School News.

Most of the school news of this week was prepared by the members of the third-year English class after a week's study of newspapers. The class studied the various kinds of news and departments and decided to put out a paper of their own. Each member selected the department which he wished to edit.

From time to time these young folks will furnish news from their department.

Miss Kathryn Walker of Amherst visited with us Tuesday. Miss Walker spoke complimentary of our school and says she would like to be with us.

At the present time the 7th grade is the largest grade in school. To date it has enrolled 52. Miss Cora Little is the teacher.

Seniors Organize--The Senior Class met and organized. The following officers were elected: Melvin Robertson, President; Clovis West, Vice President; Frances Gaddy, Secretary-Treasurer; Marie Morrow, Reporter; Minnie Bell White, Yell and Song Leader. Miss Bond was chosen Sponser for the class. There are twenty six members in the Senior Class.

SCHOOL SPIRIT

Martin Shuttlesworth

Beyond doubt the Sudan School has the best spirit of any school on the South Plains. There is more "pep" in circulation in this school than can be found in any other school of its size. By spirit, I mean the amount, the kind, the source, and the display of that spirit.

One can read "school spirit" in every pupil in the entire school. One can see it smiling upon their faces. One can see school spirit on the faces of every pupil as he greets his teachers each day and it is further displayed in the courteous deportment of one student to another.

Sudan has the right kind of school spirit. It is not the spirit of the battlefield, but of order, system, and respect. I can truthfully say that our school has fewer outlaws in it than any other school of so many pupils. There are very few belligerent persons in Sudan School.

Sudan boys and girls have respect for their teachers and classmates. That spirit is found also in the pupils of the grammar grades. It is shown from the fact that even among the boys and girls there are few or no discords and contentions. The spirit of order and obedience is in them.

The high school pep squad show a good example of our school spirit. Their yells and rahs would make high spirit boil in any one's blood. These high spirited girls are not ashamed of what they stand for and for what they support.

The teachers truly have the right spirit. They are reasonable, friendly, kind and considerate to all pupils. As a result grouches are few, and good will, will usually prevail in our school.

KNOW YOUR TEACHERS

Herman Campbell, principal in the high school, is teaching for the first time. He is a graduate of Abilene Christian College, having received his degree in the class of 1927.

Mr. Campbell acts as registrar for the 9th, 10th, and 11th grades and teaches Chemistry, General Science, American History and a section of the 9th English.

Ted White, athletic coach and registrar for the 8th grade, is from Daniel Baker College. He is teaching for the first time.

Mr. White teaches History, Civics, Book-keeping and directs boy's athletic.

SPORTS

Bill Lenderson and Earl Allen

In the last week, the girls and Mr. Price have lined off the basketball court and have started practice.

Mr. Bishop and Mr. Campbell, members of the faculty, have been cleaning off the tennis court. They had a game one evening last week; but the full particulars of its outcome have not been published.

Ted White, coach, and a few boys of the Thundering Herd met at the High School Building, Saturday afternoon for "skull practice." A few plays were discussed and the weak points of the team which played Hale Center Friday afternoon were taken up.

When Coach White called for candidates for the football team, a few weeks ago, he was greeted by seven former letter men and nine others. Though several of the boys admitted to liking smoking and other stimulants, they have been training carefully and are constantly gaining speed and wind.

After scrimmaging with volunteers from town, the Herd met and elected Melvin, (Dink) Robertson captain for the year.

During a hard workout a week ago, Linesman Claude Blanchard received a knock which resulted in a fractured collar bone. He was rushed to town and his injuries dressed.

During a scrimmage with the boys from town, Pfeiffer (Fat) Ramby received a deep cut over the right eye. Though it required two stitches to close the gash, the "Dashing Fullback" reported for practice the next afternoon.

The Thundering Herd is yet mournful after the Hale Center "Greenies" turned their stamping grounds into a slaughtering pen Friday afternoon. The Greenies left Sudan with a 6-0 victory and eleven tails trailing from their belts.

The lone touchdown which won for Hale Center was made in the first quarter. After that the Herd resisted the driving plunges of the visitors and played their part of the game. Now they are trimming themselves for the return game which they are to play later in the season.

The outlook for a tennis team, both in singles and in doubles is very good. Tennis last year received comparatively little attention, but greater interest is being shown this year and the coaches are hoping for a good team. The Junior class will be especially well represented.

FOOT BALL

Helen Williams

It's a rough, and a tumble,
A snatch and a fumble
For the ball, from beginning to end.

They fall, and they roll,
In a rush for the goal
Till they're tired, and all
Out of wind.

They rest for awhile
Then they're ready to smile
At the foe, though he's Stronger than they.
And when the times up
Though they've lost all
Their luck,
They're ready to call it
A day.

PEP! RAH--RAH.

The peppiest of the high school girls met last week and organized a pep squad. Thalia Parker was elected yell leader. Yells were practiced regularly at noon hour getting in condition to assist in the game that was played on the Sudan grounds last Friday.

Thursday morning in chapel the girls showed their ability and willingness to yell and they did still better at the game Friday afternoon.

The squad has again resumed their practice and are making much headway toward learning new yells and songs. The latest gossip among the members of the squad is that suits will flash in the sun at the next game so that the squad may be seen as well as heard--and you may be sure that they will be heard.

The "Herd" had the first bitter taste of defeat Friday afternoon when they met the fast eleven of Hale Center. The game was one of the best that Sudan has ever been privileged to stage. Much head work and hard playing was done by both teams. Someone remarked to the players at the close of the game; "Well boys they beat you." This was the reply: "Yes but they can say they like not have done it." No truer words have been spoken since the time Chaucer said to Patrick Henry, "Together we stand, divided we fall," and Columbus overhearing Chaucer's remark spoke up and said "Just give me liberty or give me death."

The "Herd" displayed wonderful defence work, but lacked confidence in their plays to show the pep in the offence they should have shown. On a whole the Herd was wonderful in their beginning game. They were battling against a team that had been under the guidance of their coach for more than a year and had been in actual training more than three fourths of a month longer than the "Herd."

The fever of the opposing team went rather high when those forward passes went sailing by their heads in droves. It is still a question that only the wise of tomorrow will be able to answer whether the men H. C. were dizzy from seeing so many forward passes or were sick at their stomach, any way we do know they often had to lie down during the game to recuperate from that awful plunge of the "Herd". The Hale Center team wasn't trying to pull any grand stand plays when they made their touchdown to have their coach word to that effect: "They are all just country boys."

Mr. and Mrs. T. A. Nelson and children of south of town spent Sunday in the home of Mr. and Mrs. J. M. Shuttlesworth in Sudan.

W. F. Lynch was in town Wednesday. Mr. Lynch stated that he and his son were preparing to sow 200 acres of wheat this season.

J. W. Horn, of Littlefield, was a business visitor in Sudan, Friday.

Mrs. J. W. McMeans and daughters, Miss Dixie and Mrs. Cecil Yoder, spent Sunday at Shallowater with friends.

