M'CUCCLOCH CO. TARIFF CLUB ORGANIZED TUESDAY

A McCulloch County Tariff club, with strong representation in every voting precinct in the county, was organized in Brady Tuesday with G. R. White as chairman and Paul Klatt as secretary. Vice-chairmen are W. D. Crothers and H. P. Jordan. The directors of the tariff club are: Messrs. F. M. Richards, W. E. Campbell, James Brook, P. C. Dutton, E. E. Willoughby and E. L. Ogden of Brady and Dick Sellman, Rochelle; P. W. Appleton, Camp San Saba; D. C. Randall, Waldrip, W. F. Roberts, Jr., Loh; E. A. Baze, Melvin; T. J. Beasley, Mercury.

The organization is a branch of the Southern Tariff association of Fort Worth of which John Henry Kirby of Houston is president.

A campaign among all voters of the county, pledging them to vote for candidates for Congress and the United States Senate who favor a protective tariff on all farm and ranch products, will soon be started.

Vance Muse, organization director of the Southern Tariff association, assisted in the formation of the local club and spent Tuesday in Brady interviewing leading cattlemen and bankers. He left Tuesday for San Angelo to organize Tom Green county. Mr. Muse stated before leaving that local tariff clubs will be formed in every county in this congressional district before the first of the new year.

VERDICT REACHED IN CASE OF BROOKE SMITH VS. WM. GRAHAM FAVORS DEFENDANT

A case of considerable interest was tried in district court at Brownwood last week in which suit was brought by Brooke Smith against Wm. Graham claiming over ten thousand dollars due as rent on the hotel operated by Mr. Graham, and owned by Mr. Smith. Mr. Graham claimed credits for improvements, etc., more than off-setting the claim advanced by Mr. Smith. The Brownwood News last Friday briefly stated that a verdict favoring Mr. Graham was reached by the jury. The News' report was as follows:

A verdict was reached Wednesday in the case of Brooke Smith against Wm. Graham, on trial in the district court.

The verdict, it seems, is in favor of the defendant, Wm. Graham, and, it is understood, awards a cash settlement amounting to about $14,000 in his favor.

The suit grew out of transactions between the plaintiff and defendant concerning the additional story added to the hotel about eighteen months ago.

It is understood the case will be appealed to a higher court.

Mr. Smith was represented by Wilkinson & McLaugh, and Mr. Graham by Walter Woodward of Coleman and Mark McGee of Brownwood.

BRADY BUSINESS REALTY SHOWS GREATERST ACTIVITY PAST WEEK

FOUR BIG DEALS CLOSED—H. C. SAMUEL BUYS ON THE WEST SIDE, H. W. ZWEIG ON SOUTH SIDE AND R. WILENSKY BUYS ON THE EAST SIDE.

Brady business realty has proven the most active article on the local market, as witness the closing of four big business deals the past week. H. C. Samuel has purchased the two store buildings on the West side occupied by A. R. Hooper and the R. Wilensky store; H. W. Zweig has purchased the J. C. Wall lot on the southwest corner of the square, at present occupied by the Brady Army Goods store, and has also closed a deal for the S. W. Hughes property on the south side including the Brady Water & Light Co. office and J. B. Baker's tailor shop, and R. Wilensky has closed a deal with G. V. Gansel for the vacant lot on the east side adjoining the new Gibbons building, and also the property at present occupied by the Knox confectionery. Mr. Zweig and Mr. Wilensky plan the erection of modern brick and plate glass buildings on their newly acquired property, the construction work to begin immediately after the first of the year.

The four deals, following closely on the heels of the purchase of the F. W. Henderson and also the E. B. Ramsay and the A. T. Jordan property, proves conclusively that Brady's progress is not confined to any one side or section of town, but that the growth of Brady cityward is natural and well distributed over all sections of the city.

