TO ORGANIZE LEGION POST NEXT FRIDAY

J. A. Holton, who is one of the leaders in the move to organize a local post of the American Legion, reports great interest being manifested in the same by World War veterans from all over the county, and he has been kept busy giving out information upon the same.

As has been before stated in these columns, a mass meeting of ex-service men and all citizens interested in the matter will be held at the court-house next Friday night at 8:00 o'clock, at which a temporary organization will be effected, and application for charter made to Legion headquarters. As soon as the charter is received, permanent officers will be elected and installation of the duly elected officers will be had with due ceremony, the American Legion post at Eden having offered to take charge of the installation services.

To acquaint the many veterans of the World War with the American Legion organization and its purposes, The Standard gives the following quotations from the official hand book of the American Legion.

What is the Legion For?

The Legion's purposes are set forth admirably in its constitution: "For God and Country, we associate ourselves together for the following purposes: To uphold and defend the constitution of the United States of America; to maintain law and order; to foster and perpetuate a one-hundred percent Americanism; to preserve the memories and incidents of our association in the Great War; to inculcate a sense of individual obligation to the community, state and nation; to combat the autocracy of both the classes and the masses; to make right the master of might; to promote peace and good will on earth; to safeguard and transmit to posterity the principles of justice, freedom and democracy; to consecrate and sanctify our comradeship by our devotion to mutual helpfulness."

The Legion has no aims, policies or activities not covered by this preamble. The purpose of the Legion is thus twofold—service to its Country and service to its comrades. The organization is exerting all its influence and strength to the end that all ex-service men, especially the disabled and their dependents and dependents of those who paid the supreme sacrifice, shall receive that just and fair treatment which they have reason to expect from a patriotic and liberal country.

In serving the country the organization is endeavoring to keep alive that spirit of service which induced all to respond to the country's call in time of need, even to the extent of being willing to pay the supreme sacrifice. This is being done by assisting in the maintenance of a one-hundred percent Americanism, based on fair play and a square deal for all.

Eligibility.

Section 1. Any person shall be eligible for membership in the American Legion who was regularly enlisted, drafted, inducted or commissioned and who served on active duty in the army, navy or marine corps of the United States at some time during the period between April 6, 1917, and November 11, 1918, both dates inclusive, or who, being a citizen of the United States at the time of his entry therein served on active duty in the naval, military or armed forces of any other Government associated with the United States during the Great War; provided, that no person shall be entitled to membership (a) who, being in the army, navy or marine corps, of the United States during said period, refused on conscientious, political or other grounds to subject himself to military discipline or unqualified service; or (b) who, being in such service, was separated therefrom under circumstances amounting to dishonorable discharge and has not subsequently been officially restored to an honorable status.

Sec. 2. There shall be no form or class of membership except an active membership as herein above provided.

THE DECLARATION OF INDEPENDENCE

The Brady Standard's Americanization Series

On June 7, 1776, more than a year after the battles of Lexington and Concord, Richard Henry Lee introduced in the Continental Congress a resolution which stated that "The united colonies are, and of right ought to be, free and independent states." A committee was appointed on June 10th to draw up a formal declaration of independence. Actual composition of this document was the work of Thomas Jefferson. John Adams writing to his wife said, "Yesterday, the greatest question was decided which ever was debated in America, and a greater, perhaps, never was debated among men. The second day of July, 1776, will be the most memorable epoch in the history of America." The preamble to the Declaration, slightly amended and adopted July 4, 1776, in the form we have today, runs as follows:

When in the course of human events, it becomes necessary for one people to dissolve the political bands which have connected them with another, and to assume among the powers of the earth, the separate and equal station to which the laws of nature and of nature's God entitle them, a decent respect to the opinions of mankind requires that they should declare the causes which impel them to the separation.

We hold these truths to be self-evident, that all men are created equal, that they are endowed by their Creator with certain inalienable Rights, that among these are Life, Liberty and the pursuit of Happiness. That to secure these rights, Governments are instituted among men, deriving their just powers from the consent of the governed. That whenever any form of government becomes destructive of these ends, it is the right of the people to alter or to abolish it, and to institute new government, laying its foundation on such principles and organizing its powers in such form, as to them shall seem most likely to effect their safety and happiness. Prudence, indeed, will dictate that governments long established should not be changed for light and transient causes; and accordingly all experience hath shown, that mankind are more disposed to suffer, while evils are sufferable, than to right themselves by abolishing the forms to which they are accustomed. But when a long train of abuses and usurpations, pursuing invariably the same object, evinces a design to reduce them under absolute despotism, it is their right, it is their duty, to throw off such government, and to provide new guards for their future security. Such has been the patient sufferance of these Colonies; and such is now the necessity which constrains them to alter their former systems of government. The history of the present King of Great Britain is a history of repeated injuries and usurpations, all having in direct object the establishment of an absolute tyranny over these States. To prove this, let facts be submitted to a candid

Then, after giving a dainty, pink-bordered card announces the arrival of Arthur Cl...

We, therefore, the representatives of the United States of America, in General Congress assembled, appealing to the Supreme Judge of the world for the rectitude of our intentions, do, in the name and by authority of the good people of these Colonies, solemnly publish and declare, That these United Colonies are, and of right ought to be free and independent States; that they are absolved from all allegiance to the British Crown, and that all political connection between them and the State of Great Britain, is and ought to be totally dissolved; and that as free and independent States, they have full power to levy war, conclude peace, contract alliances, establish commerce, and to do all other acts and things which independent States may of right do. And for the support of this Declaration, with a firm reliance on the protection of Divine Providence, we mutually pledge to each other our lives, our fortunes and our sacred honor.