Mr. and Mrs. B. R. Haney were called to Dallas the first of the week on account of the illness of Mr. Haney's father.

Honoring Mrs. W. I. White

Complimentary to Mrs. W. I. White of Los Angeles, who reached another milestone in life, her mother, Mrs. C. E. Yoder, was hostess Wednesday afternoon to a few friends who came to wish Mrs. White many more happy birthdays.

The color scheme of canary and white was carried out to the most minute detail. Canary crepe paper was draped from the center of the room, and the house was aglow with gorgeous yellow dahlias.

The afternoon diversion was spent in playing "42" with Mrs. F. C. Broyles holding high score.

Then the hostess appeared bearing a beautiful white cake with twenty-two lighted canary colored candles. Each of the guests were permitted to extinguish a few of the candles and make a wish for the honoree--all of which we are quite sure will come true.

Then Miss Bonnie Faye, who assisted her mother, served a delicious iced collation, which carried out the color scheme--Contributed.

Truly a Deversified Farm

F. H. Weimhold, visited at the home of Mr. and Mrs. W. H. Horn, with their son, Lonnie, Sunday. Forrest brought back a report of the Horn farm operations, from February to date, which is indeed interesting, and given below:

Mr. and Mrs. Horn are milking 10 cows, from which they have sold $471.00 worth of cream to date; four bull calves were sold for $43.00; and six fine heifer calves have been added, which may safely be figured at $150.00.

The skimmed milk is used to feed pigs, chickens and turkeys. Four brood sows farrowed 37 pigs of which 19 were sold for $118.00, 13 remain on the farm. 150 hens are kept on the Horn farm, and are laying nicely. 107 young roosters have been caponized, and are growing into two and three dollar capons. 120 turkeys gobble and "putt" on the Horn farm.

Mr. Horn has 200 acres of fine crop that is maturing nicely; 60 acres of corn, 35 of maize, 75 of nigeria, 35 acres of sudan and 60 of wheat.

MAKING SELECTION OF WASHING MACHINE

Various Types of Washing Machines on Exhibition.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

Most women realize the convenience of a washing machine, especially if it can be run by electricity, but they are often puzzled when it comes to making a selection from among the many different makes. All of the makes on the market can be classified into four types, according to the principle on which they operate. Selection becomes a matter of personal preference for a particular operating principle. Each type has its advantages. In all, the washing is done by some device that forces soapy water through the clothes until they are clean.

The bureau of home economics of the United States Department of Agriculture has a permanent loan exhibit of a number of makes, differing within each type only in detail of construction. A visit to this exhibit would be a help in deciding which machine was best for one's purpose.

Cylinder Type of Washer.

The cylinder type of washer has a perforated cylinder of metal or wood in which the clothes are placed. This revolves in an outer container holding soap and water. The cylinder has blunt projections on the inside, which carry the clothes along as it revolves. It reverses its direction automatically from time to time. The water gushes through the perforations and cleanses the clothes. There is a second type of cylinder machine in which the cylinder is in the form of a flattened perforated box which moves back and forth so that the clothes tumble from one end to the other.

The "dolly" principle consists of a revolving device suspended in the center of the tub, fastened either to the lid or to the bottom. This carries the clothes first in one direction and then

In the other. The corrugations of the sides and bottom of the tub help to cleanse the clothes partly by friction.

In the oscillating type of machine, the tub itself rocks and tilts back and forth, tossing the clothes from one end to the other, and the water moves in a curving path.

The vacuum-cup type of machine is a development of the funnel on a stick device in vogue twenty or more years ago. The soapy water is forced through the clothes by the pressure and suction produced by the cups.

Buying Electric Machine.

When buying an electric machine, specify the voltage of the local current, and whether it is direct or alternating, and if alternating, the cycle. Consider the shape and size of the machine in relation to the room, where you expect to use it. Be sure it is not too large. Choose a flat top if you are likely to want it for a working surface between wash days. Buy a machine of the right capacity for your average washing, and of the right height for you to operate. Find out whether the manufacturer's repair service is easily available. Simple construction is advisable. The frame should be strong and rigid, but it should be possible to roll the machine about on casters. The mechanism and gearing must be properly covered for safety and cleanliness, and the motor should be located where it will not get wet. Ask how often the machine must be oiled and whether that can be done easily. Any movable parts, such as a cylinder, should be light in weight and easy to handle. The water outlet should be practical for easy drainage. See whether the wringer can be used when the machine is washing. Consider the possible advantages of a centrifugal drier.

Veal Timbales Provide Unusual Dish for Lunch

Perhaps you have not thought of using your custard cups to prepare a meat dish. Timbales, which are dainty combinations of eggs, bread crumbs and other ingredients, are made in ramekins or custard cups, baked in a pan of surrounding water, and managed in much the same way as souffles or custards. For lunch or supper they provide just the "different" touch that makes food interesting. Veal almost always tastes better if a few drops of lemon are added to it, and if you like it, Worcestershire sauce may be used sparingly, too, as a seasoning. Chicken, lamb or any other left-over meat may be used instead of veal in making the timbales. The recipe is from the bureau of home economics.

Veal Timbales.

- 1 pound veal
- 1 egg
- 1/4 teaspoonful salt
- Onion juice
- 1 cupful milk or meat broth
- 1 teaspoonful finely chopped parsley
- 1 tablespoonful flour
- 1 tablespoonful butter
- Lemon juice to taste

Simmer the veal in a small amount of water until tender, then put through the meat grinder, using the fine knife. Prepare a cream sauce of the butter, the flour and the liquid. Add to this the well-beaten eggs, the seasonings, and the meat. Mix well. Grease custard cups and pour in the mixture. Bake for one-half hour in a pan surrounded by water. Turn the timbales out, and serve hot.

Good Chowchow Is Made From Brined Vegetables

A good chowchow is made from the following ingredients, according to the bureau of home economics. All the vegetables have been brined and must be freshened by standing in cold water overnight or longer. Some salt must always be left in vegetables that are being freshened for pickles. After the vegetables are freshened they are drained, mixed and chopped together. The spices, vinegar and sugar are brought to the boiling point and mixed with the vegetables. Stir until they are well blended and let stand overnight. In the morning stir well and pack into sterilized jars. Seal and store in a cool place. Processing will help to keep the pickles but will soften the texture. The amount given below yields three quarts.

