Agricultural College Offers Part Time Courses

Students Must Spend Half Their Time on Farms.

The North Texas Agricultural College at Arlington is going to offer half-time agricultural courses wherein the students will spend half the time in school and half on some approved farm within easy access from the College.

It is felt that this plan will afford a student an opportunity to earn enough while going to school to pay most of his expenses. The students will work in pairs. While one student of each pair spends six weeks in school, the other is working on the farm, and at the end of each period they exchange places, following this plan for two years.

The course of study is carefully designed for boys who will not attend a senior agricultural college for a regular four-year course in scientific agriculture. It is of a semi-technical nature, thoroughly practical, and planned to meet the needs of the intelligent "dirt" farmer.

The students for this course will be selected very carefully. They will be "hand picked" to represent a high order of intelligence and a high standard of young manhood. They should be at least eighteen years of age and have either a ninth grade education or its equivalent although the ability to read well is the essential consideration.

The farms upon which the students will work will be chosen with the utmost care by reason of the actual experience they will afford the student in sound farm practice. Most boys even though brought up on a farm, have had rather narrow experience. For instance, boys reared upon cotton farms in the blackland sections usually have little knowledge of the breeding of purebred livestock or of fruit growing, and their experience with farm equipment is limited largely to the lister plow and cultivator. The North Texas Agricultural College believes that by placing these boys upon up-to-date farms well equipped with modern labor-saving machinery and purebred livestock, they have an exceptional opportunity to observe and to gain a much more varied experience.

During the first year the students will be placed largely upon general farms in order that they may become acquainted with combinations of crops and livestock employed in diversified farming. During the second year they will have the privilege of working upon a dairy, poultry, fruit or other specialized farms.

This course should have a special appeal to those who expect to become actual farmers. It affords an opportunity for an agricultural education to ambitious boys of limited means, qualifying them both by training and experience for taking charge of general farms, dairies, poultry plants, herds of registered livestock, fruit farms, truck farms, etc.

School Will Open September 12th

At a recent meeting of the school board the date for opening school was set for Monday, September 12th. The indications are that there will be an increased attendance over last year. Last year the attendance was around 500. This year the enrollment is expected to go over that mark during the term.

Superintendent Price reports that a competent faculty has been employed by the school board and that everything will be in readiness for a successful school year. The work in the High School Department will be further strengthened on account of the additional credits granted by the Department of Education and the grades will be further systematized in order to do even more effective work than has been done in the past.

There will be a number of new teachers with the school. About one half of the number will be new to the school. Following are the members of the school faculty: Superintendent, L. L. Price. High School instructors, Harmon Campbell, T. White, J. G. Bishop, Miss Elizabeth Bond, Miss Hammock, Miss Karnes. Grades, Miss Cora Little, Miss Edith Love, Miss Eads, Miss Neel, Miss Campbell, Miss Thomas, Mrs. Walter Grissom, Miss Claudie Ledger.

Next week an assignment of the teachers and an outline of the work for the high school department will appear.

Elevator Will Close For Repairs

The Sudan Grain and Elevator Company announce that the elevator will be shut down for repairs on Saturday, August 27 and remain closed down for three weeks, during which time only small amounts of thrashed grain can be handled. Corn in the ear and maize, and other head feed can be handled as usual.

The elevator will be thoroughly gone over and put into first class condition for the fall business and many new improvements will be made in ever respect.

Does Co-Operating Marketing California and Other States Pay in Dollars and Cents?

What is the motive back of the great Co-operative Marketing movement now attacking the United States? Why are the thinking class of farmers becoming more and more dissatisfied with the old dumping system of marketing their products? They cannot help comparing the financial returns other industries are receiving with the financial returns of the farmer. What resource has our part of the state other than agricultural resources? None. Then, how can we hope for success unless we bring at least a reasonable percent of the money our products sell for back to our county? How can we do this? We, as farmers, have got to give the world a product they want, of the quality they want, and in the quality they want, if we want to get the price we want. We saw people actually doing that very thing in four different states, and making a success of it. They didn't do it as individuals; they did it through organization and co-operation.

Colorado is one of the young states in co-operative marketing. The Potato Growers Association has been in operation only four years, and yet they handle 42 per cent of all the potatoes of Colorado, $20,000,000 worth of potatoes having been sold through the organization in that length of time.

The Pinto Bean Growers Association is less than two years old, and yet they have made great strides toward creating a demand for their product by introducing recipes for preparing beans in many different ways. They have also invented a grading machine for producing quality product.

The individual who produces and markets his product must sell to whoever will buy at whatever price is offered. But through organization a market can be sought, the product placed there at the time needed, and in the quantity needed.

Mr. Edmondson, of the Utah State Poultry Association, told us that the first thing that Association did after it was organized was to send a representative to find a market and learn the quality of product required. New York and Los Angeles were the markets found, and today they are receiving from 2-1-2 cents to 5 cents per dozen more for their eggs because of quality and standardization, than the people of New York and Los Angeles are receiving. On July 13th, the producers of poultry and eggs in the Utah State Poultry and Egg Association were receiving 30 cents per doz. for grade "A" eggs and 50 cents each for friers. They also receive a bonus every six months. $27,000 bonus being turned back to producers in June.

California, not only teaches that co-operative marketing pays the producers in dollars and but it actually demonstrates it. Dr. Keene, of the Agricultural Department, of the California A. and M. College at Sacramento said, "Without co-operating marketing in California, there would be no agriculture. Ninety four per cent of all the almonds of the United States are grown in California. Eighty-five per cent of these almonds are marketed through the Almond Growers Association at an average price of 28 cents per pound according to E. J. Nutter, President, Almond Growers Association. What are you receiving per pound for butter fat? At Petaluma, California, we were told the average advance price for a year was 44 cents per lb., with an additional dividend every six months. Here the dairy products from 16,000 cows are marketed co-operatively, the bi-products such as dried skim milk and dried buttermilk being utilized on the poultry farms. These are joint associations and the two work together nicely.

In the great fruit arer of California we drove miles and miles through fruit ranches, and past rural homes. But it was hard for us to realize they were rural homes, because the improvements and conveniences bespoke of the city. we could plainly see that the money was being returned to these farmers for their products.

At a meeting of the board of directors of The California Fruit Farmers Exchange we heard the following report from the committee on finance. Bank deposits show 54,750,000 for this year up to present time. Deposit for June $11,500,000.

We were invariably told that Agricultural success in California is due to a combination of the following: Organization, Standardization, and Co-operative distribution, with a religious loyalty on the part of the growers to all three phases of agriculture.

Baptist Revival

Fish Not Brain Food.

It used to be believed that certain foods, especially fish and other foods containing phosphorus, were especially valuable for the gray matter of the brain. This is not believed any more. Brain cells apparently use the same kinds of food materials as all other living cells do. The best way to feed the brain well is to keep the body in good health.

Books of Buddha.

The sacred books of Buddhism are: The Pitaka, containing the discourses of Buddha; the Dharma, setting forth the doctrines of ethics of the people; the Vinaya, containing the rules for the priests, and the various ceremonies.