(Editor's Note—The articles appearing in the above space from week to week are taken from "Americanization" by Elwood Griscom, Jr. This excellent volume, which is a collection of articles upon the general theme of patriotism and good citizenship, is presented to the schools of Texas by the Bodies of Scottish Rite Masonry in Texas.)

COUNTY COURT DOCKET MONDAY IS QUITE HEAVY

Judge Evans Adkins will convene county court next Monday, and the docket shows an unusually large number of new cases to come up for trial. Practically all the old cases have previously been cleared off the docket.

Another case of interest, in fact, two cases, will be those against the Mexican, Raman, one on a pistol charge and the other aggravated assault.

The Mayhew case, appealed from Justice court, on a charge of creating and maintaining a nuisance, will also be tried.

Two theft cases and two aggravated assault cases will also come up for trial.

The week following, among other cases on the civil docket will be that of W. S. Shropshire, in which Mr. Shropshire seeks to regain possession of the Ford car stolen from him several months ago.

ANN'L RED CROSS ROLL CALL NOV. 11TH TO 25TH

Just a few more weeks brings the "Fifth Roll Call. We hope and feel sure McCulloch county will "go over the top." For the benefit of those who have not been keeping up with Red Cross news, I am giving below a few things which the Red Cross is doing.

In 1919, the year following the signing of the Armistice, 3,300 disabled soldiers were patients in the United States Public Health Service hospitals. Due to the encroachments of, and to the lack of physical resistance to disease, this number was increased in 1920 to 17,500 and in 1921 to 26,300. The Red Cross as a National organization has been co-operating with the Government by providing the recreational facilities which have been found so important in the restoration of the disabled soldier's health. It has been for the Red Cross to add those touches to the soldier's restoration to normal which medical care alone cannot give. Red Cross participation in United States Public Health Service hospitals necessitates the expenditure of $10,000,000 a year. 465,146 problems of ex-service men have been handled by the chapters in the Southwestern division during the last fiscal year.

The American public will be eager to have a share in this Red Cross service, which adds so materially to the happiness and well-being of the disabled service-men.

When the plea for the production of garments for the refugee children of Europe was sent out to Chapters of the Southwestern division last September, 238 responded with 10,522 garments of overseas shipment.

In the relief necessitated by three disasters (Texarkana tornado, Tulsa riot, Pueblo flood), and eight minor disasters in the Southwestern division during the past year, the Red Cross has expended up to October, $1,678,020.00 in emergency relief and permanent family rehabilitation.

The Fifth Roll Call, which after all marks the peak of membership interest in the Red Cross, assumes increasing importance as a challenge to Chapter leaders because at no time since the Armistice have ex-service men, particularly those suffering from disability, looked to the Chapters for leadership to a greater degree than now.

MASON ROAD IMPROVEMENT IS ABOUT COMPLETE

R. M. Mitchell, in charge of the road construction work on the Brady-Mason road for the contracting firm of Oglesby & Mitchell, reports that his contract has just about been completed, and everyone who has traveled this road recently avers the 1 1/2 miles of graveled thoroughfare is a model upon which all future road work in the county should pattern.

The stretch of road improvement was begun by Oglesby & Mitchell where the road improvement work was dropped last fall, about 1 1/2 miles this side of the river, and extends on to the river. Surfacing of the road is now being done, and it is more than probable that the work will be completed within another week. The total cost of this stretch of road will be in the neighborhood of $12,000 and $13,000.

Mr. Mitchell will go from Brady to San Patricio county, where his firm has been awarded a large road-building contract.

W. W. SPILLER WRITES INTERESTING ACCOUNT OF HIS TRIP TO EASTERN COAST

W. W. Spiller, who returned the past week from Boston and the east, where he had been on a business trip with John E. Brown, gives the following interesting account of his trip and the things he observed enroute:

"Yes, indeed, I was glad to get back home. Those kind of trips make me tired. We left Boston Friday night at 6:50 and were continuously on the road except a 9-hour layover at St. Louis and the same at Fort Worth.

"The trip was interesting in many instances. In some places long lines of old freight cars near the depots kept the boys from seeing all the sights. You know, we thought that the Texas & Pacific depot at Fort Worth was a large outfit, but when we got to St. Louis we could tell that it was about the same on your hand in comparison. You could set the Fort Worth depot down in one corner of the St. Louis depot. St. Louis is about the sixth city in size in the United States.

"In going up, we stopped off at Philadelphia. To say the least of it Judge Brown was just about as green as I was. We got off at West Philadelphia and got transfer to East Philadelphia. We landed at a little station and went down under the street cars tied together to make the trip on. We got aboard after inquiry. They twist all around under the city. The street car systems in nearly all the eastern cities are tracked overhead on the level, and underground the railroad systems are the same way; no crossing tracks. Also the lines are elevated over or run under the street traffic, unless they run directly with the Philadelphia we saw the Washington was inaugurated President. These old buildings are built of brick and are substantial, but don't seem to be in use only for sight-seeing. The first 8 or 10 blocks of this town, they stated, were laid off by William Penn. There Judge Brown asked someone how far it was to certain place. He says 'It is ten minutes down there.' They call them squares instead of blocks, as we do. Philadelphia does considerable manufacturing. As we went into New York, it looked like we were running right into the side of a hill—and sure enough we did. We ran into a tunnel. The depot where we stopped was underground. The train ran under the Hudson river in one place and over in another place. No engines, except motors, were allowed to run inside the city. As a general thing, they have two large motor cars to pull a train through town. No whistling of trains was heard in any of the cities in the New England states. At Boston the streets were more narrow and the buildings as a general thing, are taller than in Fort Worth. The streets were paved with granite, being set edge-wise and broken just a little larger than brick. The Federal government has a large dock (when I say large, I mean about half-mile in length and about 200 feet wide) built out of this granite, with wide wharfage to either side with huge loading capacities. We saw 20 vessels about 430 feet in length and 10 a little smaller tied here. They were built while the war was on and not being used now. To say the least of it, this was huge to a fellow that has never been to Galveston.

