MAGNIFICENT NEW HOTEL BRADY TO FORMALLY OPEN AT 6:30 TONIGHT

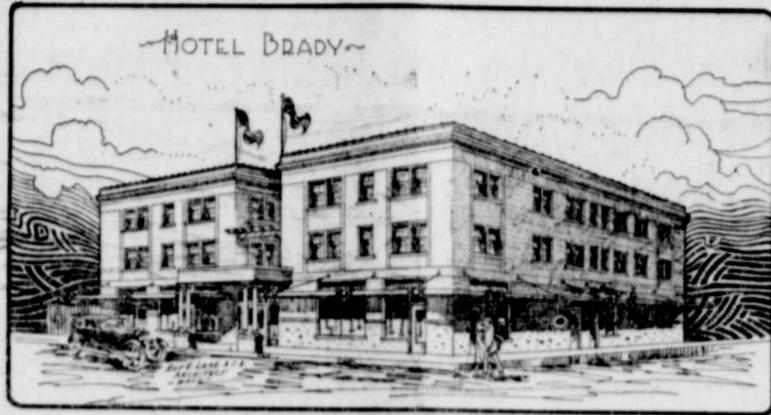

THREE-STORY, FIRE-PROOF BUILDING WITH ITS ELEGANT FURNISHINGS AND COMPLETE EQUIPMENT VIES WITH THOSE IN CITIES OF 10,000

The grand reception at 6:30 tonight, which formally opens the magnificent new Hotel Brady, marks an achievement which is an outstanding event in the history of Brady. There may be larger hotels, but no city of 10,000 population in Texas can boast of a better hotel—nor of one in which the building, furnishing and equipment can be excelled. The Hotel Brady will forever stand as a monument to the enterprise of Brady citizenship, and its completion marks the fulfillment of five years of dreaming, planning and working on the part of F. R. Wulff, who first got the organization of the Brady Hotel company under way.

The history of the beginning of the Brady Chamber of Commerce. Hotel Brady would make interesting reading were Mr. Wulff not so modest and reticent. Suffice to say, since May, 1918, Mr. Wulff has been dreaming and planning of a hotel which should at once be a credit to and the pride of Brady. He first set about acquiring a suitable site, and after several years of work succeeding in purchasing, or securing options on one half block cornering on the northwest corner of the Brady square, and as well, several lots on the remaining half block. Mr. Wulff bore the burden of this investment until the time appeared right to start organization of the hotel company, and, due to his foresight, the time chosen was most propitious, and organization was rapidly effected. At that, there were many obstacles to overcome, and much opposition and objection to be met with, and in meeting and overcoming this, credit, too, must be given to Wm. D. Cargill secretary of the building committee composed of Dr. J. G. McCall and B. A. Hallum and Messrs. B. A. Hallum and G. R. White, and other progressive citizens who worked earnestly and untiringly, and who made many sacrifices in order that the new Hotel Brady might become a reality in Brady.

Co-operating to the fullest extent with the building committee composed of Dr. J. G. McCall and B. A. Hallum and F. R. Wulff, was H. H. Richards, building contractor, whose work has elicited the strongest of praise upon all hands. Stockholders in the Hotel Brady are the following: F. M. Newman, S. W. Hughes, J. B. Granville, W. H. Ballou, Sam McCollum, Maxwell and Morrow, A. B. Carrithers, H. H. Sessions, Savage Bros., W. H. Gibbons, Dr. J. S. Anderson, Simpson and Co., Paul Klatt, Broad Mercantile Co., Dr. J. G. McCall, H. C. Samuel, Hardin and Jones, F. R. Wulff, C. T. White, J. E. White, B. A. Hallum,

A most wonderfully attractive building is the new Hotel Brady. Designed by Roy E. Lane, architect of Waco, the building not only meets every requirement and safe-guard from the standpoint of being fire-proof throughout, but its style of architecture is at once pleasing to the eye, and most practical, since the two upper floors have an open court, which makes all rooms outside rooms, and assures both ventilation and air and sunlight. A south front adds immeasurably to the comfort provided and assured guests.

The building has a front of 75 by a depth of 90 feet, and along the west side has a lattice outdoor addition to the dining room of 15x90 feet. The construction consists of a reinforced steel and concrete frame, with the same type of floors and roof. The outside walls are of fine face brick on all four sides, with hollow tile backing. The interior walls and partitions are of gyp block, which assures fire-proof construction. All foundations and frame work have been planned to take care of two extra stories, so that when the complete plans are worked out, Brady will have a very modern, five-story hotel.

Hotel Brady was built and is owned entirely by local capital. The building, grounds and furnishings, represent an investment of $125,000. Hotel Brady has been leased for a period of twenty years by C. C. McBurnett, proprietor of the St. Angelus and Landon hotels at San Angelo, and will be operated with the San Angelo hotels under the capable direction of Mr. McBurnett. P. Q. Fly, for the past two and a half years clerk at the St. Angelus, will be local manager, while Sid Bolding, recently night clerk at the St. Angelus, will be night clerk at the Hotel Brady. Both Mr. Fly and Mr. Bolding are most pleasant and capable hotel men, are popular with the traveling public and are bringing recommendations of the highest class. Under their capable direction, Hotel Brady is certain to prove one of the most popular hostleries in West Texas. F. A. Hart, popular manager of the St. Angelus, has been here the past several weeks superintending final preparations, and will remain for the next ten days or two weeks getting everything started off smoothly. Mr. McBurnett is also here for the opening tonight, and will spend much of his time looking after the Brady end of his hotel propositions. Other parties instrumental in the building of this wonderful hotel and who will be present for the opening night, include Roy E. Lane, architect, A. T. Cheaney, heating and plumbing contractor, and Mr. Sheldford, mill work contractor.

Too much cannot be said in praise of the lavish manner in which Mr. McBurnett has furnished and equipped the new hotel. All rooms are equipped with steel furniture, the very latest innovation in hotel equipment and which was displayed at the Chicago Furniture show for the first time last June.

There are 27 guest rooms on each the second and third floors of the hotel, making a total of 54 rooms, each with private or connecting bath. In each room is a table, writing desk, rocking and straight chair, all of steel, in walnut finish. The steel bedsteads are provided with Simmons Manufacturing Co.'s Belmont box spring mattresses, exactly the same as are used in the Hotel Adolphus in Dallas. Axminster carpets of the highest class and of various hues, harmonized beautifully with the room decorations. Each of the bath rooms is equipped with large built-in tubs, with concealed plumbing. All necessary accessories, such as soap racks, razor strap hooks, towel bars, tumbler stands, etc., are finished in nickel. Every room has large individual clothes closets. The hallways are well-lighted from both south and north exposures.

On the second floor is the ladies' parlor, opening out on the court, which, with its slate roof, makes a beautiful promenade, and is to be converted into a regular beauty spot. Incidentally, it is this court that makes all rooms have out-side exposure.

On the main floor, the lobby is accessible from the main entrance on the south, and also the side entrance on the east. The lobby is most spacious and is attractive to the last detail. Massive pillars, together with the walls, have a stipple finish of lead and oil, which gives a marbled

LEGION SPECIAL BOOSTS TRADES WEEK CARNIVAL

Elijah F. Allin Post of the American Legion this week issues a Trades Week and Carnival Special, in connection with the regular Friday edition of The Brady Standard, the object of which is to attract greater crowds to Brady, both for the purpose of taking advantage of the special offers of Brady merchants, and incidentally to see the John T. Wortham Shows, which appear here all next week under auspices of the local Legion post.