Mr. Samuel's purchase included the Wilensky building with a 40-ft. frontage and the Hooper building with a 30 ft. frontage, both buildings having a depth of 90 ft. The purchase was made from a company composed of Drs. J. G. McCall and J. S. Anderson, and Messrs. G. R. White, W. D. Crothers, Joe McCall of Brady and A. G. Morrison of El Reno, Okla. The purchase price was $15,000. The buildings are of most substantial brick and plate glass construction, ft. and will have a most attractive front; in fact, it is Mr. Zweig's plan to make this one of the most attractive buildings in the city. Mr. Zweig's purchase from Mr. Hughes includes the Water & Light office and the Baker tailor shop, the former an iron clad building and the latter a wooden structure, each with a twenty-foot frontage, the purchase price being $5,500. These buildings are to be replaced with a most attractive store building, especially designed for Mr. Zweig's dry goods business. The new structure will be built with a view to placing a deck in the rear, thereby giving all the needed floor space for the immense stocks carried by Mr. Zweig.

The purchase of the east side property by Mr. Wilensky was made from Mrs. R. W. Turner through G. V. Gansel, who has had charge of the same. The price paid for the property was $9,000. The purchase includes the present vacant lot adjoining the Gibbons building, the lot having a frontage of 20 ft., and also the wooden structure housing the Knox confectionery, also of 20-ft. frontage. Mr. Wilensky is already at work on plans for a most ornamental and attractive building, providing for two store rooms, one of which will be occupied by Mr. Knox. Mr. Wilensky has had innumerable application for the other store building already, but has not so far leased the same. Mr. Wilensky has selected a most attractive glazed brick for the front of his building, assuring one of the most attractive structures in the city. He plans to start work on construction the first week in January.

FIRE BOYS WILL INSTALL RADIO RECEIVING SET

The members of the Brady Volunteer Fire department are up-to-the-minute, if they are anything, as witness the fact that the fire boys are now arranging to install one of the most complete radio receiving sets in this section. The boys are now inquiring into the merits of the various standard makes, and as soon as they find the one best-suited to their needs they expect to place their order. The radio outfit will be installed at the firemen's hall, over the fire station, and by means of a loud speaker, the boys contemplate the enjoying of nightly programs from broadcasting stations located all over the U. S.

The radio is the coming big entertainment of the nation, and the wonderful programs now being broadcasted, enable the radio fans to enjoy the best the nation offers in the way of instructive amusement.

HONEST INJURY

The recent numerous realty deals spell F-A-I-T-H in Brady and her future greatness.

BACKING HOME ORGANIZATIONS

One of the greatest services Brady and McCulloch county citizens can perform is the liberal support and backing of home organization. In so doing, every citizen will be but serving his own best interests. Take, for instance, the Brady Building & Loan association. There is a crying need right here in Brady for homes. New-comers search the town over for a suitable residence, without avail. They start out with a definite idea as to what they want, in the way of a neat and modern home. Before they have gone very far, they revise their ideas with each added weary step, until by nightfall, anything, even a mere room of four bare walls would appear grateful. Such is the housing shortage here in Brady.

There are innumerable others who are planning and longing for the day, when they can build a home to call their own. The only handicap is the lack of finances. This matter could easily and effectively be remedied if present subscriptions to the Brady Building & Loan association were doubled, trebled, quadrupled or increased manifold. Instead of enabling the building of one home every sixty days, the association then would be able to build a home every thirty days, or every fifteen days, or even oftener.

The association offers an attractive investment to every subscriber. It should appeal particularly to every young man, or woman, or couple, who expect some day to have a home of their own. It should appeal to the older citizens who desire to improve their home, or who wish to see town and country built up, and modern and attractive homes replace the older habitations.

Let every citizen get behind the association, and all home institutions as well. It is like casting bread on the water, and which will return in the future buttered on both sides.

The Breckenridge Chamber of Commerce, in a telegram to one of the state dailies "resents" the publicity which has been given to the anarchistic incidents of last week in the oil field town. Resenting publicity following lawlessness is unprofitable. The better plan is to do away with masked organizations which create conditions so embarrassing to good citizens that publicity can hurt the town. Publicity has never yet damaged any good thing.—Brownwood Bulletin.

