CITY MAKES NEW LOW RATE SHOW WINDOW LIGHTS

The Board of Commissioners of the Brady Water & Light Works met in called session last Saturday and voted to establish a new low rate for show window lighting. The rate agreed upon is 5c per kilowatt, which is about one-fourth of the regular light rate. The rate now in effect is 20c for the first 25 kilowatts, and 15c thereafter.

The new rate will apply to lights used either in show windows or on the awnings in front of store buildings, and will run $1.50 per month for the use of two 50-watt lights, or the same price for one 100-watt light, with additional lights in the same proportion.

This change will cover the cost of using the lights all night long and for the full 30-day period, the lights being cut in ahead of the meters, so as to place them on the flat rate charge.

The purpose of the new rate is two-fold. First, the new rates will enable every merchant and business man to illuminate his show windows to great advantage, and the fact that a flat rate applies will result in no stinting on the period that the lights are turned on. In other words, it will cost no more to have the lights on all night than it will to have them on just an hour or two. The second benefit will come in that the entire business section should thus be well-illuminated, thereby reducing all danger of burglaries, or front-door robberies to a minimum.

Another action of the Board, and which will probably be of more universal interest, is the making permanent of the reduced water rate, which prevailed during the summer months. This rate is 15c per 1,000 gallons consumed over and above the first 2,000 gallons. The rate of $1.75 for the first 1,000 gallons, and $1.25 for the second 1,000 gallons still obtains.

The board found the reduced rates to encourage greater consumption, and as a consequence the revenues of the water plant held up well during the trial period. In making this rate permanent, the rate will henceforth apply not only to residences, but to every water consumer, including the oil mills, gins and other industrial enterprises, and the railroads as well.

HOW TOWN OF BRADY RECEIVED ITS NAME FORMS AN INTERESTING STORY.

In its magazine section, The Dallas News Sunday began a series of brief accounts on how the various towns of Texas received their names.

Brady was the second town listed in the opening series, the following account, reprinted from the News, having been prepared by The Brady Standard editor from information obtained from the files of The Standard:

It is conceded that the city of Brady took its name from Brady creek and that Brady creek took his name from Peter Brady, a surveyor. Most creeks, towns, streets and parks are named in honor of some one, but, according to local tradition, the creek was named for Brady because of his error in insisting at first that it was the Concho River. The story is interesting.

Brady, in McCulloch County, is situated in what was known as the Fisher and Miller Colony. In 1843 Sam Houston, President of the Republic of Texas, entered into a contract with H. F. Fisher and Burchard Miller whereby they were to colonize certain territory between the Llano and Colorado Rivers which included all of the present McCulloch and several other counties. Each head of a family was to receive 640 acres and each unmarried man was to receive 320 acres.

Fisher and Miller transferred their rights to a number of prominent men in Germany, who organized what is known as the German Immigration Company. A great many colonists came to Texas from Germany, landing at Galveston, but they did not get to the colony. Yellow fever along the coast carried off many. Between the coast and the colony there were many bad Indians. The immigrants scattered all over south Texas rather than risk their chances with the Indians.

In the meantime Texas became a State in the Union. The German company sent surveyors into the territory included in the contract with Fisher and Miller, to cut it into sections, half sections and quarter sections so that it could be allotted to the immigrants. The Legislature relieved the immigrants of the necessity of actually settling on the lands and finally granted them unconditional certificates. The territory was then a part of Bexar County, and it was necessary to have official surveying done later.

Among the surveyors was a man named Brady. When the surveyors came to the creek Brady insisted that it was the Concho river. When it was proved he was in error the surveyors called it Brady creek as a joke. Brady Creek it remained and when a settlement was made near it the place was called Brady City.

The history of the man for whom the creek was named is obscure. He is supposed to have been Peter Brady, one time surveyor and citizen of Austin or its vicinity. Information is that Peter Brady later went to Arizona, married into a Mexican family, became Sheriff of one of the counties, acquired considerable property and became a member of the Territorial Senate. He was last heard of alive in 1907.