"The remains of the dead that were massacred in 1660 were almost in the heart of the city. Sight-seers are admitted. One side is open on the street, and the balance is surrounded by large six or eight-story buildings. We saw what was of interest to all Americans—where the father and mother of Benjamin Franklin were buried; also John Hancock's little tomb-stone and monument which the people erected to his memory; and Paul Jones tomb-stone is among this lot. Nearly all the tomb-stones in this place were very close together and made out of dark marble about two inches thick and broken in shape about 18 to 24 in. high.

"The New England States are very fertile, there being no failures to speak of. It is excellent for fruit, vegetables, corn, wheat and dairying, but a business man describing the farmers of that section says: 'They are a shiftless, unenergetic class of people that don't care whether they make any more than a living and nearly all farming is done on a small scale—say one, two, five or ten acres. But we saw no such good black land as there is in Texas. The night we left Boston it was raining and at St. Louis it rained all day, Sunday. A great many of the farms in this section are on the same scale as a little or covering the hill. From Missouri up, there has been plenty rain all the year. In going through Pennsylvania, we traveled over what is called the horse-shoe curve—it takes two large engines to take trains over this on account of the slope. The Pennsylvania system through Pennsylvania has about four tracks and there is no stopping for other trains to pass.

"One thing that we have the New England states skinned on is autos. We have a great many more in proportion than anything I saw. Another thing that is noticeable is that the people are more economical. All the people seem to wear good clothes, but hardly ever saw a silk dress; hardly saw any high heel shoes. We did not notice any painted faces until we got back to Fort Worth. As a general thing the women of the north are a little larger on an average than those of the south; not very many light complexioned people in the north and but few negroes after you pass St. Louis. A great many foreigners are in Boston and are scattered over the New England states. There are many things of interest that could be mentioned on a trip like this, but the human mind tires of reading long pieces."

WOMAN SAYS IT WOULD BE WRONG TO KEEP SILENT

"No one knows how glad I was, after using Tanlac a few days, to find I was getting better and I have been getting better ever since," said Mrs. Myrtle Boatman, 540 W. Sixteenth St., Houston Heights, Texas.

"For two years I was all run down and in dreadful health. I never felt like eating anything, lost weight and was tired and worn out all the time. I suffered from headache; my nerves were upset and I could hardly ever get a good night's rest. To add to my troubles, I took inflammatory rheumatism and in my right arm the pain was almost unbearable.

"Tanlac suited my case exactly and I feel stronger and better than I have since my troubles began. The rheumatism is entirely gone, my appetite is good and my digestion is just perfect. I have tried lots of different kinds of medicines, but Tanlac is the only one that did me any real good and I feel it would be a positive wrong for me not to tell others of my experience."

Tanlac is sold in Brady by Trigg Drug Co., in Mercury by J. T. Matlock, in Rochelle by C. W. Carr, and by leading druggists everywhere.

How to Shop.

The other day I went with my wife to buy a hat. To my surprise, the occasion developed an interesting ceremonial all its own. When I went for my own next new hat I decided to adopt similar methods. This is the result:

"Good morning, sir. What may I show you this morning?"
"I want a hat."
"Certainly, sir. What sort of hat do you require?"
"I want a good hat, one which will wear well and is not too expensive—above all, one which will suit me."
"A bowler, sir?"
"No!" (I fear I shouted.)
"A silk hat, sir?"
"No!" (Shout I did). The assistant stepped back in alarm, but recovered in time.
"A straw hat, sir?"
"I want," I said firmly, "a hat which will match the overcoat I'm wearing."

"Er—quite so, sir." He spoke in the manner one affects in addressing the very old and the very young, the manner employed by the best heroes in humoring escaped madmen. "Quite so, sir. But do you not help me a when you are in a shop. By this time, at my wife's shop, there would have been mountains of discarded hats on all sides—hats of every conceivable shape, size, color and price. I perceived the futility of my tactics. There is only one way for a man to buy a hat. I had recourse to it.

by local applications, as they cannot reach the diseased portion of the ear. There is only one way to cure catarrrhal deafness, and that is by a constitutional remedy. Catarrrhal Deafness is caused by an inflamed condition of the mucous lining of the Eustachian Tube. When this tube is inflamed you have a rumbling sound or imperfect hearing, and when it is entirely closed, deafness is the result. Unless the inflammation can be reduced and this tube restored to its normal condition, hearing will be destroyed forever. FARM HINTS.

The following is the first of a series of articles upon the growing of Sweet Clover, written by C. H. McDowell, Superintendent, Texas Agricultural Experiment Station, Sub-Station No. 6, Denton, Texas.

Varieties of Sweet Clover.
There are four important varieties of Sweet Clover, namely:

- (1) Biennial white blooming.
- (2) Annual white blooming.
- (3) Biennial yellow blooming.
- (4) Annual yellow blooming.

The Biennial white sweet clover is the variety most commonly grown throughout Texas. This variety is the most widely advertised, and as far as is known to date, is the best variety to grow in this section of Texas.

Soils for Sweet Clover.
Sweet clover thrives on all of the clay prairie soils of Central Texas that are rich in lime. Sandy soils having a heavy clay sub-soil from 3 to 18 inches below the surface will generally grow sweet clover successfully. On deep, loose, dry, sandy soils which are acid, sweet clover cannot be expected to grow well without the addition of lime. Rocky and gravelly soils of a lime formation and having a clay sub-soil will grow sweet clover. Water-logged or poorly drained soils will give indifferent results with sweet clover and it will usually not grow at all under such conditions, even though other conditions are favorable.