The merits of the Wortham shows have been set forth from time to time. As a show they rank far above any carnival attraction that has ever appeared in Brady. Clean shows, fun and amusement is promised all who attend. There are numerous shows, each of which has exceptional merit. Among the greatest of the attractions is the Water Circus, with Miss Bonnie Love, world's champion lady high diver, as the feature of the circus. Miss Love, who is but eighteen, was discovered by the Wortham shows in Nebraska, where she was executing all manner of fancy diving off a limb of a tree into the creek swimming pool. Her most sensational act, is a backward dive off a 75-ft. platform, turning two complete somersaults and landing in a five-foot tank. Miss Love, herself, stands five ft. four inches, in height.

As before stated, it will be a rare week of amusement and entertainment, and the merchants, too, will join in with their carnival of bargains and special offers. So whether you

ANOTHER TRADES DAY SATURDAY OF NEXT WEEK

In furtherance of the big Carnival and Trade in Brady week, planned for the period from next Monday until the following Saturday night by the local post of the American Legion, Edd Broad and other interested parties announce that another big mule sale will be held on Saturday of next week. Some eight or ten buyers have promised to be present, and they want good stuff—extra good stuff. Everyone having good mules for sale is urged to have them in Brady upon that occasion, with the assurance that there will be plenty of demand for good mules.

In connection, it is also planned to have a general sales and Trades Day, the full details of which have not yet been worked out, but which will be announced in next week's paper.

come for business or for pleasure, don't forget that next week is the big week in Brady—and the Legion boys are looking for you.

What have you got to sell? C. H. ARNSPIGER will buy it. At the Second Hand Store.

All children troubled with Worms have an unhealthy color, which indicates poor blood, and as a rule, there is more or less stomach disturbance. GROVE'S TASTELESS CHILL TONIC given regularly for two or three weeks will enrich the blood, improve the digestion, and act as a General Strengthening Tonic to the whole system. Nature will then throw off or disintegrate the worms, and the child will be in perfect health. Pleasant to take. 90c per bottle.

A Buick for Business

With its roadsters for 1924, Buick has again created a new standard of roadster utility and attractiveness. Nor can the appearance of this four-cylinder two-passenger model convey in full its story. The famous Buick valve-in-head engine provides even greater flexibility and acceleration than before. The proved Buick four-wheel brakes assure more than ample safety for any emergency.

Business of today demands a sturdy, powerful, safe and dependable car—one that remains constantly in service. This new two-passenger, four-cylinder Roadster is one of Buick's contributions and answers to this demand.

See John T. Wortham's big trained wild animal circus, where lions, bears, monkeys, dogs, ponies and high school horses perform to the delight of the old as well as the young.

Just time for a ride high up in the air in the giant Ferris Wheel. Take a look over the beautiful City of Brady.

Now let's have a good hearty laugh by paying a visit to Madam Rainey's Broadway Strutters, where they sing and dance for you —also where you will hear Madame Rainey the Million Dollar Blues Singer, sing, "I have Those Loving Blues."

Now is the time for another good hearty laugh. You will find it by visiting Old Man Noah and his Ark. In case of rain just climb aboard, there is always room for one more in Noah's Ark.

To those who are lovers of auto races, do not miss the monster monkey speedway. Here is where you will find those fearless little monkeys driving real autos around a special race track at the rate of a mile a minute. Watch those little fellows fight for the first place. Why, Barney Oldfield has nothing on these auto fans.

Well, it is just about time for another of Wortham's highly sensational rides, just take a trip in the monster seaplane.

Have you seen Nellie, The Texas Wonder? Who is Nellie? Well Nellie is the only living cow who really has 6 legs and she is a native of Texas. You'll find Nellie at Prof. Blackwell's big freak animal show. Here also you will see Major and his family—3 head of the smallest cattle in all the world.

Now for another of those wonderful rides, this trip is on the Whip. Oh, Boy! This is fun for everybody.

Now as you wander up and down the mighty Midway looking for more amusement do not fail to pay a visit to Mr. Callahan's big circus side show, just like you see with either Barnum & Bailey's or the Ring-

Mule Bites Finger off Man While Trying to Halt It.
Voca Texas, Nov. 8, 1923
Editor Brady Standard:
The ground is so wet now after so much rain people bog their wagons down out in the pastures trying to haul wood and there are wet weather springs everywhere.
No one has as yet sowed any small grain. This surely is the time to raise a bumper oat crop. But hardly anyone is fully through with their cotton.
Last week while trying to put a halter on a bad mule, Jim Underwood had a very painful accident to occur. The mule grabbed one of his fingers in his mouth and bit it off leaving the piece of finger in his glove. There seems to be no had after results except a sore and painful hand.
This writer as well as a number of other folks in the community has been sick with lagrippe for the past week or two.
Ernest Henderson went to Brady today to drive out a new Ford Roadster.
I often see in the papers where some preacher in his preaching preaches a K. K. K. sermon or speaks in commendable terms of the K. K. K. All know that the Klan is a worldly institution, therefore it is of Mammon and Christ the redeemer of man said "No man can serve two masters for either he will hate the one and love the other or else he will hold to the one and despise the other. Ye can not serve God and Mammon." Matthew 6:24.
Man made institutions and God made institutions are like oil and water—they will not mix.
How different those modern preachers are from the Apostle Paul. Paul said, "For I determined not to know anything among you save Jesus Christ and him crucified." 1 Corinthians 2:2.
And again I often see a bunch of masked men march up the aisle and hand the preacher money.
"Take heed that ye do not your alms before men to be seen of them, otherwise ye have no reward of your Father which is in Heaven." Matt. 6:1.
"Once more Peter said unto him, 'Thou hast neither part nor lot in this matter for thy heart is not right in the sight of God.'" Acts 8:20-21.
I claim that a man can not live a Christian life and try to be anything else but a Christian.
"If a man is a worker in the vineyard of the Lord, his time, his life, his all belongs to the Lord and he has no time to waste for what shall it profit a man if he gain the whole world and lose his own soul." Mark 8:36.

Basket Ball Team to Play Rock Wood "Girls" Team.
Fife, Texas, Nov. 7, 1923.
Editor Brady Standard:
We have had a frost here. Cotton will soon all be open and picked, there's a scramble to get the feed crop saved, since the rain has ceased.
W. A. Miller was at Lohn, on business Wednesday.
There was no Sunday school Sunday or preaching either. Some of the young folks enjoyed a horse-back ride, going to Waldrip and other places. They reported all enjoying the ride very much.

The School now has gotten down to business and they have gotten their basket ball team in pretty good spirits, so we expect to maybe win the game from Rockwood Saturday over there. However, we have had very little practice yet and cannot say how strong they will go. We hope to win at least two out of three with any of them.
I may change the wording of this report some after a few games have been played.
The pecan crop is pretty good on the Colorado this year.

The 1924 Model Studebaker Light-Six Touring Car $995

The unprecedented popularity of the Studebaker Light-Six can be traced to the fact that it represents a degree of automobile value that the public has sought for years.

It is built complete in the great Studebaker factories.