At the time McCulloch County was organized in 1876 there were less than 200 voters in the county. When it was decided to lay out a townsite there was a spirited contest over the location. Some citizens wanted it on a knoll west of here, others a height to the south, while Henry Fulcher and his followers wanted the town located on Brady Creek. The latter won in an election called to determine the question.

When The Coolidge Boys Arrived

Calvin President, John Mrs. Coolidge

This newspaper, with others in big cities and the country, printed paragraphs about the two Coolidge boys that were to play on the White House lawn. Well, here they are, a surprise for newspaper correspondents, as both of them are taller than the President and their mother. On the left is Calvin, Jr., who was working in a tobacco field near Northampton, Mass., when his father was elected President. John, his brother, was in a military training camp. They arrived at the White House last week, the first time since their father became President.

DELUGE OF RAIN CONTINUES THROUGH WEST TEXAS

A continued deluge of rain has visited all this section of Texas, and has damaged cotton to considerable extent, and incidentally has put a stop to all picking and ginning operations. Nearly every day sees a fresh rain added to those gone before, and each rain comes sloshing down without apparent effort and with scarcely any let-up. While the cotton farmers are anything but pleased, yet stock farmers and the farming industry in general is receiving untold benefit from the heavy precipitation, since splendid range and fine winter feed crops are assured.

Sunday afternoon witnessed another heavy downpour, approximately one inch falling at Brady, and much heavier rains being reported from other points. The San Saba river got on a big rise about 1:00 a. m. Monday, and with 27 feet of water in the river at San Saba, people in the overflow district were forced to move to points of safety. At Richland Springs the water flooded the gin, damaging machinery and belting, and also overflowed the fuel tank, causing the loss of the season's supply of fuel oil.

In Brady, the total precipitation for the month, as recorded by the Commercial bank gauge, is 4.38 inches, while the total rainfall so far this year is 22.13 inches. The rains had so far this month were as follows:

September 1	.50
September 6	.20
September 7	.35
September 11	1.70
September 12	.10
September 15	.40
September 17	.90
September 18	.23
Total	4.38

Flying scholarships for men and women in the 1,000 largest cities of the country have been offered by the National Aeronautic Association to stimulate interest in aeronautics. One scholarship will be awarded for each 25,000 population of the cities. Candidates must be seventeen years of age or over and must be physically fit to fly. The scholarships call for instruction in flying at the leading flying schools. It is part of the association's plan to put "America first in the air."

COTTON ADVANCE $5 BALE RESULT OF TEXAS RAINS

New York, Sept. 17.—Heavy rains throughout Texas and Oklahoma caused the renewal of buying in the cotton market here this morning, which quickly ran the prices up to new high levels for the season, October reaching 29 cents. The gain amounted from 89 to 110 points.

Galveston, Sept. 17.—Cotton futures registered a gain of 100 points, equivalent to five dollars per bale in the first hour of trading today, reaching 28.50 cents.

COMMISSIONERS NAME COUNTY DEPOSITORY—APPROVE ASSESSOR'S TAX ROLLS

Commissioner court met in regular session last week, and among the chief labors was the examination and approval of the county tax rolls submitted by the County Assessor H. R. Hodges. Total county valuations, as shown by the new rolls, is $9,197,160.

The Commercial National bank was selected as the county depository, on their bid of 5% interest to be paid on all fund balances. Bond in the sum of $104,945 was furnished by the bank.

It was ordered by the court that Mrs. Dora Brown be appointed matron of the Rest Room and caretaker for court house yard flowers.

It was ordered by the court that I. S. Gingrich be employed to put in toilet and other fixtures on third floor of court house.

It was ordered that Will Kennerly be given contract for putting lights in court room and working over wiring throughout the court house.

Of the four men "holding down" Wrangell Island in the Arctic for the Canadian Government, three are American citizens. The island is about eighty miles long and thirty-five miles wide, rugged and rocky with a maximum elevation of about 2,000 feet. It is probably the greatest polar bear country in the world and there are no locations better for fox raising. Both the United States and Russia have somewhat shadowy claims on it. In time it no doubt will possess great value as an airplane station in the line of what promises to be the shortest aeronautic route between Asia and America.