How Sweet Clover Improves the Soil.
Due to its nitrogen gathering characteristics, by means of nodules on its roots, the sweet clover plant enriches the soil with nitrogen and this soil constituent is particularly lacking in old or run-down fields. Sweet clover develops a very extensive root system, and the large tap-roots penetrate deep into the tight compact soils and enables the crops which follow to increase their feeding area in the soil. Soon after the sweet clover plant dies, the large tap-roots decay and the open spaces left by this decay tend to aerate compact soils and also to improve the drainage of tight, impenetrable sub-soils. The decaying root system also adds a large amount of humus forming vegetable matter to the soil. One of the chief values of sweet clover is secured when used in short rotations as a soil builder, and especially is this true when the durian top growth is plowed under as a green manure crop, thereby adding a large amount of humus-forming material to the soil.

Sweet Clover is Easy to Eradicate.
Sweet clover is comparatively easy to eradicate by any of the following methods, when not allowed to make seed:

Plowing under any time the first year will kill sweet clover.

Plowing under any time the second year before it matures seed and while it is in bloom will kill it.

Mowing the clover the second year while in bloom will kill it.

Thorough cultivation while the plant seedlings are young will kill it as easily as any common weed may be killed.

Mowing the clover extremely close to the ground for hay will often kill it.

Inoculation.
In North Central Texas it is not considered necessary to inoculate sweet clover when seeded on soil that has recently grown alfalfa, bur-clover or sweet clover. On land that has never grown alfalfa or other clovers, it may be of advantage to inoculate the sweet clover seed or the land with the proper bacteria, so as to be sure and secure the utmost benefit from the crop at the earliest possible time. It is probable, however, that more or less inoculation is present in all soils of North and Northwest Texas.

There are two methods used for inoculation: namely, Soil-transfer and Pure culture.

The soil transfer consists of scattering over the field from 200 to 400 pounds of soil per acre, secured from fields that have recently grown alfalfa, bur-clover or sweet clover. For the best results, this soil should be secured while moist and scattered during a cloudy day, then disked and harrowed into the land immediately. Direct sunlight is very injurious to the inoculating bacteria. Scattering of the soil may be done at the most convenient time, at least several days before the clover seed is sown.

The pure culture inoculation is usually purchased from a seed house, or direct from a company which makes a specialty of manufacturing this material. The pure culture method of inoculation is usually satisfactory if good, fresh material is used and the work properly done. Complete directions for using pure culture are furnished by the manufacturers.

LOCAL BRIEFS.

Miss Beatrice Myers underwent an operation for appendicitis Monday, and her friends are glad to know that she is convalescing rapidly.

Hobart Reed, who was operated on for appendicitis Tuesday at the local sanitarium, is reported doing nicely, and his friends hope to see him about soon again.

Max Martin was a business visitor in Brady from Mason the first of the week. Mr. Martin reported grass in most of his pastures, and says upon the whole everything is looking very favorable for the winter.

Mrs. August F. Behrens has received word that her granddaughter, Miss Juanita Bryan, aged 13, of Francis, Okla., is attending school in Sherman, Texas, where she is making her home with her uncle, E. J. Bryan.

J. J. Kirk, who lives nine miles out on the Brownwood road, was a Brady visitor yesterday. Mr. Kirk reported his cotton out three weeks ago, and says about the best thing he knows of just now to happen, would be a fine rain.

Mr. and Mrs. W. M. Bauhof returned Monday night from Dallas, where they had spent several days on business. Mrs. Bauhof reports having visited the leading millinery houses there and having purchased a very select line of hats, chosen with particular care as to the tastes of her friends and patrons.

Brady sent quite a delegation of citizens to Mexia this week, where all are inspecting Texas' great new oil field and the golden opportunities it offers. Among the number going from here were R. B. McClure, Chas. Schaeg, C. C. Tucker, C and Ernest Davenport, C. B. Whitehead; Tom Bradshaw, G. A. Boyd, Furr of Calf Creek.

W. F. Roberts, Jr., was here from Lohn Wednesday, taking advantage of the bank holiday to visit among us. He reports cotton about all out in his community. Will says the Lohn State bank is making a very satisfactory showing, and that their deposits have been materially increased since their last very creditable statement.

A dainty, pink-bordered card announces the arrival of Arthur Clyde Wilhelm, Jr., on October 10th, 1921, at the home of Mr. and Mrs. A. C. Wilhelm at Galveston, Texas. All the many Brady friends of the family know that Mr. and Mrs. Wilhelm are proud of their son and heir, and rejoice with them in their good fortune. Mrs. Wilhelm was formerly Miss Ruhama Snider of this city.

Mr. and Mrs. H. R. Hodges will leave next Tuesday night for Fort Worth, where they will attend the annual meeting of the State Tax Assessors' association, in convention there at the new Texas hotel on Wednesday, Thursday and Friday. Mr. Hodges has been given a place on the program, being the only one from this section of Texas to be so favored. Incident to their trip to Fort Worth, Mr. and Mrs. Hodges will visit the State Fair at Dallas.

The DeKreko Bros. carnival, which was scheduled to come to Brady the latter part of this month, under the auspices of the Brady band, has sent notice here advising that they have cancelled their contract. This action followed the recent passage of a city ordinance which materially increases the occupation taxes on concessions, such as are carried by street carnivals. In his letter, Mr. DeKreko stated that it was their policy not to show in towns where opposition to their coming was manifested.