The versatile editor of the Brownwood Bulletin, self-confessed authority on bobbed hair, Correct English and its uses, etc., etc., now disclaims all responsibility for the burlesque edition of that paper, which was circulated at the recent banquet of the Brownwood Chamber of Commerce. Which would make it appear that the aforesaid burlesque special was a sort of a "pillow case and bed sheet" affair, with the editor of the same sort of de facto Imperial Wizard. No wonder the editor of the Bulletin declines to have his name used in connection.

CLEMENCEAU'S MESSAGE.

France is losing friends in this country, and it is an anomaly that the man who would serve her best must be held accountable.

Georges Clemenceau had a splendid opportunity to rebuild a friendship that had become strained, to correct misunderstandings, to accommodate difference of opinion.

He has virtually thrown it away. Instead of coming to us with views and ideals which we could reconcile with our dec'ed war aims, he brought us a message of vengeance, of renewed hate, of narrow aspirations, of sordid details.

"France," he says, in so many words, "must be guaranteed everything she demands, or all is lost." According to his interpretation, the destiny of the world is bound up in the treaty of Versailles, but especially as it provides for France's recompense and Germany's humiliation. It seems never to have occurred to him that the American people entered the war for a definite purpose, and that, to get their ear, one ought, at least, to recognize their purpose.

"The United States," he says, in so many words, "has fallen down because of failure to back France in every detail."

Apparently, our aims and objects find no favor in his eyes.

Apparently, what we think about the matter is of little importance.

The common policy that he would establish is the policy of France.

The thing to be guaranteed is not the thing we are interested in. If President Wilson were to go to France and say to the French people, "The time has come to work together for humanity's salvation, but the only way of doing so is to throw away all your hopes of reparation and accept American ideals," he would be occupying a position similar to that of Clemenceau.

He would probably strike an analogous note of discord.

If France has definite aims, so have we, and we cherish them quite as tenaciously.

If France visualizes Europe's rehabilitation through a renewed application of force, we visualize it thru a better understanding, through a general let-up on chauvinism.

M. Clemenceau should have given more account to this factor, should have admitted, in his own mind, that our views were worth recognizing, especially as the basis of an appeal for closer co-operation.

He is an old man, a grand old man, and we respect his years.

He has been a fiery, double-fisted fighter for France, and we admire him for it.

More than any other single man, he kept up the public morale among the allies when it was most seriously threatened, and we honor him for it.

His mission was undoubtedly conceived in earnestness and enthusiasm, but it is failing.

The reason why it is failing can best be understood by the fact that he will take no advice from American friends.

Colonel House and others have suggested that he would do well to voice sentiments more in accord with our own, but to no purpose.

He will have his way. He will express his own viewpoint. He will give no consideration to what America thinks, or hopes for.

That is sincere, no doubt, and bespeaks personal courage, but it hardly represents the most effective way to obtain co-operation.

We are only human when we dislike to be ignored.—Houston Chronicle.

SYNOPSIS

CHAPTER I.—The time is the late '70s or early '80s and the scene is steamboat on the Mississippi river. All the types of the period are present and the floating palace is distinguished by merriment, dancing and gallantry. There are the customary drinking and gambling also. Virgil Drace, a young northern man, is on his way south on a mission of revenge. He meets an eccentric character in the person of one Liberty Shottle, who is constantly tempting the goddess of chance. They form a singular compact.

CHAPTER II.—Drace gets his mind off his mission by entering into deck sports in which he exhibits an unusual athletic prowess. Liberty Shottle is again unlucky at cards and attempts a financial negotiation with Drace. The latter, seeing an opportunity to use Shottle, confides to him that his mission is to find a certain ex-fugitive, Stepho la Vitte, who had murdered Drace's father. It is his determination to announce to his new chum, to hang La Vitte as high as Haman. Drace has become enamored of a mysterious beauty aboard the boat.

