SECRET OF BURIAL PLACE OF HISTORIC "TWIN SISTERS" GUN LOST WITH DEATH OF VETERAN

Dallas, June 28.—The secret of the burying place of the famous "Twin Sisters" Cannon, which played such an important part in Texas' struggle for independence, was lost to the world when Dr. H. N. Graves, 75, died here early today at the home of his daughter, Mrs. J. N. Bigbee.

Dr. Graves recently announced that he would conduct a search for the missing cannon if money for this purpose were provided and plans were being made to introduce in the Texas Legislature a resolution asking for the necessary appropriation.

McCULLOCH CO. TO RECEIVE GERMAN FIELD PIECE

McCulloch county is to receive a captured German cannon or field piece as a gift from the war department, if a bill presented in the House of Representatives by Congressman Thomas L. Blanton is acted upon favorably.

The bill reads as follows: "Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled, that the Secretary of War be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to donate and deliver to the county of McCulloch, in the State of Texas, one cannon or field piece captured by the American Expeditionary Forces or delivered to the United States by the terms of the armistice or treaty of peace."

The bill has been referred to the Committee on Military Affairs, and ordered to be printed.

To save money on Furniture, trade with C. H. ARNSPIGER. $10.00 was the price on our SHOES. Now $5.00. MANN BROS. & HOLTEN.

"MAGIC VALLEY" OF THE RIO GRANDE —THE EDITOR'S IMPRESSIONS OF THE SOUTHERMOST POINT OF THE STATE

This is a continuation of the editor's article upon his impressions of the Rio Grande valley, the first of the series having appeared in our issue of June 17th.

I believe it is human nature to want to share the good in this life, with some one else. For this reason, I suppose, during my sojourn there, I frequently wished that the citizens of McCulloch county could have joined me in the visit to the "Magic Valley" of the Rio Grande.

Leading in the work of entertaining was Prof. Bentley, superintendent of the public schools—and Bentley was a wonder. On the job early and late, never-tiring, never too busy but what he was at your service, crowding pleasure into every spare moment, Mr. Bentley was constantly doing something. But, perhaps, Mr. Bentley has reason to enjoy being of service to McAllen folks, for they have done the handsome thing—more than that, the wonderful—by their schools. Think of three magnificent buildings set in a most attractive plot of ground covering some four or more blocks. The center building, a model and truly magnificent high school building, erected at a cost of $135,000. The building to the right, a grade school, erected, so I was told, the necessary appropriation. Senator J. C. McNealus, who dropped dead in Fort Worth last month was among those who had promised support in the movement.

According to Dr. Graves the "Twin Sisters" were buried in the vicinity of Harrisburg. During the Confederate reunion held last year at Houston, Dr. Graves escorted a group of old veterans to the field where the guns were concealed, but made no effort at that time to determine the exact spot of their hiding place.

The "Twin Sisters," which figured in many important battles during both the Civil War and the Texas Revolution, were presented to Texas by a woman's society of Cincinnati.

CHAUTAUQUA IS SIGNED BY BRADY CITIZENS TUES.

Following the cancelling of the contract for chautauqua dates in Brady by the White & Myers Co., which was unable to include Brady in its 1921 circuit, local citizens have signed up with the Radcliffe Chautauqua Co. for a three days' program to be given sometime in August or the early part of September.

The Radcliffe circuit in this section includes San Angelo, Eden, Menard, Brady and San Saba. Exact date of their coming to Brady will be announced later.

"MAGIC VALLEY" OF THE RIO GRANDE —THE EDITOR'S IMPRESSIONS OF THE SOUTHERMOST POINT OF THE STATE

These Hi-Y boys wore badges with the word, "Service" printed on them—and they fully lived up to the motto. The citizenship of McAllen were attractive badges, showing a design of a shield adorned with a five-pointed star and a palm tree and surmounted by the words, "McAllen." This was the official emblem of the city, and was in evidence everywhere.

Leading in the work of entertaining was Prof. Bentley, superintendent of the public schools—and Bentley was a wonder. On the job early and late, never-tiring, never too busy but what he was at your service, crowding pleasure into every spare moment, Mr. Bentley was constantly doing something. But, perhaps, Mr. Bentley has reason to enjoy being of service to McAllen folks, for they have done the handsome thing—more than that, the wonderful—by their schools. Think of three magnificent buildings set in a most attractive plot of ground covering some four or more blocks. The center building, a model and truly magnificent high school building, erected at a cost of $135,000. The building to the right, a grade school, erected, so I was told,

COURT CIVIL APPEALS AFFIRMS H. C. CUMMINS CASE AGAINST RAILROAD

Another decision of interest locally was the decision of the court of criminal appeals at Austin, which reversed and remanded for trial the case of Arthur Stiles of Mason county. Stiles was convicted of theft at the last term of court at Mason and given a two-year sentence.

Editor Brady Standard:
Well here I am again. How is everybody? I will try to tell you how "my folks" are. I call them "my folks" because I have to write about them.

We are having a real, "old-time revival" here now. Everybody come! Revs. Mason and Lobbs are conducting the meeting. If you want to hear some real sermons that come from the heart, and go to the heart, you come to the tabernacle every night this week; services at 8:15. The meeting will close next Sunday night.

Rev. Mason went to Placid last Sunday afternoon to perform a wedding ceremony at the McKluskey home. Mr. Lee Baker and Miss Tressie McKluskey were united in the holy bonds of matrimony. We join the crowd of well-wishers in wishing for them a long and happy life.

Mr. and Mrs. E. E. Mitchell, Dr. J. S. Anderson and Misses Delpha Burton and Opal Mitchell left last night for Brownwood, where Miss Opal will undergo an operation of the head. We wish for her a speedy recovery.

Mrs. Sue Moseley is in Brownwood for treatment. She had a growth in one of her ears removed and she is there for treatment. We hope Mrs. Moseley will soon be home again.

Revs. Mason and Lobbs took dinner at the Hurd and Lockwood homes last Sunday.

Several of Placid's good people attended church here last Sunday. We were glad to have you with us. Come again, folks.

Mr. Wesley Davis and wife visited the lady's mother, Grandma Cates last Sunday. Mr. Davis is one of our best shoe cobblers.

Maize Biggest and Best Crop in Years —To Begin Heading.
Pear Valley, Texas, June 28.

Editor Brady Standard:
Bro. Garrett, the pastor of the Baptist church, filled his regular appointment here Sunday. He was accompanied by Bro. Springer, the missionary, who preached a fine sermon Saturday night.