By manufacturing complete motors, transmissions, axles, frames, bodies, tops, castings, forgings, and stampings, parts-makers' profits are eliminated from costs, and one profit only is included in Studebaker prices.

BRADY, TEXAS, Nov. 9, 1923

HONEST INJUN.

Pictures are the life blood of advertising because they express ideas at a glance.

SOME STATE.

Texas occupies all of the continent of North America except a small part set aside for the United States and Canada. Texas owns all north of the Rio Grande, the only dusty river in the world; also the only one, with the possible exception of the Trinity, which is navigable for mud cats and pedestrians.

Texas is bounded on the North by twenty-five or thirty states, on the east by all the oceans in the world except the Pacific, and on the south by the Gulf of Mexico and South America, and on the West by the Pacific Ocean, the milky way and the sidereal universe.

If Texas were chopped loose from the rest of the United States and the Panhandle it would float out into the ocean, as it rests upon a vast subterranean sea of fresh water.

Texas is so big that the people of Brownsville call the Dallas people Yankees and the citizens of El Paso sneer at the citizens of Texarkana, Texas, as being snobs from the effete East.

It is one hundred and fifty miles farther from El Paso, Texas, to Texarkana, Texas, than it is from Chicago to New York. Fort Worth is nearer to St. Paul, Minn., than it is to Brownsville.

The United States with Texas off would look like a three-legged Boston terrier.

Texas are so proud of Texas that they cannot sleep at night. If a Texan's head should be opened the map of Texas would be found photographed on his brain. This is also true of his heart. Unless your front gate is eighteen miles from your front door you do not belong to society as constituted in Texas. Mrs. King's gate is one hundred and fifty miles from her front door and she is thinking of moving her house back so she will not be annoyed by passing automobiles and peddlers.

Other Texas landlords have whole mountain ranges and rivers on their ranches. One Texan has forty miles of navigable rivers on his farm. If the proportion of cultivated land in Texas were the same as in Illinois the value of Texas crops would equal that of forty-seven other states.

Texas has enough land to supply every man woman and child in the world with a tract of five feet by twenty feet, and would have enough left over for the armies of the world to march around the border five abreast.

Texas grows enough alfalfa, which if baled and built into a staircase would reach to the pearly gates.

If all the hogs in Texas were one big hog, he would be able to dig the Panama Canal in three roots.

If all Texas steers were one big steer, he would stand with his front feet in the Gulf of Mexico, one hind foot in the Hudson Bay and the other in the Arctic Ocean, and with his tail brush the mists from the Aurora Borealis. Some State!—Fort Worth Star-Telegram.

A MEETING QUEER

By DOROTHY R. SCOVILLE

© 1923, by McClure Newspaper Syndicate.

SHE didn't have a job and there wasn't one in sight. Room rent due in two days, and her typewriter needed a new ribbon. The blue eyes were a bit discouraged and the mouth had lost its smile. Everything seemed so hopeless. The gray day just matched Kay Lane's mood. She was sitting on a bench near the river's edge. A high hedge screened her from passersby and the traffic on the bridge. She sat staring at the swirling dead leaves and the muddy water of the river. Suddenly a shadow fell across the leaves. A slender, youngish man with confused brown eyes stood by the bench, swaying uncertainly, and with a hand tightly clasped over the bench back.

"Do you mind if I—sit here?" he questioned weakly.

Before she could reply he sat down on the bench beside her with limp heaviness.

"Excuse me for intruding," he murmured. "I didn't think there would be anyone here."

"You should be home in bed. You are ill." She said this impatiently, frowning at him.

"Yes, I agree with you." He gave a little grin. "But I don't own a home or a bed at present."

"Oh," she said. "I'm sorry I can't help you," she reflected, after a pause.

"Please—I'm not a beggar—yet," he said quickly.

"Then what are you?" She faced him squarely.

"A wanderer," he said simply.

"Recently arrived on the freighter San Pedro from South America. Acquired malaria while there, and some one acquired all but a few pesetas of my money when I arrived here. Jobs don't seem to be very numerous, either."

"Are you a job hunter, too?" she asked, with a little laugh. "We seem to have that much in common, anyway."

"I may get a ship to the West Indies tomorrow, though," he said.

"And I may get my story accepted tomorrow," she said.

"And if we don't?" he questioned cynically.

"Don't think of it!" she begged.

The street lights twinkled on. The darkness was creeping in.

"I must be going now," she said, "and I wish you luck, wanderer." She held out her hand to her shabby bench companion.

"But won't you tell me your name, and may I not write to you if I do go away?" he pleaded. "A friend helps a lot," he added wistfully.

She looked at him with a steady keenness. Then she nodded assent. Hastily she produced a fountain pen and from a notebook tore a scribbled name and address.

The next day a certain story was accepted for the munificent sum of $65.

The youngish man in blue dungarees on the deck of a squat tramp steamer plowing out of the harbor looked wistfully back at the fading city. "Nice girl," he sighed. And at every port he mailed a letter.

A month later Kay Lane stories were appearing in nearly all the magazines. Success comes quickly when it does come.

She moved to a better neighborhood and acquired a little three-room apartment—a quiet little place on the third floor. Across from her apartment was an empty one, whose tenants were a writer who was away gathering material for his stories, and an actor, who was also away much of the time on tour.

Then one day the apartment across the hall was opened. One of its occupants had evidently returned, for there was a banging of doors and heavy walking.

That evening as she was trying to catch an elusive word needed in a story she was working on she was startled by a harsh voice in the neighboring apartment crying out in agony: "Help! Oh, help us! For the love of heaven, help us!" She sat frozen for a moment. Then there came a shrill scream of terror. A man's voice said brutally, "Shut up!"

She flung open the door and looked across at the door of the other apartment. She was about to turn into her room, when again came that unnatural cry.

"Th choke you if you screech like that again!" threatened the man's voice.

"Why?" she exclaimed. There was a moment of surprised silence. "Wanderer?"

"You sold—" Again that terrifying scream. "Confound that parrot!" he exclaimed angrily. "You sold your story, didn't you?"

"But you—I thought you were really a wanderer. Instead, I find you a writer with a perfectly nice apartment," she accused him.

"Just like you," he laughed. "But I honestly was out of a job that day I met you. And this apartment is only half mine. A friend shares it, but he's away now. The day I met you he had just left on a short trip and expected to be back before me, so I was locked out of my own apartment. The landlady didn't recognize me and wouldn't let me in with her pass key."

"I've been having luck lately, so that accounts for my change of address," she smiled. "But it's all so queer and unconventional," she added.

"A meeting queer is often dear," he quoted with a gay smile.

FOR CONSTIPATION

Black-Draught Recommended by an Arkansas Farmer Who Has Used It, When Needed, for 25 Years.

Hatfield, Ark.—Mr. G. W. Parsons, a well-known farmer on Route 1, this place, says: "I keep Black-Draught in my home all the time. It is the best all-around medicine I have ever found for the liver and for constipation. We began using it 25 or more years ago and have used it whenever needed since. I have never found any other medicine as good for constipation, and that was what I suffered with till I began using Black-Draught. Black-Draught corrected this condition, and now we use it for the liver and for indigestion—a tight and sluggish feeling after meals, for bad taste in the mouth and sour stomach."