'CANS' AND 'CANTS' FOR TEXAS HUNTERS GIVEN OUT BY GAME COMMISSIONER.

by Game Commissioner
Austin, Sept. 17.—The State Game, Fish and Oyster Commissioner's Department has been dinged with questions and queries about the new federal game laws and Commissioner W. W. Boyd has issued a set of "you can's" and "you can't's" to set hunters in Texas aright.

The confusion resulted from the new federal law dividing Texas into two zones for hunting, according to Mr. Boyd. The line of division runs from Laredo to San Antonio to Austin to Longview to Texarkana, along the International & Great Northern and the Texas & Pacific railroad lines. The "North Zone" is that part of the state lying South and East of the division line.

In addition to the many letters regarding the new law, Mr. Boyd has received an unusual number of requests for hunting licenses. His office has been working overtime in the last few weeks mailing out consignments.

State game wardens can not enforce the federal laws, Mr. Boyd said, but will co-operate with the federal officials by giving them notice when they see the national laws violate.

In regard to the coming hunting season Mr. Boyd says:

"You must not kill, catch, possess or ship at any time during the year antelope, mountain sheep, woodcock, wood duck, egret or other plumed birds, non-game water fowl, song bird, insectivorous bird, pheasant, turkey hen, doe deer or spotted faun.

"You must not hunt from motorboat, sailboat, airplane or boat under tow; and you must not hunt at night with any sort of light or lantern.

"You must not buy, sell or barter any game bird or animal.

"You may kill at any time in any numbers, English sparrows, rice birds, black birds, buzzards, crows, owls, hawks (except sparrow hawks), and rabbits."

The open season in the two zones are as follows.

North Zone—Doves, Sept. 1 to December 15th, closed in Grayson county; ducks, geese, brant wilson or jack snipe, Oct. 16th to Jan. 15

South Zone—Doves, November 1 to December 15; ducks, geese, brant, wilson or jack snipe, Nov. 1 to Jan. 31.

Entire State—Deer, Nov. 1 to Dec. 31. Closed in Bosque county.

Quail and chachalaca, Dec. 1 to Jan. 31. Closed on quail in Grayson and on blue quail in Lampasas counties.

Quail and dove, Fayette county, open season in December.

Plover, Oct. 16th to Dec. 15. Federal closed season on upland plover.

Wild turkey, Nov. 1 to Dec. 31. Numerous exceptions to this, open season in various counties.

Prairie Chicken—Only in Gray, Wheeler, Hemphill and Lipscomb counties, Sept. 1 to 10.

Bag limits per day allow 25 of all kinds of birds in one day's hunting; three buck deer in one season; 15 quail or chachalaca in one day; 15 doves and plover; 8 geese or brant; 25 ducks or snipe; 5 squirrels and prairie chickens.

TURKEY GOBBLER WITH 8 YOUNG ONES EXHIBITED AT MELVIN COMMUNITY FAIR

In the first issue of The Enterprise, we reported an account of Mrs. S. P. Allen's turkey gobbler setting. One of the curiosities on exhibition at the Community Fair, was this fine gobbler, with eight young turkeys, fully feathered and thriving.

The old gobbler seemed to be extremely proud of his brood and cares for the young ones as gracefully as any turkey hen could have done.—Melvin Enterprise.

R. W. HADDOW CORRECTS SELF ON TIME OF BIG HURRICANE ALONG ONION CREEK

To The Brady Standard.

"As to the date of the hurricane which passed over Onion Valley in 1882, I was honest in thinking it was about the first of June.

"But S. L. Kincaid, who was at the mouth of Onion at the time is just as honest in his recollection that it was the fifth of May.

"Anyhow it was some storm, and the amount of water in the creek has never been equaled since.

Mrs. Cates, Hugh Armstrong, S. L. Kincaid, and I think W. H. Floyd were living near here at the time. There are several in Brady.

Answer Me that—If newspaper space isn't the most economical and most successful form of advertising, then why do the wisest business men in America invest millions in it every year?