Dorothy Slaughter is suffering from an attack of typhoid fever. She has been very sick the past week, but is better now.

Many members of the Pear Valley Christian church attended the meeting at Lohm Sunday, which Bro. Durst is holding.

Everybody is just as busy in their crops as they can possibly be. The crops look fine and we do not need a bit of rain at present. We have unusually good prospects and if the boll weevil will just not molest us we stand a chance to make a bountiful cotton crop. We will begin heading maize right away. We have the best and biggest crop of recent years.

Fife, Texas, June 28.

Editor Brady Standard:
Crop conditions continue to improve around here. Nearly everyone has their crops cleaned out again and prospects are good for another good crop.

Miss Maurine Bullock returned to her home at Waco Sunday after a two-week's visit with her cousin, Miss Ora Lee Everett here.

Mr. R. L. Pearce of Brownwood and Miss Mary Finlay were quietly married last Sunday at the home of the bride's father, R. K. Finlay. Rev. D. H. Palmer performed the ceremony. The happy couple left immediately for Brownwood, where they will make their home.

R. K. James, and W. A. Finlay, Tom Bradley and B. A. Cornils attended the ball game at Brady Sunday afternoon.

The Baptist protracted meeting being conducted by Rev. Richardson and Rev. Palmer is progressing nicely, with good crowds in attendance.

Most of our people attended the

WONDER WORDS.

Wonder, Ore., June 21.
Editor Brady Standard:
In a former article when I used the borrowed phrase "relegated to the shades of oblivion," the printer put it "regulated" instead of relegated. But I do not suppose it makes much difference how it got to the shades of oblivion, whether by a regular process or an irregular one. But in my letter of June 1st where I said:

"Down down they come; those fruitful stores,
Those earth rejoicing drops;
A momentary deluge pours,
Then things decrease; stops."
The paper entirely left out "Those earth rejoicing drops," and just as dame nature has been omitting them ever since I told you that. It has clouded up repeatedly and the wind has blown and it looked as if it couldn't help raining; but the wind would change to the north and it would clear up. I guess the moon has lost its influence.

My better one half seems to question the accuracy of my statement to the effect that I lost my temper, simply because she hasn't yet missed it.
Now about that can or jar of okra and the paper dollar prize for the best one, don't be afraid that Walter Henderson will capture it and you will lose your jar of okra and the postage and all, for I intend to see to it that you shall lose nothing as long as old Oregon raises nice fruit, and you tell me the kind that you prefer.

Mr. Editor, to show you that I am interested in the welfare of the farmer I have been a monthly crop reporter for the last twenty-five or thirty years and you ought to see the complimentary bouquet the secretary of agriculture threw at me the other day. I am sending herewith an answer to a letter I wrote to the Oregon Statistician which I am sure will be of interest and possibly of value to farmers and stock-raisers in Texas, one of the greatest stock-growing countries in the world.
"O. L. C. U. R. RIGHT."

Portland, Or., June 20, 1921.
Mr. J. T. Roberson,
Wender, Oregon.

I fear Sir:—We have your letter of the 13th instant, making inquiry relative to the probability of increasing need for horses.

I do not know of any reliable statistics indicating that farmers are returning to the use of horses, after having tried out tractors. I do know however, that numerous reports, parently from authentic sources, reached me that horses were used on farms where tractors had been purchased in recent years. One Sherman county farmer wrote me directly that in his vicinity numerous farmers felt that they could operate with horses, under present conditions, more cheaply than with tractors. The heavy decline in prices of farm products in recent months, with no particular drop in the price of tractor parts and tractor fuel, has changed the economy of tractor farming, as compared with horses, according to the letter just above mentioned.

It is also true that quite a number of comparatively small farmers who purchased tractors during the wartime period of high labor prices, have found that they can do their work more cheaply at the present time with horses and men. I understand that some investigations are under way regarding this matter, on a rather extensive scale, but just at present I do not know of any real statistics on the subject. I do know, however, that there is a better demand for horses at the present than for some time past and it is also a fact that there has been very little horse breeding done during the last few years and the number of colts and young horses is very much less than usual at the present time in the state of Oregon and no doubt this condition is true elsewhere.

In the face of the general situation, it would appear that the farmer who is preparing to raise horses would make no mistake in resuming operations. I have placed your letter in our pending file and should I come across any data on the subject of horses versus tractors, I shall be glad to supply you with the same.

Regretting my inability to give you any definite information, I am,
Yours very truly,
F. L. KENT,
Agr. Statistician.

"Prayers in the Henry's care"

SHEILA

By AGNES GRAHAM BROGAN

(© 1921, Western Newspaper Union.)

The white cottage stood far back from the roadside. On its veranda rocking comfortably, sat a gray-haired woman, her fingers busy with a pan of fresh peas. A girl was approaching. The woman called to an old man plodding about the garden.
"Daniel," she asked, "now who do you suppose is coming to see us?"
"It isn't Camilla," he replied. "At first I thought that is might be Camilla."

His wife laughed softly.
"You wouldn't expect our daughter to hunt us out in our humbleness, would you?" she questioned.
The woman arose waiting, as the girl came nearer; she was a dew-eyed, wild-rose sort of creature, with a pert, very evidently new hat on her dark wavy hair.
"If you please," she asked, "would you direct me to the Junction, where the trains go on to the city?"

"The Junction is five miles or more from here," the old man answered her, "and the road rough and uneven. Were you hoping to walk there to-night?"

The girl's eyes filled with tears.
"I did not know that it would be so far—" she hesitated.
"You cannot have walked here from Ocean View," the woman interposed.
"You have sent your car back, perhaps?"
The girl turned.
"I will tell you why," she replied, "it is because—I am running away."
The woman picked up her pan of peas. "Daniel," she called, "come here."

