THE DOMESTIC WOMAN IN POLI-

(From Human Interest Editorials)

In the states where women recently acquired the suffrage, they are often asked how they have enjoyed the experience of voting. The great majority of those who east their ballots on November 7th, have rather enjoyed their participation in the great game. They will say that it has broadened their point of view, and given them new contacts with life.

But many women of domestic nature are less enthusiastic. Their devotion to home goes so far as to fill their whole heart. They watch over the family nest with auxious care, and guard against its deterioration with loving hand. ery article of furniture and equipment, is the subject of their watchful concern. They toll lovingly for husband and children.

To many women whose thoughts are thus centered, the stormy conflicts of politics seem remote and distasteful. They feel bewildered when asked to radr een verdiet on issues that seem

This type of woman has somewhat assed out of fashion. But it developed lovely personalities, as sturdy as oak, as sunshiny as a flower in their garden. from this seculded ideal. She has become a member of the civic body and expects to take her share in community leadership. The majority of women will never retire into the former limited conception of feminine interests.

So it looks as if the old fashioned woman must either overcome her aversion to political activity, or fail to take her share of public burdens. If she will put the same soud sense into citizenship that she has devoted to domestic concerns, she will be a tremendous force for good government.

Watch the crowd flock into a city store after | mother could grow up to be as tough a sale is announced, and your own as that one," eyes will prove it.

Over and over again, small and obscure firms have gone ahead in a short time, as the result of judicious publiam sandwiches, please, to take with licity. When a store tells about its me. goods and solicits patronage, people feel a desire to see the merchandise ing pigs-a pair. thus offered, and they also think that such a place is a live one that will give good service.

Many store double their sales in a short time through using regular publicity. But the expense of such a store did not double from the increase of trade. Its overhead costs for interest, taxes, rent, salaries, etc. would have increased but very little. And its operating expenses would not come anywhere near doubling. Its total costs might not be more than 25 per cent above the figures on the old basis. Consequently the charge to be made against each article for overhead and me wash the dishes every evening." running expenses would be much less than previously. The store could sell then." stuff for less money than before.

Advertising enables the enterprising merchant to do business on a bigger scale and take advantage of special opportunities. If the non-advertiser is offered a large lot of goods at a special price, he might feel that the deal was too big for him to swing with his regular trade.

But the advertiser would know that by announcing a special sale, he could get the public coming to his place, and could work off those goods in a short time. He could afford to sell them at a low price, and the deal would pay through the big volume of sales in a brief period.

Thus the advertising store can handle large deals at a profit both to itself and the public, and newspaper publicity is one of the biggest forces tending to reduce the cost of distributing merchan dise.

About The Light Maker

WE were groping our way across the street inter-section which was hidden in the pitch blackness of a moonless midnight when we were startled by the rattle of the dead arc-lamp above us. Then we heard the creak of the pulley that held it and we knew that somewhere close to us in that dark stillness was a man feeding out the rope to lower the lamp to the street level. We waited and watched. Presently a flash lamp was laid on the ground and revealed the lame lamp and its doctor. By the dim reflection we saw him place a platform which he presently mounted and then went

Walking toward him we announced our approach by the inquiry, "I suppose that step you are standing on is insulated?"

"Yes," he replied. "With glass knobs?" we observed,-by way of making conversation to glean a morsel of electrical in-

"Stand back a little," he said, "the wind might sweep the lamp over to you, and you're on the ground.' "I suppose you're perfectly safe on your platform?" was our next feeler.

"Safe as long as I use but one hand at a time," he said. "By using two hands I can easily make a short circuit through my body."
"That would kill you of course?" we added knowingly. "Maybe not," he replied.

"It isn't the instant shock that kills but the continued took. The current cooks the blood cells. If enough of the blood cells become so cooked that the other cells cannot cure them, you die. But if most of your h cells are left normal you will live. I short-circuited a current that was three times the voltage here. It was so great that instead of holding me it repelled me; it threw me to the ground. I was unconscious many hours. But as you see, I was not killed. The burning process did not let the burning process. did not last long enough."

"Does this street meet with Jenifer down there?" he said, pointing to an are a block below. "I am not much acquainted about this district. I am a student. Good night," he said, and he was off to lighten up the dark highways of men.