A FATHER'S TRIBUTE TO HIS SON

Of all the countless sketches and stories that have been written about Calvin Coolidge since he became president none gives a clearer insight into his character than the words of his father, the plain simple living old fashioned American, from rural Vermont.

"Whenever I went away and left any jobs for my son to do I never looked when I returned to see if he had done them. I knew he had. It was a habit of his, a habit that hasn't hurt him any."

How many sons have earned such a tribute? How many fathers can say of their sons what this simple Vermont father has said of his son, now holding the highest place in the gift of the people of this country?

Yet there is a lesson of performance of duty that shows in a way what manner of man is he who has been elevated to his high station through the unexpected death of his predecessor. In this mild, homely statement about his son Colonel John Coolidge gives the keynote of the character of the man and at the same time places his finger upon a tender spot in the civilization of today.

Half the worry and wear and tear upon employers of this day comes from over looking a job to see if it has been done as directed. The school teacher will tell one that half the burden of teaching is seeing that the pupil has done the tasks assigned.

The child or the employe who can be trusted and who will do, in the absence of those in authority, the work given, is the one who will achieve things when man's estate is reached.—Temple Telegram.

GETTING A SCOOP

Honorable Jas. H. (Cyclone) Davis, Ex-congressman, and orator of nation wide notoriety, spoke on the court house lawn at Brady, Wednesday evening, on the principles of the Ku Klux Klan. Cyclone Davis is noted for his wit and humor, and has made more speeches and been in more political debates, perhaps, than any other man in Texas. For about forty years, he has been one of the most prominent prohibition speakers of the nation.—Melvin Enterprise.

We have to go away from home to get the news. So far as The Standard reporters are aware, there wasn't so much as a zephyr blowing around Brady last Wednesday night, much less a Cyclone. That's one scoop Editor Kavanaugh of the Melvin Enterprise registered on the Brady newspaper folks. Just where did he get this inside information?

HAD HARD WORK TO STOP IT

North Carolina Mountaineer's Struggle With Ramrod Must Have Been Something Fierce.

Representative Zebulon Weaver, Democrat, of North Carolina, relates this story in the New York Herald: "My district has mountain counties and mountain men and women. The smartest people I know live in the coves of the North Carolina mountains about Asheville. They laugh in their sleeves at folks who describe them as 'greenhorns'."

"We had a one-armed fisherman in a valley in the Blue Ridge. He was not only good with a hook and line but could outwear anybody in his community. A Presbyterian preacher found him and became a fishing companion. Soon he tamed him and got him to give up cursing. But he was up to other tricks. One fall when the preacher joined him for a fishing frolic the mountaineer told him he came near losing his other hand."

"How was that?" asked the preacher. "Why, I was trying to get a cartridge out of my old gun and it went off."

"The ramrod became fastened in the barrel, and I had hold of it trying to shake it loose when the load was discharged. Of course I had a good grip on the rod, but it lifted me on my tiptoes three times before I could stop it."

FEW REALLY LOVE PESSIMIST

Truth in Statement That Man With Morning Smile Is Worth His Entire Tribe.

There were optimists in King Tut-Ankh-Amen's time who met the far-off mornings with a smile.

And from all accounts of a statue they found in the king's tomb, the artist caught the inspiration of the smile and preserved it for the long aftercenturies.

In one sense, it was the same world then that it is today. They had their joys and sorrows, and smiles and tears contended for the mastery.

There were pessimists then, as now, who saw no good and gracious things in life; who mocked the smiling ones and went frowning to their tombs; who, not having heard of the Coue method, probably answered a cheery morning salutation with "Day by day, in every way, we're getting worse and worse."

They never tried to smile away their troubles! Varying types of them are with us today, but one optimist, with a morning smile, is worth them all!—Atlanta Constitution.

Treasure Sunk in Ocean.