Mr. and Mrs. A. M. Finlay and children were in Brady Wednesday returning to their home at Fife from Mason, where they had been spending several days with Mrs. Finlay's parents, Major D. Doole and wife. They report a most enjoyable trip, but state that all the pleasure was very nearly jolted out of them coming over the rough stretch of the Brady-Mason road. Allie says if there is anyone who is not a good-roads booster, one trip over the Brady-Mason road, especially after traveling the piked roads of Mason county, is sure to make a good-roads convert.

NEW HATS

The Pick of the Market

I have just returned from another trip to market, where I made some splendid purchases in hats. In fact, my newest hats represent the pick of the Dallas market, each hat having been selected by me.

Above all, these new hats were purchased at dandy prices, as you will agree when you see and price them. None can surpass these hats for-- Impertinent.

There was an amusing ending of a civil case tried in a Wyoming court. It was an appeal case and on one side was a testy lawyer and on the other a number of inexperienced attorneys. The arguments on both sides had been heard and the case closed for judgment.

Suddenly one of the inexperienced lawyers got up and addressed the court once more. The testy lawyer stood it for a moment, but losing patience, he also rose and addressed the court in this wise:

"Your honor, I would beg with all respect to point out to the court that my learned friend opposite is entirely out of order in addressing the court, and if I may be permitted to say so, the court has no right to be listening to him."

"The court, who at that time was writing, put his head out in a belligerent way and said: "Mr. Smith, it is a great piece of impertinence on your part to assume that the court is listening to him."

JEWS ARE BUILDERS.

In the face of Henry Ford's recent propaganda against the Jews, and as well the exclusion of the Jews from membership in the Ku Klux Klan, the Fort Worth Record publishes the following interesting editorial in which the accomplishments of the Jews from earliest history on down are set forth. The following is the Record editorial:

"Of all the nations that peopled the world in that period of time referred to by the civilization of today as the 'dim and distant ages' there is only one that was able to write its history so that it should endure, there was but one whose history has been published as a light for the world. The Jewish nation may not have been so large as many others in prehistoric times—probably it was one of the smallest—but the Jewish people appear to have possessed traits and talents that produced leaders in whatever circumstances or condition they may have been thrown, and of all nations in the world in all ages, including the present, the Jews are the only people that have been able to merge their lives into the government and economic life of every Caucasian nation in the world and yet preserve their racial characteristics and their religion. "The history of the Jews has been made a part of the Holy Bible, which is the foundation of the Christian religion of today. Christ came into the world as a Jew and as a fulfillment of Jewish prophecy, was received and worshiped by the Jews during His sojourn among them on earth, and charged certain Jews in His parting injunctions to carry His gospel to all the nations of the earth. While Christ came as God's messenger to all mankind and as intermediary between God and man, it is not of record that He was received and honored by the Gentiles or that He dwelt among them. He was a Jew, and, for that that is known to the contrary, He lived among and taught the Jews and charged them only with the responsibility of carrying on the work He had begun.

"The early missionaries and messengers of the Christian religion appear to have been Jews. History says that the Jews crucified Christ, but there has always been a rabble in every nation and its acts seldom, if ever, are approved or accepted as acts of the nation to which they belong. The history of the Jews places on the Jews most of the blame for the crucifixion of Christ and does not mention the part that may have been taken by the Gentiles. It is not unlikely there were Gentiles in the mob that crucified Christ, but the Jewish historian was charitable to the Gentile and put all blame upon the shoulders of his own people.

"So far as is known today the Jewish nation was never strong numerically or politically, and even before Christ came had lost control of the land into which they were led by Moses. It is probable they had begun to scatter over the world before that day and afterward they kept on scattering, some of them carrying the message of Christ, but all of them continuing to practice the religion that for centuries had been a part of their lives. They are a law-abiding people; they practice their religion; they are prudent and thrifty and therefore become financial leaders; they are charitable and generous without being foolishly keen for praise to follow every worthy act, so many of their charities are unheralded to the world and their generosity known only to those few that know them best. A little nation whose history is the only one that has survived the ages and whose people have preserved their racial identity even though merged into and frequently directing the policies of other nations must indeed have been selected by God for some great purpose, else all trace of it would long since have disappeared. "And yet Charles M. Wood of Brooklyn, editor of the 'Patriotic American Patriot,' wants the Jew excluded from the United States along with all others who do not believe in the Lord Jesus Christ. He says 'we want a religion that is 100 per cent against the ones who crucified and murdered our Savior. Who were 'the ones of whom he speaks? The disciples and apostles were Jews; would he have all descendants of those near to Christ banned by the law. The ancestors of some of the most honored men and women in the world today may have been in that mob.

"Of course, such outbursts are recognized as the rantings of bigotry and little heed is given to them. But the Waco News-Tribune says very sagely:

"We'll pass him up because he can't get anywhere with his 'twentieth amendment.' (He urges an amendment directed against the Jews and repealing religious liberty). It was conceived in brain cells so small that it could not live thirty seconds in the sunshine of real religion and humanity. But while on the subject we want to declare that it is unfortunate that certain of the more widely circulated periodicals are helping to create an unwarranted prejudice against the Jews, who are among the patriotic citizens of America.

"No man or set of men can set themselves in opposition to any other man or set of men and justify themselves by announced preference for one belief as against another. Religion is worship and the worship of one denomination is merely that form preferred by a certain number. Religious liberty was one of the foundation stones of the American nation and it will continue to be. It is bad enough to have fanatics set themselves up in hypocritical mould and circulate propaganda against religious denominations with which they do not agree, but it is almost going beyond the bounds of religious liberty to incite prejudice against them by unfair means and unwarranted accusations.