Reluctantly the man in overalls came.
"First," said the girl, "you must promise not to betray my confidence."
"Yes, my dear," she said.
"It was a week ago," the girl began, "that I was married. A hastily-arranged marriage, because of the death of my grandfather. Always, I had lived with Grandfather Craigie, in a tiny house that was his home. I knew no other, while he was all that I ever had. But we were very happy together in our bare, neat little home that I loved to tend; with his chickens and his vegetables to keep him busy. At evening we would sing the old Scotch songs he loved, and we did not miss the outside world, because we knew so little of it until—the artist man came. I call him that still sometimes, in thought, although he is now my husband.
He was drawing pictures for the magazines when we met, and stopped to visit with grandfather one evening in passing. Later, he begged Grandfather Craigie to let me pose for him. There was something about my hair that the artist liked, and my eyes; it was very strange, and he colored it all most beautifully into a picture, and called the picture "Sheila," which is my name. And—when grandfather went so suddenly—my artist man whom I had grown to love—oh! so dearly, made me his wife, and brought me to the great Ocean View for our bridal trip before returning to the city where his home is. And I was happy—happy, until last night his fine sister came on to meet me, and I heard her talking later with my husband on the balcony of the hotel outside our window. They did not know that I heard, for I had left them to run down to the wonderful beach. It was my cue I came back for, when I heard this sister speak my name.
"That impossible Scotch girl," she angrily called me, and challenged my husband.
"How are you going to show such a wife to mother?"
"And as I stood shocked and unwilling to go, I learned what an unfortunate marriage my artist had made, and how my own humbleness and crudeness would ever hold him back from that success which meant so much to him.
"So, because I knew that he would not accept my sacrifice, I planned to run away. He had taught me to ride on his favorite horse, so that seemed the easiest way to start. I knew that Prince would find his way back when I should let him go. So, stubbornly, Prince went his way. Now that he has brought me here, will you shelter me until morning? Please do not try to reason otherwise, I have thought it all out. I am not their kind. I could not stay to hear the reproach of those hard, disappointed old people of whom the sister spoke."
The gray-haired woman arose and put a protecting arm about the girl.
"Father," she ordered, "bring that little traveling bag inside."
"We will never let you go," the gray-haired woman said, "you shall stay and be to us a daughter. Our daughter married and went away."
"Very far away," added the old man sadly.
Then on one of the peaceful evenings, quite as a matter of course, came Sheila's artist husband.
"For Prince carried you very naturally to the place where you belong," he told her, "this small house, dearest heart of mine, is the silent spot that I keep for deepest studies. Here mother and father love to come at times to live again those days when life meant only work and each other. Black Prince brought you home to us Sheila."
"And you will find," said the mother smiling, "that neither your husband nor his horse, make mistakes."

HONEST INJUN.

"Drive slow and see our town. Drive fast, and see our jail!" That is the sign which the Granbury News wants placed at the edge of the city limits on roads leading into Granbury. It is a sign which every town and city might well use.

News while it's new. The Standard.

CONCERTED ACTION.

No matter what public measure is undertaken, concerted action is required if the same is to be a success in the fullest sense of the word. The citizens of every community should unite in solving their problems and unite in putting over the measures decided as best suited to the needs.

Which suggests—
The Confederate reunion to be held next month should be the greatest affair of the kind ever staged in this section. Brady citizens can make it so by strict co-operation. Furthermore, it is well to look ahead—to anticipate the future. For instance, there is the matter of decoration. Brady should decorate for the three days of the reunion. Every business house in Brady should be adorned with flags and bunting. And now is the time to arrange this part of the program. Orders should be placed now for all needs of the town. Would it not be advisable that the citizens get together on this matter; place their order for decorating material jointly, and use concerted action in displaying the decorations in the most attractive manner.

Let's get together on this matter. Put-it-Off never gets anyone or any movement anywhere.

THE HUMAN RACE.

"Males Still Ahead of Females Last U. S. Census Says."—Headline.

Of course, this is not meant to imply that the males are being chased. —Temple Telegram.

COMMUNITY HEALTH.

Dr. B. L. Craddock, city health officer, appeared before the Civic league executive committee at its meeting Monday night and addressed that body upon the imperative need of weed-killing and the strict observance of all sanitary measures as requisite to the good health and well-being of any community. It was a most interesting and instructive talk—one that every citizen of Brady should have heard—and heeded.

In speaking of typhoid germs, Dr. Craddock said it had been demonstrated that these germs lived less than 24 hours in the direct sunlight. In dry earth, they sometimes lived as long as eleven months. In filth, excrement, places shaded by weeds and rubbish, they not only lived indefinitely, but were propagated at an alarming rate. Therefore, it was absolutely essential to the health and well-being of the community that all weeds be cut; all rubbish disposed of and the sunlight given opportunity to send its healing and penetrating rays into these disease beds. Further than that, the doctor stated that flies and mosquitoes were carriers of disease germs of all kinds, and for this reason it was absolutely essential that all offal be disposed of, the tin cans which might accumulate water and become breeding places for mosquitoes, be hauled to the dump grounds, and the entire city be placed in first-class sanitary condition. Upon his part, the city health officer has sent samples of all water used in Brady to the State Department for examination, and such water as may be contaminated will be condemned.

The doctor promises active and wholehearted support of the Civic league's program of weed-killing and clean-up, and urges every citizen of Brady to join in the move. July 1st to 10th are the days set to get your premises in apple-pie order. Will you co-operate? It means your own health and welfare, as well as that of your neighbor.

PECAN JOURNAL.

Vol. 1, No. 1, of the Pioneer Pecan Press has reached our desk, with the names of W. T. Moore, editor, and W. J. Millican and D. F. Moore, as associate editors. Office of publication is given as Bend, San Saba county, Texas. The pecan industry is one of the biggest natural assets of this section of Texas, and it is high time this great nut had some publication to champion its cause. Editor Moore is an old hand at the newspaper and publicity game, and he has set for himself a task which is to be highly commended. Exploitation of the pecan means giving the world one of the finest products upon this earth—and incidentally it means the enriching of the great pecan valley sections of the state. Our good wishes to the new publications and its promoters.

SON,

THE VALLEY—THE IMPRESSIONS OF THE SOUTHERMOST POINT

at a cost of approximately $85,000; the one on the left, a faculty club, or teachers' club. This commodious Spanish court-type of building was erected last summer at a cost of $40,000 for the housing and boarding of the teachers of the public schools. It contains airy and delightful outside bedrooms for thirty-two people; four large sleeping porches facing the court; kitchen; a large dining-room; a big tiled floor reception hall; and a cozy living room with its library, musical instruments and home-like fireplace. It is the most complete and elaborate thing of its kind to be found in the United States. It is managed by a Dean who has complete charge and conducts it on a cost basis. In addition two other grade schools of modern design are located in other sections of the town.

Is it any wonder the superintendent is a booster? The press meetings were held in the large auditorium of the high school, a most beautiful place, with inclined floor, steel opera seats, fitted up with stage, drop curtains and scenery suitable for staging any manner of play, and with a seating capacity, main floor and gallery combined, of 800. The meetings of the association would scarcely be of interest to our readers, as they pertained largely to problems of the newspaper folks. Rather, we would tell you of the entertainment given us, and the scenes we saw.