- 1 cup small white onions
- 1 cup cauliflower in small sections
- 1 cup cut string beans
- 1/2 green peppers, medium size
- 1 red pepper
- 1 teaspoon celery seed
- 1/2 teaspoon mustard seed
- 1/2 teaspoon horseradish
- 1 cup sugar
- 1/2 cup cider vinegar

EXTRA MEAL GOOD FOR ACTIVE BOY

Needs More Calories Than His Parents.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

The active growing boy sometimes needs more calories in his daily ration than his father or mother, if they are people of more or less quiet habits. His food must be wisely chosen to supply the elements he needs for developing his body and creating his apparently inexhaustible energy. A mid-morning or mid-afternoon snack consisting of a fruit drink, or milk, and perhaps a lettuce and whole-wheat bread sandwich is a good thing for the boy, according to the bureau of home economics, especially if he has just used up most of the fuel provided by the preceding meal in playing baseball or on a visit to the nearest swimming hole. Food of this kind given rather as an extra meal than as "eating between meals" will not dull his appetite for the next family gathering at the dinner table.

Community Building

Life, Beauty of House Depend on the Builder

The proper finishing of the exterior of the home is a subject of much thought and study on the part of the architect, and a matter which requires the utmost skill on the part of the builder in carrying out the plans. To cover the technique of good exterior construction would require a volume. These brief generalities are offered as suggestions.

All outside construction should be such as to provide rapid drainage of water and to prevent the accumulation of debris. No inclosed flat spaces on which water remains should be permitted. All horizontal work should be given a slope that will insure good drainage. All joints at the end of horizontal work should be constructed so as to prevent the seepage of water underneath.

The liberal use of metal flashings over windows and doors, in gutters, and on cornices will greatly lengthen the life of the building. On the outside edge at the ends of drip caps and window sills, an elevated edge of metal will prevent water dripping over the ends. This is especially beneficial on stucco construction, as it prevents streaking of the wall.

All end joints in the gutter should be liberally daubed with white lead. White lead should also be used in the joints in the porch floor.

Artistic Color Effects Add to Beauty of Home

Chief among the reasons why brick is often painted is that paint brings color variety to this material. Of course, there are a number of technical and practical reasons why many people prefer to have their brick homes protected with paint, but it is safe to warrant that color advantages play a strong and prominent part in influencing their decision.

"Can brick be painted, though, and just what effects may be obtained?" many people ask.

To the first part of the question the answer is, of course, "Yes," while the second half requires elaboration. The fundamental principle underlying successful painting is to adapt the type of finish to the material used. So, although brick may be painted nearly any color of the spectrum, it is wiser and in better taste to paint brick as brick and not try to make it look like something else. It is conceivable that under certain conditions a brick house might be painted white or cream with green trim, but since that color scheme is irrevocably associated with Colonial houses with clapboard siding, it is not in the best of taste to advise this color scheme unreservedly.

Boosting Does It

Gadsden is a city of boosters, who boost not alone with the tongue but with action. More of the latter is always to be desired and there is always opportunity for some criticism. The latter is often just another name for constructive effort. To search out the mistakes and to fight for their correction is to assist in the forward drive. The good work is on the daily program. Let there be no lagging in the constant campaign for an even greater Gadsden. It will make itself just so much, and beyond that its citizens must carry it.—Gadsden Times.

City Planning

The city planning movement is making great strides in America. Almost every community that has passed beyond the crossroads stage is at least talking about a city plan. Such cities as Chicago, Detroit, Cleveland and Los Angeles are looking not years but decades ahead. But city planning brings about a new attitude toward growth. Enlightened cities begin to put emphasis upon the well-being of present inhabitants, and this well-being is not always advanced when real estate values are kited and new population is brought in more rapidly than it can be cared for.

Lighting for Schools

Because of eye strain in schools due to improper lighting the Illuminating Engineering society in the United States has framed a lighting code for schools which authorities consider adequate. The only states whose schools are reported to conform to this code are New York, Michigan, Minnesota and Wisconsin. Other states and territories are studying the code with the idea of applying it.

To the artistic eye a home is a picture, with the house as the center of interest, around which group, in pleasing composition, those other elements that create an atmosphere of restful charm and quiet privacy. How can such a "homescape" be complete without a fence of appropriate design?

FARM POULTRY

GOOD WEIGHT FOR SIZE OF CHICKEN

"Heft" your chickens often. Every fowl should be a good weight for the size. Birds that are "going light" will not show loss of weight for some time after they begin losing. Trust the hand rather than the eye for weight.

Poultry cutters expect light-colored shanks and beaks in yellow-legged hens and pullets after a season of laying, but light-colored shanks and beaks in pullets that have not commenced to lay, indicate lack of vitality.

A bright-eyed, alert female that flies down from the roost at the first break of light; that scratches and sings till the last bird is on the roost, does not need handling to show she has vigor. It is the inconspicuous female that is apt to become a carrier of disease. The kind of hen that will not see an open door; the fowl that squawks when she is cornered. These half-sick hens go around as in a fog.

The healthy, productive hen is curious and friendly. She shows an intelligent interest in her surroundings; she looks thrifty. Human qualities in chickens have a commercial value just as good disposition in horses and cattle is of value commercially. One can't tell the condition of a fowl without handling. Fowls that can be handled without upsetting them nervous ly are the kind to keep.

Fattening Turkeys Is Simple Kind of Work

Fattening turkeys for the Thanksgiving market, or for the home table, is the simplest kind of work. Although people confine chickens in coops and pens and stuff them with feed, the successful turkey raiser usually lets his flock run free in the fields and gives them all they want to eat twice a day of good yellow corn. During the first part of October one feed per day of yellow corn is usually sufficient, but during the last three weeks before killing time they should have all they will eat, morning and night. The exercise they take makes them hungry, and they consume large quantities of the corn and, being healthy, they turn it into flesh and fat with but little loss. Moreover, they pick up considerable feed on the range and in that way make up a ration that makes them full fleshed and fat at killing time.

If it is necessary to separate those to be fattened from the rest of the flock, they can be put in a large yard, but as the usual thing they will not fatten so well as when allowed free range, but will get nervous and spend most of their time trying to get out. Under these conditions they require more careful feeding also.

How to Determine Body Conformation of Fowls

To determine the body conformation, grasp the bird in both hands, holding the head toward the body. Span the back with both hands, pointing the fingers toward the keel bone. Shuffle the bird around between the hands in order to get its shape and handling qualities. Care should be taken not to pinch or hurt the bird in any way. A pinch producer will show a long keel bone. The body and abdomen should show capacity. The pelvic bone and abdomen should be free of fat at the close of a heavy laying season.

Capacity Is Essential in Good Laying Hens

Capacity is essential in the laying hen. If a hen is to lay an egg a day, or even one every other day, she must have room for digestive organs that will handle considerable food. The evidence of capacity in a hen's body is shown by the spread of the pelvic bones and the distance between the pelvic bones and the end of the breast bone. In a nonlaying hen these bones are close together. The handling of a few hens will readily show this difference. Length and breadth of body are also essential in securing capacity.

Lime for Chicks

An adequate supply of lime in the ration is important for growing chicks. Experiment station results have revealed the fact that the lack of this element leads to a drain upon the reserve supply of the bones and stunts growth. Even in the case of matured hens, a lack of lime will lower egg production. For mature fowls, oyster shell or other inorganic compounds are sufficient, but not for growing chicks. Lime must be added in the form of vegetable foods.