"The Jew needs no defense, for in every nation to which he has been allied he has proved loyal, helpful and true. He is a staunch friend, a kind neighbor and a progressive citizen. America wants law-abiding citizens and he who would try to stir up strife between citizens is not law-abiding in his heart. The teachings and practice of the Jewish people are the foundation of all Christian religion today. They have stood the test of the ages, have enabled the world to make steady progress upward and will continue to lead. Those who seek to arouse prejudice against the Jewish people are only beating their heads against a stone wall."

Every local, home-loving, law-abiding citizen should be strongly in favor of better school facilities, because education makes for a higher type of citizenship. Statistics show that a great majority of the criminals of the world are of the uneducated class. Look it up and see for yourself, and then draw your own conclusions.—Hamilton Herald-Record.

A young lady of Fort Worth is asking the court to annul her marriage to a young man on the grounds that she believed it to be a mock wedding, which she participated in at a party, and later found to be legal. This is something a little strange, but on the other hand we see many weddings these days, which both parties do their best to make legal but after a few months turn out to be mock.—Hamilton Herald-Record.

CHAPTER I.—Young Carlisle Wilburton Dale, or "Bill Dale," as he likes to be known, son of a wealthy coal operator, John K. Dale, arrives at the Halfway Switch, in eastern Tennessee, abandoning a life of idle ease and incidentally a bride, Patricia Clavering, at the altar-determined to make his own way in life. He meets "Babe" Littleford, typical mountaineer girl. "By Heck, a character of the hills, taken him to John Moreland's home. Moreland is chief of his 'clan,' which has an old feud with the Littlefords. He tells Dale of the killing of his brother, David Moreland, years ago, owner of rich coal deposits, by a man named Carlisle. Moreland's description of 'Carlisle' causes Dale to believe the man was his father.

CHAPTER II.—Dale arranges to make his home with the Moreland family, for whom he entertains a deep respect.

CHAPTER III.—Talking with "Babe" Littleford next day, Dale is ordered by "Black Adam" Ball, bully of the district, to leave "his girl." Dale replies spiritedly, and they fight. Dale whips the bully, though badly used up. He arranges with John Moreland to develop David's coal deposits. Ben Littleford sends a challenge to John Moreland to meet him with his followers next day, in battle. Moreland agrees.

CHAPTER IV.—During the night all the guns belonging to the Littlefords and the Morelands mysteriously disappear.

CHAPTER V.—Dale arranges to go to Cincinnati to secure money for the mining of the coal. The two clans find their weapons, which the women had hidden, and line up for battle. "Babe," in an effort to stop the fighting, crosses to the Moreland side of the river, and is accidentally shot by her father and seriously wounded.

CHAPTER VI.—To get proper surgical aid, John Moreland, Ben Littleford and Dale convey "Babe," unconscious, to the city. Doctors assure them she is not seriously hurt. Dale meets an old friend, Hobby McLaurin, who had married Patricia Clavering, and his father, David Moreland's coal, the old gentleman's actions convince his son of his father's guilt in the killing of Moreland.

CHAPTER VII.—It is arranged that "Babe" is to stay with Mrs. McLaurin to be educated. Dale, refusing his father's proffered financial aid to develop the mine, interests Newton Wheatley, capitalist, who agrees to furnish the money. Dale realizes he loves "Babe."

CHAPTER VIII.—Returning to the Halfway Switch, Dale meets Major Bradley, lawyer, and real friend of the mountaineers, whom he engages as counsel for the company. A man named Goff, of evil repute, tries to bribe Dale to betray the Morelands by selling him the coal deposits, and telling them they are of little value. Dale attempts to thrash him, but Goff draws a revolver. Dale is unarmed.

CHAPTER IX.—Goff enlists the aid of a turbulent crowd, the Balls and Torreys, to make trouble for Dale's company. The Littlefords and Morelands agree to forget the old feud and dwell in harmony.

CHAPTER X.—"Babe" returns to her home, fearing she is a burden to the McLaurins. Dale remonstrates, the Balls and Torreys agree to go back, for the sake of an education. Backed by "Black Adam" Ball, Dale fights a pistol duel with the desperado, and Ball is killed. Dale is arrested and taken to jail at Cartersville. He doesn't see how his shot could have killed Ball.

CHAPTER XI.—There is much speculation as to who really killed Ball, the general opinion being it was By Heck, who had constituted himself Dale's guard.

CHAPTER XII.—On the pretext of investigating another coal deposit, Dale is deceiving a gathering of the Balls and Torreys. They "try" him for the murder of Adam Ball, find him guilty, and sentence him to be hanged next day. He is rescued by By Heck. Goff is forced to leave the neighborhood.

CHAPTER XIII.—"Babe" writes Dale that she is living with his parents and that her education is progressing. Jimmy Fayne, rich and dissolute, asks Dale to marry him, but she tells him she loves Dale.

CHAPTER XIV.—Dale writes Dale that she is living with his parents and that her education is progressing. Jimmy Fayne, rich and dissolute, asks Dale to marry him, but she tells him she loves Dale.

CHAPTER XV.

Tried.

Two days before Bill Dale was tried in court at Cartersville, the new Elizabeth Littleford alighted from an afternoon train at the Halfway Switch. She was dressed in a smart and neatly-fitting suit of dark blue, with lace white at her throat and at her wrists; she wore a hat of dark blue relieved by a touch of white. In one of her strong and well-shod, glove hands she carried a traveling bag of black leather.

A big and sunburned young man in boots and corduroys, descended to her. He raised his hand in a friendly salute, and smiled, but she recognized her name as though he was very glad to see her.

"Bill Dale?" she asked loudly above the roar of the passing train. "Bill Dale, it's you!"

"Sure, it's me!" laughed Dale. "How good you look! I can hardly believe it's you."

"But it is," she smiled. "Tell me: what do you think the outcome of your trial is going to be?"

