the gas well brought in some two weeks ago on the Geo. Shafer place, 12 miles northeast of Brady, and six miles northwest of Rochelle. The well was shot last Saturday morning at 11:00 o'clock, and bridged over. When the bridge was drilled out, the well came back ten-fold stronger than before, but soon settled down to a steady flow, although much stronger than before the shooting. Apparently there is no prospect of oil at the present depth of 503 feet, although the drillers are encouraged by the splendid gas flow to believe that a good oil well may be secured at a greater depth. Floyd Jones, the driller, expressed belief that the flow would total around half a million cubic feet. The well is conceded to have a flow at least five times as strong as the Stapleton well, a mile distant, and which was brought in last year, and which now is being used to furnish light, fuel and heat for the Staple-

O. L. Billingsley, who drilled in the Stapleton well, and who owns about a one-fifth interest in the new gasser, conservatively estimates the new flow at 300,000 cubci feet. Mr. Billingsley is interested in a plan to drill a series of ten wells to thoroughly test out the gas area and figures the cost not to exceed $1,000 per well. While three wells equal to the Shafe . well would be sufficient to supply natural gas to Brady, yet the government requirement permitting use of Dr. J. B. JUNCTION CARRIES ELECTION FOR NEW SCHOOL BUILDING $60,000 BONDS ARE VOTED

The enterprising city of Junction has just voted a $60,000 bond issue for the purpose of building a new school building, the election being carried by a vote of 184 in favor and 122 opposed to the proposition.

The same proposition lost two months before by only eleven votes. In the interim, a number of citizens undertook to raise by public subscription the necessary funds to build the building, with a two-fold object in view, the first being to avoid the necessity of a bond issue, and the second being to match an My bonnie leaned over a gas drum, equal amount of funds set aside by Capt. SYNOPSIS

PROLOGUE.—Seeking gold in the desert, "Cameron," solitary prospector, forms a partnership with an unknown man whom he later learns is Jonas Warren, father of a girl whom Cameron wronged, but later married, back in Illinois. Cameron's explanations appease Warren, and the two proceed together. Taking refuge from a sandstorm in a cave, Cameron discovers gold, but too late; both men are dying. Cameron leaves evidence, in the cave, of their discovery of gold, and personal documents.

CHAPTER I.—Richard Gale, adventurer, in Casita, Mexican border town, meets George Thorne, lieutenant in the Ninth cavairy, old college friend. Thorne tells Gale he is there to save Mercedes Castaneda, Spanish girl, his afflanced wife, from Rojas, Mexican bandit, CHAPTER II.—Gale "roughhouses" Rojas and his gang, with the help of two American cowboys, and he. Mercedes and Thorne escape. A bugle call from the fort orders Thorne to his regiment. He leaves Mercedes under Gale's pro-

CHAPTER III.—The pair, aided by the cowboys who had assisted Gale in the escape, Charlie Ladd and Jim Lash, arrive in safety at a ranch known as Forlorn River, well across the border.

CHAPTER IV.—The fugitives are at Tom Belding's home. Belding is immigration inspector. Living with him are his wife and stepdaughter, Nell Burton. Gale, with Ladd and Lash, take service with Belding as rangers, Gale telling Belding the cause of his being a wanderer, a misunderstanding with his father concerning the son's business abilities.

CHAPTER V.-Mercedes gets word to Thorne of her safety. Dick also writes to his parents, informing them of his whereabouts. Nell's personality, and her dindness, attract Gale.

CHAPTER VI.—Riding the range Gale falls in with a party of three Mexican falders encamped at a water hole. Watching his opportunity to oust them, he sees two Indians ride into the camp. One of them, a Yaqui, is evidently badly wounded, and the Mexicans seek to kill him in a cruel way. Dick drives them off, conveying the wounded Yaqui to Belding's ranch.

CHAPTER VII.-The Indian is taken in, cared for and remains in Belding's services, becoming Dick's ardent admirer. Gale's admiration for Nell increases, and he believes she is not averse to his attentions. Belding's horses, thoroughbreds, the pride of his life, after his wife and stepdaughter, are run off by Mexicans.