Vitamines and Minerals

Heavy laying fowls require from three to four pounds of oyster shell per hen per year. Even though the hens have enough protein and other food to produce a large number of eggs, they will cut their production down to meet the amount of minerals which they have for shells. A balanced ration does not mean merely supplying protein to balance the carbohydrates and fats, it also means supplying minerals and vitamins.

Eye Injuries Expensive

In one Eastern state alone during the past year, 720 eye injuries to industrial workers were reported. Seven of these accidents resulted in total blindness and 349 employees suffered the total loss of one eye and 363 partial loss. In compensation, this cost the employers $1,300,000 and it is computed that the indirect loss under such circumstances is four times that of the direct loss, so that this brings the total up to $5,000,000. Many of these accidents could have been prevented by proper precautions by the employees or employers.

Six Good Points of Right Driving

Experts Tell How Man at Wheel Should Handle Car at All Times.

"What are the characteristics of a good driver?" This was the question which Thomas P. Henry, president of the American Automobile association, recently asked a jury of seven nationally known traffic experts.

"Their replies were strikingly similar," declared Fred H. Caley, secretary of the Cleveland Automobile club, in making public an analysis of their opinions, "for these seven men were entirely in accord on six major points of good driving." They are:

- 1—The good driver must have a high degree of self-control at all times.
- 2—The good driver always maintains his car in such shape that it responds easily and quickly to his every command.
- 3—The good driver regulates his speed in accordance with the conditions of the road on which he is traveling and never exceeds a rate of speed above which he cannot stop within the "clear course ahead."
- 4—The good driver invariably exercises due regard for the rights of others to enjoy safety on the road.
- 5—The good driver recognizes his responsibility as a protector or guardian of the safety of pedestrians and by using caution at all times will eliminate, so far as possible, accidents due to the carelessness of others.
- 6—The good driver keeps his mind on what he is doing; is always watchful and alert.

In announcing the results of this questionnaire, Mr. Caley remarked that it is more necessary to instill within motorists a realization of their responsibility in making the highways safe than it is to enact additional restrictive legislation.

Made Business Good at the Drug Counter

Anyone passing a Chestnut street drug store the other evening would have been impressed that a group of "sneezers" were convening, or possibly an early gathering of the "Hay Fever society," from countless "achoo" bursters forth, but these spasmodic sounds were carelessly caused by a waitress in charge of the sandwich counter reserved for hungry patrons.

She was in the act of filling a few containers for salt and pepper, and as she thoughtlessly placed the tray which held the seasoning before an electric fan, the customers in line of the breeze received the pungent aromatic condiment with full force, thus causing the air to be spasmodically forced through their noses.

One timid old gentleman, realizing he was developing a cold, walked to the other side of the store and had the clerk wrap up a goodly quantity of aspirin, quinine, nasal saline and cold-in-the-head tablets.—Philadelphia Record.

Currency He Understood

When Fred Gun-a-Noot, a Northern Indian, was in Stewart, British Columbia, last fall he was deeply impressed with a large auto. On being told the price in dollars, his face fell, but when told that 50 beaver skins would buy the car he grinned and departed. Winter and spring passed and the dealer was surprised to see Fred back with a grin that spread over his countenance. His surprise was greater when the Indian led him to a pile of 50 prime skins averaging $40 each. That closed the deal.

Ping Bodie was one of the first of the modern sluggers. He broke into Coast league baseball from the San Francisco sand lots around 1909 and his hitting, even in those days of an unlively ball, made him famous at once. He was sold to the Chicago White Sox in 1911 and played with them until the season of 1915, when the Sox sent him back to the Seals. Ping promptly set a new Coast league home-run record with 32 homers. The Sox lost no time in taking him back in 1916, and he remained in the big leagues until three or four years ago, when he was with Vernon for a season. Ping had retired until recently, when he decided to try it again with his old love, the Seals. And, although the old gentleman has slowed up a bit on his dogs, he can still catch any fly he can reach, and he can still plunk the ball with any of 'em. A rollicking, jovial, rustling, hustling out-to-win player of the old school is Ping Bodie.

Post-Office Department Now Using 6,982 Autos

There are now 6,982 automobiles, government-owned and under contract for carrying mail, in the Post-Office department, figures made public show. Air-mail planes in 1925 flew 2,500,000 miles the figures also show, 14,145,640 letters being carried by the latest method of transportation.

There are in operation 45,314 rural routes, supplying 31,000,000 individuals. Rural carriers in 1925 traveled 1,234,153 miles daily and 337,650,871 miles during the year.

Coach Hanley Has Tough Job

Aside from facing one of the stiffest grid schedules in the conference this fall, Coach Dick Hanley, Northwestern's new grid leader, is up against the problem of finding suitable successors to Ralph Baker and Bob Johnson, all-American players, who are lost to the squad through graduation.

Both players performed brilliantly for the Wildcats during the last three years, and their absence will leave two big holes to fill. As quarter back, Baker was the leading spirit of the squad, while Johnson's performance in the line made the forward wall one of the most formidable in the conference. Other capable performers who will not be back are Paul Griffith, Ade Schumacher and James Solheim, half backs, and Otto Siebenmann, guard.

Coach Hanley is not expecting the freshman squad of last year to present him with much in the way of varsity material. There are a few youngsters, principally back field men, who will make a strong bid for a regular job, but they are not likely to replace many of last year's regulars.

Hanley is pinning his hopes for success this fall on his back field axes, Capt. Vic Gustafson and Leland (Tiny) Lewis. In Gustafson the Purple coach feels he has one of the best ball-carrying backs in the country. Gustafson is also a good kicker.

Leland Lewis, whose performance during the last two years marks him as one of the greatest full backs in the country, will be back at his old post. Besides being a powerful line plunger, he is also a capable forward passer and place kicker.

Another capable player who is expected to hold down a regular job is Walter Holmer. Hanley plans to use him at half, where his ability to carry the ball and pass will give the Purple three passing, running and kicking backs.

George (Yatz) Levison, a splendid blocker, who played his first year with the Wildcats last year, is to be given the quarter back assignment.

Dick Hanley.

PRACTICAL CAR LESSONS FOR FAMILY DRIVING ON SUNDAY

It's a wise father who arrives at his destination with the original number of children that filled up the family fiver when the trip started. Bill Brown, Friend Wife and their four youngsters, reinforced by enough lunch to feed a young army, left for an outing last Sunday. Pa and ma sat in the front seat and the little Brownies occupied the rear. They had gone about a mile when Baby Bobby was reported to be among the missing. The boy had opened the door and fallen out of the machine. Luckily, he wasn't injured, either by the fall or other automobiles, having landed in a pool where he was enjoying himself when the family located him. Brown thus learned one of the lessons which should be remembered by family men who go on auto trips, i. e., that it is better to have Friend Wife a back-seat driver than to be minus a baby.