Sunken treasure worth millions lies at the bottom of the Navarino bay, on the west coast of Greece. This glittering prospect, long the object of many fortune seekers, has finally found its way into British courts. Many companies have been formed to recover the gold from the land-locked bay of Navarino. None has succeeded. One concern, with $250,000 capital, was formed in 1913, but the war stopped it. The concession expired in 1920, then was taken over by two London engineers, who now come forward in a suit under an agreement to find money for digging the treasure. The agreement fell through, and one of the litigants has to be content with treasure to the extent of $250 awarded by the court. The treasure has been resting all corners for nearly one hundred years. It went down in the ships of the Turkish Egyptian fleet, sunk by allied fleets in 1827. Sixty-two ships in all were sunk in this battle. Gold and jewels to the value of 120,000,000 gold francs sunk, while five other ships went down with $5,000,000 of plate and specie.

America's Shortage in Oil Supplies.

Although the United States produces about 70 per cent of the world's oil, it already consumes 25 per cent more than it produces. Moreover, American oil fields are becoming exhausted. Our reserves are estimated to be only 9,150,000,000 barrels, which, at our present rate of consumption, will be exhausted in 20 years. We are using up our reserves 16 times as rapidly as foreign countries. In contrast with our own situation, the world's oil reserves are calculated to last 250 years. Obviously, the attempt on the part of other nations to gain control of these resources threatens our interests.—Prof. R. L. Luedl, in Current History Magazine.

How About This?

Peter Brown, the famous New York raconteur, was talking about the newspaper discussion. "Why does a girl close her eyes when a man kisses her?"

"This discussion," said Mr. Brown, "brought out some ingenious solutions, but the real solution was given by no one. It is this: 'A girl closes her eyes when a man kisses her because she has just told him he's the first and in consequence she's ashamed to look him in the face.'"

Odd Experience.

I was getting a rather late start for work one morning, and as I heard my train coming made a grab for my book and ran for the train. After seating myself comfortably I opened my book to read, but imagine my surprise on finding I had taken my mother's Swedish Bible instead of my interesting novel.—Chicago Journal.

G. C. KIRK INSTALLS MODERN SYSTEM OF DRY CLEANING ASSURING CLASSIEST WORK

G. C. Kirk is this week completing the installation of one of the most modern and complete dry-cleaning plants in this section of Texas, and with its completion will be enabled to assure his patrons of not only the fastest service, but of the highest grade of cleaning as well. The new plant is the Bowser Clarifilter system, and its operation includes the continuous clarification of the gasoline used in the cleaning of all garments, all dirt and impurities being removed from the cleaning fluid so that the garments are cleaned in clarified gasoline. In addition, an extractor speedily removes all gasoline from the garments after they have been thoroughly cleaned, and a dry tumbler eliminates the last faint trace of gasoline odor. So rapidly is the work performed, that under ordinary working conditions with the new system, a garment can be cleaned and pressed and returned to the owner spotless, odorless and looking like new in one hour's time.

Mr. Kirk has gone to considerable expense in the installation of the new system, having built a substantial brick building to house the new machinery, and which is conveniently located just at the rear of Kirk's Quality shop.

Another big feature of the new system, is that regardless of the quantity of work done, all fire risk is absolutely eliminated, and every safe-guard is thrown about the operation of the plant. As illustrating how perfect it is working, the manufacturers cite instances where white and dark garments have been cleaned at one operation, without the slightest stain or discoloring resulting to any of the pieces.

Quite naturally, Mr. Kirk is very proud of his modern plant, and it affords him great pleasure to tell his customers all about its many advantages.

THE PRODIGAL DAUGHTER

By WILLIAM ALLEN WHITE

Copyright, 1922, by the Macmillan Co.

Folks like to pamper the prodigal son—Maybe no more than they'd order—But no one as yet has been able to get Any real for his prodigal daughter.

FEW years ago the Beasley girl worked in the overall factory. She was a pretty girl then, and naturally the neighbors talked about her, for the people who live along Jersey Creek are really no better than they who live on Independence avenue, in spite of the theories that poverty and charity go together. So when she left the factory the women of the Jersey Creek neighborhood hinted that the foreman had been too polite to her. But if she had remained at the factory they would have given the same reason for her staying. After that, she went to the theater with young men who turned up their coat collars and wore their hands in their pockets in the fall and spring, in lieu of overcoats. During the summer following her discharge from the overall factory she became a park fiend.