Dale noted that her English had improved, and it was gratifying to him. As for the trial—

"I don't know," he said. "But Major Bradley thinks I'll come clear. He believes that somebody that was hidden on the mountainside above us shot Ball to save me. By Heck hinted that he knew that this was the case; and he intimated that I would stand a better chance of acquittal than anybody else would stand, and that if I received a sentence the right man would come forward with a confession. I have an idea that By Heck has killed Adam Ball—that is, if I do."

"And Cale Moreland—wasn't it fine for him to do what he done for you, Bill Dale? How are you gettin' along with the mine?"

"First rate," Dale answered, brightening at once. "We're shipping now. And we're getting a smashing price for every ounce of it."

"I see," said the young woman. He went on:

"All of the boys and girls of the Morelands, except the very little one, are in school at Cartersville, and they're learning fast. When our borrowed capital is paid back, the Moreland families are going to buy farms lying near Cartersville and go to them. A big lowland farm close to good schools and a good little town—well, there are worse places on earth. Fity poor David Moreland can't think about it."

"I'd say!"

She hung her head. She was thinking, as she had so often thought before, of her own benighted people.

"And the Littlefords?" she murmured. It had slipped past her lips. Dale and the Morelands owed the Littlefords nothing.

Dale understood, and he gave her a sympathetic glance.

"A few of the boys and girls of the Littlefords are going to school in Cartersville, perhaps one from each family," he told her. "It is rather expensive, you know, on account of the boarding, and they can't afford to send all their children. However, I think—differently—your people will have their chance for education, too."

"But it won't do much good to educate one out of each family," said Elizabeth. "They'd come straight back here when they got through with their schooling, and soon fight—I mean forget—it all. If they make their learning pay 'em anything, they'll have to stay where they can use it."

She began to stare absently toward her well-shod feet.

"Are you ready to go?" Dale asked.

Elizabeth Littleford raised her head with a slight jerk and said rather awkwardly:

"Has the valley changed much?"

"Not very much," answered Dale. "There's a new log church, where an old minister named Ashby Cross preaches the gospel of straight walking and human kindness every Sunday. Henderson Goff sent here every more, but he sent me his address in case we wanted to sell the mine! The Torreys have gone back to Jerusalem cove and Hatten's hell, and the Balls are as quiet as mice. These, I believe, are all the changes worth mentioning."

Together they set out and walked, without saying much, to the crest of David Moreland's mountain, and there they halted. The autumn sun, a great red ball of fire, was just setting beyond the majestic Big Pine.

Dale pointed to a long, moss-covered slab of brown sandstone.

"Let's sit down there and rest," he suggested. "You're tired, Babe, I know. Don't mind my calling you 'Babe,' do you?"

She looked at him as though she were surprised at his asking that. They sat down.

Bill Dale suddenly leaned toward her and took one of her hands; and he didn't take it as Jimmy Fayne had done—as though he were afraid of it.

"You know I love you, don't you, Babe?"

"I've been believin' it," she told him after a moment of painful silence. She was a trifle pale now. "But it—Bill Dale, it somehow don't seem just right for you to love me. Because I'm such a pore little nobody. I'm as ignorant as sin; and I ain't—haven't even got good manners. But—but if you love, if you're sure you do, tell me why!"

There came another minute of painful silence.

"Because," said Dale, speaking slowly, "you have always seemed to be one of my own kind. You seem real, to me. I was so sick of artificialities in women that I loved you the moment I saw you. I know you are primitive, but I am primitive, too. And you weren't calling yourself 'Ma-a-am-mah' to a d-d puddle."

"Major Bradley," he went on, "facts sure that I will be acquitted. If it turns out like that, I want you to marry me at once. Tell me—will you, Babe?"

How boyishly impatient he was. Was he afraid he would lose her by waiting?

"You love me, don't you, Babe?" he pursued.

She faced him with the sudden, queer light of a tragedy in her eyes. But she didn't speak. He pressed her hand until it hurt and demanded:

"You do, don't you, Babe?"

"Yes," she told him, in a voice that he barely heard.

"Then why won't you marry me?" She didn't answer. She wouldn't answer.

The day of the trial dawned clear, with the map of autumn in the air. The courtroom was filled to its capacity within fifteen minutes after the doors were thrown open. Every man who had a rifle was forced to leave it behind with the sheriff's deputies; a company of the state's militia was there, and each member of it had a hundred rounds of ball cartridges in his belt—the authorities were taking no chances.

Amid a breathless hush, the wheels of the law began to move. Caleb Moreland quickly told what he had to say, and backed it up with proof; he brought out a perfect alibi. The judge and the jury frowned and smiled in the same instant. Dale went forward and took his place. He pleaded "Not Guilty." A little later the state introduced its evidence and rested.

The counsel for the defense, patrician and soldier-like, immaculate from his toes to the crown of his head, went eagerly to his feet. He had fully prepared himself, and he delivered his argument with an eloquent and forceful swing. It was plain that the jury was favorably impressed by the words of this man who never accepted a case unless he was absolutely sure that his client was in the right.

Major Bradley hinged his argument on the mysterious third shot. If Dale had killed Adam Ball, would Adam Ball have been shot squarely at least nearly squarely from the side? As it was, the Goliath had been shot straight through the temples. That third shot had been fired by some hidden friend of Dale's, the major declared, and it had been done for the purpose of saving Dale's life. Ball had been in the act of playing a cowardly trick; he had killed a man in North Carolina by just such a trick—and he had boasted of it.

The attorney for the state made a rejoinder that almost favored the defendant. Then the court charged the jury, and the twelve good men retired.

The jury was out not more than twenty minutes, but to Elizabeth Littleford it was an age of torture.

The twelve men filed slowly in and faced the judge, who turned austere eyes upon them and asked:

"Gentlemen of the jury, have you reached a verdict?"