Umpire Aids Needy Baseball Player

An umpire with a heart has been found. He is Dr. Justin L. McCarthy, chief official of the Attleboro (Mass.) shop league. Impressed by the gentlemanly spirit of a young pitcher-outfielder and learning the lad was not to return to college because of financial difficulties, "his honor or the Ump" got in touch with a wealthy friend and with their combined aid the player can go to college again. The other players believe there may be a Santa Claus after all.

Radio Operator Loses Station When in Haste

There is much to be learned from watching the average radio operator tuning his set. If he is trying to find an out-of-town station or one a little beyond his usual range, he seems to violate all the simple rules of radio and to proceed on altogether different lines than in the case of fishing for his local station.

One of the most common mistakes he makes is to assume that because he does not hear a station immediately it is not on the air or his set will not reach for it. The chances are, however, that he has gotten the station during one of those periods when the announcer has asked his audience to stand by. It is a fact that the slow tuner usually gets the station.

Iowa's Line Heavy

With two 240-pound sophomores eligible for Iowa's line this fall and strong candidates for other positions, the University of Iowa forward wall from tackle to tackle will average approximately 222 pounds. Captain "Spike" Nelson at right tackle, and Center Dick Brown will weigh the least of the five, each about 200. "Tubby" Chatterton, who worked at guard last fall, weighs 230.

Bobby Jones Not Sure

Bobby Jones has not definitely made up his mind about returning to Great Britain in 1928 to defend his title of British open golf champion. He so informed his friends recently.

"I shall return to my law studies," said the champion, "and future plans must depend upon circumstances."

MOTHER

The Oswego mother who allowed her 15 year-old daughter to go to Kansas City on a shopping trip unattended is surprised that the girl dissappeared. Upon which text we desire to submit a few remarks upon the subject of mothers. The mother business is one of the most overadvertised lines in the world. Whenever a sob-squadder desires to turn on the faucet of our tears, he begins tremulous talk about mothers being the sacredest things alive. Good mothers are sacred; so are good fathers. But when you consider how many mean, ornery, good-for-nothing, do-less people there are in the world--don't forget this important fact: Some fool woman in the mother business, neglecting her real duty, is responsible for the meanness more than any other one thing. A man may put the devil in his children. But in nine cases out of ten the mother can breed it out, or train it out, or love it out, if she will work on the job. A lot of women get an idea that they can rest on the glory of merely being mothers. A lot of mothers think that just because poets have had a lot to say about the sacredness of motherhood, there is nothing else to do.

But fool people usually are the result of fool mothers.

Charity workers in every town know of scores of instances where men earn fairly good wages, and where the women by their shiftlessness, laziness, and meanness have put the family in poverty and want. They can't cook; and they know nothing of taking care of children; they live out of sacks and cans; they gad the street by day, and go to picture shows at night; they can't sew; and they wont clean up the children. They haven't the character to make the children mind, and they are too thriftless and idle-minded to keep the house much better than a pigsty.

A mother is "the holiest thing alive" only when she is the embodiment of intelligent, consecrated love. When she is merely a brood animal, when she is either a slattern if she is poor, or a gadabout and a bridge fiend if she is rich, she deserves no more credit for being a mother than she does for having warts or a high instep.

The gush about motherhood being so holy a function has fortified a lot of fool females in their folly. And the blessed time is coming when the soft pedals are going to be taken off motherhood, and put on womanhood plus horse sense. The Gazette is in favor of a strict law which will prevent men with communicable diseases from marrying and breeding lust and vice into other generations. But along with that law should be a companion law which will prevent issuing a marriage license to--A woman who can't cook, Can't keep house, Can't clean up children's dirty noses and necks, And can't pass a decent examination on the feeding and care of infants.

When women know something about what they are going into, as married women--whether they are rich or poor--there will be more in the sacredness of motherhood than the poets ever have sung about. New civilization has taken women from the home; it has put them in stores and offices and shops and factories. Home science now must be learned outside the home. But it must be learned, and the sooner the law cracks down on fool girls who go into matrimony caked in ignorance and breed fool children who raise hell in the world, the better this sad old world will be.

We wish to see our merchants advertise not alone from a selfish view point, but also because it will pay them, and because it will help to keep just that much money at home and in circulation that goes to mail order houses: We hope they make dollars for each penny they spend with us.--Terry County Herald

In the old days, so they say, the gunman looked the part. Now, when you are in the larger cities, you probably rub shoulders with some of the most notorious gunmen in the country and never know the difference.

When most everybody is ag'in' a man, that's when he needs help, and when you ought to give it to him, if you want to get a standin with old St. Peter at the gate.

Boot-leggers are rather short of friends. Still, they have the lawyers on their side.

If you don't get all that's coming to you here in Sudan, you are dog-gone lucky.

MORE HONOR IN BUSINESS

Honor should be the basis of all good business. As credit is to the great economic machine so should be this great factor in human intercourse.

When a man gives you his word of honor today that he will do something it should be as good as a bond, for a promise from an honest and scrupulous man is an unpaid debt. He would rather do anything than break his word. While a man like that is a blessing to a community and an asset to the business world he should not be outstanding for this reason, for it is expected today that a man in business is honest and the public will expect that his word is part of his stock in trade.

Of course, there are always exceptions and perhaps there are too many exceptions in the field of honor. When a man gives you his word of honor and then shortly breaks it, that man is forever barred from the ken of honest men; for he has thrown away that one thing that we are all endowed with. Fair play to such a man means nothing for he will stoop to the bottom of pettiness to accomplish his end, breaking confidences, distorting facts and working in the dark. Such a man is a menace to society for often he is held in high esteem by his fellows who are unaware of his true character, and is ready to turn at a moment for the sake of personal gain and betray those who are his friends.

No crime is lower and meaner than the default of honor. A man who works in the dark will soon be caught in the daylight and exposed to the scorn of all honest men. Trust all men until they prove to you they cannot be trusted then forever watch them for like a serpent in the grass, they may be lying in wait for a chance to strike.

The perpetual griper, the long faced pessimist, the doubting Thomas: the whole complaining outfit should be much better off if they were gathered from Muleshoe and placed in a city of their own that had already been developed by public spirited individuals who had preceded them to the location. And if the truth must be told we believe that Muleshoe would be much better off without this type of citizens. Naturally among a population of seven or eight hundred there will develop those people who fail to give any of their time to the building of a better city and country in which to live and who feel that they are greatly imposed on if asked to contribute in any form whatsoever in the upbuilding of the place in which they live. We suppose in the after world we will still run across these individuals. We suppose that should a town succeed in running out the perpetual griper and knocker that it would soon become so much of a paradise that there would be no desire to improve further. We fail to see why some people will continually knock every new project of development that is undertaken in Muleshoe. If a thing is offered to Muleshoe and you have good reasons why it should not be allowed to come, why not present the facts before the Chamber of Commerce, or some other body of influential citizens. These fellows that you are talking so loud to on the street corners and in the alleys do not carry so much weight and will not contribute to your cause to any great extent. Make sure you are right before you begin your knocking spree and then get out of sight and let it loose in some lonely corner where you will not bother those who have better things to do.--Muleshoe Journal.