CHAPTER III.—The steamer reaches New Orleans, at that time in the somewhat turbulent throes of carpetbag government. Shottle becomes possessor of two tickets for the French ball, a great society event, and proposes that Drace accompany him to the affair. The young man attends and Drace unexpectedly meets the girl who had fired his heart aboard the steamer. She is accompanied by one Boyce, whose proprietary interest indicates that he is her fiance. Through stratagem Shottle learns that the name of the girl is Nadine la Vitte and that her companion of the evening is the man who is seeking to marry her.

CHAPTER IV.—Drace passes an uneasy night torn by the suspicion that Nadine is the daughter of old Stepho la Vitte, now an admitted outlaw. Now, more than ever, is he resolved to find where the girl lives and to find Stepho. Drace and Shottle begin a search of the city. In one of their nocturnal pilgrimages they come upon a mob intent upon hanging a poor wretch from the limb of a tree. It is a typical carpetbag execution and aroused the resentment of an opposing mob of citizens. Drace takes a hand in the fight which starts and is instrumental in preventing the execution. From a window opposite the scene, he catches a glimpse of one he is sure is Nadine.

"Thank the Lord!" cried Drace, and sprang out of bed.

"That's what I say, friend Virgil. But you will please address me as Colonel Shottle. I am a free man. Here!"

He held forth an envelope; opening it, Drace took out a hundred-dollar banknote.

"What does this mean, Lib?"

"I am Colonel Shottle, sir, and not Lib."

"I beg your pardon, Colonel; but what does this mean?"

Shottle sat down and crossed his long legs. He took out a cigar and lighted it.

"Virgil, I fought as long as I thought it was of advantage. The old carbine I had wouldn't shoot, and I want to tell you that mauling darky heads with a piece of iron is hard work. I looked about for you but couldn't find you, and knowing that you knew how to take care of yourself, I began to sniff for a way to get out, found a hole in a wall, ducked through and scooted. That was all natural enough. Anybody could have done that. But now comes the inspirational part. I got around into Royal street and met a steamboat captain who asked me to have a drink, and I needed it, for I had been hard at work."

"So I went in with him. And then up I hops to a gambling house with the money you'd paid me for introducing you to Nadine la Vitte. The poker tables were full, so I nipped in modestly at the faro-bank. That's not a very swift game, but sometimes it is as sure as buying houses and lots, if you've got the patience. I invested cautiously till about daylight, cashed in exactly two hundred, and here I am as refreshed as a horse grazing on clover."

"Colonel, I congratulate you!" said Drace.

The two breakfasted together, and then Drace set out to find again the house at the scene of the riot—the house at the window of which he had seen the face of Nadine la Vitte. At length he found himself in the side street where he had taken refuge the night before, and turning out of this he came to the tree from the limb of which he had cut down the half-strangled victim of the mob. There opposite was the house and there was the window at which he had seen Nadine's face; but across the window, boards had been nailed! The other windows, too, and the doors, were nailed up; the place was deserted. Could that face at the window have been only a creature of his imagination?

An old negro in nondescript livery came down the walk from a house a few doors away. He might have been footman to a harlequin. But when Drace spoke to him, the dignified change in his countenance appeared to alter even the aspect of his attire; and now he might have been usher to a governor. This quick change had been brought about by his intuitive discovery that Drace was a man of consequence.

"Do you know anything about the people who lived across the street?" Drace asked.

"Wall, no sah; da wus po' folks, sah."

"Then you don't know where they went?"

"No sah. My 'poyment is ter look after folks ob er higher 'dition, sah. An den ter preach on Sunday."

"Oh, you are a preacher."

"Called, sah, wid er blast from de trumpet."

"Does your church ever need money?" In a moment he lost his dignity.

"Look yeah, boss, whut's er nigger church fur ef it ain't ter need money? Co'se it need money. But whut you gwine do erbout it?"

"Yassuh," he said, when Drace had warmed him with a greesback, "I reckon dey done moved away. There was er kind of rumpus last night. And I reckon they-all thought it wasn't no place for dan no mo'; dey lef' mighty sudden-like, uhly dis mawnin'."