CHAPTER VIII.—Gale, with Ladd, Lash and the Yaqui, pursue the raiding party ever the desert, finally cornering them. Five of the six thieves are killed and the party of whites, with the recovered horses, return to the ranch in triumph.

CHAPTER IX.—Gale secures from Mrs. Belding what he feels is reluctant permission to allow him to seek Nell for a wife. He begins his courtship with energy, confident that he can win her.

"Cut that kind of talk," replied Belding, bluntly, "Well, if it is Rojas he's acting d-n queer for a raider. That's what worries me. We can't do anything but wait. With Laddy and Yaqui out there we won't be surprised."

The women of the house might have gotten some sleep that night, but it vas certain the men did not get any. Morning broke cold and gray, the 19th of February. Ladd came in hungry and cold, and said the Mexicans were not breaking camp. He reported a good-sized force of rebels, and was taciturn as to his idea of forthcoming events.

About an hour after sunrise Yaqui ran in with the information that part of the rebels were crossing the river. "That can't mean a fight yet," declared Belding. "But get in the house, boys, and make ready anyway. I'll "Belding, you're an officer of the United States. Mexicans are much impressed by show of authority. I've seen that often in camp," said Thorne. "Oh, I know the white-livered Greasers better than any of you, don't mistake me," replied Belding. He was pale with rage, but kept command over himself.

The rangers, with Yaqui and Thorne, stationed themselves at the several windows of the sitting room. Rifles and smaller arms and boxes of shells littered the tables and window seats. No small force of besiegers could overcome a resistance such as Belding and his men were capable of making.

The horsemen halted at the corrals. They were orderly and showed no evidence of hostility. They were, however, fully armed. Belding stalked out to meet them. Apparently a leader wanted to parley with him, but Belding would hear nothing. He shook his head, waved his arms, stamped to and fro, and his loud, angry voice could be heard clear back at the house. Whereupon the detachment of rabels retired to the bank of the river, beyoud the white post that marked the boundary line, and there they once more drew rein. Belding remained by Yuma. Thorne opened a door and called her. She came into the room followed by Nell and Mrs. Belding. "My dear, we want you to read what's written on this paper," said Thorne, as he led her to the table.

Mercedes gave the writing one swift glance, then fainted in Thorne's arms. He carried her to a couch, and with Nell and Mrs. Belding began to work over her.

Belding looked at his rangers. "Laddy, it's Rojas all right. How many men has he out there?"

"Mebbe twenty. Not more." "We can lick twice that many Greasers."

Jim Lash removed his pipe long enough to speak. "Let's stave the Greaser off till dark. Then Laddy an'

me an' Thorne will take Mercedes an' hit the trail for Yuma." "C. mino del Diablo! That awful trail with a woman! Jim, do you forget how many hundreds of men here perished on the Devil's road?" "I reckon I ain't forgettin' nothin',"

now. There's grass, an' we can do the job in six days."

"It's three hundred miles to Yuma." "Beldin', Jim's idea hits me as pretty reasonable," interposed Ladd. "Lord knows that's about the only chance we've got except fightin"."

"But suppose we do stave Rojas off, and you get safely away with Mercedes. Isn't Rojas going to find it out quick? Then what'll he try to do to us who're left here?"

"I reckon he'd find out by daylight," replied Jim. "But, Tom, he ain't a-goin' to start a scrap then. You see, I'm figgerin' on the crazy Greaser wantin' the girl. But he's too smart to fight you for nothin'. Rojas may be nutty about women, but he's afraid of the U. S. Take my word for it. he'd discover the trail in the mornin' an' light out on it. I reckon with ten hours' start we could travel comfort-

Belding paced up and down the room, Jim and Ladd whispered to-Gale walked to the window and looked out at the distant group of bandits, and then turned his gaze to rest upon Mercedes. She was conscious now, and her eyes seemed all the larger and blacker for the whiteness of her face. No one but Gale saw the Yaqui in the background looking down upon the Spanish girl. All of Yaqui's looks were strange; but this was singularly so. Gale wondered if the Indian were affected by her loveliness, her helplessness, or her