We didn't learn much about electricity in that curb talk in the midnight hour, but we learned again the scholar's duty. He is a wasteful student who does not use that which he knows for the benefit of other men. It is the soldier scholar who serves, and who justifies the universities of the world. The man who finds in culture only a source of self-gratification, who is contented with the mere possession of culture, who is not impatient to use it, who is unwilling to take the risk of getting short-cir-cuited in the currents of life that he might while he lives do his part to light up the dark avenues of the world, is not living true to the highest purposes of life. He serves a high service who goes about alone, cautious, but fearless, spreading light in this still dark and trouble world, and giving it without the applause of those whe profit by it and who never see the good-deed done.

JORDAN-BRANDENBERGER

A beautiful church wedding was selemaized Thursday evening, November 30th at 7 o'clock, when Mr. Ernest M. Jordan and Miss Clara Brandenberger were united in the sacred bonds of matrimony.

To the strains of the wedding march, "Bridal Chorus" played by Mrs. Hilton Leifeste, sister of the groom, the contracting parties entered unattended and stopped under an improvised arch where the ceremony was performed by Rev. J. Kleinknecht. During the ceremony Mrs. Leifeste softly played "The Flower Song."

The church was artistically decorated in green and white.

The bride was attired in a beautiful dark blue dress of silk canton crepe, with hat to match. She carried a large bouquet of white Chrysanthemums and

The groom wore the usual blue.

The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Frank Brandenberger, of Hilda. Her charming disposition has won many friends.

The groom is a son of Mr. and Mrs. Ernest Jordan, of Art. and is a young man whose sterling qualities are admired by all.

Immediately after the ceremony, a reception was held at the beautiful home of the bride's parents, where Mr. and Mrs. Jordan received congratulations and many beautiful 'presents. Then the invited guests were ushered into the dining room which was most appropriately decorated with autumnleaves, and were served with punch and cakes.

In the afternoon at 5 o'clock, immediate relatives of the contracting parties were served with a bounteous turkey dinner.

Vote Was 208 to 184. Measure Makes No Mention of Liquor.

Washington. - The administration pipping bill, around which was waged the most bitter partisan fight of the present congress, was passed Wednesday by the house with 24 votes to spare. Sixty-nine republicans broke away from their organization and opposed the bill, while four democrats changes in the bill as reported by the "merchant marine fund," would of them gave congress the right to nage dues and duties amounting, acappropriate annually out of the merchant marine fund the money neces- $4,000,000 annually and 10 per cent sary to carry out the provisions of the act. Another provided that industrial ships, such as those owned by the Standard Oil Company, should not collect compensation on any portion of a vessel carrying cargo of the ship's owners.

The provision of the bill giving income tax reductions to shippers sending their goods abroad in American vessels was stricken out and the house also stipulated that the steamship Leviathan should not be sold for less than the cost of reconditioning, $8,-

Purchasers of shipping board vessels would pay not less than 414 per cent interest on deferred payments instead of 5 per cent, as originally stipulated in the bill, under an amendment adopted, and money loaned to prospective constructors would bring the government not less than 41/4 per cent interest, instead of 2 per cent.

provide for the sale to private owners of the government's merchant fleet and the establishment in the a 12-months contest. treasury of a revolving fund to be loaned to American citizens for the The house made a number of construction of ships. Another fund, merchant marine committee. One be established from proceeds of toncording to sponsors of the bill, to of the amount of customs duties, which would total $30,000,000 per year.

> Compensation on a graduated scale would be extended shipowners out of this fund, according to the speed, size and type of the vessel. The compensation would be for periods not exceeding ten years to shipowners making contracts with the government and the vessels would be classified in the American bureau of shipping. Ships! receiving compensation would be required to carry crews of which at least one-half at first and after three years two-thirds, exclusive of licensed officers, are American citizens. An exception was made in the stewards department of passenger ships.

As a measure to prevent excess profits the bill stipulates that profits over 10 per cent must be returned to the treasury until the amount of compensation a ship has received is repaid. The bill provides that the shipping board in developing its sales policy shall endeavor to continue all existing steamship routes and regular services.

One half the immigration coming into the United States must come in American ships, under a provision of the bill, and another section would authorize the president to turn over the transport service to the shipping board for disposal and make contracts with private steamship owners for ransportation for the army.