And that was all Drace could learn; no one in the vicinity would admit that they knew them or their destination. Disliking to call too much attention to himself, Drace walked away heavy-hearted. For a long time he wandered the streets. He came to the levee, and the French market. He went into the old St. Louis cemetery, and looked upon the novel sight of bodies sepulchred in a wall with doors like a furnace. These compartments, he learned, were rented by the month to the poor; and a short tenantry it was for many a son and daughter of penury answering Eternity's call, for when the grim agent failed to collect the pittance promised by sorrow, the shrouded renter was evicted—an old Spanish custom, Drace was told.

Recalled by these grim surroundings to the purpose that had brought him to the South, Drace now determined to give himself wholly to his quest for Stepho la Vitte. He returned to the hotel, and Shottle nervous in a cloud of smoke. The floor was covered with burned matches and the stubs of cigars.

"Lib, I'm crushed," announced Drace.

"So am I. But how does it happen that the dust-cart drove over you too?"

"Nadine is gone. The place is nailed up."

"That's tough, all right. But what are you going to do about it? Are you going to come to your puritanic senses and give the whole thing up, or do you expect—"

"I expect to fulfill my sacred mission. I must find Stepho la Vitte."

Shottle got up and shook hands with his friend. He swore that he would make the search the aim of his life.

"Suppose you hire me by the day," he suggested. "A man does better work by the day. He always has fresh stimulus every time the sun rises."

"Very well—ten dollars a day."

"That's liberal, Virgil, and I'll take it. And let's get Old Josh to help us. He is more or less acquainted with Stepho's habits."

CHAPTER V

An hour later Drace and Shottle returned to their hotel after a ceremonious visit with Colonel Josh. The Colonel knew of Stepho, had lighted met him once, and he promised to make discreet inquiries that should without fail disclose the creature's whereabouts.

Hardly had Drace reached his room, however, before a visitor was shown in—a visitor who introduced himself as an agent of the New Orleans police department and who had a most distressing communication to make:

It was known that Mr. Drace and his friend had taken part in a recent riot. Mr. Drace was one of the leaders, had severely wounded more than one man, and without cause, being from the North, just arrived, and having no possible interest in the city. However, he was to be treated with more of lenity than would rhyme with his crime, for instead of punishment he was only to be banished, along with his friend. A steamboat, the Bumblebee, bound northward, would leave next morning. The chief of police would give if Mr. Drace and his friend failed to register among the passengers.

With scarcely twelve hours left in which to find Stepho la Vitte, Drace paced the streets in an agony of anxiety, making a hundred plans to find Stepho or to outwit the New Orleans officials and prolong his stay, but all in vain.

Colonel Josh did not appear, but he seemed to have embarked upon the quest, for when the distracted Drace called at his quarters about midnight the old fellow was still absent. Dawn brought Drace back again, for all his other endeavors had been unsuccessful, and but two hours remained before the Bumblebee's departure.

Bouted out of bed, the Colonel kept Drace waiting a full half hour before he put in an appearance. Then, however, he offered a faint ray of hope.

He had discovered that a certain Frenchman, a wine dealer, living at an address he produced scrawled on paper, was reported to be an intimate of Stepho. Possibly from him Mr. Drace might—

Drace hurriedly explained the decree which had banished him; then he "presented" the Colonel with a check on account, asked him to convey his respects to Miss Lucy and took his departure.

On his way to the Frenchman's he stopped at the hotel, where he found Shottle strapping up their baggage—and a police official paying an informal

LYCEUM NUMBER COMING WEDNESDAY NIGHT HERE

As previously announced, the third number of the Brady Lyceum course will be presented tomorrow (Wednesday) night at the Methodist tabernacle under auspices of the Parent-Teachers association. The program will begin promptly at 7:30 o'clock, and will present the "Golden Gate Four," heralded as one of the few really good singing quartets before the public.

To lovers of music such as is produced by a male quartet of rare merit and ability, this entertainment offers a wonderful opportunity. There is excellent blending quality in the voices, and there is musicianship in the singing, the combined effect being like that of a fine pipe organ. They sing many of the classic quartet numbers rarely attempted by other first class quartets, and put their work across with a zest and finish which is a pleasure to every listener.