In its rough state, the land of the Del Rio valley looks much like the soil of other sections of Texas—a light, dusty soil overgrown with mesquite, cactus, prickly pear and underbrush. But cleared and placed under irrigation it produces in wonderful fashion. Corn grows to a height of 8, 10 and 12 ft., and side by side one can see a patch of corn ready for the harvest, another patch knee-high, and still another just coming up. Alfalfa is said to make from 6 to 11 cuttings per year, although many of the valley folks prefer other feed for stock. Rhodes grass is a popular feed and pasturage. Broom corn, like Indian corn, grows there in amazing fashion. No wheat or oats are grown, or at least not to any extent. In vegetables, the Valley is wonderfully prolific. Tomatoes, onions, cabbage, beans and every variety of garden product is grown upon a vast scale. But the biggest project in the valley is the raising of citrus fruit, and thousands upon thousands of acres are being given over to these trees. The orchards are kept well-cultivated and free from weeds, although many of the farmers grow corn and other crops in between the rows of young trees. The orchards are a pretty sight, and the great majority of them are about four years old, and just beginning to bear, while probably the oldest are around eight years old. It is said that the older the orchards are, the better they produce. The various citrus trees look much the same, and the newcomer is unable to distinguish between the grape fruit, the lemon and the orange trees.

The date palm is grown successfully here, although but few of the thousands of palms we saw produce the commercial dates. The reason assigned for this, is that the commercial date palms cost $35 per tree, which is reason enough for their comparative scarcity in the valley. But the palm trees grow most wonderfully—both the long leafed variety and the broad leafed variety (known to us as the origin of the palm leaf fan) and they are used everywhere for decorative purposes, the streets, avenues and boulevards being lined with these striking and beautiful trees. The four year-old palms already showed good growth, while the eight-year old palms reared their tops as high as telephone poles.

Long staple cotton is grown exclusively in the Valley, and there is no talk to be heard of acreage reduction, for last year the long staple brought from 60c to 80c per pound and there is always ready sale for this class of staple. McAllen, like every other valley town, was not lacking in musical organizations. First of all, there was the military band present upon all occasions and affording much enjoyment; then there were orchestras of every description, jazz bands and all manner of organizations upon every hand.

If I were asked what impressed me most during my stay in McAllen, I would unhesitatingly say, the substantial appearance of the town, and the apparent permanence of its improvements. And that applies to every city or town visited in the Rio Grande valley. Taking McAllen as an example: There was a total absence of "shack" buildings. All the business houses were of substantial—not to say, attractive and more or less ornamental—construction. Evidently, in building the city, the watchword had been, "Build for the future—build permanently." Then the miles and miles of tarvia paving—what real pleasure improvement of this nature gives to the citizens, and when it is recalled that Friend Hundley told me at Harlingen that during his first year in that place, he was the only citizen who did not own a car, it is to be seen at once that the Valley folks make use of their improved streets. Quite naturally, with improved streets, concrete gutters and sidewalks go hand in hand. Then, McAllen was lighted at night in regular city fashion. Large, ornamental globes surmount attractive iron posts about eight foot high. There are three of these posts on each side of the street, and in addition another ornamental globe surmounts the turning post in the center of the cross streets—making for a most attractive "white way." According to the 1920 census, McAllen had a population of 5,331, and has gotten its growth almost entirely in the past eight years.

The population of the valley is most cosmopolitan. In our trip to Mercedes, our automobile host was a civil engineer who came down to the valley something like thirteen years ago, being employed to construct one of the big pumping plants. He has been there ever since, but has turned farmer, and now owns five "forties" and one "twenty." If you don't understand that, I will elucidate by saying that the Valley acreage is cut up into blocks usually of forty-acre size. This fact is readily observed when you take an airplane flight over the valley—it much resembles a check-board.

And speaking of airplane flights Lt. Meloy of the U. S. aviation field was some busy man during the stay of the editors in the Valley. All members of the Press were privileged to ride with Lt. Meloy, and many of them did. Upon the closing day, the throng of would-be air-riders was so great that the best the lieutenant could do was to give a three minute jaunt through the air. Just a hop up, a sail around, a look down, and a landing as easy as a bird. Great sport—so they all said.

Mr. Host A. D. Rogers, proprietor of the beautiful Casa de Palmas, and one of the boosting boosters of the Valley was my host out to the aviation field, and also showed innumerable courtesies during our stay. Rogers made the welcoming address at the convention, and after telling how the county valuations had grown from $5,000,000 in 1910 to $27,000,000 in 1920, and giving various other statistics amidst a most humorous and eloquent address, he declared that the women of the Valley were the most "k'astatious" of all womankind and that under the spell of the citrus orchards, if a man, young and single, did not propose, the girl of his choice would do so for him. Rogers was limited for time in making the address, and forgot to make one statement, which was supplied in Pres. Cooke's comment upon the address, viz: That the mesquite posts used for fencing in the Valley country, were such good posts that they would out-last three postholes.

In our next article, we will attempt to tell something of the Valley organizations, and also give an account of the various trips we took about the Valley and what we saw. Before concluding this article, however, I want to say that it afforded the greatest of pleasure at McAllen to run across W. J. Brice, former McCulloch county citizen and who, following his election last year as county attorney, was forced to resign and go to the border for his health. Brice is now assistant in the county attorney's office at Edinburgh, the county seat of Hidalgo county. Brice is much improved in health, and naturally ev'ned great interest in what was going on "back home." Imagine, also, my pleasure in receiving a message from Mr. and Mrs. W. E. Lyle from Brownsville, asking me to be their guest at dinner during our visit to that city. Mr. Lyle has charge of the office of the Waker-Bennett Co., a wholesale dry goods concern, which in its two years' existence has built up an extensive trade not only in the Valley but down into Old Mexico as far as Monterey. Of my visit with the Lyles I will have more to say in my next article.

The Newspaper Man.

Bit of a priest and bit of sailor,
Bit of a doctor and bit of a tailor,
Bit of a lawyer, and bit of detective,
Bit of a judge, for his work is corrective;
Cheering the living and soothing the dying,
Risking all things, even dare-devil flying,
True to his paper and true to his clan—
Just look him over, the newspaper man.

Sleep! There are times he'll do with a little,
Work till his nerves and his temper are brittle;
Fire cannot daunt him, nor long hours disturb him,
Gold cannot buy him and threats cannot curb him;
Highbrow or lowbrow, your own speech he'll hand you,
Talk as you will to him, he'll understand you;
He'll go wherever another man can,
That is the way of the newspaper man.