"My wife uses it for headache and biliousness. It sets on our shelf and we don't let it get out. It has been a great help to us. I believe a great deal of sickness is caused by hurried eating and constipation, and Black-Draught, if taken right, will correct this condition."

MARIA DECIDES

By CLARISSA MACKIE

(© 1923, by McClure Newspaper Syndicate.)

MARIA DAY looked about her neat house and decided that there wasn't one more thing to be done. The sun shone in on spotless white paint, shining china and glass, and was reflected in the well-rubbed mahogany furniture. Maria had done every bit of work herself, for the small white house was a pleasure to keep in order. The pantry, too, was in order.

On the groaning shelves were rows of delicious pies and cakes, two roasted chickens, glasses of ruby jelly, and a snowy heap of feathery biscuits waited under a snowy damask napkin. They would still be warm in an hour when it would be all over.

"It" was her wedding. The parlor was all set for the ceremony. Spring flowers banked the mantelpiece and a great jar of lilacs filled one corner and made the air redolent with delicate odors. The minister would stand in front of the mantelpiece—he had been sworn to secrecy, and so had his wife.

A secret wedding—even Job Lemmon, the bridegroom, did not know it was to take place! Maria's high spirit quailed a little at the thought of the interview yet to come. She must set the table for the wedding feast, change her gown, and then wait for Job, who had promised to come there at six o'clock, dressed in his best clothes. As she carefully dressed, she could visualize Job brushing his graying hair, his fine bronzed face beaming with pleasure. She could see him rushing up to the door, as he had done for the past fifteen years, only in the beginning he had come with a horse and buggy, and afterward cars—three of them had worn out before Maria made her great decision that she had been engaged long enough and that it was time to be married if they were ever going to be.

Job was devoted, there had never been another girl for him, but outside of his business he was a procrastinator. "Some day, Maria, when we get hitched up," was a favorite saying of his. Now it was about to happen.

When Maria came downstairs, dressed in the stiff, white satin that had been prepared for ten years, and which she had remodeled, Job was coming up the path to the front door. She looked very handsome, standing there in the yellowing satin dress, her abundant brown hair showing beneath her grandmother's wedding veil. Her brown eyes had a scared look now as the door opened and Job paused on the threshold of the parlor.

"Jiminy crickets, Maria!" he gasped. "What do you mean? You going to be married?"

"Yes, Job."

Silence fell upon the little house. All the ruddy color left Job's handsome face, and he looked middle-aged.

"You—might have told me, Maria." Maria did not speak. The look in her eyes was maternal. She loved Job.

"Of course, I don't blame you a bit—me a dallying around putting off the day just because we were so happy—and always thinking that some day we'd hitch up together. I expect you got tired of waiting?"

"It has been a long time," she admitted gently.

"I could get over it, I suppose, but I don't want to," he confessed. "Since I came in just now, I feel hurt to think you asked me to come—kinder spiteful, Maria, and that's not like you."

"No, I have nothing to be spiteful for, Job."

Job looked around the room, familiar to him through the long courting period, and he smelled the lilacs. Lilac time and Maria was going to marry another man.

"Who is it, Doc Smith?" he wanted to know.

"No."

"Matthew Hayes?"

"Of course not," indignantly.

"Oh, I suppose it's that man who sells vanilla extract—Phoebe White said he admired you."

"Phoebe is a foolish gossip."

"Who is it, Maria?"

"Can't you guess, Job?"

He pondered deeply. "Old Mr. Penn."

"Rubbish," sniffed Maria. "If I must tell you, Job Lemmon, the bridegroom is standing in the doorway."

Job whirled around, saw no one, but did see his own reflection in the pier glass in the parlor. He stared incredulously and blushed.

"Me, Maria," he whispered.

"Who else?"

"Maria Day!" Now they were side by side, a handsome, mature pair, with love in their honest eyes.

"I just had to do it to get you started," she whispered, "and I thought I would leave the rest to you. We could go somewhere in the car—"

"Somewhere? Well, I guess! We'll go to the city and buy a new car and then we'll go to—what say, Niagara Falls or Washington?"

"Niagara Falls," sighed the bride contentedly. "I always wanted to go there."

Criticism.

The best story of the week is a remark made by a certain theatrical man not partial to David Belasco.

"I don't like his stuff," said he, "and I'll find a reason yet."

Poor Man's Luck

By JUSTIN WENTWOOD

(© 1923, Western Newspaper Union.)

CONGREVE looked at the revolver in his desk drawer and pushed it away with a little laugh. Not that way for him! He was only forty-three, and the millions that he had lost in the last week he could make again, and more.

But he could not regain Virginia Templeton. He knew that she was lost forever, and a month before their wedding.

That was the cursed part of the luck, he thought, as he made his way out in the train toward the Templeton estate. Old Templeton had been in a bad way when, out of friendship, Congreve had taken hold of his affairs, showed him some wise investments, and rebuilt his affairs for him. Templeton had invited him to his fine home in the country, and there Congreve had met Virginia.

There had been a host of men after her—young Winters especially. Congreve had always suspected that Virginia was in love with Winters. Certainly he admitted to himself that Virginia had never really cared for him. She was marrying him because—well, not for his money, but because he had saved her father from bankruptcy.

After all, Congreve reflected cynically, one got nothing for nothing in this world. He wanted Virginia, with her cold, stately beauty. She wanted to do the right thing. Oh, yes, he was the right thing.

He had been sure that young Winters had kissed her that night in the conservatory. He had said nothing about it. Why should he? He had all the tolerance of a man of forty-three who is about to marry a charming girl. Suppose she did not care for Winters? How long would it last?

But now—as he descended at the station—now it was all different. Now he clenched his fists and gritted his teeth as he reflected how Winters would get her after all. How they would laugh at him, all her friends who had never really admitted him into their circle!

And old Templeton—how rejoiced he would be to kick down the ladder by which he had ascended to those heights of financial salvation!

Congreve strode savagely up the lane toward the house. He was going to make no bones about the matter. He meant to come to the point. "I'm all but bankrupt," he was going to tell Templeton. To Virginia—well, he would not be harsh with the girl. One did not take it out on women. A few words, showing her that he understood . . .

It was beginning to grow dark as the house came into sight. Congreve, about to ascend the steps and knock at the front door, hesitated. There was a light in the little room at the side. In it he saw Virginia's figure silhouetted against the drawn shade. The window was open. Congreve could hear every word uttered by her and the man with her.

"It's true, Virgy," the man was saying—and it was Winters' voice. "The fellow's a bankrupt. The news is all over town. Now we've got him where we want him."

"Where do we want him?" asked Virginia.

"Somewhere where he can't interfere between you and me, sweetheart."

"Aren't you assuming too much?"

"I guess not." He made a little movement toward her. The girl stepped back.

"Listen, Ronald. Ever since Harry and I became engaged you and everybody assumed that I was marrying him for his money. It wasn't said aloud—oh, no, but the sense was conveyed none the less deftly for all that. It paralyzed me. It made an automaton of me. Because you see, I—love him."

"Nonsense, Virgy!"

"I love him. And now that all his money is gone, perhaps I shall have the chance of showing him that it was he himself and not his money, and that I do care for him."

"And as for you, Ronald, I don't want to see you again. Please go. That's all."