Among the featured members is Robert E. Newell, a Canadian baritone with wide concert experience, and Don W. Smith, second tenor and pianist and entertainer. The "fiddle-oddy," a new instrument combining the tonal qualities of the violin and the cornet, and the Musical Saw, an ordinary hand saw which produces a beautiful tone, are introduced during the concert.

The lyceum course represents the highest-priced attraction ever brought to Brady, and the two numbers already presented have proven the most meritorious of any lyceum numbers shown on the local stage. The Parent-Teachers association has been working faithfully to cover the expenses of the course, and the success already met with has been gratifying, and it now appears certain that, with the four numbers yet remaining, the association stands to come out nicely on the course.

but suggestive call. An hour's grace remained. Drace paid his score at the desk, sent his baggage to the boat and then, summoning a cab, drove off with Shottle to the house of the Frenchman. It proved to be a mean abode, both wretched and dwelling. Drace knocked eagerly. A small man, his mustache dyed, came to the door, blinking.

"I beg your pardon, sir, but I am a friend of Mr. la Vitte, and—"

"Pardon, monsieur, but you do not look like him, ze friend."

"But I am. And I came with word that will be of advantage to him. The police are after him—"

"Aw, he know zat. Monsther would trouble himself for nothing. Good morning."

"Just a moment, please. You have no need to look on me with suspicion. I am his friend—and—"

"If you his friend," interrupted the man, "you know he gone—to Europe, on steamer to France."

Drace was about to abandon the man in despair when Shottle, who had been staring at a case of wine which stood by the door ticketed and sealed for shipment, suddenly interrupted.

"Ah," he cried, "can this be the "Zat is ze private stock," he snarled. "He is not for sale. I am not yet open for business, sirs. Good morning."

Shottle grasped Drace's arm and drew him away. A cart had halted outside, and as they entered their cab they saw the carter shouldering the case of wine and bearing toward his vehicle.

H. W. ZWEIF ANNOUNCES SECURING HUPMOBILE AGENCY WILL OPEN MODERN GARAGE

H. W. Zweif, well-known and popular Brady business man and citizen, announces the securing of the McCulloch county agency for the Hupmobile, one of the nation's leading and most popular automobiles. J. R. Overstreet, State distributor for the Hupmobile, was here recently from Fort Worth closing the contract with Mr. Zweif and arranging to get him started off in the business in a big way. Mr. Overstreet was enthusiastic in speaking of the prosperity of this section and the wonderful automobile field he found here, and predicted that within the year, the Hupmobile would take rank with the most popular cars throughout this section.

First shipments of Hupmobiles for the local agency arrived in Brady this afternoon. Pending securing permanent quarters, Mr. Zweif has arranged for storage and display room for the new cars with the Brady Auto Co., and announces that he will take pleasure in demonstrating them to everyone interested.

Mr. Zweif's plans are to arrange for permanent quarters at the earliest possible moment, and he expects to open up a first-class store, carrying a complete line of automobile supplies and accessories and giving Brady an establishment of which it may well be proud.

In taking up this new line of endeavor, he will continue his dry goods stores as before, his brother-in-law, Eddie Olian, being in charge of The Fair, while his nephew, Mr. Zidell, will have charge of The Hub. Mr. Zweif feels that after confining himself so closely to the dry goods business, the past decade or more, he will welcome a change in the line of business, the more so since his new undertaking will enable him to take more outdoor exercise. His success in the dry goods business has been notable, and his many friends are predicting for him success in no less degree in the automobile business.

Mr. and Mrs. Steve Ballou and little son arrived here Friday for a brief visit with the lady's mother, Mrs. E. R. Sayles, and also her sister, Mrs. Howard Broad, and brother, Edwin Sayles, and families. They returned to their home in Hamilton Sunday. Mr. Ballou reported not as much rain in Hamilton county as in McCulloch, although the rains there were very opportune.