Surgeon, if urgent the need be, you'll find him,
Ready to help, nor will dizziness blind him,
He'll give the ether, and never once falter,
Say the last rites like a priest at the altar;
Gentle and kind with the weak and the weary,
Which is proved now and then when his keen eye grows teary,
Facing all things in life's curious plan
That is the way of the newspaper man.

One night a week may be rest from his labor,
One night at home to be father and neighbor,
Just a few hours for his own bit of leisure,
All the rest's gazing at other men's pleasure,
All the rest's toiling, and yet he rejoices,
All the world is and that men do, he voices—
Who knows a calling more glorious than
The day-by-day work of the newspaper man?

—Edgar A. Guest.

Brice-Jones.
A wedding of interest to Brady friends of the groom was performed Tuesday, June 28th, at Greenville, Texas, when Miss Flossy Brice of Farmersville became the bride of F. J. Jones of Brady. The wedding is the culmination of a romance which had its inception seven years ago, when Mr. Jones made his home in Farmersville. Following the ceremony, the happy couple came to Brady, arriving here Wednesday morning, and are now at home to their friends in the Otis Turney residence near the light plant.

Mr. Jones is a valued employe of the Simpson & Co. garage, and since his return from army service, in which he saw overseas work, has made his home in Brady for the past couple years. He is a man of genial disposition and is universally popular. His bride is a lady of gracious and winning manner, and Mr. Jones is to be congratulated upon having won her for his life's companion.

A host of friends extends to the couple every wish for future happiness.

Marrin flung down his pack, saying angrily to Wilton: "So you call this a camp! I call it, rather—a fake."

"What a pity," Wilton answered with a grim smile, "since you are likely to stay in it for a month—maybe longer. You know the bargain—"

"I know what you said of things," Marrin retorted. "If you had told the truth, my mother—"

"That'll be all from you right now," Wilton broke out sternly. "If you were not what you are—a shadow, not a man—I would wash my hands of you before tomorrow morning."

"But—since I am weak and ill, you want me for a son, eh?" Marrin taunted. "All you Legion fellows think it is easier, also pleasanter, to marry money than to make it. Let alone waiting for a grateful country—"

Wilton caught the other man's wrists, held them immovable for a minute, then loosed them; his eyes suddenly filled with infinite pity—roused by the tremors, the heat he felt in the other's flesh. In a kind, steady voice he began: "Billy—I know what shell-shock does to a fellow—how it seems to kill his right soul and put a devil instead of it. Let me help you to dislodge that devil. You know that it is why we are here."

"Doctor Lyne says your one chance of getting back is quiet, good care, good food and exercise in this healing pine woods air. Try to remember that—remember, too, you are here by your own volition—you were keen enough about coming only yesterday. Ask yourself what motive I could possibly have in bringing you here, except a sincere wish to help you save yourself!"

Marrin apparently was not listening. Suddenly he broke out: "See the new moon. Moon, is Anna looking at you, too? She promised—you know she did! Do you think she will break her word?"

Wilton strolled softly away, not daring to remain. Anna Delina was hardly likely to be looking at new moons upon the eve of her wedding. She was not deserting a sick man in cold blood—instead she had fallen out of love with him while he was away—compassion had kept her from breaking with him openly at first—later, when she knew the shock might kill or craze him, she had temporized, keeping him deluded in a fool's paradise, wherein there was no forecasting beyond the day.

Then her new fiance had demanded imperiously immediate marriage. It was because of this that Marrin's mother had prevailed upon Tommy Wilton to take her poor child into the deep silent wilderness. Wilton had known his task would be hard—just how hard, though, until now, he had not realized.

As he went about necessary tasks Marrin sat relaxed against a pine trunk, his eyes on the moon, his face blissful. His ill humor had vanished—he came cheerily enough at the call to supper; after it smoked a pipe in smiling silence, and presently flung himself on the bed of fresh boughs, where inside of a minute he was sleeping heavily. Wilton was thankful—it was long since he had slept naturally, if the healing of the pine woods began as early might it not make whole the altered creature? Unless it did—would not think further. He Marrin, in spite of the ten years them, as though he were of good. Yet there was no truth taunt—Wilton revered as a saint rather than a woman. She had carried gallantly, faced down ill luck with faith and charity that qualify to be rare indeed. had veiled the disgrace of a husband when he died, and his old lawyer had truth; Wilton had truth; Wilton had truth; Lucia had sent he army almost joyously—glad of their chance to redeem the name and blood. One had fallen among the first and farthest forward; there remained to her only this heart-breaking wreck.

Heart-wrenching tragedy—yet Wilton held fast to hope. It grew with the morning. Marrin was almost boisterous in spirits. "You promised me wild strawberries," he said gayly after breakfast. "Unless you make good—well, awful things may happen to you."

The berries gemmed the grass of a natural meadow a mile or more from camp, but the tramp did not tire Marrin. He flung himself down beside the first ruby cluster he spied, shouting like a boy and cramming his mouth with fruit.

Then twenty yards off up rose a slim figure, beautiful—yet Wilton started at sight as though it were a ghost. No ghost but a living likeness of Anna Delina, in pose, features, coloring. How would Marrin bear sight of it? Wilton watched him with a wildly thumping heart, as he sprang erect, and made three paces toward the stranger, his face illumined, his hands outstretched. Suddenly they fell lifelessly—he began to stammer excuses. The girl nodded comprehension, stepped forward and offered him her hand, saying: "So glad to happen on you so early—we are camping, too—mother and I—the milk boy told us there was a soldier-gentleman just come. Welcome to the pine woods. No better place in the world to forget—things better forgotten."

"You are right, indeed," Wilton said, approaching. Inside of five minutes he had placed himself and Marrin, and found out that the girl, Anna's double, was Mary Prevost, her cousin.

Three days later he said to her aside: "You must realize the situation—do you realize the danger of it?"

"To him, you mean?" Mary flung back, her head high. "You—you can't think I would be so heartless as to—hurt him? I felt like murdering Anna when she told me—that is why I—oh, never mind. Maybe if I can make him content, until nature saves him—what I am doing will be justified."

"It needs no justifying," Wilton said, lifting her hand reverently to his lips. "Unconsciously Billy is beginning to love you—helped by the sense that it is deadly wrong. This is in his gleams of normality—they grow steadily. Encourage him to form a habit of loving you—if you want to save him from worse than death."

"I have loved him—always," she said under breath. "He did not dream it—but that made no difference. I was so much younger he hardly noticed me—you saw he met me as a total stranger—"

"You are—his good angel," Wilton interrupted. "He is indeed fortunate to have your love added to his mother's idolatry."