As Congreve stood there aghast the door opened and Winters brushed past him with an agitated face. But Congreve hardly noticed him. There stood Virginia. And one glance at his face told her he had overheard.

"Yes, I heard you, Virginia," said Congreve. And he drew her into his arms.

"I guess the loss of my money was the best thing that could have happened to us. It's given us love," he said.

"The love was always there," said Virgy softly.

What She Would Do.

"What would your father do if I told him I wanted to marry you?" asked the young man.

"He'd refer the matter to me," promptly replied the girl.

"And what would you do?" he said, hopefully.

"I'd refer the matter to the young man who proposed to me and was accepted while you were trying to make up your mind."—Pittsburgh Chronicle-Telegraph.

Hard to Please.

"It is a tough life. I get tired of the daily grind."

"Then take a vacation."

"But loafing is such hard work."—Louisville Courier-Journal.

BRADY WINS 6-0 IN SAN ANGELO GAME HERE TUES.

Last Tuesday in a hotly contested game, the Brady High school football team defeated the strong San Angelo team by a score of 6 to 0.

The local aggregation took the lead from the start and at no time during the game was there any doubt as to the final outcome. While the San Angelo team played a splendid game and fought every minute of play, they were out-classed at every angle.

During the first quarter Brady kept the ball in San Angelo territory most of the time and through a series of line plunges, carried the ball to within a few yards of the goal line and at the opening of the 2nd quarter Polk of the Brady team carried the ball over for a touchdown. Brady failed to kick goal.

At the end of the 1st half Brady again had the ball within a few yards of the San Angelo goal but the half ended just before they could put it across the line.

In the last quarter Brady again had the ball within five yards of San Angelo's goal line but because of a fumble lost their chance to score again.

During the first three quarters Brady used straight football but in the last quarter resorted to a number of forward passes in a final attempt to score again.

San Angelo only made first downs three or four times while Brady seemed to gain at will but lacked the final punch to score often.

Bradshaw of the local team was the outstanding star of the game. "Brad" never got his hands on the ball but what he gained ground. They just couldn't stop Brad and he played the game of his life last Tuesday.

Strickland also showed up well as did Zimmerman on the defensive.

Hall and Barnes of the visitors played up to stellar form while Keys, Captain, was a "brick wall" on the defensive.

The lineup follows:

Brady	San Angelo
Samuels	Sayers
Roddie	Keys c.
Campbell	Bruster
Broad	Crews
Zimmerman	Blanks
Jones	Wright
Myers	Samuelson
Lyons	Polk
Hall	Bradshaw
Young	Freeman

The boys were somewhat disappointed at the size of the crowd that turned out for the game, there being about four local business men at the game. Now the boys went to no little expense to bring the San Angelo team down here and expected a good crowd of local merchants as the game came on Tuesday this time.

At the opening of school several of the merchants and business men endorsed high school athletics and offered their hearty co-operation, but for some reason this has failed to develop. The boys say the only interest taken by the merchants here is as the boys come from the game, and to stick their heads out of the door and say, "well who beat?"

This may be slightly exaggerated but men let's show the boys we are behind them, win or lose and all turn out and see them play the Mason team here Monday afternoon, November 12th.

NEW OVERLAND MODELS ON DISPLAY AT MANN-RICKS AUTO CO. ATTRACTIVE

Two full carload shipments of new model Overland did not quite complete the line to the satisfaction of A. J. Ricks, manager of the Mann-Ricks Auto Co., local Overland dealers, so he had another model, the beautiful new Red Bird Overland, driven out from Dallas.

In the display room is to be seen all models of the new Overland—a car of wonderful performance, and which is one of the most popular of all medium priced cars. The "Red Bird" stands side by side with the "Black Bird," a new model of the same design as the "Red Bird," but with black fenders and body offering contrast for those who do not care for the red body. But most attractive of all is the new Champion Overland, advertised as "America's only versatile car." Outstanding features of this car are that it can easily be converted into a comfortable, full-length, full-width bed, by removal of both seats and upholstery. Removal of rear seat gives 50 cubic feet of luggage room below the windows. There is a large trunk on rear. The front seat is adjustable to three positions. What could be more ideal for a trip or an outing?

Mr. Ricks is expecting the new Champion to spring into popular fa-

To Those Who Did Not Return

Somewhere in France

By JOHN WALL in Fort Worth Broadcaster.

Somewhere in France tonight,
 The pale moon mourns above a lonely grave,
 Where far beyond my sight
 Lies sleeping there my boy so strong and brave.
 No more his fond caress
 Will press my cheek—no more his face I'll see;
 Still do I bow and bless
 The cause that called him from the world and me—
 Somewhere in France.

Some where in France tonight
 The pensive poppies droop above his head,
 And stars are shining bright
 Above the mound that marks his earthly bed;
 So down through all the years
 The stars of glory will forever shine,
 Through mists of women's tears,
 On hero boys who sleep tonight with mine,
 Somewhere in France.

TO Not Only "Those Who Did Not Return" but to those NOBLE BOYS, "Heroes"? Yes! Who by the Providence of God are still with us, and upon whom the LIVING responsibilities of the next generation will largely rest! In the hope that the principles of Pure Americanism, upon which our Great Country was founded and for which our Fathers paid the Supreme Sacrifice, "Might Not Perish From the Earth," but be forever cherished and held sacred by not only this, but all succeeding generations, this space is respectfully dedicated.

JAPAN and the PACIFIC

Street Scene in Tokyo.

(Prepared by the National Geographic Society, Washington, D. C.)

Japan's great catastrophe has served to turn more than ever the attention of the world to this country which, from a position of isolation in the Asian seas, has emerged to become one of the dominant factors in the Pacific and a world power overtopping in importance many of the old powers of Europe.

This island empire might be termed the narrower and less compact Britain of the Far East. Like the British Isles, the Japanese islands form the fringe of a great continent; both were in the hands of petty kings and grew into a centralized nation; both looked abroad for expansion; and both have conceived that their safety and future prosperity depends largely on sea power.

But there are differences as well as likenesses between these two island nations. Since she began to grow into an empire Great Britain has absolutely turned her back on Europe in so far as territorial acquisitions are concerned, and has sent her colonists into the remote parts of the world. Japan, on the other hand, has acquired large blocks of the neighboring continent, but has expanded somewhat in other directions also. Great Britain has become the headquarters of a scattered, distant empire. Japan has remained so far the center of her empire with her possessions drawn relatively closely about her.

Though Japan had imperial ambitions even in the early centuries, as indicated by the fact that she once conquered Korea, and laid claim in the sixteenth century to Formosa and even the Philippines, the national life, when Commodore Perry opened communications with the West in 1854, was confined to the three main southern islands of Japan proper and the small islets near their shores. Not until the seventies did the government begin development of Yezo, the big island to the north—the Japanese Scotland. Both Russia and Japan claimed Sakhalin, the fifth and northernmost of the large islands of the Japanese group, and there were similar double claims to the Kurile group, a chain of small volcanic islands, comparable to the Aleutians, which stretch from Yezo northeastward to the tip of Kamchatka. In 1875 Russia induced Japan to take the Kuriles and relinquish all claims to Sakhalin.

Beginning of Her Expansion.