The perpetual griper, is a pest just the same as a flea, a bed bug, or a louse, which are all put here to bother humanity and without them, life would be miserable. It takes the bad to make us appreciate the good.

THE BAT

A Novel from the Play

By Mary Roberts Rinehart and Avery Hopwood

WNU Service

"The Bat," copyright, 1920, by Mary Roberts Rinehart and Avery Hopwood.

STORY FROM THE START

Defying all efforts to capture him, after a long series of murders and robberies, a super-erook known to the police only as "The Bat" has brought about a veritable reign of terror. At his wit's end, and at the man's own request, the chief of police assigns his best operative, Anderson, to get on the trail of the Bat. With her niece, Dale Ogden, Miss Cornelia Van Gorder is living in the country home of the late Courtleigh Fleming, who until his recent death had been president of the Union bank, wrecked because of the theft of a large sum of currency. Miss Van Gorder receives a note warning her to vacate the place at once on pain of death.

It was true. The room in which she stood, while comfortable and charming, seemed unusually accessible to the night prowler. A row of French windows at the rear gave upon a little terrace—below the terrace the drive curved about and beneath the billiard room windows in a hairpin loop, drawing up again at the main entrance on the other side of the house. At the left of the French windows (if one faced the terrace, as Miss Cornelia was doing) was the alcove door she spoke of. When open, it disclosed a little alcove, almost entirely devoted to the foot of a flight of stairs that gave direct access to the upper regions of the house. The alcove itself opened on one side upon the terrace and upon the other into a large butler's pantry. The arrangement was obviously designed so that, if necessary, one could pass directly from the terrace to the downstairs service quarters or the second floor of the house without going through the living room, and so that trays could be carried up from the pantry by the side stairs without using the main staircase.

The middle pair of French windows were open—forming a double door. Miss Cornelia went over to them—she tried the locks. "Humph! Flimsy enough!" she thought. Then she turned toward the billiard room. The billiard room, as has been said, was the last room to the right in the main wing of the house. A single door led to it from the living room. Miss Cornelia passed through this door, glanced about the billiard room, noting that most of its windows were too high from the ground to greatly encourage a marauder, and locked the only one that seemed to her particularly tempting—the billiard room window on the terrace side of the house. Then she returned to the living room and again considered her defenses.

Three points of access from the terrace to the house—the door that led into the alcove—the French windows of the living room—the billiard room window. On the other side of the house there was the main entrance, the porch, the library and dining room windows. The main entrance led into a hall—living room, and main door of living room on the right as one entered, dining room and library on the left, main staircase in front. She sat down once more, and drew a pencil and a piece of paper, drawing a plan of the lower floor of the house.

"And now I've studied it," she thought, after a while, "I'm no further than I had't. As far as I can figure out, there's so many ways for a clever man to get into this house that I'd have to be a couple of Siamese twins to watch it properly."

But of course she was not entirely shut off from the world, even if the worst developed. She considered the telephone instruments on a table near the wall, one the general phone, the other connecting a house line which also connected with the garage and the greenhouses. The garage would not be helpful, since Siocum, her chauffeur for many years, had gone back to England for a visit. Dale had been driving the car. But with an able-bodied man in the gardener's house—

She pulled herself together with a jerk.

"Cornelia Van Gorder, you're going to go crazy before nightfall, if you don't take hold of yourself. What you need is lunch—and a nap in the afternoon if you can make yourself take it. You'd better look up that revolver of yours, too, that you bought when you were going to take a trip to China. You've never fired it off yet, but you've got to sometime today—there's no other way of telling if it will work. You can shut your eyes when you do it—no, you can't either—that's silly."

"Call you a spirited old lady, do they? Well, you never had a better time to show your spirit than now!" Dale Ogden, taxiing up from the two o'clock train some time later, discovered the front door locked, to her surprise, and rang for some time before she could get an answer. At last, Billy appeared, white-coated, with an inscrutable expression on his face.

"Will you take my bag, Billy—thanks. Where is Miss Van Gorder—taking a nap?"

"No," said Billy succinctly. "She take no nap. She out in scrubbery shooting."

Dale stared at him incredulously. "Shooting, Billy?"

"Yes, m'am. At least—she not shoot yet but she say she going to soon."

"But, good heavens, Billy—shooting what?"

"Shooting pistol," said Billy, his yellow mask of a face preserving his impish repose. He waved his hand. "You go scrubbery. You see."

The scene that met Dale's eyes when she finally found the "scrubbery" was indeed a singular one. Miss Van Gorder, her back firmly planted against the trunk of a large elm tree and an expression of ineffable distaste on her features, was holding out a blunt, deadly looking revolver at arm's length. Its muzzle wavered, now pointing at the ground, now at the sky. Behind the tree Lizzie sat in a heap, moaning quietly to herself, and now and then appealing to the saints to avert a visioned calamity.

As Dale approached, unseemly, the climax came. The revolver steadied, pointed ferociously at an inoffensive grass-blade some ten yards from Miss Van Gorder and went off. Lizzie promptly gave vent to a shrill Irish scream. Miss Van Gorder dropped the revolver like a hot potato and opened her mouth to tell Lizzie not to be such a fool. Then she saw Dale—her mouth went into a round O of horror and her hand clutched weakly at her heart.

"Good heavens, child!" she gasped. "Didn't Billy tell you what I was doing? I might have shot you like a rabbit!" and, overcome with emotion, she sat down on the ground and started to fan herself mechanically with a cartridge.

Dale couldn't help laughing—and the longer she looked at her aunt the more she laughed—until that dignified lady joined in the mirth herself.

"Aunt Cornelia—Aunt Cornelia!" said Dale when she could get her breath. "That I've lived to see the day—and they call us the wild generation! Why on earth were you having pistol practice, darling—has Billy turned into a Japanese spy, or what?"

Miss Van Gorder rose from the ground with as much staidness as she could muster, under the circumstances.

"No, my dear—but there's no fool like an old fool—that's all," she stated. "I've wanted to fire that infernal revolver off ever since I bought it two years ago—and now I have and I'm satisfied. Still, she went on thoughtfully, picking up the weapon, "shooting people must be much easier than I supposed. All you have to do is to point the—the front of it—like this and—"

"Oh, Miss Dale, dear Miss Dale!" came in woe-begone accents from the other side of the tree. "For the love of heaven, Miss Dale, say no more but take it away from her—she'll have herself all riddled through with bullets like a kitchen sieve—and me too—if she's let to have it again."