Time stilled with them in the pine woods. Marrin ceased to talk of Anna—he even veered away from the subject when Wilton daringly mentioned her. One night he sat smoking until almost dawn, yet roused from short sleep, clear-eyed and smiling, to say to Wilton: "Take me back—I must straighten things with Anna. She will understand when I tell her about Mary—but until I am free—"

"You were free before we came here," Winton interrupted, running into a sketchy explanation. Marrin listened intently—then gave a joyous shout and set off running. Wilton had no need to ask why. He knew the goal—Mary Prevost, the good angel.

OF THE GAY SECOND EMPIRE

Social Stunts That Included the Appearance of Company From the Comedie Francaise.

Gay hunting parties marked the second empire in France and after the hunts a theatrical performance was always included, and when this was presented by the members of the Comedie Francaise they enjoyed the distinction of being received in the royal box. Invitations on these occasions were greatly prized, as were those to the ball that was given on the empress' name day, November 15, and on which from 20,000 to 30,000 francs used to be spent, the Detroit News recalls. But when the more formal entertaining was over, "eccentricities" of many kinds were permitted. There were English ladies who enjoyed the privilege of being included in these less conventional parties.

The costumes of the latter were something wonderful to behold. The cloth skirt, which had then been recently introduced from England, and the cloth dress draped over it enabled their wearers to defy all kinds of weather. As they went tramping down the muddy roads, their coquettish little hats daintily poised on enormous chignons, their walking boots displaying more than the regulation part of ankle, the less sophisticated Compagnons stared with all their might at the strange company from the chateau.

New Cure for Hiccoughs.

In one of the serious paragraphs in the amusing "Humour of a Parish" by Rev. W. B. Money, the author passes on an "infallible" cure for hiccoughs. "Laugh as much as you like," he says, "but try it the next time you are in the grasp of hiccoughs. Take a tumbler and fill it up half full of water, put your lips to the opposite side of the rim to what you ordinarily would in drinking, tilt the glass away from you instead of toward you, and so sip the water. That is all, but you will want nothing more."

ADOPTING TED

By JACK LAWTON.

(© by McClure Newspaper Syndicate.)

Thadeus went along the tree-bordered path, feeling strangely at variance with his surroundings. Country lanes and primitive ways were not accustomed things to the city banker. And so long had he bent over cash drawers and intricate figuring. In his impressive steel cage, Thadeus himself acquired an important aloofness born of his task. He fretted now indignantly against his doctor's unusual prescription.

"One restful day in the country," the great man said, "will do more for you than bottles of medicine. A restful month would do better." Thadeus rebelled against the month—that would be unbearable. He knew that his nerves of late had been piling up misery in many unexpected ways, and he knew also that he must relax and find a changing of ways.

He thought, as he stepped distastefully over the dust, of his own gloomy home in the city, with crabbled Hannah in charge of constantly changing maids, and he wondered after all, what his struggle for money had amounted to. Certain it was that it brought no happiness nor happiness in store. But he had been placed in the treadmill, and because of his skill, must go on and on, endlessly counting and accumulating more dollars. Perhaps it was a breath of sweet clover across the fields which caused him to think of love, something vaguely sweet and comforting, which had passed him by. There was not much chance now that love would come to him to stay. He was too busily absorbed and unapproachable. The manner had grown upon him, with the loneliness of his years, and he was, after all, not sure that he wished to be shaken out of the accepted way. He stooped to brush a leaf from his palm-beach suit, and encountered—surprisingly—a child's grasping hand.

"Daddy!" cried the child delightedly, "Daddy." Thadeus frowned, the warm moist little body was pressing against his immaculate trousers.

"Take me," commanded the intruder, "take me up. Ted's tired; Ted's lost." Gazing at the boy, Thadeus hesitated uncertainly, then with an inexplicable impulse lifted him in his arms; clinging small arms encircled the man's neck.

How trustfully now he lay in his arms. Thadeus reflected sulkily, that no creature had ever before confidently sought his protection or turned to him in seeking affection. That was strange—too. At the bend of the road he saw a young woman. She was seated on the clover dotted grass, resting against a tree, an open book in her hands. At sight of himself with the boy's curly head on his shoulder the woman smiled—a welcoming smile.

"How do you do?" she said. "I see you have found my boy." Thadeus, though he had for such a brief moment glimpsed her, was conscious of distinct disappointment.

"Your boy?" Thadeus repeated, "yes, I found him."

She leaned forward eagerly. "And you like Ted?"

"I suppose that I do like Ted. He took me for his father, called me Daddy. Perhaps your boy has not seen his father for a time." The young woman reached up to relieve him of the sleeping burden.

"Ted's father is dead," she explained, gently. "Ted does not remember him at all."

"Too bad," Thadeus murmured confusedly, "nice little chap. Rather took to me," he added pleased.

The girl raised her dark eyes to his. "Would you like," she asked calmly, "to take Ted, and keep him?"

Thadeus gasped. She was evidently serious in her question, earnestly awaiting his reply.

"You could do so much for him," she explained, "so very much more than I. You see, I happen to know who you are. I have seen you in the bank—many years. Of course," she smiled again, "you would not remember me."

Thadeus sat speechless. When he found his voice he tried to make it coldly disapproving. But this was difficult before the entreating softness of the girl's dark eyes.

"You—the boy's mother!" he exclaimed, "would give him away—to a stranger!"

The young woman wrinkled her pretty brows perplexedly.

"I, Ted's mother?" she repeated, "why the poor little soul is an orphan. I brought him out here with me on my vacation, for two weeks of fresh air in the country. Ted is for adoption; and they wrote me from the asylum that any possible applicant would be directed here, so I took you for an applicant. Ted has been taught to say 'mother' or 'father' ingratiatingly. Poor forlorn little Ted!"

Thadeus sat promptly down on the grass, regardless of cream colored clothing.

"Let's talk this thing over," he said, "if you can make me see it my way to give Ted his chance, why I'll do it."

"In that event," mused the girl, "I would expect you to allow me to call upon him at your house, once or twice a week to advise with you concerning my boy."

"Ted," agreed Thadeus decidedly, "may consider himself adopted. Now, let me carry him back with you to the place where you are staying."

ENGINEER HAD A NARROW ESCAPE

Popular Houston Railroad Man Was Fast Losing His Strength and Energy.