When she gave up her counter in the cheap dry-goods store, she remained at home, apparently keeping house for her father. He worked in "the shops" somewhere over in "the bottoms," and came home tired and grimy at night, and went to bed early. He slept in the room off the kitchen, and his daughter slept in the front room. He did not know when she came in at night, and he did not think of caring to know. Her father paid no attention to the little brother and sister who teased the daughter at table about the young men who frequented the house. If the other members of the family had been equally heedless of their chatter. The eldest daughter made him very happy by simple tenderness, though, of course, he did not understand that his warmth for her and the longing which he felt all day to get home for supper, was happiness.

But, unconsciously, his daughter grew very necessary to him. He was not of the world that analyzes its emotions, yet he could not fail to see her beauty, nor to be proud of her for it; and when she was dressed to go out—and she went out early and often—his pride blinded him to the gaudiness of her clothes, her frowzy hair, and the shocking make-up on her pretty face. Probably his discernment was not keen enough to see these faults, even had he not been so fond of her. But other fathers who had daughters saw these things, and mothers of the neighborhood who had sons did not mention the Beasley girl in the family circle. It was only after Miss Beasley had joined a comedy company, or organized to play the "White Slave" and "Only a Farmer's Daughter" through the West, that her name was mentioned at all freely by Jersey Creek's aristocracy, and then it was as if she were dead. And Mrs. Hinkley, who took care of the children and looked after the lonely old man, often said to inquiring women of the neighborhood, "It would break your heart to see Mr. Beasley a-grievin' an' a-grievin' for that busy; an' whiniver he gets a letter from her he reads it at the supper table before them children wid that flourish you'd think—tch, tch, tch, I do wonder if he knows." And after some discussion she would sigh, "Well, it's not for me to tell him."

What a wonderful thing is absence. It is like the dark in its power to transform people and situations and the relations of things. Though she had grown up under his eyes, the old man and his daughter had scarcely spoken a serious word to each other. The father had never inquired what his daughter was or was not. She was only "her" in his thought. They were strangers, but when he began to forget her presence, he found himself continually thinking of things he would like to say to her. "Her" disappeared, and dreams altogether different from his former conception of her, took her place. He longed for her, and yearned to tell her the great love in his heart. Among the noisy wheels, he mumbled to himself, speeches that he wanted to make to her, and in the scrawled letter he sent her occasionally, he wrote some of these tender things.

One day she wrote that she was coming home for a vacation, and his heart was very glad. He read and re-read the letter, and droned it off at the supper table to Mrs. Hinkley and the children. As he read it, neither the hearers nor the reader realized how much feeling the writer had put into the matter-of-fact words, "I want to be home with you all again." These words were meant to tell a story of heartache and loneliness and despair, but they were commonplace and fell short. For poor people are as blunt in sensibility as the comfortably rich, and the suggestion to Mrs. Hinkley of the possibility of any human feeling in the Beasley girl's heart would have fallen on barren soil.

When the day for the girls' coming arrived, Mrs. Hinkley was gone from the Beasley home, but the old man had "laid off" a day from his work. He was joyful in the hope that he might say some of the tender things he had written, and then keep up the new happiness that had come to him, yet he feared that his daughter would be so far above him that she would not care for it. He put on his best suit of clothes, and sent the children away. The house was in conspicuous "company order"; he arranged things, himself, and a Sunday stiffness and quiet prevailed. He sat in the front room waiting for her. When he heard voices at the fence, he recognized that of his daughter, and his pulse quickened; but when he looked through the curtain and saw a stranger with her, his heart sank.

Father and daughter met at the door; he held out his hand to her and she passed in, followed by the stranger, while the father said awkwardly, "Well, Allie"—and after a pause, "how are you?" A smile inclosed the commonplace answer, and the old man continued in a high-keyed tone with the upward inflection, looking vacantly at the dapper stranger who had not been introduced. "I s'pose you've been gettin' to be such a grand lady—" He laughed nervously, and with conscious embarrassment. The daughter seated her guest, and the father, with a faint at cheer, chirped, "Well, you're lookin' hale and hearty."