"Listen to this," he said, earnestly, "I'll go out and have a talk with Ro-I'll try to reason with him; tell him to think a long time before he sheds blood on Uncle Sam's soil. He knows Sonora as no Greaser knows it. He could hide you, find water and grass, when you would absolutely believe it impossible. The Indian is loyal. He has his debt to pay, and he'll pay it, don't mistake me. When you're gone I'll hide Nell so Rojas won't see her if he searches the place. Then I think I could sit down and wait without any particular

A moment's silence followed her last halting whisper.

Then the Yaqui uttered a singular cry. Gale had heard this once before, and now he remembered it was at the

"Look at the Indian," whispered Belding, hoarsely. "D-n if I don't believe he understood every word Mercedes said. And, gentlemen, don't mistake me, if he ever gets near Senor Rojas there'll be some gory Aztec knife work."

Yaqui had moved close to Mercedes, and stood beside her as she leaned against her husband. She seemed impelled to meet the Indian's gaze, and evidently it was so powerful or hypnotic that it wrought irresistibly upon her. But she must have seen or divined what was beyond the others, for she offered him her trembling Yaqui took it and laid it against his body in a strange motion, and bowed his head. Then he stepped back into the shadow of the room.

Belding went outdoors while the rangers took up their former position at the west window. Each had his own somber thoughts, Gale imagined. and knew his own were dark enough. He saw Belding halt at the corrals and wave his hand. Then the rebels mounted and came briskly up the road, this time to rein in abreast.

Wherever Rojas had kept himself upon the former advance was not clear; but he certainly was prominently in sight now. He made a gaudy, almost a dashing figure. Rojas dismounted and seemed to be listening. Belding made gestures, vehemently bobbed his big head, appeared to talk with his body as much as with his tongue. Then Rojas was seen to reply, and after that it was clear that the talk became painful and difficult. It ended finally in what appeared to be mutual understanding. Rojas mounted and rode away with his men. while Belding came tramping back to the house.

As he entered the door his eyes were shining, his big hands were clenched, and he was breathing au-

The rest of that day passed swiftly. The sun set, twilight fell, then night sound, and that fact was indeed a tribute to the Yaqui. Gale went out sitting room. There was nothing more to do but wait and say good-by. Mercedes came clad in leather chaps and coat, a slim stripling of a cowboy, her he disappeared as before. Moments dark eyes flashing. # BRADY WINS 1-0 ELEVEN INNING GAME YESTERDAY

Base ball fans yesterday afternoon got a steady succession of thrills and their full money's worth when Brady, in an eleven-inning contest, won from the crack Winters team by a score of 1 to 0. It was nip and tuck all the way through, with Brady outplaying their opponents at every stage of the game, and yet with all the breaks against them. Brady hit into three double plays, and while the visiting pitcher registered only four strike-outs and was hit freely, the locals were unable to bunch their hits, or to place them safely. No valkswere issued by either pitcher.

Koch grabbed a hot liner just over is head in the ninth, and assisted in naking Brady's double play.

Koch, Brady's pitcher, showed wonderful form, going the entire eleven innings, allowing but four hits, and getting credit for sixteen strike-outs. With two men on bases in the secnd frame, Koch pulled himself out of the hole nicely. Ingram slammed out a three-bagger in the second inning and was the only runner to get around to thrid sack in the first nine innings of playing, although he died there. In the ninth, Brady had a chance of scoringwhen two men got on through errors, only to have Hampton hit into a double play.

In the eleventh Winters got a man on first when Phillips at third base overthrew first, allowing the runner to advance to second, but the visitors thereupon went out in one-two-three order. In Brady's half, Phillips hit safely; advanced to second on an error and to third on Taylor's hit. Koch hit to pitcher and was thrown out at first after the ball had been thrown to catcher to block the runner on third. Then Bill Vaughn came up and knocked the winning hit.

Vaughn is making himself solid with the fans by his hard hitting also made a hit with his heavy hit-