"For a long time I had been living on oatmeal and other light and flimsy things, and even might be doing it yet if it hadn't been for Tanlac," said Captain Thomas G. Burrows, a popular locomotive engineer who lives at 3915 Kenny avenue, Houston, Texas.

"This medicine certainly made a new man of me and I now can stand my trips as well as I did fifteen years ago. I suffered from catarrh of the head and stomach for a long time. I could eat no meats nor heavy vegetables, and, as a result, my strength and energy were gradually leaving me. My head ached most of the time and I couldn't get any sound sleep—just cat-naps because I was so nervous. My breath was bad, and I had a mean taste in my mouth all the time, my eyes were watery and mucus was always dropping down my throat."

"Tanlac is certainly a railroad man's friend, and the relief I got from it is simply wonderful. Before I began taking it I asked some of my friends what they thought about it and without a single exception they said, 'Tom, it's all the truth.' So I began taking it. I am rid of the catarrh and every other trouble, and I just feel fine all the time. I like to talk Tanlac. I talk it at home and to the boys on the road, for I believe it is the one medicine everybody ought to know about."

Tanlac is sold in Brady by Trigg Drug Co., in Mercury by J. T. Matlock, in Rochelle by C. W. Carr, and by leading druggists everywhere.

VICTORY FOR CARPENTIER WOULD STAMP HIM GREATEST RING CHAMPION IN HISTORY

Jersey City will be the center of the United States next Saturday and the scene of a spectacle unequalled in the world's history—the Dempsey-Carpentier fight, the first million dollar ring battle.

Not less than 50,000 persons will, on this occasion, cause the great wooden bowl at Boyle's Thirty Acres to creak with the weight of the greatest mass of humanity that ever jammed into an enclosure to see a fight. Fifty thousand paid admissions, at prices ranging from $5.50 to $50, will swell a gigantic receipts total to over one million dollars, or more than twice the amount received at any previous fight in history.

Two nations will be intensely concerned in the success of the rivals; two continents or portions thereof will be wagering on the result; and all the civilized world will be hanging around the receiving stations from the Philippines to Medicine Hat, waiting for the receivers to pick up the wireless flash of the winner's name.

You observe we refer to the "civilized world." Ring fighting is as yet too brutal to please the more savage tribes, it appears. Yet around the ring at Jersey City will be gathered not only cultured and refined men, statesmen, artists and professional geniuses, but gently nurtured women, looking unflurried on the primitive spectacle of two men pounding each other into pulp.

But it will be SOME spectacle — something like this:—

Imagine an immense bowl, 400 feet across, lined with human beings — men and women, and perhaps some children, shoe horned in 22 inches of measured space per person regardless of individual requirements. The crowd mops its dripping and perspiring faces as the sun blazes down into the depths of this enormous crucible. To the remote $5.50 ticket holder, distant more than 200 feet from the 20-foot canvas whereon fistic history is to be made, the ring appears to be a mere toy.

Draw on Your Imagination. Jammed up against the ringside, picture row on row of sweating, perhaps swearing scribes, sending off thousands and thousands of words, while intent operators click steadily with one hand and wipe the perspiration away with the other.

Back of the tier of newspaper "activities" behold the $50 seat men, representing every known profession and art, from many distant corners of the country, even of the world.

Delegations of Frenchmen, who chartered a steamer to make the trip to see "Georges" overwhelm the big American. "Vive" Georges as he sits in his corner. A cool million dollars or even more is around the ringside, and Promoter Tex Rickard has thus achieved his ambition. The fighters steady their nerves with the reflection that they will be padded from downfall by more than $250,000 each.

In the corners of this ring are what, to the distant $5.50-seat occupants, appear two Lilliputians. But newspaper scribes, dictating to the operators in the front row, see two Titans, about to clash for world's supremacy.

Probably never before in ring history has a greater contrast been observed. The Frenchman, blond, gray-eyed, studious-looking, refined and rather delicate in frame, and opposite to him the sun-browned, curly-haired, sloe-eyed American champion, the picture of animal power and native fighting instinct.

Dempsey the More Powerful. Dempsey, larger, more muscular everywhere except in the legs, sits, as is his custom, hunched up in his chair, peering sullenly from under his overhanging brows, at his foe, motionless as a statue. Carpentier, more serene, appears almost too delicate for his powerful foe.

Their hands are no longer cased in big pillows, which saved their sparring partners from annihilation on practice days. Eight-ounce close-fitting gloves have replaced the big pads.

Presently, when the bell starts hostilities, here will be no resounding "plops," as when the big gloves land; only the scarcely audible thud of the wicked wallop made by the thinner mittens.

The enormous crowd sits and wonders while awaiting the bell what the outcome will be—just as you and I are wondering right now, as we picture in imagination the record-breaking occasion.

And you may continue to wonder, right up to the day of the fight. For, however one may argue this way or that about weights, heights and records, as between the champions of the two continents, both known to possess a finishing punch, there can only be wonder and guesswork as to the finish.

LOCAL BRIEFS.

Drilling at the City water well has been progressing steadily, with the drill at about 1100 ft. depth, and making a 12 1/2-inch hole.

W. A. Penn and son of Mercury community came down to Brady yesterday marketing a load of fine roasting ears.

A. H. McLerran of Voca was in Brady Wednesday marketing his tenth carload of watermelons in the past two weeks. Mr. McLerran is growing some fine melons, the kind with the white meat being particularly sweet and appetizing.

A. R. Carlson reported threshing out his oats this week, and says he will make 1600 bushels off of his 45-acre patch. He made 800 bushels, or an average of 40 bushels to the acre off of a 20-acre tract, but the balance of the acreage fell a little short.

B. D. Dillard was in from the Gap Wednesday and reported that while he had not entirely finished his new residence, yet he and his family were enjoying living in their pretty new home, and that the balance of the improvements could and would wait until after he had gotten his crops harvested.

J. H. Marshall was among the Pear Valley folks in Brady Wednesday. Mr. Marshall is of the opinion that a dry spell now will do much to assure a good cotton yield, as wet weather would be very apt to get the boll weevils to working. Everything out his way is looking fine, says Mr. Marshall.

Word was received here last week of the death in Fort Worth of Harry Hart, son-in-law of E. J. Broad, resulting from a typhoid fever following a short illness. Mr. Hart and M. S. Lonnie Broad were married only about a year ago. Edd Broad, accompanied by his wife Louise and Grace Broad, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. E. J. Broad and who had been visiting in Mason, went to Fort Worth Friday night to attend the funeral.