Harry Miller is rejoicing over the arrival last Thursday of Mrs. Miller and two sons from San Marcos, where they have been staying with her parents, while Mr. Miller arranged for their coming here. The family are now comfortably domiciled on the Miller farm and ranch in the Dodge community. The family were accompanied to Brady by the Hon. W. G. Barber, chairman of the Legal Board of Examiners at San Marcos, and who spent several days here as their guest, returning to San Marcos Sunday.

LOCAL BRIEFS

Ira Mayhew returned last night from Comanche, where he had gone for the purpose of bidding on a pool of turkeys offered by Comanche county farmers. On account of Eastern markets being off, all bids were rejected by the pool, and the turkeys will be offered again at a later date.

G. Y. Lee said that the Highway meeting at Brady was a fine affair. The Brady people served an excellent dinner to their guests—about 150. Several talks were made by those present, and it seems that good work was done. A civil Engineer from San Angelo is here today looking over a proposed route for a State Highway—Eden Echo.

Mr. and Mrs. A. Benson were among the Melvin shoppers in Brady Saturday. The family returned about two weeks ago from a visit to Georgetown and Austin, making the trip in their handsome new Willys-Knight automobile. They report a most enjoyable time. Not as much rain had been had in that section as here at the time of their visit.

Mrs. J. A. Holton and baby returned Saturday from Fort Worth, where they spent about two weeks attending a reunion of the Whitehurst family, of which she is a member. Mrs. Holton had the pleasure of meeting one sister, Mrs. Todd of Illinois, whom she had not seen in five years, and another sister, Mrs. Jordan, of Birmingham, Ala., with whom she met for the first time in six years.

G. D. McMorris was in from Doole community the latter part of last week. Mr. McMorris was greatly interested in the accounts of the search made for the Sebe Goen grave in the Cow Gap community, especially as he formerly lived near the supposed burial place described in the newspaper account. He recalls a grave at the head of one of the draws, and believes he could relocate the spot.

Brady friends will be interested to learn of the arrival of a fine son, born to Mr. and Mrs. Clyde Pemberton in a sanitarium at Fort Worth on Monday, November 27th. Mrs. Pemberton is remembered here as Miss Jewell Galloway. Mrs. Oscar Galloway returned Sunday morning from Fort Worth, where she had been attending her daughter, and new grandson.

Mr. and Mrs. A. M. Finlay and family were in Brady Monday enroute from Fife to Mason, where Mrs. Finlay and children will remain as guests of her parents, D. Doole, Sr., and family, while Mr. Finlay enters school for a special course in mechanical engineering. Mr. Finlay recently sold his farm and all interests in the Fife community, and expects to engage in business somewhere in this section of Texas. The family has stored their household effects pending their relocating.

Jeff Meers was here from San Angelo last Saturday for a brief visit with relatives and friends, while on a business mission. Mr. Meers reported that his oil operations had progressed to a point where big things might be expected at any moment now, and that development on the greatest scale yet attempted was soon to be undertaken. Mr. Meers expects to have some important announcements to make within the next few days, concerning the Texas-Meers company.

H. N. Davis and family returned last Friday from a week's visit spent with old-time friends and relatives at Austin, Round Rock and Georgetown, and report a most enjoyable time. However, they return better pleased than ever with McCulloch county, stating that the farmers in Travis and Williamson county made no better crop this year on $250 per acre land than was made right here in McCulloch county. Upon their return to Brady, the family was accompanied by Mr. Davis' brother, O. C. Davis, who is prospecting here for a location.

When the radio bug once gets you, the radio phone offers the most alluring of all amusements and entertainments, says Joe Lyle, who has recently installed one of the best standard makes of receiving sets at the Brady Storage Battery Co. This opinion is concurred in by Dr. Jones, Brady pioneer radio fan, who has been gradually increasing the scope of his operations until Schenectady, N. Y., now marks his distance record. Chas. Steelhammer, one of the new radio recruits, reports having switched in on programs all over the U. S., even as far distant as New Jersey, and last Sunday night he caught a beautiful entertainment program at Havana, Cuba.