"Lizzie, I'm ashamed of you!" said Lizzie's mistress, briskly. "Come out from behind that tree and stop walking like an automobile siren. This weapon is perfectly safe in competent hands and—"

She seemed on the verge of another demonstration of its powers.

"Miss Dale, for the dear love o' God, will you make her put it away?" Dale added her protestations to Lizzie's. "Please, darling, if you want to practice, Billy can do up some sort of target range—but I don't want my favorite aunt assassinated by a ricocheted bullet before my eyes!"

"Well—perhaps it would be best to try again another time," admitted Miss Van Gorder. But there was a wistful look in her eyes as she gave the revolver to Dale and the three started back to the house.

"I should never have allowed Lizzie to know what I was doing," she confided in a whisper, on the way. "A woman is perfectly capable of managing firearms—but Lizzie is really too nervous to live, sometimes."

"I know just how you feel, darling," Dale agreed, suppressed mirth shaking her as the little procession reached the terrace. "But—oh," she could keep it no longer, "oh—you did look funny, darling—sitting under that tree, with Lizzie on the other side of it making banshee noises and—"

Miss Van Gorder laughed, too, a little shamefacedly.

"I must have," she said. "But—oh, you needn't shake your head, Lizzie. Allen—I am going to practice with it—there's no reason I shouldn't—and you never can tell when things like that might be useful." She ended rather vaguely. She did not wish to alarm Dale with her suspicions yet.

"There, Dale—yes, put it in the drawer of the table—that will reassure Lizzie. Lizzie, you might make us some lemonade. I think—Miss Dale must be thirsty after her long, hot ride."

"Yes, Miss Cornelia," said Lizzie, recovering her normal calm as the revolver was shut away in the drawer of the large table in the living room. But she could not resist one parting shot. "And thank God thy lemonade I'll be making and not bandages for bullet wounds!" she muttered, darkly, as she went toward the service quarters.

Miss Van Gorder glared after her departing back. "Lizzie is really impossible, sometimes!" she said with stately ire. Then her voice softened. "Though, of course, I couldn't do without her," she added.

Dale stretched out on the settee opposite her aunt's chair. "I know you couldn't, darling. Thanks for thinking of the lemonade." She passed her hand over her forehead in a gesture of fatigue. "I am hot—and tired."

Miss Van Gorder looked at her keenly. The young face seemed curiously worn and haggard in the clear afternoon light.

"You—you don't really feel very well, do you, Dale?"

"The girl turned her face a little away from her aunt's scrutiny.

"Oh—it's nothing. I feel all right—really."

"I could send for Doctor Wells, if—"

"Oh, heavens, no, Aunt Cornelia." She managed a wan smile. "It isn't as bad as all that. I'm just tired and the city was terribly hot and noisy and—"

She stole a glance at her aunt from between lowered lids. "I got your gardener, by the way," she said, casually.

"Did you dear? That's splendid, though—but I'll tell you about that later. Where did you get him?"

"That good agency—I can't remember it's name." Dale's hand moved restlessly over her eyes, as if remembering details were too great an effort. "But I'm sure he'll be satisfactory—he'll be out here this evening—he couldn't get away before, I believe. What have you been doing all day, darling?"

"We have had a domestic upheaval. The cook and the housemaid have left—if you'd only waited till the next train you could have had the pleasure of their company into town."

"Aunt Cornelia—how exciting! I'm so sorry! Why did they leave?"

"Why do servants ever leave a good place?" said Miss Cornelia grimly. "Because if they had sense enough to know when they were well off, they wouldn't be servants. Anyhow, they've gone—we'll have to depend on Lizzie and Billy the rest of this week. I telephoned—but they couldn't promise me any others before Monday."

"And I was in town and could have seen people for you—if I'd only known!" said Dale remorsefully. "Only," she hesitated, "I mightn't have had time—at least I mean there were some other things I had to do, besides getting the gardener and—"

She rose. "I think I will go and lie down for a little if you don't mind, darling."

Miss Van Gorder was concerned. "Of course I don't mind but—won't you even have your lemonade?"

"Oh, I'll get some from Lizzie in the pantry, before I go up," Dale managed to laugh. "I think I must have a headache, after all," she said. "Maybe I'll take an aspirin. Don't worry, darling."

"I shan't. I only wish there were something I could do for you, my dear."

Dale stopped in the alcove doorway. "There's nothing anybody can do for me, really," she said soberly. "At least—oh, I don't know what I'm saying! But don't worry. I'm quite all right. I may go over to the Country club, after dinner—and dance. Won't you come with me, Aunt Cornelia?"

"Depends on your escort," said Miss Cornelia tartly. "If our landlord, Mr. Richard Fleming, is taking you, I certainly shan't—I don't like his looks and never did!"

Dale laughed. "Oh, he's all right," she said. "Drinks a good deal and wastes a lot of money—but harmless enough. No—this is a very sedate party—I'll be home early."

"Well, in that case," said her aunt, "I shall stay here with Lizzie and my outja-board will furnish it. She's ashamed for the very cowardly way

National Emblem of Wales Is Red Dragon

While the harp is a Welsh national instrument, it is not recognized as the national emblem. The national emblem for Wales is the red dragon of Cadwallader, the last of the Welsh kings. This emblem had a place in the royal arms of Great Britain as a supporter in the reign of King Henry VII, but that king, toward the end of his reign, changed the supporters, which were the two white lions of March, to the Welsh dragon on the dexter side, with the white greyhound on the sinister. The latter emblem was representative of either the De Beauforts, his own ancestors, or the Nevilles, the ancestors of his wife, both of these families using the white greyhound as a family badge. In 1528 his son, Henry VIII, used for support-

Bridge Built by Nature

The Natural bridge is in Rockbridge county, Virginia. It was left by the collapse of the remainder of the roof of a tunnel formed by water percolating through a joint or fissure atwart the stream. The tunnel thus formed was gradually enlarged until all the water of the stream was diverted from the stream bed below the joint of ingress, leaving a bridge. It has a span of 90 feet and is from 50 to 100 feet wide.

she behaved this afternoon—and the outja-board. Lizzie touches some pounced to death to touch the thing—I think she believes it's alive.

"Well, maybe I'll send you a message on it from the Country club," said Dale lightly. She had paused, half-way up the flight of side-stairs in the alcove, and her aunt noticed how her shoulders drooped, belying the lightness of her voice. "Oh," she went on, "by the way—have the afternoon papers come yet? I didn't have time to get one when I was rushing for the train."

"I don't think so, dear—but I'll ask Lizzie," Miss Cornelia moved toward a bell-push.

"Oh, don't bother—it doesn't matter. Only if they have, would you ask Lizzie to bring me one when she brings up the lemonade? I want to read about—about the Bat—he fascinates me."

"There was something else in the paper this morning," said Miss Cornelia, idly. "Oh, yes—the Union bank—the bank Mr. Fleming, Senior, was president of has failed. They seem to think the cashier robbed it. Did you see that, Dale?"