"Is there anything in the cupboard, pa?" asked the girl, as she took off her soiled gloves and threw her long, shabby cloak and her expensive, but betwined hat upon the bed. "I am just dyin' for a bite; we didn't get any breakfast." The old man went to get something, and when he returned the stranger was gone. She did not taste what he had brought, but turned and threw her arms about his neck; there were tears in her eyes as she said, "Oh, pa—pa—ain't it good to be back again!"

The father, summoning all his courage to break away from the common words of welcome began again in a quavering, nervous voice, "Well, Allie—I guess 'at nebby you—you think some way that yer daddy has forgot you, but—Allie, I tell you, I—do you know, I think a whole lot of you." It was the best he could do, but he kissed her, and that was something—it was a great deal for both of them. Then they relaxed, and talked of the children, about whom she asked a great deal, and of the neighbors, about whom she asked nothing.

The "Comedy Company" had

ing she cried herself to sleep, brooding over her own personal sorrow. She was awakened by her father scraping the ashes from the kitchen stove, and her heart rose to her throat with great love for him. During that entire day the girl held her father in her mind as she went about her household duties. It seemed to her that her life with him was really worth living, and she was glad that since her return she had sent her old companions away. Yet her hand was raised against the world—her narrow world that is the epitome of the great narrow world—because it persecuted her and pointed its finger at the one being she loved. But the very fact that her father was set apart from his fellows because of her drew him close to her. And the night thoughts followed her all through the day, till she longed for his return. It was a good day in her life.

She heard his footsteps on the walk in front, and heard him coming around the house to the kitchen door. When he crossed the threshold she kissed him. The old man was a little abashed at the suddenness of it, but he was pleased. He took a chair and sat in the back yard leaning against the house. From there he talked with her through the open door. They had passed the usual questions of the day, when the old man said, "Allie, y' can't guess what Mrs. Hinkley said about you this evening." The daughter blanched as she stood in the doorway, and said nothing. It was dusk, and the old man did not notice her. "She said, sez she, 'Mr. Beasley, do you know that you are doin' wrong to keep Allie in the house there? I says, 'Why so, Mrs. Hinkley?' and she wouldn't say nothin' but 'Well, y' are, that's all.' I s'pose Mrs. Hinkley thinks that 'cause you're grown to be so purty an'—an' all that—you're ashamed to stay here in Jersey with your old daddy." Strange things were crowding into the girl's mind—a fearful mastery in her heart. Then the temptation came with her father's question, "But you ain't ashamed to stay with your poor, honest ol' pap, are y', Allie?"

There was a short silence. As it lengthened into a distinct pause the man's heart was shot with fear. He felt remorse wrap him about—remorse and humiliation. He sprang lamely from the leaning chair to his failed, and she was at home to stay. Her absence had made both father and daughter understand how much each was to the other. The little signs of endearment did not vanish as the days wore on. She smoothed his hair when she passed him, and he caught her dress and touched her simply with his hand as she came near him at her work. So much was his heart wrapped up in her that he did not notice the absence of the neighbors from the house, and when he asked them to come, and laughingly upbraided them for their social carelessness, he accepted their explanations with no thought of their insincerity.

His pride in her knew no conventionality and no propriety. Once, when the boys in the shop were eating their noonday lunch in the shade of the building, he looked up from a piece of pie to say in a lull of the conversation, "You fellers may talk all you want to about your purty girls, but I bet I've got one at home 'at I beat all yours put together. Some o' you young fellers orto come out an' see her." And when the fellows winked at one another and set up a laugh, the old man laughed, too, and said, "That's what I said; and I didn't smile when I said it; she's the purtiest girl you ever saw—of her dad does say so."

He told her that night how they had laughed, and how he had "stuck to his words and made them shut up," but she was bending over the stove in the dark corner, and he could not see the flash in her eyes, and the quick quiver of hate that curled the muscles of her upper lip. The old man and the children prattled on until she composed herself, and joined the family group.

