? Used to buy books with them and write in the front—John Endicott from Watson Jones, etc."

"The one you bought with mine must have been very little?" she queried.

"Some day you will see," he answered. And the fire-lit room grew very still, as the old story repeated itself once more.

IS GRAVEYARD OF FOSSILS

Western Ranch a Center of Interest to Those Who Are Keen on Prehistoric Lore.

If the skeleton in a museum is a "dinosaur" or a "mammoth," one may be quite sure that it came from the farm of James Henry Cook in the northwest corner of Nebraska, and the chances are almost equally good if the specimen happens to be a skeleton of a mammoth or a mammoth house, or almost any of those prehistoric creatures, says R. R. Crawford, in Popular Mechanics Magazine.

Most ranchmen and farmers are quite content to raise the ordinary sort of stock, but here is a ranch that is most widely known because of its output of prehistoric animals.

The Cook farm and ranch, located close to the Wyoming line, comprises some 15,000 acres. On the eastern edge of the ranch the Nebraska river has laid bare two hills, from both of which scores and scores of fossil skeletons have been quarried.

Past Time for Bed. It was eleven o'clock at night and the circus performance had given way to the night horse show at the fair, says the Indianapolis News. A little girl stood up on the seat and gasped in astonishment as the biggest horses she had ever seen were led around the ring. Still more horses were led into the tankard circle and paraded before the large assembly. Bringing up the rear of the procession were the Shetland ponies, so small that for a time they escaped the notice of the little girl. Then she saw them.

BEN WADE, OLD-TIME TEXAS RANGER, ATE RIBS ON RUN AS INDIANS PURSUED HIM

Austin, April 23.—Comedy and tragedy were intermingled in the lives of the early Texas Rangers. Many of them were unique characters. One of these was Ben Wade, a member of "Big Foot" Wallace's company. His motto, to which he religiously adhered, was "Never to refuse to eat or sleep if you have a chance forty times a day."

On one occasion Wallace and Wade were on expedition to an Indian village. The barking of dogs disclosed them to the Indians, who soon began to pour out of their lodges with their bows and arrows. The two men started for the river bottom, about two miles distant, and just as they passed the last Indian lodge Wade's eye caught sight of a side of buffalo ribs roasting before a fire. With the Indians close on their heels and yelling, Wade slackened his pace, and said: "Cap, let's stop and take a bite, there is no telling when we will get another chance."

Wallace Kept On. Wallace, who evidently set a higher price on his life than did his companion, continued his rapid course, shouting:

"Sell your life for a mess of potage if you want to; I can't tarry just now."

Seeing that Wallace made no signs of stopping, Wade said:

"If you won't wait I must take the ribs along with me." Whereupon he grabbed the meat and slung it over his shoulder. By that time the Indians were within a few yards of the men. The two, however, being good sprinters, finally outdistanced the Redskins, and darkness coming on, succeeded in eluding their pursuers. When they were out of danger, Wallace said:

Ate as He Ran. "As you would bring the ribs along I believe I will take one of them now. My run has given me an appetite."

"I'm sorry, Cap," said Wade, "but you spoke too late. I've polished them all."

It was true. While they were running for life, with a dozen Indians almost on their heels Wade had plucked the ribs clean.

Another occasion when Wallace and his company were guarding a mail coach on one of its overland trips from San Antonio they had a lively encounter with Indians. After a long journey the men stopped for a much needed rest. Wade took a nap as soon as he hit the ground. Wallace, as usual, was on the outlook for Indians. Presently one of the horses raised its head and looked for a long time in a certain direction, and soon afterwards Wallace saw a deer running as if frightened. He awoke Wade.

"Hello, Cap," Ben said, "what's the matter? Is dinner ready?"

"No, you cormorant," replied Wallace, "it hasn't been half an hour since you had dinner enough for six men. Get up and help me bring in the horses—Indians about."

Attacked by Indians. After the two men had brought the horses in and fastened them securely in the chapparal, Wade remarked that since there was nothing to eat he might as well finish his nap. Scarcely had he closed himself in his blanket when he sprang up, saying that he heard the Indians coming. In a few minutes about twenty-five Comanche warriors appeared, coming toward the camp as fast as their horses could bring them. They had evidently expected to take the Rangers by surprise. They never checked their horses until they had charged up to within a few feet of the chapparal in which the men were posted, and began pouring in their arrows. They were quickly repelled by the fire from the rifles and six-shooters of the Rangers. They soon returned, however, yelling and sending their arrows right and left. Again they were routed by the white men. They retreated again. Wallace, fearing the Indians would try to delude them in the belief that they were gone, ordered his men to take their guns and lie down under the coach and keep quiet. This they did. Wade, as usual, going to sleep immediately.

Pooled the Indians. Soon they saw an Indian poke his head out of the chapparal about seventy-five yards away. In a little while another came and stood by the first one, and then another, until five of them were standing side by side, all looking towards the coach, and no doubt wondering what had become of the Rangers.

"Now take 'em, boys," ordered Wallace. Four of them fell dead, and the fifth fled back into the chapparal.

Nothing more was seen of the Redskins for twenty minutes, when an arm reached out from the bushes on the edge of the chapparal, making a peculiar motion. The next instant one of the dead Indians was "snaked" into the thicket.

"And I wish I may be kicked to death by grasshoppers," said Wallace, "if they didn't rope everyone of them fellows and drag them off in that way and we could never see a thing except that Indian's arms motioning backward and forward."

While his men were harnessing the horses, Wallace took his rifle and went out for the purpose of reconnoitering. On reaching the top of a little rise he saw forty warriors coming down a canyon not more than 400 yards off. When they arrived within about 100 yards of him, Wallace arose and showed himself to them. They halted immediately and the chief rode forward in advance of the rest. In a loud voice he asked Wallace what he was doing there. Wallace replied that he and his men had been fighting Comanches and had flogged them, too.

Wallace Takes Dare. "Yes," the chief said, "you are a set of sneaking coyotes, and are afraid to travel the road; you are all squaws, and you don't dare to poke your noses out of the chapparal."

"If you will wait until we eat dinner," Wallace answered, "I'll show you whether we are afraid to travel the road. We shall camp at the California Springs tonight in spite of the whole Comanche nation."

When Wallace got back to the coach he told his men what he had said to the Indians, and that he had no doubt they would hurry off to the springs with the intention of waylaying them there. Wallace's idea was to wait where they were until the Indians had time to reach the springs, then take the back track to Fort Clark.

"Cap," said Wade, "I heard you make one sensible remark to that Indian you was talking with."

Wade Wanted to Eat. "Why," replied Wade, "you told him that as soon as we got dinner we would go to California Springs in spite of the Comanche nation. It was a pretty smart dog."

to put 'em on the wrong track, but you see as we are able to get to California Springs after all, and we can get dinner, better make sure of doing your power. Besides, they have left a spy to watch us, and told them we would eat before I will make pretense to eat a bite he will have no reason to this are throwing off on them."

"There will be no danger of Ben," Wallace replied, "if he is with us he can get a good look at you. There is no throw-off in you when eating and sleeping is to be done."

After waiting about half an hour longer they awoke Wade, who had come to sleep after finishing his "preliminary" of coffee. They took the back track to Fort Clark, traveling so fast as they could urge their horses. The next morning they reached a place where they were furnished with an escort of twelve men and a sergeant and made the trip back to San Antonio without any further trouble.