They had. Elizabeth Littleford's head swam as she bent forward to catch the foreman's words—

"Not guilty!"

A wild shout rose from the leathery throat of the happy By Heck. The Morelands and the Littlefords cheered until they were hoarse. Sheriff Tom Flowers had difficulty in quieting the tumult. Bill Dale shook hands until his shoulders ached. The Balls and their relatives, bitter with resentment and hatred, stole out, were given their rifles, and went toward the big hills with the eye of the militia hard upon them.

Then the Morelands and the Littlefords and the Hecks, with Dale and his mining man Hayes, came out, and they, too, started for the big hills.

Dale had hired a horse and a side saddle for Ben Littleford's daughter, and the two rode in each other's company on the journey home. When they were well into the mountains, Dale drew his horse over close to that of his companion.

"As soon as I can build and furnish a house," he began, when Elizabeth interrupted:

"We're ridin' too fast. We're too much ahead of the others. One o' them Balls might try to pick you off with his rifle gun."

"Not much danger of that," Dale replied. "The Balls have already been warned about sniping; your father told them that their very name would be scoured off the earth if there was any sniping. Besides, By Heck is acting as advance guard somewhere ahead of us."

He continued, "As soon as I can build and furnish a little house out near the mine, I want you to marry me, Babe. Will you?"

Elizabeth Littleford seemed not to have heard.

"Will you, Babe?"

She faced him sadly. He saw in her hazel eyes the same queer light of tragedy that he had seen there a day or two before; and now, as then, he wondered what it could mean.

"Tell me, Babe?"

Her head fell forward. The sunlight found glints of gold in her thick chestnut-brown hair. She was silent for a moment; then her voice came dully:

"I'd better not marry you, Bill Dale."

Dale sat up straight and rigid in his saddle and stared hard at her solemnly beautiful profile. He could hardly believe that he had heard correctly. He knew she loved him. She had told him that she loved him. Then why wouldn't she marry him? He tried to reason it out, and the attempt made his brain ache; he was unable to reason. He knew only that she was all of the future to him, all of the world to him, and—that she had refused to marry him.

When they were within two miles of home, Dale went suddenly white and caught her almost rudely by a wrist.

"Is it Jimmy Fayne?" he demanded hoily.

She gave him a reproachful glance and said nothing. He flung her hand from him angrily.

Dale did not speak again until they had entered the broad valley that was home to him. Somehow he felt limp now. The great wave of anger had passed.

"I guess you are too good for me," he said. There was weakness in his voice, and it was the first weakness he had ever known in him.

"Will you always think of me as the finest and most beautiful woman in the world?" she asked.

"Will You Always Think of Me as the Finest and Most Beautiful Woman in the World?" She Asked.

Growing Old.
A little more tired at close of day;
A little less anxious to have our way;
A little less ready to scold and blame;
A little more care for a brother's name;
And so we are nearing the journey's end,
Where time and eternity meet and blend.

A little less care for bonds and gold;
A little more zest in the days of old;
A broader view and a saner mind,
And a little more love for all mankind;
A little more careful of what we say;
And so we are faring a-down the way.

A little more love for the friends of youth;
A little less zeal for established truth;
A little more charity in our views;
A little less thirst for the daily news;
And so we are folding our tents away
And passing in silence at close of day.

A little more leisure to sit and dream;
A little more real the things unseen;
A little bit nearer to those long loved and dead;
And so we are going where all must go,
To the place the living may never know.

A little more laughter, a little more tears,
And we shall have told our increasing years.
Thrice happy, then, if some soul can say,
"I live because he has passed my way."
—Rollin J. Wells.

LIFE'S WISDOM.

The wisdom of the wise and the experience of ages may be preserved by quotation. —Benjamin Disraeli.

Wisdom is gray hairs unto men, and an unspotted life is ripe old age. —Jesus the Son of Sirach.

Youth is to all the glad season of life; but often only by what it hopes, not by what it attains or what it escapes. —Carlyle.

It is with youth as with plants; from the first fruits they bear we learn what may be expected in future. —Demophilus.

"Well, he can afford it," replied the old milyuns. "He's got a rich father. I haven't." —American Legion Weekly.

Bright Boy.

Willie Hopkins is only ten years old, but strange to tell he brushes his own hair and washes his ears without parental coercion. It must be admitted that Willie just started this most uncommon practice within the last few days. The young man's mother was dumfounded when she walked into his room and found him plastering down his hair with a brush. "You are a very good boy," she said. "How did you come to think of brushing your hair and washing your face?" Willie looked sheepish and then replied: "Mary Brown told me I was—was good looking."

BRADY PUBLIC LIBRARY NOW IN NEW QUARTERS IN COURT HOUSE ALCOVE

The Brady Public Library has been moved from its temporary quarters at the Trigg Drug Co. store to the alcove on the south side of the main floor of the court house, the use of which has very kindly been allowed the library committee by the commissioners court. I used different remedies for this trouble but can honestly say that Doan's Kidney Pills gave me far better results than any other." (Statement given April 29, 1915.)

On May 15, 1919 Mrs. Coopender said: "Doan's Kidney Pills gave me a cure that has been lasting and I am now enjoying the best of health. My opinion of this medicine is the same as it ever was." VETERANS WITH DISABILITY CLAIMS SHOULD FILE SAME WITHOUT ANY DELAY

County Judge Evans Adkins is in receipt of a communication from U. S. Veterans' Bureau, stating that a Clean-Up squad will be stationed in a group of tents near the entrance to the Dallas State Fair, and that this squad will be glad to take up the claim of every man who has a disability arising from his army service and who has not filed a claim for compensation, provided he brings all his army papers with him.