That night she tossed in her bed and turned her feverish pillow a hundred times. She cursed the world, its people, and its social arrangement. She wanted to make people suffer. Her father's disgrace, and the thought that she could not defend him made her frantic. When it was nearly morning she cried herself to sleep, brooding over her own personal sorrow. Lacked Press Agents. The king ordered all the men to take the field. The chancellor tremblingly approached the throne and whispered something, but his majesty shook his head impatiently.

"Let the publicity end be taken care of by the women and children." "But the women and children," ventured the chancellor, "will have all they can do to till the soil, operate the factories, keep the bourses open, and so forth."

"Then let the publicity end take care of itself!" the king insisted stubbornly. The result was about what you might expect. The war was fought with valor and brilliancy, but when it passed into history it did so with almost a total lack of anything like distinction.—St. Louis Globe-Democrat.

ROBS CALOMEL OF NAUSEA & DANGER

Medicinal Virtues Retained and Improved—Dangerous and Sickening Qualities Removed. Perfected Tablet Called "Calotabs."

The latest triumph of modern science is a "de-nauseated" calomel tablet known to the drug trade as "Calotabs." Calomel, the most generally useful of all medicines, thus enters upon a wider field of popularity—purified and refined from those objectionable qualities which have heretofore limited its use.

In biliousness, constipation, headaches and indigestion, and in a great variety of liver, stomach and kidney troubles calomel was the most successful remedy, but its use was often neglected on account of its sickening qualities. Now it is the easiest and most pleasant of all medicines to take. One Calotab at bedtime with a swallow of water—that's all. No taste, no griping, no nausea, no salts. A good night's sleep and the next morning you are feeling fine, with a clean liver, a purified system and a big appetite. Eat what you please. No danger.

Calotabs are sold only in original, sealed packages, price thirty-five cents for the large, family package; ten cents for the small, trial size. Your druggist is authorized to refund the price as a guarantee that you will be thoroughly delighted with Calotabs.—(Adv.)

ODD USES FOR OLD NEWSPAPERS

What do you do with your old newspapers after you have finished reading them? They can be put to endless uses, such as using them as a substitute for coal. When they are used for this purpose soak them in water for a couple of days. Wring out, and shape into balls, which will be very useful for keeping a fire in when you don't want to look after it.

A dampened piece of newspaper is as good as cloth for polishing windows or lamp-chimneys, while there is nothing so good as newspapers for trimming a lamp wick. Rub the charred part off with the paper instead of cutting it, then there will be no "horns" to make the lamp smoke.

If two or three thicknesses of neatly-folded newspaper are placed under the stair carpets, they will wear better, and be much softer to walk on. It is also economical to lay newspapers evenly over the floor, under your carpets.

Another carpet "tip." Newspapers torn in shreds, soaked, and sprinkled on the carpet before sweeping, take up the dust much better than the tea-leaves generally used for the same purpose.

The kitchen table has to be used for all sorts of purposes, from making cooking preparations to the plate-cleaning. It need never get dirty if you lay newspapers to protect the part where you are working. Line all drawers, upstairs and down, with newspaper, and cover kitchen and larder shelves in the same way. This saves frequent scrubbing.

Moths cannot bear the smell of new newspaper. There will be no danger of furs and winter clothing being attacked when out of use if wrapped securely in newspaper.

There is a lot of heat in a newspaper. If you are short of blankets, or do not like too much weight on the bed, though needing warmth, spread newspapers between the top blanket and the coverlet. They will give quite as much warmth as an extra blanket.

When furniture has to be packed away, there is often danger of chair-legs getting scratched. Wrap them round with newspapers to prevent any harm coming to them.

The site of the pioneer village Schoenbrun, the first settlement in the Northwest Territory, near New Philadelphia, Ohio, has been determined by an archeologist. The old village was founded in 1772 by a Moravian missionary. Fragments of brightly colored glass resembling Venetian glass, such as traders gave Indians for skins of animals, fragments of clasp knives used for hunting, large sheets of pure beaten copper, flintlocks used in muskets, tomahawks, wrought iron nails, human bones and potteryware were found in the cellars. The village passed from existence in 1782.