These expansions to the north were of little value, for the cold, bleak northern lands have never been settled, and the Kuriles have only a handful of inhabitants. Japan's next step was to the south. In 1879 she annexed the Lu-Chu archipelago, extending from the southernmost of the large Japanese islands southwestward for 700 miles to Formosa. China laid claim to these small but pleasant and populous islands, as she did to Formosa, but she finally consented to Japan's annexing them.

Japan's victorious war with China in 1895 gave her immediate territorial advantage and in addition greatly heightened her prestige among the nations. China ceded the island of Formosa (now officially known as Taiwan) with its 13,000 square miles of territory and its 3,500,000 inhabitants; and the Chinese peninsula of Liaotung on which battle-scarred Port Arthur is now situated; and acknowledged the independence of Korea. Russia, France and Germany forced Japan to relinquish the Liaotung peninsula, and Russia later leased it from China; but the Russo-Japanese war placed it again in Japanese possession, and the island empire now holds it under a 99-year lease. By defeating Russia, Japan further extended her influence both on the mainland of Asia and among the islands. She obtained a protectorate over Korea, a "sphere of influence" in Manchuria, and the cession of the southern half of the island of Sakhalin.

As a result of the World war, Japan has made further territorial advances north, east, south and west. Her sphere of influence has included eastern Siberia, she took over for a time the German lease on Kiaochow in China, and by receiving a mandate for the three archipelagos of former German islands in the Pacific north of the equator, she has fared thousands of miles eastward into the Pacific.

The magnitude of Japan's present interests in the Pacific can better be understood, perhaps, by imagining her island territories transferred to the more familiar Atlantic and the east-and-west directions reversed. The various groups of Japanese islands would then extend from the Shetland Islands southward along the coast of Europe and Africa for 2,700 miles. Formosa would be situated just north of the Cape Verde Islands. The Marianas or Ladrone Islands of the mandate would occupy a position near the Azores; and the hundreds of islands of the Caroline and Marshall groups (the remaining mandate islands) would string out across the Atlantic from near the Cape Verdes almost to Cuba. Honolulu, under this transposed geography, would occupy about the position of Santa Fe, New Mexico.

Good Naval and Trading Bases.

As direct outlets for emigration, Japan's mandate islands, because of their restricted area, are of little importance. But as bases to facilitate naval operations and trading activities to the south and east they are comparable in importance to Hawaii as bases for the westward activities of the United States. And Japan means to make the islands "pay for their keep." She is stimulating the systematic planting of coconut groves, and her traders are fast replacing foreign goods in the islands with those of Japan. The islands add only a few thousand miles of territory and some 50,000 people to the Japanese empire. But the scattered points of land "fence in" approximately one million square miles of the Pacific.

Though Japan has grown to a greatness in world councils perhaps not dreamed of in 1853, the spirit of kindness then established between her and the United States by the visit of Commodore Matthew Galbraith Perry has continued to mark their relations. This opening of Japan to the world by an American constitutes one of the most important events in our history. The story of Perry's voyage to Japan has all the glamour of the stories of the Orient, and is fascinating beyond the imagination of the most fertile novelist. Armed with a letter from the president of the United States to his imperial majesty the emperor of Japan, saluted as a "Great and Good Friend," Commodore Perry made a thorough study of Japan and the Japanese character before starting on his epoch-making voyage.

He carried as presents specimens of the products of the farm and factory, which he thought by their novelty and usefulness would interest the people of Japan. A miniature locomotive, with tracks and rails to be laid down, one mile of telegraph line with Morse instruments, photograph-cameras, printing presses, puzzles and toys, some of the newest things in America, were in the cargo.

Commodore Perry's Diplomacy.

The story of his wisdom, his patience, his consummate diplomacy, going into weeks and months and years, the employment of every art that statesmanship and strategy could invent, is as thrilling today as when it was first told. He had gone to Japan with a friendly key to open the door for the furtherance of trade, the protection of life, and to obtain a treaty with a power destined to occupy a large place in the world. Hurrying nothing, observing every ceremony that could appeal to those he would win as friends, Perry's success marked him as a diplomat of the first water.

When the negotiations had reached a stage where the high contracting parties had about agreed, Hayashi wished to insert a clause that no American woman should be brought to Japan. Tradition has it that when this proposition was submitted the Commodore excitedly exclaimed, "Great heavens! If I were to permit any such stipulation as that in the treaty, when I got home the women would pull all the hair out of my head."

Overlooking a little harbor south of Yokohama stands a monument to Commander Perry, commemorating the sailor-diplomat whose wisdom made Japan and America know and esteem each other. The spirit of Perry and Hayashi still pervades both countries, which, in the language of the letter borne by Perry, "Live in friendship and commercial intercourse with each other."

Why He Threw Her Over

By MYRA CURTIS LANE

(© 1923, Western Newspaper Union.)

"AND he threw you over like that, Dorothy?"

Dorothy nodded tearfully. Malsie looked at her in flaming anger. Dorothy had been her chum since they were at school together. She had been going with Ray Crawford for months; now, it seemed, Ray had deliberately jilted her.

"Oh, I'll pay him out for that!" said Malsie.

And her bitterness against Ray was none the less because she had grown very fond of him. In fact she had been struggling for weeks past to be loyal to her chum and not to let her feeling for Ray sweep her off her feet. "I'll pay him out, Dorothy," she said again.

From that moment she set herself to winning Ray's love. It is not a difficult task for a young and pretty girl like Malsie. But that evening when first Ray kissed her she was conscious of two instincts struggling within her. One was to forget everything in her love for Ray; to abandon herself to it. The other was to murder him.

Ray was desperately in love with her. There was no doubting that. He haunted her; he lay in wait for her. Slowly Malsie had seemed to surrender. Now the moment for her revenge had come.

"Sweetheart, when will you marry me?"

Malsie gave him a cold stare. "Marry you? Marry you, Ray? Why, surely you never thought I'd marry you, did you?"

"You told me you loved me. You let me kiss you."

"Oh, you've a lot to learn, Ray, if you think that amounts to anything. Lots of men have kissed me. Were you conceited enough to suppose that I was going to marry you just because of that? Go away and learn something about life!"

Ray stood his ground. "A girl who lets a man kiss her and behaves as you have done is no better than—"

He stopped right there. But it was enough. A flaming color rose in Malsie's cheeks.

"How dare you think you can insult me?" she exclaimed in furious tones. "If I let you kiss me it was to make a fool of you. I hate you more than any man I've ever known."

Ray bowed and went away, and Malsie, when he was gone, burst into passionate weeping.

She loved Ray with all her heart, and she had thrown away that love for her friend's sake, out of loyalty to her. After that Ray and she cut each other. Sometimes Malsie wondered whether the sacrifice had been worth while. Dorothy seemed to be recovering very quickly from her heart wound. And then the day came when Dorothy came flying in like a fairy.

"Malsie, listen! I'm engaged to Tom Briggs. I'm so happy. Congratulate me, dear!"

Malsie congratulated her and sat with a heart of lead after she had gone away.

So this was the result of her loyalty! This was the end. What a fool she had been! After all, she had only heard Dorothy's side of the story, and there might be another. Ray might have had good reason to have done what he did.

Well, it was ended, and there was nothing more to do. She got up.

The front door opened. It was Ray in the passage. Her heart leaped at the sight of him. She stood, half-fainting, staring at him.