S. H. Gainer was here yesterday from South of Rochelle and reported everything looking good down his way, with no particular need of rain just at this time, although corn would be needing rain within a couple weeks. Mr. Gainer said he had been having roasting ears out of his patch for the past couple weeks. He says there is two to one as much corn planted this year than ever before, and believes his corn will run 25 to 30 bushels to the acre without any further moisture.

The Standard editor will just have to acknowledge that he is indebted to Victor Bradley for one of the most toothsome messes of roasting ears that ever graced our festive board. Victor has been promising us a trial assortment of his corn on the cob—and we liked the sample fine. Victor says he feels sure of making 700 bushels of corn off his crop this year and then he also confided he had 1700 hills of watermelons and that it wasn't so far from Brady but what even an editor might come out and give them a look over.

Dan Zimmerman was in from the Dodge community Wednesday and reported quite a severe hail storm which fell in the four-section pasture between Dodge and Nine communities Sunday afternoon. A couple of boys who took refuge from the storm in a sheep shed, said the hail fell for about an hour and a half, stripping all vegetation. Fortunately, but few crops were in the path of the storm, and so no considerable crop damage resulted. The high wind accompanying the storm turned a barn over on the W. L. Davis place.

Mr. Horse and Mule Owner, do you know that two-thirds of a ton of O-Molene goes as far in feeding as a whole ton of oats and corn? You prove this in a trial feeding test. See us today. Phone 164. Mayhew Produce Co., Brady.

Now is the Time to Eat the Rooster.

This is the time to remove roosters from the flocks. During warm weather fertile eggs deteriorate very rapidly, much more so than infertile eggs. Eggs should be gathered twice a day and kept in a cool place.

If you haven't eaten your roosters, do it now and if they are too much for you, let some one else eat them. How much does it cost to feed a rooster a year and how valuable must he be to make it profitable to keep him over until next breeding season? If it takes ninety-seven pounds of feed for a hen a year, surely it takes a hundred pounds to feed a rooster. And but little grain can be had for less than 3 cents a pound and it is just as valuable whether you raise it yourself or someone else raises it and you buy it. At the very best, it will cost between $2.50 and $3.00 to keep the old bird until he is wanted next breeding season. And if he warrants this feed bill, he must be a very valuable bird.—Farm Life.

A Poser.

During the cross-examination of a witness in a case tried in an Iowa court, the examining lawyer demanded, rather pompously:

"Now, sir, did you or did you not, on the day in question or at any other time, say to the defendant or any one else that the statement imputed to you and denied by the plaintiff was a matter of no moment or otherwise? Answer me, yes or no."

The witness seemed bewildered. "Yes or no what?" he finally managed to gasp out.

BURNING OIL THROWN BLOCKS IN $250,000 FIRE AT SAN ANGELO TUESDAY

Ballinger, June 28.—The Pierce Oil Corporation, the Martin Glover Company, a wholesale concern; the Santa Fe Freight Depot, several freight cars and other property was destroyed by fire at San Angelo Tuesday afternoon about 2 o'clock, causing a loss estimated at more than a quarter of a million dollars, according to information received here at 3:30.

The fire started in the Pierce Oil Corporation wholesale station, where five cars of oil burned, an explosion of one of the tanks throwing fire for several blocks. The city was cut off from communication on account of the power plant utilizing its full strength to pump water for fighting the fire.

Information received here at 4:00 o'clock stated that the fire was under control.

The Martin Glover Company is the heaviest loser, its loss being estimated at $100,000.

The following urgent appeal for clothing for the needy children of Europe has been sent the McCulloch County Red Cross chapter from headquarters, and McCulloch county citizens are urged to co-operate with Mrs. W. H. Ballou in answering this call:

"To all Chapter Chairmen and Directors of Volunteer Service:

"Garments can be provided only by the volunteer effort of American women. They will actually save the lives of thousands of European children." That is the assertion of Robert E. Olds, American Red Cross Commissioner to Europe, in the appeal for the continued support of the Red Cross Chapter program of garment and layette production.

"How acute is the need for clothing can be judged by reports from our field workers abroad. They write of appalling conditions amongst the children of Eastern and Central European countries. There are American layettes in the hospitals, but not enough to go around. In many communities the death rate far exceeds the birth rate, and more than half the babies die in infancy. We cannot save all, but we can save many. We surely cannot stand aside and permit children to perish for want of things we can supply. Our Red Cross Chapters have actually saved thousands of lives in replenishing the depleted stocks of clothing and layettes. American mothers will need only to realize the distress to answer the appeal in this great humanitarian task.

"The quota of garments which we have asked from your Chapter monthly, and which will continue for sometime, is 2 layettes. May we count upon your help and co-operation in this program of relief?"

A Voice from the Dead. A reporter was misinformed, and the obituary of a live man appeared in the Daily Tribune. Of course, the man was more or less indignant about the error, and rushing to the phone, called the editor. "I see in your dirty old sheet that I am dead," he shouted.

"Yes," replied the editor. "Where are you speaking from?" — Candy News.

Bracing Atmosphere. The American tourist in Scotland was being shown around by a guide and was affecting supreme indifference to everything.

"Loch Lomond? That puddle?" he exclaimed with scorn. "Why, we have lots better ponds than that in the United States, and those mountains are only called hills back home. Scenery? Poof!"

EDEN FOLKS STAGE BIG BARBECUE AND SUCCESSFUL ENTERTAINMENT

Eden staged a most successful barbecue and entertainment on Thursday of last week, when several thousand people were gathered in the beautiful grove near that city on Thursday of last week. The occasion was primarily a rally of farmers interested in the Farm Bureau cotton pooling plan, and Dor W. Brown, Mason county agent, made a rousing address explaining in detail the plans of the association as regards the cotton pool.

Not the least of the day's successful entertainment, was the barbecue dinner served the visitors, and at which well over 2,000 people were passed through the gates. The citizens of Eden did themselves proud in this part of the entertainment, and there was ample dinner to take care of all the crowd and more besides. Bronco-busting, goat roping, dancing, and other entertainments filled out the day's program.

Two lively ball games also added to the enjoyment of the occasion. In the morning, Paint Rock won from Live Oak by a large score, and in the afternoon Eden won from Pear Valley 17 to 1. Three Brady players helped strengthen the Eden team, Taylor pitching seven innings of the game, Buck Bailey catching and Jess Woosley occupying center garden. All three have good accounts of themselves, Taylor pitching splendid ball and having the Pear Valley boys at his mercy throughout the seven innings. Burleson of Eden finished the last two innings of the game, holding the Pear Valley bunch scoreless.