The shoulders of the girl on the staircase straightened suddenly. Then they drooped again. "Yes—I saw it," she said in a queerly colorless voice. "Too bad. It must be terrible to—to have every one suspect you—and hunt you—as I suppose they're hunting that poor cashier."

"Well," said Miss Cornelia, "a man who wrecks a bank deserves very little sympathy, to my way of thinking."

"Oh, He's All Right," She Said.

But then I'm old-fashioned. Well, dear, I won't keep you. Run along—and if you want an aspirin, there's a box in my top bureau drawer."

"Thanks, darling. Maybe I'll take one and maybe I won't—all I really need is to lie down for a while."

She moved on up the staircase and disappeared from the range of Miss Cornelia's vision, leaving Miss Cornelia to ponder many things. Her trip to the city had done Dale no good, of a certainty. If not actually ill, she was obviously under some considerable mental strain, and why this sudden interest—in the Bat—then in the failure of the Union bank? Was it possible that Dale, too, had been receiving threatening letters?

"I'll be glad when that gardener comes," she thought to herself. "He'll make a man in the house at any rate."

When Lizzie at last came in with the lemonade she found her mistress shaking her head.

"Cornelia, Cornelia," she was murmuring to herself, "you should have taken to pistol practice when you were younger—it just shows how children waste their opportunities!"

CHAPTER III

The Storm Gathers.

The long summer afternoon wore away, sunset came, red and angry, a sunset presaging storm. A chill crept into the air with the twilight. When ers to the royal arms the golden lion on the dexter, while the red dragon of Wales, which his father had used on the dexter, he relegated to the sinister side. These supporters continued in use until the accession (in 1603) of James VI of Scotland as James I of England. James kept the golden lion on the dexter, but changed the red dragon of Wales on the sinister to the unicorn, as in the royal arms of Scotland—an emblem of purity.

Taste Not in Money

Taste, runs the saying, flaunts no dollar sign. One can spend a million dollars and have a hideous home, and vice versa, one can spend but a few dollars and achieve good taste in the home with simplicity.

Taste is more than a question of education, it is more than a question of breeding. Some few have it to begin with, more achieve it and a great mass of people have it thrust upon them, fortunately. We say fortunately for the majority of home owners are content to let those who have taste design and decorate their homes for them.

Great peat bogs in northern Japan are fast disappearing owing to reclamation of the land.

night fell, it was not a night of silver patterns enskied, but a dark and cloudy cloak where a few stars glittered fitfully. Miss Cornelia, at dinner, saw a bat swoop past the window of the dining room, in its scurrying flight, and narrowly escaped oversetting her glass of water with a nervous start. The tension of waiting—waiting—for some vague menace which might not materialize after all—had begun to prey on her nerves. She saw Dale off to the Country club with relief—the girl looked a little better after her nap, but she was still not her normal self.

The house was queer. She would not have admitted it to Lizzie, for her soul's salvation—but, for the first time in her sensible life, she listened for creakings of woodwork, rustling of leaves, stealthy steps outside, beyond the safe, bright squares of the windows—for anything that was actual, tangible, not merely formless fear.

"There's too much room in the country for things to happen to you!" she confided to herself with a shiver. "Even the night—whenever I look out, it seems to me as if the night were ten times bigger and blacker than it ever is in New York!"

To comfort herself she mentally rehearsed her telephonic conversation of the morning—the conversation she had not mentioned to her household. At the time it had seemed to her most reassuring—the plans she had based upon it adequate and sensible, in the normal light of day. But now the light of day had been blotted out, and with it her security. Her plans seemed weapons of paper against the sinister might of the darkness beyond her windows. A little wind wailed some where in that darkness like a beaten child—beyond the hills thunder rumbled, drawing near, and with it lightning and the storm.

She made herself sit down in the chair beside her favorite lamp on the center table and take up her knitting with stiff fingers. "Knit two—purl two—" her hands fell into the accustomed rhythm mechanically—a spy, peering in through the French windows, would have deemed her the picture of calm. But she had never felt less calm in all the long years of her life.

She wouldn't ring for Lizzie to come and sit with her—she simply wouldn't. But she was very glad, nevertheless, when Lizzie appeared at the door.

"Yes, Lizzie?" Miss Cornelia's voice was composed, but her heart felt a throb of relief.

"Can I—can I sit in here with you, Miss Nelly, just a minute?" Lizzie's voice was plaintive. "I've been sitting out in the kitchen watching that Jap read his funny newspaper that the wrong way and listening for ghosts till I'm nearly crazy!"

"Why, certainly, Lizzie," said Miss Cornelia, primly. "You can sit here—and help me work the outja-board. That will take your mind off listening for things!"

Lizzie groaned. "You know I'd rather be shot than touch that uncanny outja!" she said dolefully. "It gives me the creeps every time I put my hands on it!"

"Well, of course, if you'd rather sit in the kitchen, Lizzie—"

"Oh, give me the outja!" said Lizzie in tones of heartbreak. "I'd rather be shot and stabbed than stay in the kitchen any more."

"Very well," said Miss Cornelia. "It's your own decision, Lizzie—remember that." Her needles clicked on. "I'll just finish this row, before we start," she said. "You might call up the light company in the meantime, Lizzie—there seems to be a storm coming up and I want to find out if they intend to turn out the lights tonight as they did last night. Tell them I find it most inconvenient to be left without light that way."

"It's worse than inconvenient," muttered Lizzie. "It's criminal—that's what it is—turning off all the lights in a haunted house like this one. As if spooks wasn't bad enough with the lights on—"

"Lizzie!"

"Yes, Miss Nelly—I wasn't going to say another word." She went to the telephone. Miss Cornelia knitted on—"knit two—purl two—" in spite of her experiments with the outja-board she didn't believe in ghosts—and yet—there were things one couldn't explain by logic. Was there something like that in this house—a shadow walking the corridors—a vague shape of evil drifting like mist from room to room till its cold breath whispered on one's back—and there! She had ruined her knitting—the last rows would have to be ripped out and done over. That came of mooning about ghosts like a dandy!

She put down the knitting with an exasperated little gesture. Lizzie had just finished her telephoning and was hanging up the receiver.

"Well, Lizzie?"

"Yes'm," said the latter, glaring at the phone. "That's what he says—they turned off the lights last night because there was a storm threaten'g. He says it burns out their fuses if they leave 'em on in a storm."

"Humph!" said Miss Cornelia. "I hope it will be a dry summer." Her hands tightened on each other. Dark-ness—darkness inside this house of whisp'ers to match with the darkness outside! She forced herself to speak in a normal voice.

"Ask Billy to bring some candles—Lizzie—and have them ready."

Lizzie had been staring fixedly at the French windows. At Miss Cornelia's command she gave a little jump of terror and moved closer to her mistress.

"You're not going to ask me to get out in that hail, alone?" she said in a hurt voice.