He was coming toward her. His arms were about her. His lips were upon hers. And momentarily Malsie surrendered herself to his embrace. Then she pushed him away.

"No, no! How dare you come here like that!"

"Malsie, darling, listen!"

"There's nothing to say."

"There's a whole world to say. Dorothy came to me this afternoon and told me she was engaged to Tom Briggs."

"What's that got to do with it? What's Dorothy to me?"

"She confessed all the wicked plot she had made up to keep us apart. She told you we had been engaged and that I had jilted her."

"Weren't you? Didn't you?"

"Never! It was always you I cared for. Dorothy was jealous of you because she cared for me, and in order to keep us apart she played on your friendship for her and made up that lie about us."

"Oh, Ray, can you—can you forgive me?"

"There's nothing to forgive, sweetheart. Will you answer me now—that question that I asked you?"

Malsie answered.

Badly in Need of a Wife.

At a wedding all went merrily until the bridegroom was called upon to produce the wedding ring. In vain he felt in his trousers pocket for the indispensable trifle. Nothing could be found except a hole through which the ring had evidently fallen. What was he to do? Suddenly a happy thought struck the parson.

"Take your shoes off," he added.

The suspense and silence was painful. The organist struck up a hymn.

The young man removed his shoe. The ring was found, also a hole in his stocking, and the worthy parson remarked, evidently with more than the delay of the ceremony on his mind:

"Young man, it's high time you were married."

WONDER WORDS.

Some Do Their Duty Today, and Forget—Others—
Wonder, Or., Oct. 25th, 1923.

Editor Brady Standard:

Today is the day of the year that the district clerks of Oregon enumerate census of all children who reside in their respective school districts, between the ages of four and under twenty years. (All over four years and under twenty years of age draw school money.)

Since writing my last letter there has been an awful tragedy committed not far from Medford where we saw the Indians. I suppose you have read about it in the papers. The holdup of train No. 13 in tunnel 13. Where they blew up the train and shot the crew.

But it was not the Indians that did it. At least it is not supposed to be. I didn't tell you about the Indian boys or young men who visited the moonshine still and filled up seven one quart fruit jars with booze they drew out of a barrel containing fermented raisins. They found a dead squirrel in the barrel amongst the mash but that didn't deter them from drinking the booze and getting drunk on it. That is what we call "squirrel whisky."

There are two classes of men in the world. Those who do their duty today and pay what they owe you and forget about it; and those who promise to do it tomorrow, and forget about it. There is another matter that has not escaped our observation, and that is that people universally entertain more crazy ideas upon the subject of politics, than upon any other question except religion.

We are told that a man in Chicago is translating the Bible into a language that the Chicagoans can understand. He will probably commence every chapter with "Now listen" and end each verse with "see?"

I switched off the subject of Oregon schools too soon. We have a compulsory attendance law requiring all children from 8 to 16 years of age to attend school. The minimum number of months to be taught in a year is eight and the minimum salary to be paid a teacher per month is seventy-five dollars. If children reside more than three miles from the school house transportation may be furnished them by the district. If the state, county and elementary apportionments are insufficient to defray the regular and incidental expenditures of the school, the patrons and qualified freeholders of the district may supplement the fund by voting a special tax upon the district for the purpose.

We have the Budget System here in Oregon.

I have been school clerk for this district for twenty years. I noticed in The Brady Standard I received today; date of Oct. 19, a statement from the P. O. Department in distress about the late fad of placing the return address on the back of the letters instead of upon the upper left hand corner where it should be placed.

Yes and there is another crazy fad I wish it would put a stop to, which is practiced by some of the mail order houses; and that is, the practice of placing their own name and address exactly where the addressee's name and postoffice should appear and the name and postoffice of the addressee where their own firm name should be. They have completely reversed the regular order. On one occasion while I was postmaster a parcel was mailed at my office and started on its eastern journey and although it had the words to and from printed in front of the names of addressee and sender, the parcel returned twice to my postoffice within a week's time, and I wrote on it in red ink and underscored the words, "Please send it on!" and then after that it never came back.

I could relate many interesting and amusing incidents in connection with the postoffice business, if I had time to spare. On more than one instance an open circular has been received inside of which a letter (for someone whose address was thousands of miles distant) had slipped and been miscarried thereby causing weeks of unnecessary delay.

I dedicate this letter to our mutual friend, the County Superintendent, W. Marion Deans.

Best Daddy Ever.

Just the best thing—Daddy is—
When he aint got rheumatiz—
Gives me pennies an' good advice
'Bout keepin' clean an' bein' nice,
Sayin' "Please an' "don't deceive"
"Handkerchief instead of sleeve"
Seems jest like that Daddy knew
He was a small boy too—
Second table for him I speak—
When he only got the neck,
Anyhow—he always says—
"Give the kid the best there is"—
An' when Ma sends me off to bed,
Daddy takes the light ahead—
An' holds my hand—an' talks maybe
'Bout the things that used to be,
When he and "Unky" was little boys
An' all about their games an' toys.
What am I goin' to be? Gee whiz!
Goin' to be like Daddy is.
Drather be like him—by Jing
Than President—or anything.
He's like ma says angels is—
When he aint got rheumatiz.

ROBS CALOMEL OF NAUSEA & DANGER

Medicinal Virtues Retained and Improved — Dangerous and Sickening Qualities Removed. Perfected Tablet Called "Calotabs."

The latest triumph of modern science is a "de-nauseated" calomel tablet known to the drug trade as "Calotabs." Calomel, the most generally useful of all medicines thus enters upon a wider field of popularity, purified and refined from those objectionable qualities which have heretofore limited its use.

In biliousness, constipation, headaches and indigestion, and in a great variety of liver, stomach and kidney troubles calomel was the most successful remedy, but its use was often neglected on account of its sickening qualities. Now it is the easiest and most pleasant of medicines to take. One Calotab at bedtime with a swallow of water,—that's all. No taste, no griping, no nausea, no salts. A good night's sleep and the next morning you are feeling fine, with a clean liver, a purified system and a big appetite. Eat what you please. No danger.

Calotabs are sold only in original, sealed packages, price thirty-five cents for the large, family package, ten cents for the small, trial size. Your druggist is authorized to refund the price as a guarantee that you will be thoroughly delighted with Calotabs.—(Adv.)

That's Different

By MORRIS SCHULTZ

(© 1923, Western Newspaper Union.)

"THAT fellow" Lizzie, the blonde manicurist in the hotel, tossed her head scornfully. "I wouldn't go out with him if he was to cover me with diamonds."

"You got a swell chance, Lizzie," responded the telephone girl. "No diamonds growing on him."

"Well, I should say not. Say, Amy, if he asks me again I'm going out with him, just for the fun of it. That's five times he's asked me now; every time he stays here."

"He sure is stuck on you, Lizzie," Amy answered. "He looks kinder cheap to me, though."

"Cheap? I guess it'd take a pair of dentist's pliers to extract anything from him."

Lizzie was a favorite with all the traveling men who stayed at the hotel. In fact she was famous all along the route. She was a jolly companion, in fact possessed all the qualities that traveling men require in their dinner companions, which are presumably only known to traveling men.

Both girls looked after the subject of this conversation as he lingered uncertainly in the lobby of the hotel. His name was Amos Smith, and he traveled in hostelry, and he certainly did not look like the sort of man a girl would want to go out with.

He was five feet six, with a tiny mustache, a sharp face, sleek, plastered hair and a worried, nervous expression. His hands were knobby and his feet were large.

He approached Lizzie with an ingratiating smile. "Morning, Miss Lizzie," he said blandly. "Now would you—wouldn't you—would you come out to dinner with me tonight?"

The little runt did have an engaging smile; Lizzie had to admit that as she looked at him.

"Would I, wouldn't I?" she retorted. "Why—well, I don't see why I shouldn't, Mr. Smith."

She had to drop her head at once to hide the smile that came over Mr. Smith's face. It was a smile of happy simplicity—utter simplicity.

"Well, I guess I'll have to be getting back below to the finger-parlor, Amy," she said. "Sure, Mr. Smith, I'll be ready at six o'clock, if that will suit you."

She turned to Amy as he went away. "Say, I'm going to make him take me to Rusterman's," she said.

"Well, I guess so, Lizzie, and a show afterward," answered the telephone girl. "Make him pay up good; it's only right when he takes a swell girl like you out."

Despite the scorn that Amy poured upon little Smith, she saw with a sort of wistfulness Lizzie, attired in all her war paint, meet Mr. Smith that evening in the lobby. Amos Smith certainly looked queer, and yet—there was something about him . . . he almost looked a gentleman. And all at once Amy found herself beginning to like Lizzie's escort.

"Treat him nice, Lizzie," she whispered to her friend.

"You bet," said Lizzie. "I'll make him give me a swell time."

Amy noticed how carefully Mr. Smith held the door open for Lizzie. "Gee, I guess she's been overlooking something," she said.

She was on duty late—very late that night. It was nearly half-past twelve when finally Mr. Smith and Lizzie appeared. Very ardently he saw her to the desk—she had a room in the hotel. He raised his hat and took his leave.

"My, what a little gentleman!" said Amy. "Well, dear, what sort of time did you have?"

"Oh, middling," said Lizzie, looking down.

"Did he take you to Rusterman's?" "What, him? No, sir, he took me to a dairy lunchroom."

Amy gasped. "Well, of all the mean sneaks!" she exclaimed. "I wouldn't have gone. And a show afterward?"

"Oh, sure! We went to the movies." "Say, how much do you reckon the evening cost him?"

"Oh, maybe two plunks," said Lizzie.

Amy gasped again. "Say, what's the matter?" she demanded. "You don't act natural."

"Why, Amy, he—he asked me to marry him soon as we got outside and so—why, you don't suppose I'd let him throw away his money on swell joints and shows when he's saving up to buy furniture, do you?"

Doc Stirred Up Town.

A doe, lost in Willimantic, Conn., was chased by a dog into the Y. M. C. A. building. It broke the thick glass in the door and bounded into the vestibule, overturning furniture and scaring a visiting minister. It bounded upstairs and into the directors' room, from which it leaped through a window to the yard ten feet below. It then crossed the railroad tracks, and after swimming the Willimantic river, disappeared.

Stewed Geese.

A flock of geese on a farmhouse near Vevey recently drank copiously of some cordial. They immediately started a riot. The farmer fearing they were poisoned, plucked their feathers, which he hoped to sell, and then threw the fowl in a barnhouse. The next morning he was surprised to see the geese come sheepishly out of the barn, still a bit wabby, but otherwise no different from a human being on the morning after.

effect, and contrasts beautifully with the mahogany finish of the woodwork. The hotel office also has woodwork of mahogany finish, with tile effect to harmonize with the tile floor of the lobby. Eleven handsome electric fixtures illuminate the lobby, and all-leather upholstered chairs are provided for the use of the guests.

The dining room is most attractive. Mahogany bentwood chairs are provided, and tables offer seating capacity for 48. The coffee shop, which adjoins, has twelve seats, thus giving a total seating capacity of 60.

The kitchen is complete in every detail, including steam tables, electric coffee urn and all requirements for a strictly up-to-date hotel kitchen. Earl Allen, chef at the St. Angelus for the past five years will be in charge.

A commodious ball room, opening off the lobby, will be used for dancing and also for banquets and luncheons. Arrangements are also being perfected for its use weekly by the Brady Luncheon club.

On the west side is an open air court, which will afford a most pleasant out-door gathering place for summer parties.

As stated at the outset of this article, the exterior of the building is no less attractive than the interior. An awning, 14 ft. in width, is provided along the 75 ft. front of the building on the south and as well for the 90 ft. length of the building on the east side. On the front and east side also are a concrete walk, 14 ft. in width, which provides a pleasant place for out-door rest. Mr. McBurnett will provide substantial chairs for use outdoors during the summer, which assures the popularity of the walk.

The public reception tonight from 6:30 to 8:30, which will dedicate the new building, is to be followed with a dance in the ball room. Refreshments will be served throughout the evening. The following committees will assist in entertaining guests at the reception:

Reception Committee to assist Mr. McBurnett: Ladies: Mrs. Sam McCollum, Mrs. C. T. White, Mrs. J. G. McCall, Mrs. J. S. Anderson, Mrs. G. R. White, Mrs. W. D. Crothers, Mrs. H. W. Zweig. Gentlemen: F. M. Newman, Dr. J. B. Granville, S. W. Hughes, B. A. Hallum, H. N. Cook, G. C. Kirk, J. E. White.

First Floor Committee to guide guests: Sam McCollum, W. D. Crothers, Dr. J. S. Anderson, Dr. J. G. Mc-

Call. Second Floor Committee to guide guests: H. F. Schwenker, A. H. Broad, H. C. Samuels.

Third Floor Committee to guide guests: W. D. Jordan, B. Simpson, C. A. Trigg.

Simultaneously with the formal opening of Hotel Brady, the Trigg Rexall Store No. 2, occupying the corner store room of the hotel building, and Polk's Barber shop No. 2, occupying the store room adjoining the lobby on the east, will have their formal opening. Mr. Trigg has secured a ten-year lease on his building, and is installing a modern drug store that is the last word in appointments. The store will front both south and east. Buffet fixtures, especially built for the store, unique in design, with mahogany finish and French plate glass mirrors, make this a most strikingly attractive store. The soda fountain is of white marble, trimmed in black carrara marble, and is the last word in sanitation and efficiency. Ave Collier, efficient and affable salesman with the Trigg Drug Co., will be in charge. Mr. Trigg and Mr. Collier extend cordial invitation to the public to visit them at the opening night.

The Polk Barber Shop No. 2, will be located just across the side entrance at the rear of the drug store. Equipment has been provided for a three-chair shop, and Oscar Strickland will be in charge, with Bill Parker as assistant. Cary Turner will have charge of the shine chair. The shop is a model, the large French plate glass mirrors being set off by the white vitralite frames and panels and the Tennessee marble base. The chairs are modern and sanitary, with white enameled trimmings. The bath room, adjoining, adds to the completeness and convenience of the shop. Mr. Polk and his popular assistants will be pleased to greet all their many friends upon this occasion.

The Western Union telegraph office for the past week has been comfortably domiciled in the store building just to the west of the main entrance to the lobby. Oscar Guestinger, local manager, is delighted with his new quarters and the handsome fashion in which the office has been equipped, and he, too, will be delighted to have the guests call and inspect the new Western Union quarters during the reception tonight.
